Perusa, (or Percuse by the French) Perusa, stands near the River Clurius, or Il Chiese, at the Foot of the Hills, and gives Name to a Valley. It belong'd formerly to the Duke of Savoy; but fell into the French King's Hands, An. 1631. and was restor'd by the Treaty of Turin, 1696. It stands 4 Miles from Pignerol to the North; and must not be confounded with another Town in the Popes Dominions, ons, which the French call Perouse, but the Italians Perugia; in Latin Perusia, of which we shall have occasion to treat afterwards.

Briqueras, or Bricherasco by the Inhabitants, Briquerascum, stands near the little River Peles, on the Confines of Dauphiny, about 5 Miles from Pignerol to the South. In the Year 1592. It was taken by the French, under the Command of M. de Lesdiguières, who caus'd it to be well fortified, but Charles Emanuel Duke of Savoy afterwards re-took it.

The Lordship of VERCELL, or the Vercellese, Vercellense Dominium, is bounded on the North and East with the Dutchy of Milan, on the West with the Biellese and Canavese, and on the South with Montferrat. By the Treaty of Turin, 1427. Philip Marias Duke of Milan resign'd it to Amadeo Duke of Savoy, reserving to himself only that part that lies between the Novarassa and the River Sesia. The most considerable Towns in it are,

Vercell.

Biella.

Santia.

Vercell, or Vercelli, Vercella, stands on the Confines of the Dutchy of Milan, upon the River Sesia, or Sessites, which 10 Miles below, falls into the Po, about 12 Miles from Casal to the North, in the midst between Milan and Turin, about 40 Miles from each, and 30 from Jurea. It is the Seat of a Bishop, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Milan. It has a Castle and Citadel, and is pretty well fortified; and contains several fine Churches, and a good Hospital. Pope Leo IX. conven'd a Council in this Town against Berengarius Arch-deacon of Anger, who was cited, but did not appear. The Spaniards made themselves Masters of the Town, An. 1638. and restor'd it to the Duke of Savoy by the Pyrenean Treaty. It was taken by the French, after a brave Defence in the Year, 1705. but immediately after the raising the Siege of Turin, Sept. 1706. they dismantled, and quitted it.

Biella, Biella, and Bugella, stands at the Foot of the Mountains, 25 Miles from Vercell to the West, about 12 Miles from Jurea to the North East, and gives Name to the adjacent Country, call'd the Bielese.

Santa, Fanum Sanctæ Agathæ, gives Name to the adjacent County, in the Vercellese; and is distant about 16 Miles from Vercelli to the West, and 20 from Jurea. Francis d'Este, the second Duke of Modena, that famous Warrior died here, 14 Octob. 1658.

The Principality of MASSERAN, or Masserano, Masserani Principatus, lies near the Confines of the Dutchy of Milan, between the Vercellese and the Biellese. It had formerly Princes of its own of the Family of Flisca; but by adoption fell into the House of Ferrara, and so now its Princes are call'd of the Family of Ferrara Flisca. It is a Vassalage of the Pope's, and has under its Jurisdiction Crevacore adjacent to it, and some other Places of little moment: The only remarkable Town in it is,

Messeran, or Messerano, Messeranum, seated on a Hill, in the Confines of Milan, about 18 Miles from Jurea to the East, about 20 to the North West of Vercelli, and 36 from Turin to the North East.

The Marquisate of JUREA, Eporrediensis Marchionatus, was anciently a considerable part of Gallia Subalpina. About 400 Year ago it was a considerable Country in Italy, lying along the Foot of the Mountains, between them and the Po, and was under the Jurisdiction of its own Marquesses; but afterward came to be divided into several Parts and so lost its old Name, as Baudrand says; who mightily blames some modern Geographers, for placing this Marquisate in part of Italy, now call'd Il Canavese. The only Town of Note in it is,

Jurea, a Town anciently belonging to the Salassi, which Pliny calls Eporredia, Strabo. Eporadia and Antoninus, Eporadia, stands on the River Derea Baltea, where there is a stately Stone Bridge; and was built as some say (particularly Buno) about 100 Years before the Birth of Christ. It was an Episcopal See Suffragan to the Archbishop of Turin, and is a Place of great Importance to the Duke of Savoy, into whose Hands it came, according to Baudrand and others, in the Year 1313. being well defended by a Citadel and Castle. It was taken by the French, An. 1554. and restor'd sometime after. It is distant from Turin about 25 Miles to the North, 30 from Aouste to the South, and as many from Vercelli to the West. It is famous for the excellent Cheeses that are made in and about it.

The County of ASTI. Contado d'Asti, Astensis Comitatus anciently a part of the Dutchy of Milan; but has been subject to the Duke of Savoy since the Year 1531. by the Concession of the Emperor Charles V. who had taken it from the French two Years before. It is bounded on the West by Piedmont, and on all other Parts by the Dutchy of Montferrat. The Towns of note in it are,

Asti.

Verrua or Verua.

Asti, Aste, by the French Asta. Ptolomy makes it the Name of a Town and Colony of Gallia Cisalpine in Liguria. It stands on the River Tenaro, about 15 Miles from Alba to the North East, 16 from Casal to the South West, and 26 from Turin to the East. It was once a considerable Republick, but afterwards fell into the Hands of the Viscounts, and so became a part of the Dutchy of Milan; from which, after many Turns and Revolutions it fell to the Duke of Savoy, by the Gift of the Emperor Charles V. to Charles III. Duke of Savoy, An. 1531. It consists at present of several Parts, viz. the City, the Burrough, the Citadel, the Fort and Castle of St. Peter; all which are pretty well fortified. The neighbouring Fields are very Fertile, and produce, particularly, a fine sort of Melon, very much esteem'd.

Verrua or Verua, Veruca, is a Fortress, built on a high Rock, on the Banks of the Po, over against Crescentino, near the Confines of Montferrat and the Canavese, about 16 Miles above Turin and somewhat less from Casal to the West, and 12 from Asti to the North. It was strongly fortified by Charles Emanuel Duke of Savoy, and in vain attempted by the Spanish Forces, An. 1625. Famous by its glorious Defence against the French Army, from Octob. 1704, to April 1705.

The Marquisate of SUSA. Segusinus Marchionatus, lies along the Foot of the Alpes, between Piedmont, properly so call'd, on the East, and Dauphiny on the West. It was formerly of greater Extent and inhabited by the Segusini, according to Cluverius; and is now subject to the Duke of Savoy. The only Town of Note in it is, Lombard). Susa. Suse by the French, Segorium. It is a little City seated among the Mountains, by which it is commanded almost on every side, on the River Doria. It gives Name to the Marquisate, and is distant about 3 Miles from the Confines of France and Dauphine, 24 from Turin to the West, and as many from Briançon. Here, they say, is to be seen a Triumphal Arch, erected in Honour of Augustus, A. U. C 740. (which Mr. Misson, I think, takes no notice of) And some think this is the Town where that Emperor set up his Trophy 14 Years before the Birth of Christ; tho' others are of opinion it was not here, but at a Place call'd Tourbie, at the Foot of the Maritime Alpes, because there is a Stone to be seen in that Place with this Inscription, Sentes Alpine devictæ. At this Place was found the Sepulchre of Cottus, from whom the Alpes Cottie took their Name. The French took this Place, An. 1630. and fortified it strongly; but afterwards restor'd it. They took it again in the Year 1690. and restor'd it, An. 1696. But took it again in this War, and held it till the Duke of Savoy recover'd it by taking the Cattle, Oct. 5. 1707. N. S.

Susa,

The Marquisate of SALUCES, as the French call it, and the Italians Saluzzo, Salutiarum Marchionatus, lies at the Foot of the Alpes, having Piedmont on the East, Dauphine on the West, and the Country of Nice on the South. It formerly belong'd to France, till Henry IV. gave it to Charles Emanuel, Duke of Savoy, in Exchange for Bresse, Bugey, and other Places on this side the Rhone, in the Year 1601. That River takes its Rise near this Country, from the Mountain Viso, which is thought to be the highest of the Alpes. The Marquesses of Saluzzo have caus'd a famous Vault 4 Miles long to be hew'd out of the Rock near this Place, thro which Mules may easily pass with Goods from Italy into France. This Family derives its Original, they say, from one William, an Italian Count, who flourish'd about the beginning of the 10th Century. The most remarkable Towns belonging to this Country are,

Saluzzo.	}	Cental.
Carmagnola.		Requispariero.
Revel.		Birgues.
Stafforda.

Saluzzo, or Saluces, Salutis, and Augusta Vagiennorum, stands on a Hill at the Foot of the Alpes, about a Mile from the River Po, 10 from Fossano to the West, 24 from Turin to the South, and 12 from Pignerol. It has been an Episcopal See under the Arch-Bishoprick of Turin since the Year 1511. and the Cathedral Church is very Magnificent and Rich. It was taken by the French, An. 1691. and retaken the same Year.

Carmagnola, Carmaniola, is seated above 2 Miles from the Po, and 8 from Turin to the South. It was taken in the Year 1588. during the Civil Wars of France, by Charles Emanuel Duke of Savoy, and had it confirm'd to him by a Treaty of Peace 1600. The French took it in the Year 1691. but lost it again that same Year.

Stafforda, is a small Town, no other way remarkable than for the Victory which the French obtain'd near it over the Duke of Savoy, in the Month of August, 1690. where the French are said to lose 500. and his Royal Highness near double that Number.

Cental, Centale, is a little Town, not long ago fortified, upon the River Mileva, in the midit between Coni and Savigliano.

The Country commonly call'd the THE VALLEYS OF THE VAUDOIS, lies between French Piedmont, on the West and North, Piedmont properly so call'd, on the East, and the Marquisate of Saluzes on the South, and is commonly divided into 5 remarkable Valleys, viz.

Pragelas or Cluson.	}	Angrogne.
Percuse.		Lucern.
St. Martyn.

The People commonly call'd the Vaudois, owe their Name, as it is said, to one Peter Valdo, or Vaud, a rich Merchant of Lyons in France, about the Year 1160. who seeing a Friend of his die suddenly, became mighty serious upon it, and fell a reading the Bible; and by that means discover'd the Errors of the Church of Rome, and communicated what he had learn'd to a great many of his Friends and Neighbours, who very quickly grew up to a considerable Party. Whereupon Peter was excommunicated by the Clergy, and several of his Disciples persecuted; which oblig'd them to retire into the Valleys of Piedmont. They have suffer'd many Persecutions, and particularly in the Year 1688. the Duke of Savoy persecuted the poor Inhabitants of those Valleys; who having in vain endeavour'd to preserve their Religion and Liberties, many of 'em were made Prisoners; and the rest, at the Solicitation of the Protestant Cantons, permitted to go where they would. In the Year 1689. a great many of them put themselves in Arms in the Cantons of Bern and Switzerland, and with a Secrecy that prevented even the Suspicions of their Enemies, form'd two Bodies, one of 1200, and the other of 3000 Men; and embarking on the Lake of Geneva, forc'd their way thro' Savoy into their own Country, in spite of the united Forces of France and Savoy, who oppos'd their Passage, and oblig'd them to five or six little Battles, in which the Vaudois had still the Advantage: And all this without any Officers, except one Mr. Arnaud, a Minister; and under him a Mason, nam'd Turel, for their Lieutenant General. In the Year 1690. the Duke of Savoy, by the Mediation of King William, recall'd these Refugees, and restor'd them to their former Privileges and Immunities. But by the Treaty of Peace between the King of France and the Duke of Savoy, concluded at Turin, 1696. it is agreed, That the Inhabitants of the Valleys of Lucern, call'd the Vaudois, shall have no Communication in Matters of Religion with that King's Subjects: Nor shall his Royal Highness suffer any of his Majesty's Subjects to make any Settlement in the Protestant Valleys, under colour of Religion, Marriage, or any Pretence whatsoever; nor any Protestant Ministers to come from thence into any of his Majesty's Dominions, without incurring the severest Corporal Punishment. Since which time his Royal Highness has been very severe upon those poor People, and driven them all out of his Dominions into the Protestant Countries of Europe and England, since the beginning of this Year 1699. has had its share.

As to the Counties of Boglio, Oneile and Tende, they are treated of already in our Description of Savoy.

C H A P. III.

The Coasts of Genoa, or Genoua, Ora Genuensis.

WHEN we speak of the Coasts of Genoua, we do not mean only the Places and Towns on those Coasts belonging to that Republick, but also several other little Towns and Countries along the Coast of that Sea, commonly call'd the Sea of Genoua, in the possession of several Princes and States: Extending in length from the River Var that separates Provence from Italy, to the Magra, which falls into the Mediterranean Sea, near the Ruins of the City Luna, now call'd Luna Distrutta. Its Length is computed to be about 150 Miles, from West to East; and its Breadth about 30 at the broadest, and not above 6 or 7 at the narrowest. It is bounded on the South by the Mediterranean Sea, on the North by the Duchies of Parma, Milan and Montferrat, on the East by Tuscany and Massa, and on the West by the River Var and Provence. It makes up the greater part of the ancient Liguria, which was divided into Liguria, Littorea and Liguria Mediterranea; the former of which seems to have been the Country we are now treating of; which (as we said before) comprehended several Places besides what belong to the Republick of Genoua, as you may see in the ensuing Table.

Subject to divers Sovereigns,	{ Nice , Ville Franche , Maro , Donas , Monaco , to the Prince of Monaco . Final , to the King of Spain .	} belonging to the D. of Savoy.	{ St. Remo. Vintimiglia . Albenga . Noli . Savona . GENOVA. Sarzana . Brugnetto . Rapallo . La-Vegna . La-Pezza . Torreglia .

We have already treated of Nice and Ville Franche in the Description of Savoy; Donas and Maro are so inconsiderable, that we find very little said concerning them, only that the latter is both the Name of a Town and a Marquisate, belonging to the Duke of Savoy.

Monaco, Herculis Monaci Portus, call'd by the People of Provence Mourgues; is a little Town, but well fortified, with an old Castle, and a very safe Harbour. It stands upon the Confines of the County of Nice, 6 Miles from the Town of that Name towards Albenga. This Town gives Name to a little sort of Principality, govern'd by its own Princes, of the Family of Grimaldi, who are also Peers of France; and having expell'd the Spaniards in the Year 1641. were oblig'd to crave Protection of the French King, and receive a Garrison of his Soldiers. This Principality is so little, that besides the Town of Monaco, it comprehends only a little Town call'd Menton, and a Village Roccabruna. The present Prince is the French King's Minister at the Court of Rome.

Final, Finalium or Finarium, stands in the midst between Savona and Albenga, on the Coasts of Genoua, and is dignified with the Title of a Marquisate. It was formerly govern'd by its own Princes Lombardy, of the Family of Carrelo; but has been under the Jurisdiction of Spain since the Year 1599. that Andreas Sforza, the last Marquis, sold it to the Spaniards. The Town is at present pretty well fortified, and hath a strong Castle on the top of a Hill; the Avenues of which are guarded by 2 Forts.

San Remo, Fanum Romuli, stands on the Coast of Genoua, (to which Republick it belongs) about 9 Miles from Vintimiglia to the East, and about 30 from Nice. It is a Place of Importance, and stands in a very fertile and pleasant Valley, that produces Oranges, Citrons, Olives and other Fruits.

Vintimiglia, Albintemelium, (the same with Vintemelium and Albintimilium, mention'd by Tacitus, Varro, and other Authors) stands on the Sea-shoar, near the Frontiers of Savoy and the County of Nice, 14 Miles from the Town of Nice to the East, 8 from Monaco, 30 from Coni to the South, and 85 from Genoua to the West. It is an Episcopal See, Suffragan to the Arch Bishop of Milan, and has been under the Jurisdiction of Genoua ever since the Year 1238.

Albenga, Albigaunum or Albingaunum, stands on the Sea-shoar, on the West part of the Coast of Genoua, over against a little Island, or rather a Rock in the Sea, call'd I'Isolotto d'Albenga, 50 Miles to the West of Genoua, 35 from Vintimiglia, and 40 from Alba to the South. It was erected into an Episcopal See under the Arch-Bishop of Genoua, in the Year 1179. It was formerly a considerable and rich Town; but of late has begun to decay.

Noli, Naulum or Naulium, stands in a pleasant Plain on the Coasts of Genoua, not above a Mile from Final, between Savona to the North East, and Albenga to the South West. 10 Miles from the former, and 12 from the latter. It is a Bishoprick, Suffragan to the Arch-Bishop of Genoua, and was formerly a free Town, but is now under the Jurisdiction of Genoua, and has not the Advantage of an Harbour.

Savona. Savona stands on the West Coasts of Genoua, about 3 Miles from Vado, which is a small Port, to the North East, 8 from Noli, 30 from Albenga, as many from Genoua, and 22 from Acqui to the South. It is an Episcopal See under the Arch-Bishop of Milan, and is defended by a Citadel and 2 Fortresses. It had once a very large and good Harbour; but it was stop't up by the Genouese, upon Jealousie of its being too much favour'd by Francis I. King of France.

GENOVA or Genoua, Genua, is a very ancient Town in Liguria in Gallia Cisalpina, according to Pliny, Strabo and others. It was sack'd by Mago the Carthaginian, 549 Years after the building of Rome; and afterwards rebuilt by the Romans. There has been a great deal of Dust rais'd about the Etymology of this Word, some maintaining it came from double-fac'd Janus; others, that it was deriv'd from Janua, because it was, in a manner, a Gate into Italy; some from Janus first King of Italy, or Janus King of the Teians; but 'tis not worth the while to examine who has the most Reason for his Monferrat.

Affertion, only this is plain, that the fore-cited Authors call it Genua, and so does T. Livius, and a Stone that was found by a Peasant as he was Tilling the Ground, An. 1507. has an Inscription on it, where the Genese are call'd Genuates. It was burnt by the Saracens in the Year 935 all the Citizens being either kill'd, or carry'd away Prisoners; but they were brought back by the Means of the Doge of Venice and the Town rebuilt, and made more Magnificent than it was before. It was dignified with the Title of an Arch-Bishoprick, by Pope Innocent II An. 1132. It is now the Capital City of Liguria, and Head of a Republick; and seated at the bottom of a little Gulf, on the Declivity of the Foot of a Hill, seeming to consist of several Stories. The Port lies very open towards the Sea, and therefore cannot afford safe Anchorage for Ships. The City contains 36 Parishes; the Streets are for the most part uneven and very narrow; and the Houses are 6 or 7 Stories high in the lower part of the Town: but by degrees, as the Ascent rises, the Houses are lower, and built at a greater distance. The Situation of it affords a very fine Prospect, but is very inconvenient for those that would ride in Coaches; and therefore Persons of Quality use Litters and Chairs. It is absolutely false that this City is built of Marble, as most People believe; Brick and Stone, or both mixt together, are the ordinary Materials of its Houses; and the Walls are generally cover'd with Plaster. There are some Houses, among those more lately built, that are richly adorn'd with Marble; but there's as good Reason for saying London is built of Stone, as Genoua is built of Marble. But tho' the City is not built of Marble, it may justly boast of some very Beautiful Structures; for the Houses are extremely large and fair in 5 or 6 Streets that are of a considerable Breadth, and in the Magnificent Suburb of St. Pietro d' Arena. This City suffer'd very much by the Bombardment in the Year 1634. but few of the most beautiful Edifices receiv'd any great hurt by the French Bombs, private Persons, and those of inferior Rank having suffer'd most by it.

The Government of this Republick is Aristocratical. The Doge (whose Government lasts 2 Years) is the supreme Magistrate, assisted by 8 Senators or Governors, a certain number of Procurators and a Grand Council consisting of a certain number of the Nobility, who are in all 700. The Doge cannot be continu'd above 2 Years, but may be chosen again 5 Years after the end of his Government: And none of his Relations can be elected immediately after him. He is styl'd His Serenity, as the Senators are Their Excellencies, and the Noblemen Most Illustrious. The Power and Grandeur of this Republick is extremely decreas'd since those glorious Days, when they extended their Conquests to the Tanais, and made themselves Masters of all the Coasts of Asia, and the Island of Cyprus, Scio, Lesbos &c. They still retain the Island of Corsica, with the Title of a Kingdom, and are extremely proud of it; for the Doge is crown'd with a Royal Crown of Gold, and a Scepter is put into his Hand, because of it. The Trade of Genoua is very much decay'd. It consists particularly in Velvet, Point, Gloves, dry Confections, Anchovies, and several sorts of Fruits. There are some private Persons very Rich; but the Republick is poor. Neither Corn or Wine are sold in the Markets; for the Government reserves that Trade for it self, and the Bakers must fetch their Corn from the publick Granaries. This City stands 270 Miles from Rome to the North West, 75 from Turin, 135 from Florence to the West, 220 from Venice to the South West, and 80 from Milan to the South. Lat. 43. 50. Long. 27. 0.

Sarazana, Serezana or Sergianum, stands near the Mouth of the River Magra, in the midst between Massa and Spetoia; about 34 Miles from Lucca to the North West, and 18 from Brugnetto. It is defended by a strong Castle, and is an Episcopal See, under the Arch-Bishop of Pisa. Its Rile is from the Ruins of a neighbouring Town, call'd Luna; and Pope Nicholas V. a Native of this Place, translated the Bishoprick of Luna hither, with the Title of both Sees, in the Year 1450.

Brugnetto, Brunetum, or Bruniacum, stands upon the River Verra, at the Foot of the Apennines, 9 Miles to the West of Pontiermoli, as many from Spetoia to the North, and 50 from Genoua to the East. It is but a small Town, and not well inhabited, but is an Episcopal See under the Arch-Bishop of Genoua.

Rapallo, Rapallum, is a little Town under the Jurisdiction of Genoua, upon that Coast, with a Harbour, about 23 Miles from Genoua to the East, and 3 from Portofino. Near to it is the little Bay call'd Golfo di Ripallo. The Reader must take notice that Rapolla in Basilicata in the Kingdom of Naples sounds very like this. tho' the Latin Word for that is Rapallio, as Rapallum is for this.

Lavagna, Lavania, or Labonia, a little Town on the Coast of Genoua, at the Mouth of the River Entella, belonging to the Republick of Genoua, between Chiavari to the West, and Cesire di Levante to the East.

La Spezza, La Spetia, Spedia, is a little Town, belonging to the Republick of Genoua, standing at the bottom of the Golfo della Spetia, 7 Miles from Sarazana to the North West, as far from Lunadestrutta, 4 from Porto Venere, and 11 from Brugnetto.

CHAP. IV.

The Dutchy of Montferrat.

Montferrat, Mensferratus, or Mensferratus, so call'd from the fruitful Soil of the Hills and rising Ground in it, as if it were Monsferax, is bounded on the East by the Dutchy of Milan, and a part of the Dominions of Genoua, on the North by the Vercellese and Bugellese and the Canavese, on on the West with Piedmont, properly so call'd, and the County of Asti, and on the South by the Western Dominions of Genoua, from which it is separated by the Apennines, and comprehends a great part of the ancient Liguria Mediterranea. It fell into the House of Mantua, in the Year 1535. by the the Marriage of Margaret, Wife of Frederick I. Duke of Mantua, after the Death of Boniface her Brother, last Marquis of the Family of the Palaeologi. It was formerly of greater Extent, comprehending a part of the Canavese, and of the Higher Langhe, which were given to the Duke of Savoy by the Treaty of Cherasco, in the Year 1631. together with a part of Montferrat beyond the Po; so that after it was divided into 2 Parts, viz. into Montferrat, properly so call'd, which lies to the East and South, and was under the Duke of Mantua, except Casal, and Montferrat near Piedmont, which lies towards the West and North, under the Duke of Savoy. But when the Duke of Mantua was put under the Ban of the Empire in 1707. his Part was by the Emperor given to the Duke of Savoy; and Casal being recover'd from the French, that Prince remains sole Sovereign here. The chief Towns are,

Casal,	}	Acqui,
Alba,		Rippalia,
Bianza,		Occimian,
Salugia,		Belzoia.
Verolunso,

CASALE, Casale, call'd by the Ligurians Bodincomagus, by the Romans Industria, afterwards Sedulia, as appears by the Annals of the City. It is also call'd Casale St. Vaso, from St. Evasius, its Patron, to distinguish it from other Towns of the same Name. It stands on the Po, 4 Miles from Trino, to the East, 15 from Asti to the North, 40 from Turin to the East, and about as many from Milan. In the Year 1474. Pope Sixtus IV. erected it into a Bishoprick, under the Arch Bishop of Milan, at the request of Gulielmus Paleologus, Marquis of Montferrat. It is famous for the many Sieges which it has sustain'd Gonzales at the Head of the Spanish Forces invetted it in the Year 1629. but was forc'd to leave it in the Night-time, on the approach of the French Forces. The Spaniards attempted it next Year after, under the Command of Ambrosio Spinoza; but the Marquis de Torres defended it so vigorously, that they lost their Labour. In the Year 1640. Lombard they came before it again, under the Command of the Marquis de Leganez; but Count Harcourt drove them away, taking several of their Standards their Baggage and Ammunition, and above 2000 Prisoners, and kill'd as many. In the Year 1652. the Spaniards taking advantage of the Commotions of France, made themselves Masters of it, and afterwards surrender'd it to the Duke of Mantua, who kept a Garrison in it, till he sold it to Lewis XIV. King of France, on 30 Sept. 1681. The Duke of Mantua still receiving some inconsiderable Duties from it. It was lately a very well fortified City, with a Castle and Citadel, which was of great Importance; the French having corrected all Irregularities of the Fortifications, and added a great deal more to what there were formerly; but in pursuance of the Articles of Capitulation with the Duke of Savoy, who besieg'd it with the Confederate Army 1695. it was demolish'd. It was possess'd and fortified by the French in the late War; but recover'd by the Duke of Savoy.

Alba, Alba Pompeia stands on the River Tanaro, 12 Miles from Asti to the South, 7 from Cherasco, and 28 from Turin to the South West. It formerly belong'd to the Duke of Mantua, but was yielded to the Duke of Savoy by the Treaty of Cherasco, Ann. 1631. It has suffer'd several Chances and Revolutions, and is in a decaying Condition, and indifferently inhabited. It is however an Episcopal See, under the Arch Bishop of Milan.

Acqui, Aque Statellæ, or Statellæ, or, according to Pliny, Aque Statyellæ, stands on the River Bormio, near the Appennines, 16 Miles from Allemandria della Paglia to the South, as many from Savona, somewhat more from Asti to the South East, and Alba to East. It is famous for its hot Sulphurous Waters, to which great Numbers of People come to be freed from their cold noxious Humours, as Ferrarius relates; and the Seat of a Bishop, Suffragan to the Arch-Bishop of Milan.

C H A P. V.

The Dutchy of Milan, Mediolanensis Ducatus.

THE Dutchy, commonly call'd the Milanese, is the North part of Liguria, and was anciently inhabited by the Insubres. The LONGOBARDI, a People of Germany, having overrun Pannonia, in the Year of Christ 526. made Incursions into Italy, in the Year 552. and having expell'd the Goths in the Year 572. establish'd a new Kingdom here, which lasted about 206 Years, till Charles the Great abolish'd it. About the Year 1389. the French first laid claim to this Country; and upon this account, Lewis Duke of Oleans, Brother of Charles VI. Marry'd Valentina, the Daughter of John Galeazzo, Viscount of Milan, with this Condition, that he should receive immediately as a Dowry, not only a great Treasure of Money and Jewels, but also the County of Asti; and in case her Father should die without Issue, the whole Country should devolve on Valentina and her Children: Which Contract has not only furnish'd France with a pretension to Milan; but has also been the occasion of great Calamities. In the Year 1499. Lewis XII. pretending a Right to this Dukedom by his Grandmother's side, conquer'd it in 21 Days, and forc'd Lewis the Black to fly into Germany; but the Inhabitants of Milan not being able to endure the too free Conversation of the French with their Wives, recall'd their Duke, who being assisted by an Army of Swiss, regain'd the whole Country, except the Castle of Milan, and the City of Novaro; but Lewis XIV. sending timely Relief from France, and the Swiss proving Treacherous to the Duke, and refusing to fight against the French, he was forc'd to endeavour his Escape in a common Soldier's Habit; and being taken, was kept Prisoner at Loches 10 Years, where he died; and so the French were absolute Masters of Milan; but in the Year 1512. they were forc'd to leave Italy, and Maximilian Son of Lewis the Black, was restor'd to the Dutchy of Milan by the help of the Swiss. Afterwards Francis I. invaded Italy, and beat Maximilian, having kill'd 10000 Swiss, with the loss of 4000 of his best French Troops.

Lombardy. Troops. After which Maximilian surrendered himself and the whole Country to the King, on condition of an Annual Pension of 30000 Ducats to be paid him. In the Year 1521. Francis was led out of Milan; and Francis Sforza Restor'd by the means of the Emperor and the Pope; but at last after so many Changes and Revolutions, by the Peace Concluded at Cambry, in the Year 1529 Francis renounc'd all his Pretensions to Milan, and afterwards the Emperor Charles V. annexed it to the Crown of Spain for ever. And therefore seized by the French in behalf of the D. of Anjou, when he ascended the Throne of Spain. But recover'd for King Charles in the Year 1706. by the Victorious Prince Eugene.

This Country is well Watered, and very Fruitful, producing abundance of Corn, Wine, Flax, and several sorts of good Fruit. It is Ruled by a Governor sent from the King of Spain; who Rules the Inhabitants with absolute sway, and squeezes great Sums of Money out of them, besides the King's Revenue; which some say amounts to 3000000 Livres, besides a Million more in time of War. The Country is commonly divided into these Parts or Territories, viz. il Territorio di Milano, il Pavese, il Novarese, il Comasco, il Ledegino, il Cremonese, il Tortonese, il Alessandrino, il Contado di Aughiera, and la Laumellina: and the Chief Towns in it are,

Milan.	Lodi.
Alessandria.	Novara.
Bobbia.	Pavia.
Como.	Vivezano.
Cremona.	Mortara.
Tortona.

Milan, Mediolanum, is Situated in a pleasant Plain, and Watered by the little River Olena, and has also the advantage of two Canals, one of which is call'd Novalia Delle Martegano, which begins at Terra, and reaches in a strait Line, within half a Mile of Milan, being 20 Miles in Length; and supplied with Water from the Adda. The other is call'd Novalia Tassinello, and comes from the Tessin. This City is said to have been Built by the Gauls, 395 Years after the building of Rome: and tho' it hath been often wasted, and even destroyed by the terrible Scourges of War and Pestilence, having been Besieged 20, and taken 22 times; and particularly Raz'd and Sowed with Salt, by Frederick Barbarossa, Ann. 1162; yet it is so well recovered at present, that it justly deserves the Name of Great, and may be reckon'd among the best and finest Cities in Europe. Its Figure is round, its Walls are Ten Miles in Compass, and its Inhabitants are thought by some to be 250000, by others 300000. It is divided into 6 Parts or Regions, which have their Names from so many Gates. The Citadel is a regular Hexagon, well lin'd and stored with Canon, and surrounded with a great Ditch and Counterescarp. The Principal Buildings in Milan, without mentioning the Churches and Convents, (which are very many) are the Arch-Bishop's Palace, the Houses of the Marquis Homadeo, Count Barth, Arese, and Signior T. Marini; the Seminary, a noble Structure, Founded by Charles Borromeo; the Colleges of the Switzers of Breva, and of the Jesuits; The Town-house and the Chief Hospital; The Lazaret, or place appointed for those that are Sick of Pettilential Distempers, begun Ann. 1489, by Duke Lewis Sforza, call'd the Moor, and Finish'd by Lewis XII. 1507, consisting of 4 Galleries join'd in a Square, each containing 92 Chambers, the Doors of which are so contriv'd, that all the Sick

Persons may see the Mals laid from their several Beds; the Altar being in the middle of the Square, under a Dome, supported by Columns. The Cabinet of the late Canon Manfredi Sattola, a Person of great Learning and Ingenuity, as well as a dextrous Workman in several things, is very well worth seeing; for there are several sorts of very ingenious Machines, contriv'd for finding out the perpetual Motion, Looking-Glasses and Dials of all sort, Ancient and Modern, Musical Instruments, Books, Medals, Seals, Rings, Pictures, Indian works, Mummies, &c. with an infinite variety of all sorts of Antiquities, a great piece of Cloth made of the Stone Amiantum, and several Monitors, a Dish of yellow Amber, two Foot in Diameter; also several rough pieces of the same sort of Amber, enclosing Ants, Spiders, Grasshoppers, Flies and other Insects, which appear distinctly in the middle of them; a piece of Crystal also, in which several sorts of Substances are enclosed, particularly an Olive Leaf, and a drop of Water, which seems to move. The Cathedral Church likewise deserves the particular notice of a Traveller, being a prodigious Work beyond St. Peter's at Rome, for the laboriousness of its Structure, tho' a Sixth part less. The Ambrosian Library, so Named by Cardinal Frederick Borromeo, Arch Bishop of Milan, who Founded it, and Dedicated it to St. Ambrose, is said to contain 14000 Manuscripts besides Printed Books; which some say are in Number 72000. There is also adjoining to the Library an Academy for Painting, in which are a great many curious Pictures: Besides all these, there are an infinite number of Curiosities, and things worth an Ingenious Man's particular notice, too many to be inserted here, and therefore those who have not had the advantage of Travelling and seeing them, must have recourse to the late Travellers, for a more full account of them. This City is distant 43 Miles from Casal to the East, 65 from Genova to the North, 72 from Parma to the N. West, 80 from Turin, as much from Modena to the West, and 192 to the N. West of Rome. It was possess'd by the French in behalf of K. Philip, and held by them till September 1706, when it submitted to Prince Eugene, and swore Allegiance to King Charles III.

Alessandria della Paglia, or Alexandria, Alexandria Statellicrum, is divided into two Parts by the River Tanaro, above 52 Miles from Milan to the South West, and in the midst between Genova to the South, and Turin to the West 44 Miles from either, according to Philippus Ferrarius, who was Born in this place. The Emperor Frederick Barbarossa call'd it Casarea; but Pope Alexander III. would have it nam'd Alexandria. 'Tis false that ever any Emperors were Crown'd in this City with a Crown of Straw, (as Mr. Misson observes) and it will be pretty hard to prove that Frederick in derision call'd it Alexandria of Straw: However it retains that Name to this Day. The City is but little, and the Fortifications at present are but indifferent. The foresaid Pope Erected it into a Bishoprick, subject to the Arch-Bishop of Milan, in the Year 1175. It was recover'd to the Obedience of King Charles, by Prince Eugene, after a Siege of 3 Days, in October, 1706.

Bobio, or Bobi, Bobium, is a little Town upon the River Tebia. Situated in a Plain, upon the Confines of the Dutchy of Parma, and not far from those of the Genuefe. It was anciently only an Abbey Built by St. Columbanus, through the Liberality of Theodolinda Queen of the Longobards; but afterwards grew grew up to a considerable Town under those, the Monastery still remaining. It gives name to a Country call'd after it il Bobiese: and is a Bishop's Seat Suffragan to the Arch-Bishop of Genoua. It stands 35 Miles from Dertona to the South East, 35 from Genoua, 23 from Piacenza to the North, and 35 from Pavia.

Coma Comum, or Nuvcomum, stands upon a Lake of that name, about 25 Miles from Milan to the North, as many from Bugomo to the West, and 80 from Turin to the North East; and gives name to the adjacent Country call'd il Comasco; the People of which City calls Comenses. Pomponius Trogus says it was Built by the Gauls, as Milan, Trent, Verona, and several other Towns were. It is an Episcopal See, under the Arch-bishop of Milan, in the Patriarchat of Aquileia. This City has given Birth to several Illustrious Persons, particularly Pliny the younger, Paulus Jovius, and Pope Innocent XI. of the Family of Odescalchi.

Cremona. Cremona, is Seated on the left Bank of the Po, on the Confines of the Dutchy of Milan, in the midst between Pavia to the West, and Mantua to the East, about 40 Miles from either, 50 from Milan to the East, and 18 from Piacenza. 'Tis a pretty large City, but Poorer and less Populous than Piacenza. Their famous Tower, so much talk'd of, especially by some of their own Authors, is neither handson nor very high. The Castle is an old, shapeless, and ruinous Mass; which never deserv'd the name of a Fort, tho' it might have signified something in the days of Yore, when Cross-bows were in Fashion. The Tower is said to have been Built by the Emperor Frederick Barbarossa, Ann. 1184. The People of Cremona boast much of the Antiquity of their City, but want Proofs to confirm it. It is said to have been Built the 445th Year of the City of Rome, and afterwards made a Roman Colony. It hath suffered many Changes and Revolutions, and hath often changed its Masters. Hannibal Pillaged it in his Passage to Italy, the Goths committed horrible Outrages in it, and the Slavonians and Lombards entirely ruined it; and Frederick Barbarossa Rebuilt it. It was once Govern'd by its own Vitcounts, but the French, Venetians, Duke of Milan, and the Spaniards have at different times been Masters of it; the last of which is still in possession of it. It is an Episcopal See under the Arch-Bishop of Milan. Being Garrison'd by the French and Spaniards for K. Philip, Prince Eugene of Savoy attempted, by Stratagem, to surprize it in Febr. 1702. which he so far effected as to get into the Town, and brought off the Marshal Villeroy Prisoner, but his Reinforcements not coming up time enough he was forc'd to quit the Town. It Surrender'd with the rest of the Milanese to Prince Eugene at the latter end of the Year, 1706.

Tortona, Dertona, or Tordona, which Strabo calls Derton, is a little, ruinous and ill Fortified City upon the River Iria, or il Staffora, about 8 Miles from the Confines of the Dominions of Genoua to the North, as far from the Po, 10 from Alessandria to the East, 25 from Pavia, and 45 from Piacenza. It is an Episcopal See, under the Arch-Bishop of Milan. It is defended by a Citadel, which is regular and naturally Strong, but not kept in very good order. This Town as well as Milan, was destroy'd by the Emperor Frederick Barbarossa, and Rebuilt by the Milanese; but has never recovered its former greatness. It was taken by the French in the Year 1642, and recovered by the Spaniards the Year following. It gives name to the adjacent Country call'd il Tortonese. The ancient Dertone stood on the Eminency where the Citadel stands at present.

Lodi, Laus Pompeia, was an ancient Town in Insabria, according to Strabo, and the name of a Colony. It is said to have been Built by the Gauls, call'd Boli, when they came first into Italy, according to Pliny; and call'd Pompeia afterwards, because Pompeius Strabo, Father of Pompey the Great, carried a Colony thither. It stood on the River Silaro; but was destroyed by the Milanese, Ann. 1158, and is now only a little Village call'd Lodi Vecchio and Lodize, by Abbreviation, that is, the old Laus. The new Lodi, which stands about 5 Miles from it, on the River Adda, in the Dutchy of Milan, was Built by Frederick Barbarossa, 46 Years after the Destruction of the other; and stands at the distance of 20 Miles from Milan to the West, and as many from Cremona: It is an Episcopal See, under the Arch-Bishop of Milan.

Novara, Novaria, the chief City anciently of the Laevi, in Insabria, stands about 25 Miles from Milan to the West, 16 from Casal to the North East, and 14 from Verceil in Piedmont. There are several Inscriptions on Marble which plainly shew its Antiquity. It is an Episcopal See, (whereof Benedictus Odescalchi, afterwards Pope Innocent XI. was once Bishop under the Arch Bishop of Milan. Lewis Sforza Duke of Milan, was taken by the French before this place, Ann. 1500. and Petrus Lombardus, Master of the Sentences, (as he's commonly call'd) was Born here. This Town gives name to a very Pleasant and Fertile Country, lying about it, call'd ill Novarese by the Inhabitants. It is a strong Fortress, but was, however, taken by Prince Eugene in Sept. 1706. after a Siege of three Days.

Pavia, Ticinum, anciently Inhabited by the Insabres, and said to have been Built by the Levi and Marici before Milan. It was afterwards call'd Flavia Pappia, and Papia by Paulus Diaconus, and other late Authors. It was Subdued by the Romans, Sack'd by Attila in the 5th Century, and at last Ruin'd by Odoacer. It was taken by Albinus, King of the Lombards; and in the Year 774, Charles the Great Storm'd it, and carried Didier last King of the Lombards away Prisoner. In the Year 951, it was taken by the Emperor Otho I. and in the Year 1004, it was almost entirely laid in Ashes by an Accidental Fire In the Year 1059. it entred into a bloody War with Milan; and after that time was subject to several Masters, till it was annex'd to the Territories of Milan. Francis I. King of France laid Siege to it, Anno 1525; but his Army was Routed, and himself taken Prisoner: And two Years after the French took it under the Command of Odo de Laure. At last the Spaniards made themselves absolute Masters of it. It is an Episcopal See under the Arch-Bishop of Milan, but exempted from his Jurisdiction, and depends immediately on the See of Rome. The City of Pavia has lost all its ancient Lustre, insomuch that one who sees it now will hardly be persuaded that it was once the Metropolis of a Kingdom, and the Residence of 20 Monarchs. The Castle and Fortifications are in a very ruinous Condition; and the University (which as they say, was Founded by Charles the Great) is Decayed as well as the Town. The Cathedral is an old dark Structure, Built awry; over against which there is a Figure on Horseback of Brass, said to be the Statue of Antonius Pius. This City stands upon the River Tesin, 4 Miles from the Po, 150 from Genoua, and 34 from Piacenza to the West, and gives name to that part of the Dutchy of Milan, which is call'd il Pavese, or Territorio

Lombardy

Lombardi. Territorio di Pavia. Count Toussain reinforced by the Prince of Sax-Gotha. Reduced Pavia to the Obedience of King Charles, October 3. 1706.

Vivegano, Vigebanum, is a little Town upon the River Tessin, with a Castle, about 20 Miles from Milan to the West, as many from Casal, and 12 from Pavia. It is so called, as Gaudentius Merula, conjectures from Vilis Gieba, because of the bad Soil of the neighbouring Country, to which it gives Name. It is an Episcopal See, of no long standing, under the Arch-Bishop of Milan.

Mortara, Mortaria, is a pretty large Town and well Inhabited, upon the River Gogna about 4 Miles from Vivegano to the South-West, 10 from Navara to the South-East, and 24 from Pavia to the West.

It is the chief Town of a Country call'd Lumellina; and was anciently call'd Bella Sylva; but afterwards Mortaria, on the account of the signal overthrow which the Lombards receiv'd by the Army of Charles the Great, when he took their last King Didier Prisoner, and put a Period to their Kingdom. In the Year 1658 it was taken by the French under the Command of Francis Duke of Medena, but restor'd to the Spaniard by the Pyrenian Treaty, Ann. 1660.

Cassano, a small Town and Castle, famous for the Battle between the Imperialists under Prince Eugene, and the French under the Duke of Vendôme and the Grand Prior, Aug. 16. 1705. Stands on the West side the Adda, about 19 Miles East from Milan.

C A A P. VI.

The Dutchy of Parma, Ducatus, or Ditio Parmensis.

THE Dutchy of Parma, which the Italians call lo Stato del Duca di Parma, is Bounded with the Dutchy of Milan on the North and West, that of Modena on the East, and the Dominions of Genova and part of the Valley of Magra on the South; and was anciently Inhabited by the Anamari, a People of Gallia Cispadana, and a part of the Boii. The parts into which it is commonly divided are, the Dutchy of Parma strictly taken, the Dutchy of Placenza, the State of Busseto, and a part of the State of the Valley of Taro, and formerly comprehended also the Dutchy of Castro and the State of Renciglione. After many Changes and Revolutions, this Country fell into the Hands of the Pope. And Pope Paul III. before his Accession to the Chair, call'd Alexander Farnese, Created Pedro Luige Farnese Duk of Parma, in the Year 1545: and so this Duke is a Vassal of the See of Rome, to which he Pays a yearly Acknowledgment of 10000 Crowns. The Revenues of this Dutchy are said to be about 400000 Crowns, and his ordinary Forces 5000 Men. This Dutchy's being a Fief of the Pope's Demeans, had like to have prov'd Fatal to Prince Rannucio, Son and Heir to Alexander Farnese Duke of Parma, and Governor of the Netherlands; For Pope Sixtus V. having by repeated Orders forbid the carrying of secret Arms, was inform'd, that this young Prince ordinarily carried Pocket-Pistols; and thereupon (this Prince being his Vassal) ordered him to be Arrested, and his Pistols taken from him in one of the Chambers of the Pope's Palace, and afterwards to be carried to the Castle of St Angelo. His Uncle Cardinal Farnese left no means unessay'd to procure his Liberty, but all in vain; for the Pope sent an Order to the Governor of the Castle to cause him to be Beheaded; but the Cardinal coming shortly after, (as if he had known nothing of the Fatal Order) to renew his Solicitations, the Pope to be rid of him, sent him away with a new Order to the Governor, to set Pannucio at Liberty, not doubting but it would come too late. The Cardinal having by Money procured all the Clocks in the City to be kept back, except the Pope's, and coming to the Castle in all haste, found his Nephew all in Tears, in the Arms of his Confessor; but quickly producing his new Order, and the Governor concluding that the Pope had at last been prevailed with, delivered up his Prisoner, who by his Uncle's Command immediately took Post, without staying to thank his Holiness for his Life; which by chance had been rescued from the Jaws of Death. This Country produces plenty of good Wine and Oyl, and was famous for excellent Cheese; which they say is not at present made here, but in the Milanese about Lodi. The most considerable Cities and Towns in it are,

Parma, } } Borgo S. Domino,
Placenza, } } Piacenzuola.

Parma. Parma, anciently a City Inhabited by the Boii in Gallia Cisalpina, according Strabo and Pliny, stands upon a River of the same Name, which divides it into two Parts, about 10 Miles from the Po to the South, in the midst between Modena and Placenza, 35 Miles East of the first and as many West of the other, 86 from Florence to the N.W. 60 S.E. from Milan, and above 200 from Rome. It is a very pleasant City, and the Avenues to it are Broad and Straight. The most remarkable things in it are, the great Theatre, which is so rare a Structure, that neither Paris nor Venice, can boast of the like. It is extremely large, but so contriv'd, that the least Whisper can be heard thro' all the Parts of it. Instead of Boxes the Floor is surrounded with Benches, rais'd after the manner of an Amphitheatre. It may be filled with Water to the Height of above 3 Foot: And this little Lake is cover'd with Gilt Boats; which make a very charming Spectacle, by the help of a fine Illumination. The Citadel of Parma was Built after the Model of that of Antwerp, and the Fortifications of the City are also very good. The Ducal Palace has nothing extraordinary in it; but that which was a building in the Year 1688, is Larger and more Regular. Besides the ordinary Schools of the University, there is a large College, call'd the College of the Nobility: and not only the Sciences, but also all manner of Exercises are taught here. There is abundance of good Company and fine People, to be seen here at the Cours or Walk, especially handsome Women; but it is thought as great a Crime, and would be as odd to see both Sexes in one Coach, as to walk Naked about the Streets. This City is honoured with an Episcopal See, under the Arch-Bishop of Bologna; but was formerly Subject to that of Ravenna.

Placenza,

Placenza, Placentia, Anciently a Town in Gallia Cispadana, Inhabited by the Anamani, now call'd by the Inhabitants, Piacenza, stands upon a Plain, about half a Mile from the Po, 40 Miles from Milan to the South East, 35 from Parma, 30 from Pavia to the East, and 18 from Cremona. It is the chief Town of a Dutchy of that Name, Subject to the Duke of Parma, since the Year 1540. It is a very ancient Town, and was Burnt and Pillag'd by the Carthaginians, under the Command of their General Hamilcar, (as Livy informs us) and afterwards did Bravely sustain a long Siege, which Attila King of the Goths laid to it. It is a pleasant Town, Bigger than Parma; the Houses low and prettily Built. There is in the Street which they call Stradon; a Foot part next the Houses defended with Posts, as in London about 10 Foot distant from each other. The Town is thinly Inhabited; and the Houses are generally of Brick. The Fortifications are not very considerable, tho' they are very much extoll'd commonly. The Statues of Alexander Farnese Governor of the Spanish Nether- lands, and of his Son Rannuccio the first, are set up Lombardy in the great Palace.

Borgo S. Domino, Fidentia, Anciently a Town belonging to the Anamani, in Gallia Cispadana, according to Antoninus. It appears by an old Inscription that it was call'd Julia Fidentia; Livy calls it Fidentiola, and the Roman Martyrology Julia. It is now a little dismantled Town on the Confines of the State of Buffeto, about 15 Miles from Parma to the West, and 20 from Piacenza. It had been an Episcopal See, but ceasing to be so for some time, was restor'd to that Dignity by Pope Clement VI. Ann. 1601.

Fierenzuola, Florentiola, Anciently a Town in Gallia Cispadana, Inhabited by the Anamani, stands in the County of Buffeto, about 13 Miles from Piacenza to the East, 6 from Borgo S. Domino, and 22 from Parma; it is the name also of a pleasant Valley, in a Barren and Desert Country, between Florence and Bologna. It was Built by the Florentines, Anno 1332. There are other Towns of this Name, viz. one in Tuscany, and another in Apulia.

C H A P. VII.

The Dutchy of Modena. Mutinensis Ducatus.

THIS Dutchy is made up of several little Dutchies and Principalities, viz. The Dutchy of Regio, the Principality of Carpi, the Principality of Corregio, the Signiorie of Sassuolo, Frignana, and the greater part of Grafignana; and is Bounded on the North with the Dutchies of Mantua, and Mirandola, on the East with the Bolognese, and the Territories of the Church, on the South with the Dominions of Tuscany, and those of Luca, and on the West with the Dutchy of Parma. Its Length from South to North is about 60 Miles, (according to Baudrand, from East to West 45. It was anciently Inhabited by the Boii, People of Gallia Cispadana; and was formerly subject to the Dukes of Ferrara, of the Family of Este; but the little Principality of Corregio was but lately annexed to the Dominions of Modena; being formerly Govern'd by its own Princes. The most considerable Towns in this Dutchy of Modena are,

Corregio. }

Modena, Mutina, Anciently a Colony and Town in Gallia Cispadana; but Ruin'd by the Goths, and Lombards, and afterwards re-built at the Charge of the Citizens. During the distractions of Italy between the Emperor and the Pope, Guido the Pope's Legat and Bishop of this Place, consign'd it to Azzo, of the House of Este, Lord of Ferrara. Ann. 1304 upon the Payment of 10000 Crowns a Year; since which time it hath for the most part continued in the Possession of that Family. It is seated on a Plain, upon the River Secchia, about 20 Miles from Bologna to the West, 16 from Regio to the East, 20 from the Po to the South, and 40 from Mantua to the South East, it is at present destitute of Trade, and consequently Poor. Its Fortifications are in a decaying condition. The Portico's with which the Streets are Bordered are low and narrow, neither are any of its Churches remarkable. In short, where it not for its ancient Reputation, and because it is the Residence of the Duke at present, it would hardly be taken notice of. It is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Bologna, whereas formerly it was Suffragan to that of Ravenna.

Carpi, Carpum, Stands upon a Canal of the River Secchia, 12 Miles from Modena to the North, and near 4 from Corregio. It is but a little Town, with a pretty Strong Castle; but is Honour'd with the Title of a Principality, (which is no greater matter in Italy) and was for a long time Possessed by the Family of the Pio's; but at last in the Year 1550, it fell into the hands of the Dukes of Modena. The Collegiat Church in it was first Built by King Aistulphus, and afterwards Repaired with much Magnificence, by Albertus Pius, then Prince. It is in no Diocels, and is exempted from the Jurisdiction of the Neighbouring Bishops, by the Concessions, particularly of Pope Julius II. and Leo X. The French possessed it in the late War in these parts, and abandon'd it in 1703, but in 1705, took possession of it again, and were taken Prisoners of War in it by Prince Eugene, Aug. 5. 1706.

Corregio, Corregium, or Corrigium, is a pretty large and well Inhabited Town, with a Castle, about 10 Miles from Regio, and 13 from Modena to the West. It was formerly under Princes of that Name; but since the Year 1635, it has been Subject to the Duke of Modena.

Regio, Reggio, Regium Lepidi, to distinguish it from Regium Julium, another Town of that Name in Calabria ulterior, (of which afterwards in its due place) is seated in a pleasant Country, between Parma to the West, and Modena to the East, about 20 Miles from either. Mr. Misson tells us, that there is nothing particularly remarkable in this City, except that it is better Built, and more pleasant than Modena. Tho' they boast much of their Church of S. Prosper; yet it is nothing in comparison with those at Rome or Naples. They strive also (says this Author) to gain some Reputation by making Spurs, and working in Bone; of which they make Rings for 6d. a Dozen, Lombard, Dozen, Death's Heads, Shrines for Relicks, Agnus Dei's, &c. all very coarse. It is an Episcopal See, formerly Suffragan to Ravenna, but now to Bologna.

Brescia, Brixellum, Anciently a Colony and City in Gallia Cispadana, which Suetonius and Pliny call Brixillum stands upon the Po, over against Viadana, 8 Miles from Parma to the North 25 from Mantua, 25 from Cremona to the West, and 17 from Regio to the South West. The Roman Emperor Otho died here after the Battle of Bebriacum, (now called Corneto) which he Fought against the Forces of Vitellius, his Rival for the Empire.

Mirandula, Mirandula, is the name of a little Duchy, and also of the chief Town in it; which is said to have been Built in the time of Constance, Son of Constantine the Great. The Duchy lies between that of Mantua to the North, and Modena to the South. The Town (which is Fortified and Defended by a Castle) stands about 10 Miles from the Po to the South, and 22 from Modena to the North. This Place with the adjacent Country, hath for a long time been subject to the Family of the Pici (of which was Picus Mirandula, that Famous Scholar) as also the County of Concordia.

C H A P. VIII.

The Duchy of Mantua, Mantuanus Ducatus.

THis Duchy is bounded on the East with the Duchy of Ferrara, on the North with the Territories of Bresciano and the Veronese, on the West with part of the Duchy of Milan, near Cremona, and on the South with the Duchies of Modena and Mirandula; where anciently a part of the Cenomani dwelt. A great part of the Duchy of Montferret belongs to this Duke; who is descended from the House of Gonzagua, in whose Possession these Territories have been ever since the Year, 1327 or 1328. that Lewis de Gonzagua a Nobleman, with the assistance of the People, kill'd their Tyrant Passarino Bencolsa, and took the Government upon him. The Emperor Sigismund created John Francis Gonzagua Marquis, Ann. 1431. and Charles the V. erected it into a Duchy, Ann. 1530. This is a Fertile Country, affording Plenty of Corn and Pasturage, but the Wine is not so much commended: And the most considerable Towns in it are,

Mantua, Ch.

Guastalla.

Castiglione delle Stivere.

Mantua. Mantua, a very ancient City, Built before Rome, anciently Inhabited by the Cenomani in Gallia Cispadana. It stands on a spot of firm Land within a Marsh, made by the River Mincio upon a flat Country; which cannot properly be called a Lake; for in some parts of it the Water is always in Motion, tho' in others it Stagnates, which makes the Air so Infectious that few stay in the City during the great Heats, except such as cannot conveniently leave it. This City is not well Fortified, being only enclosed with a Wall, and defended by a Citadel: The City is indifferently large, and the Streets are broad and straight; but the Houses are very indifferent, and generally unequal, The Dukes Palace is a large and commodious Pile of Building, but has very little else to recommend it. It is said to have been very richly furnish'd, before Colalto, General of the Emperor's Forces, pillaged it in July, 1630. and however this Palace may be furnish'd at present, the Duke's Apartment is in very good Order: And the Hall of Antiquities is full of rare and fine Pieces; and the Cabinet of Curiosities is pretty well furnish'd. The Duke has Seven or Eight Pleasure-Houses, most of which are very lovely Seats. Besides the Cathedral, the Churches of the Jesuits, St. Barnabas, St. Maurice, St. Sebastian, St. Ursula and St. Barbara, the Town-House, Theatre, Manufactories, the Mill of the 12 Apostles, Synagogue and Shambles are all very well worth one's seeing, as is also the Palace of Justice: Near this City in the Village Andes was the immortal Virgil Born; which is one of the most considerable Things that render this City Famous. It is an Episcopal See, under the Patriarchat of Aquileia, but exempted from that Jurisdiction ever since the Year 1453. and stands about 5 or 6 Miles from the Po, 75 East from Milan, 75 West from the Gulf of Venice, 90 North from the Mediterranean Sea, and 30 North East from Parma.

Guastalla, Guardistallum, or Vastalla and Guastalla, stands near the River Po, on the Borders of the Duchy of Modena, in the midst between Mantua to the North, and Regio to the South. It, with a little Country about it, is honoured with the Title of a Principality. There was a Council held here, under Pope Paschalis the II. Ann. 1106. It has been subject to the Duke of Mantua, ever since the Year, 1677. that its last Duke died.

Luzzara, about 3 Miles North from Guastalla, and near the right Bank of the Po, is a Castle which was made Notable for the Battle near it, between the Germans and French, in the late War. An.

Castiglione delle Stivere, Castilio Stiverorum, is a little Fortified Town, with a pretty Strong Castle, on the Confines of the Duchy of Mantua, 12 Miles from Peschiera, and almost in the middle between Mantua and Brescia. It gives Name to the adjoining Country, which together with the Town are subject to a Prince of the Family of Gonzagua. At this Place the Duke of Vendosme drew his Troops together in April, 1706, in order to Surprize the Imperialists, at Monte Chiaro and Calcinato, which produc'd the Battle denominated from the latter.

Bozolo, Bozolum, is a little sort of a City, enclosed with certain Works, which pass for Fortifications: And stands 2 Miles from the River Olio, and almost in the middle between Mantua and Cremona. It gives Title to a Duke, who besides this Place, is Sovereign of a Territory that extends four or five Miles.

C H A P. IX.

The Republick of Venice. Ditio Veneta.

THE Dominions of the Republick of Venice, or the State of Venice, taken in a large Sense, may be divided into three Parts, according to the distinct Countries in which they lye, viz. The Venetian Dominions in Italy, which they commonly call la Terra ferma: In Dalmatia, comprehending their Dominions on that Coast and some adjacent Isles: And their Dominions in the Ionian and Ægean Seas, which the Italians call Il Levante. We shall treat particularly of the first Two in this Chapter, and some of the Third, the rest being describ'd in that which treats of Turkey in Europe.

Whatever the Venetians may pretend for the Antiquity of their State and the perpetual Freedom and Independency they have ever enjoy'd, this seems pretty clear, That their City, and consequently their State owes its Original to that of Padua. For we are told by Authors of undoubted Credit, that the Seat of this City did belong to Padua before the Building of Venice; which was not till about the Year, 420. and that Padua had a little sort of Colony there, for the Conveniency of Trade and Commerce, before ever one Stone of this City was laid, or before the coming of Attila, King of the Huns into that Country. And in Testimony of Venice's depending on Padua, it is as certain that for a considerable time there were Consuls chosen in Padua, who were to go to Venice and there to exercise the Supreme Authority: and not only so, but as a further confirmation of this Dependency, they sent one Ægilius Fontana, a Man of singular Prudence, and eminently skillful in the Laws, to frame such Laws and Constitutions for them, as he should think most fit and convenient for this Infant City; which (as we hinted before) ought to date its beginning to be a Town from the Day on which the Church of St. James de Rialta was Consecrated, which was (as Jn. Favoldus, a Man well enough affected to the Interest of Venice affirms) on the 25th of March 421. There is no Question but the number of its Inhabitants were mightily encreas'd, and consequently the Bounds of their City enlarged after Attila's coming into that Country; for he having destroyed Aquileia, Altino, Oderzo, Concordia and Padua, the Inhabitants of those Cities fled to the little Islands upon which Venice now stands, about the Year, 453. which beyond all doubt as it did mightily encrease this City, so in many respects it began to look quite another thing from what it had been formerly, and to grow in Riches and Trade as well as Extent of Dominion, till it has at last arriv'd at that pitch of Grandeur which we now see it. Whoever desires to have a full and distinct, and at the same time a brief Account of this Republick, as to its Antiquity and Independency, he may, I suppose, find Satisfaction in a little Book written by Don Alfonso de la Queva, (Ambassador from the Court of Spain to the State of Venice) call'd originally Squiliuo della Liberta Veneta: which tho' it may be thought the Product of his ill Will to that State, yet the Gentleman being one of the greatest Genius's of his Age, and a Man of Honour and Wisdom, 'tis not to be thought that he would invent both Authors and Citations from them; which the Reader is particularly concern'd in in that little Treatise. He clearly proves, First, That Venice was not originally a free State, nor has always been so in any Sense, but has been Subject to another. Secondly, That it has been Subject to the Emperors, to Odoacer, and the Gothish Kings. Thirdly, That it came again under Obedience to the Emperor after the Destruction of the Goths, and continued so to be for the space of a hundred Years. Fourthly, That in process of Time it recover'd its Liberty in a manner; that is, not in respect of private Persons, but only of the Duke, in whose Hands solely the whole Administration was lodg'd. Fifthly, That afterwards it was restor'd to a full and intire Liberty, in which all the Citizens shar'd in common, and were equally capable of sitting in their Council. Sixthly, That afterwards this universal Liberty came to be restricted and confin'd to the Rank of those who now are only capable of holding the Reins of Government, that is, the Nobility, to the exclusion of all the rest of the Citizens. These Propositions being prov'd, as we think this Author does to the satisfaction of any unprejudic'd Person, they must certainly be in a vast Mistake who do with so much Passion and Heat maintain the original and perpetual Liberty of this State, as well as those who endeavour to prove its present Freedom and Independency, in a large Sense, that is, including the whole Body of the Citizens, since it is plain that the Nobility only are so, the rest not having the least degree of Freedom, beyond what Padua, Vercna, and the other Cities under the Obedience of this State enjoy.

The first Government then of this City was Consular, which lasted about 40 Years, and then was chang'd for that of the Tribunes; then came in the Dukes or Doges, who for a long time were either appointed or confirm'd by the Emperor, or the Exarch, by whom also this State was confirm'd in its former Privileges, and allow'd to Coin Money. Afterwards the Doges became absolute, and exercised arbitrary Power: And then the City was just as free as Rome was under the first Cæsars; but now the Case is quite altered; for the Doge of Venice is no more than a meer gawdy Slave loaded with Fetters, which are not the less heavy because they are gilded; and his Authority extends no further than to nominate some Officers of the Palace, to have two Voices in the Great Council, and to create some Knights of St. Mark. He is as much Subject to the Laws as the meanest Person: And the Inquisition of the State is more severe upon him than upon others. He is chosen by the whole Body of the Nobility, and enjoys this imaginary Honour during Life. When he is Sick or Dies, a certain Counsellor takes his Place and represents his Person in publick Ceremonies, and other Occasions; but neither wears his Habit, nor sits in his Seat. The Doge cannot Pardon Criminals; nor take a Journey to the Continent without permission from the State; and when he goes, he leaves all his Honours behind him, and is no more than a private Nobleman: and the very Moment he's Elected, all his Relations who were in Offices are Lombard, turn'd out. The Letters of Princes are directed and presented to the Doge, but he must not open them before they are communicated to the Council; that is, the Council receives them by his Hands. He gives Answer to Ambassadors; but must not alter one Syllable of what the Council has put in his Mouth, otherwise he must expect a Reprimand on the very Spot. As to what concerns Acts of State, he is but the Herald; the Senate Enacts, and the Doge Publishes them. His Revenue (according to Mr. Miffen) amounts to near 6000 Sequins or 2700 Pound English. He has some Marks of seeming Honour put upon him; which in effect, are rather given to the Republick in his Person than to him. He is call'd Prince, and has the Title of Serenity bestowed on him. There are some Marks of Royalty in his Apparel also. When he marches in State he has a Torch carried before him, a Chair with two Arms and no Back, and a Cushion, 8 Silver Trumpets, some Hantboys, and 8 Standards, and a kind of Canopy like an Umbrella carried hard by him; tho' there's no Canopy in his Apartment, nor even in the Hall where he gives Audience to Ambassadors. He never pulls off his Corno, but either at the Moment of the Elevation of the Host, or when he receives a Visit from a Prince of Royal Blood, or from a Cardinal.

As to the Nobility of Venice, tho' they all bear the same Name, and are united into one Body, their Families are not equally Illustrious. The first Classis or Rank consists of those Families who founded the Republick, and were Nobles before that Time. The Second comprehends those who were elected before the shutting up of the Council; which was call'd Il Serrar del Consiglio. The Third contains those who obtain'd that Honour as a Recompence for some eminent Services done to the State: And therefore call'd Gentlemen by Merit. The Fourth is made up of Nobili per Soldi, or Gentlemen by Purchase, who bought the Title. But notwithstanding these Differences, all of 'em, from the highest to the lowest, have an equal Right to give their Voices, and enjoy the same Privileges: All go to the Great Council, and are honoured with the Title of Excellency. The Order of Knighthood may be divided into these Classes or Ranks. The First comprehends the Knights of the Golden Star, who are all Noble Venetians, that owe their Dignity to their Merit, and wear a Star bordered with a Gold Galoon. The Second Rank consists of the Knights of St. Mark, who are call'd Knights of the Senate: And this Honour is usually confer'd as a Recompence, on Colonels, and even sometimes on Captains, who have signaliz'd their Bravery in an extraordinary Manner, or rendered some important Service to the Republick. The Captain-General recommends the Person to the Senate, who, if the balloting run in his Favour, receives the Order, and with it a Pension of at least a thousand Ducats a Year. These Knights wear a Medal at one of their Burton-holes, with the Figure of St. Mark on one side, and a Device on the Reverse, according to the Pleasure of the Senate. This Honour is indifferently bestowed on all, Noble or Ignoble, Venetian or Foreigner. The Third Rank is made up of the Doge's Knights, who confers this Honour on whom he pleases, and oftentimes on very mean Persons; who can buy it at any time for a hundred Chequins. This Classis consists chiefly of Foreign Officers, who besides the additional Respect it begets them, are by this means secured in their Places.

As to the Government and Administration of Justice, we are told that there are 5 principal Councils or Courts establish'd in this State. The First is the Grand Council, comprehending the whole Body of the Nobility, who are of Age to sit in Council, that is 25 Years old; whose Number is thought to be about 1400, tho' not above one half of 'em are at Home at one Time, being employ'd in other Places, either in Civil or Military Offices, or on Embassies to Foreign States. The Second call'd Pregadi, determines all Matters relating to Peace and War, Alliances and Leagues. The Third is the College compos'd of 26 Noble-men, that give Audience to Ambassadors, and Report their Demands to the Senate, which alone hath Power to return Answers. The Fourth is call'd the Council of Ten, and decides all Criminal Matters. This Court is renew'd yearly, and 3 Inquisitors of State are chosen from among them every Month. The Fifth is the Spiritual Council, in which the Patriarch of Venice presides; who is always a Noble-man, and is Elect'd by the Senate, and confirm'd by the Pope. His Dignity is very eminent, but his Authority is extremely bounded. He can only nominate to two Benefices, for the Clergy are chosen by the People, and can hardly be said to acknowledge any Superiority but that of the State.

The Forces of this Republick both at Sea and Land, hardly amount to four and twenty Thousand, and of these there are usually twelve or fifteen Thousand in the Field. The Captain General who Commands 'em, is always a Noble Venetian, and has under him a General of the Land Forces, Lieutenant-Generals, and Sergeant-Majors, who are almost always Foreigners; for the Noble Venetians are not very Ambitious of Military Employments, because they must come to the highest Posts by degrees; and a Noble Venetian can hardly find in's Heart to stoop so low, as to carry a Musquet, or even to accept a Captain's Commission. A Foreign Captain's Pay is a hundred Ducats, or 250 French Livres a Month, a Lieutenant's 30, and an Ensign's 25, but the Italian Officers have but half so much. The Common Soldiers have but 3 d. a Day, and out of that must furnish their own Cloaths; but those who serve at Sea have Cloaths given them.

We said before, that the whole Dominions belonging to the Republick of Venice, might be divided into 3 Parts, according to the several distinct Countries where they lye, as you may see in this Table:

TERRA FIRMA.

THE first of these, viz. The Terra firma, or Dominion of Venice, strictly taken, was Anciently a part of Gallia Cisalpina, Inhabited by the Veneti, Carni, Istri, and Enganei; and is Bounded on the North with the Valtelline, Country of Tirol, and Carinthia, on the West with the Dutchy of Milan, on the South with the Dutchy of Mantua, the Ecclesiastical State, and the Gulf of Venice, which Bounds it also on the East. Its greatest Length from East to West is about 240 Miles, and greatest Breadth about 100. but in some places it is very Narrow.

ISTRIA, was Anciently a part of Gallia Transpadana, on the Confines of Illyricum. It is bounded on the North with Germany, and the Dutchy of Carniola, from which it is separated by the Montidella Vena, on the East with the Golfo Carnero, on the West with the Gulf of Venice, with which also it is Bounded on the South. It is in Length from North-West to South-East, about 60 Miles, but not near so Broad. The Air of it is not very Healthful, especially on the Coast, but the Country is abundantly Fertile, producing Corn, Timber, Grapes and Olives. The Senate of Venice sends a Governour to it, and receives a considerable Revenue from thence. The chief Towns in it under the Venetians are,

Parento. } Pola.

Capo d' Istria, Justinopolis, from Justin the Emperor, who Rebuilt it, whereas formerly it had been call'd Aigida, according to Pliny. It stands in an Island, within three Arrow-shots from the Continent, to which it is joyn'd by certain Bridges, that may be drawn at Pleasure, which makes the Place so strong that it is call'd on that account Castellum Leonis, or the Lion Castle. It is an Episcopal See, under the Patriarch of Aquileia, and stands on the Coasts of the Gulf of Venice, about 18 Miles South from Treiste, and 80 from Venice to the East.

Parento, Parentum, which Pliny and Ptolomy make mention of, as a Town in Italy, is seated upon a Peninsula, and Fortified, and has a pretty good Harbour; but is Inhabited by very few, by reason of the unwholsom Air. It is however the name of an Episcopal See, under the Patriarchat of Aquileia, about 7 Mile-distant from Cita Nuovo, 28 from Capo d' Istria as much from Pola, and 80 from Venice to the East.

Cita Nuovo, Civitas Nova, is a little Town near the Gulf of Venice, that rose from the Ruins of the old Aemonia, which was destroy'd by the Hungarians. It stands upon the River Quieto, about 3 Miles from the Ruins of Aemonia, 30 from Treiste to the South, and 8 from Parento. It has the name of an Episcopal See, under the Patriarchat of Aquileia; but the Air being so bad, no body lives in it but a few Fishermen in the Winter time; for in the Summer it is quite desolate and abandon'd.

Pala, or Pola, was anciently call'd Julia Pera, according to Pliny, and Built by the Colchi. It is a little Ill-inhabited Town, near a Promontory of the same name, about 88 Miles from Parento to the South, 60 from Treiste, and about 100 from Ancona, and is an Episcopal See under the Patriarch of Aquileia.

The County of FRIVILL, Forum Julium, or Julienfis Provincia, was Anciently Inhabited by the Carni; and is Bounded on the South with the Adriatick Sea, and the Gulf of Treiste, on the West by the Marcha di Tervigiano, and a part of the County of Tirol, on the North by the higher Carinthia, and the higher Carniola, and on the East by Carniola, Sica, and part of Istria. This Country comprehends several lesser ones, as il Cadurino, la Carnia, il Carso, which are Subject to the Venetians, the County of Gorizia, and the Territories of Aquileia, that are Subject to the House of Austria. This Province was formerly given by the Emperors to the Patriarchs of Aquileia; from whom afterwards the Dukes of Austria and Carinthia took a great part of it: And after many Bloody Battles between the Venetians and the Patriarchs of Aquileia, at last by a Treaty of Peace, in the Year 1455, the Province of Friuli, excepting what we just now mention'd, was yielded to the Venetians. Besides Aquileia, which belongs to the House of Austria: The most remarkable Towns in it, Subject to this State are,

Marono. }

Aquileia. Aquileia, of old the Chief City of the Carni, according to Livy and Pliny, stands upon the River Natisone, not far from the Shoar of the Adriatick Sea; about 50 Miles from Venice to the North-East, about 30 from Treiste to the West, and as many from Concordia to the East. It was Anciently a Famous and very Rich City, by reason of its Commodious Situation for Trade and Commerce: And was the Bulwark of Italy on that side; and therefore it was that two noble Romans who had been Consuls maintain'd it against Maximius, as Constantinus did against his Brother Constantinus, and afterwards Maximius endeavour'd to possess himself of it against Theodosius the Emperor. Attila, King of the Huns, after a Three Years Siege, took and Sack'd it, in the year 452. Narjes afterwards Repair'd it; and in the Year 590 it was reduc'd to Ashes by the Lombards; and afterwards Rebuilt by the Patriarch Pope; whose Successors were Possessors of it a long time, till at last it fell into the Hands of Lombardy. the Archdukes of Austria, who remain Masters of it. At present there's hardly any body living in it, except a few Fishermen, by reason the Air is so Unwholesome and the Rubbish of the old City so lying scatter'd up and down. The Patriarch of it lives now at Udine.

Udine Utinum, Anciently a City belonging to the Carni, Stands near the River Torre, 20 Miles North from the Shoar of the Adriatick Sea, as many to the North-west of Aquileia, 11 from Palma, 20 from Gorizia to the West, and 5 from Cisadal di Friuli. It is now the chief Town of this Country, since the Patriarch remov'd his Seat from Aquileia hither; whereas formerly it was an Episcopal See, but no great Town. It has been subject to the State of Venice, since the Year 1420.

Palma. Palma, is a Place of great Strength and Importance, being Built upon the Confines of the Austrian Territories, in a Plain near the River Natisone where formerly the Church of St. Laurentius de Ronchi stood, about 10 Miles from Udine to the South East, as many from Aquileia, 18 from Marano to the North, and 15 from Gorizia to the South-West. The Foundation of it was laid on the 7th of October, 1593. and was design'd by the Venetians, as a defence to their Dominions against the Austrians.

Cisadal di Friuli, Ferum Julii, was Anciently a Colony and Town belonging to the Carni, according to Ptolemy and Tacitus, which Paulus Diaconus calls Castrum Julienne. It stands on the River Natisone, about 7 Miles from Udine to the East, and 15 from Gorizia.

The Country of TREVIGIANA, or La Marca Trevigiana, lies betwixt the Territories of Friuli on the East, and those of Vicentino and Trent on the West. It was formerly much larger; but now comprehends only the Territories of Trevigiano, Bullunese and Feltrino, and is computed to be 48 Miles East and West, and 68 North and South. The most considerable Towns in it are,

Trevise , Cap.	}	Conegliano ,
Belluno ,		Oderzo ,
Feltri ,		la Meta ,
Ceneda .		Cadara ,
Saravalle ,

Trevise, Trevisi, or Treviso Tarvisum. Stands upon the Banks of the River Stile, about 18 Miles from Venice to the North West, 15 from Oderzo to the South-West, and 20 from Padua. It is a pretty Large and Strong Town, especially on the account of its being almost surrounded with Water, which makes it almost Inaccessible and Impregnable. It has been subject to the State of Venice since the year 1336; for tho' the Emperor Maximilian took it in the year 1519. yet it was restor'd to the Venetians shortly after. It is an Episcopal See under the Patriarch of Aquileia.

Belluno, or Cisadal di Belluno, Belunum, mentioned by Pliny and Ptolemy, is a little Town, but well Inhabited, on the River Piave, about 30 Miles to the North of Trevise, and 50 from Venice; and gives name to the adjacent Country. It is an Episcopal See under the Patriarch of Aquileia.

Feltri Feltia which Antoninus places in Venetia, in Gallia Cisalpina, Stands upon the River Aso, which a little below falls into the Piave, about 10 Miles from the Confines of the Country of Trent to the East, 15 from Ceneda, as many from Belluno, and 45 from Venice to the N. W. It is an Episcopal See, and gives name to the adjacent Country, and hath been under the Jurisdiction of Venice since the Year 1404.

Ceneda, Ceneta, or Ceneda Agathia, and Anciently Accedum, Stands at the Foot of the H.I's, near the Spring-Head of Montegano, in the midst between the Rivers Piave to the West, and Livenzo to the East, at the distance of 10 Miles from either, 13 from Belluno to the South, as much from Oderzo, and 15 from Trevigo. It is a pretty little Town, and well Inhabited. The Episcopal See of Belluno, which was Subject to the Patriarch of Aquileia was Translated hither; but the Bishop ordinarily Resides at Saravalle, a little Town about 2 Miles from this Place.

Oderzo, Opitergium, which Strabo places in Venetia, of Gallia Transpadana, Stands upon the little River Mattegano, about 12 Miles from Treviso to the North East, 35 from Udine, as many from Ceneda to the South-East, and 24 from Venice to the North. It was formerly an Episcopal Seat; but was destroy'd by Rebaris King of the Lombards, and the Bishop's Seat remov'd to Ceneda, under the Patriarch of Aquileia.

The DOGADO or Dutchy of Venice, is a little Country lying along the Shoar of the Gulf; round the City almost, extending from the Mouth of the River Lisonzo, to the Mouth of the Adige having Friuli, the Territories of Padua and Rovigno on the West and South, and comprehends the Lagune di Venetia, Lagune di Morano, and all betwixt the Village call'd Capo d'Argere, or Cavarzere, as far as Grado, for the space of about 34 Miles Long, and 7 or 8 Broad. The most considerable Towns in it are,

VENICE, Venetia, or Venezia, (of whose Beginning and Encrease we have spoken already, in our account of the Rise and Progress of the Commonwealth, whereof this City is the Celebrated Seat) is commonly said to stand upon 72 Islands, (tho their number is much greater) but whether they are Natural or Artificial is not agreed among Travellers; some thinking that the Venetians might dig their Channels, for the more convenient Carriage of their Goods, (which by this means are brought to their Doors:) And for the Embellishment of the City; which is the only Town in the World that can boast of such a Situation; others maintaining, that if Nature had not done it, the Venetians would never have thrown away so much of their Ground, which they have always taken so much care to Husband. And besides, that if they had cut out such Channels for their conveniency, why would they have left so many large spots of Ground entire; for tho' it is commonly Reported that a Man may go in a Boat to any House in the City, yet we are not to take that in a strict sense, since there are some Houses not within several Hundred Paces of a Canal. But whether this Account or that be the Truer, it is most certain, that no City on Earth affords a finer Prospect from without, or greater variety of diverting Objects within. At the distance of 30 Miles one begins to see the Spires of the Churches, and the Prospect is still enlarg'd the nearer one approaches, which gives the Ravish'd Spectator the Idea of a great City Springing out of the Water; nor can one get free of the delusion before he has enter'd the City, for all the outer Houses of it are founded on Piles in the midst of the Water, for it stands entirely separated from the main Land of Italy, but the distance is only 5 Miles. And the Gondola's Pass from Mestre in the Paduano to Venice, in an Hour and half. The Port is a large Plain cover'd with Water, in which there are certain Islands, or rising Grounds level with the Water, on the biggest of which Venice is built; most of the other Islands are cover'd with Buildings, and make particular Towns, the most considerable of which is call'd Judecca, or the Jews Quarter, These Islands are call'd Lagunes, or Lagunis. Two of them are set apart for the use of those who come from the Levant, where they are oblig'd to perform their Quarantine, in certain large Hospitals call'd Lazarettos, one of which, call'd Lazaretto Vecchio, is a Mile distant from Venice, the other 5. The design of these Places is to preserve the City from contagious Distempers: and those who keep them are so very nice and scrupulous, that they will not receive any thing from a Stranger that there's a Thread in, nor so much as a Letter till it be open'd and Smok'd.

The City of Venice has neither Gates, Walls, nor Citadel, and yet cannot be justly said to be Weak. Many Authors have esteem'd it Impregnable; and the Venetians themselves have told Strangers the Story so often, that now they are fully convinc'd themselves that it is so. The opinions concerning the extent of this City and number of its Inhabitants are very different. It is commonly said to be 8 Miles in Compass; but Mr. Misson makes it pretty plain that it is not 5. The number of the Inhabitants have been said to be 2 or 3 Hundred Thousand Souls, and some have advanc'd it to four; but whatever it might be when the Trade of Venice Flourish'd, it is thought at present not to contain above a Hundred and forty Thousand Souls, comprehending the Isle of Guidica. The World has been impos'd upon by some who have endeavour'd to make People believe that there were a vast number of Gardens and Places in Venice. As to the former, setting aside that towards Santa Maria del Orto, and about twenty more less considerable ones, all the rest will not be one with another, above 10 Foot square; and as for the latter, properly speaking, there is but one Place in Venice, the Famous and Magnificent Place of St. Mark; which is really the Soul and Glory of that City. 'Tis two hundred and fifty Paces long, and eighty Broad, or according to others 280 Long, and 100 Broad. The Church of St. Mark faces one end of it, and that of St. Geminian the other. 'Tis Bordered on each side with those stately Piles of Building call'd the old and new Procuraties, or Lawyers Offices and Lodgings. That on the right hand as you go to St. Mark's Church is call'd the new, and that on the left the old Procuratory. The first has two Principal Fronts, one of which looks into the Place of St. Mark, and the other into the Broglio, over against the Palace of St. Mark, which is an Ancient and Magnificent Structure, where all the Councils meet; such as the grand Council, the Council of Finances, call'd the Ceca, the Marine Council, &c. Here the Money is Coin'd, and the publick Treasure kept in great iron Chests, secur'd with three Locks: the Keys of which are committed to three Procurators, who under pain of Death, dare not make the least attempt to open them till they all meet together. The Council sits twice a Week; which are the only days for all sorts of Payments. All the Streets of the City, without exception are narrow and crooked; but to make amends for these Disadvantages, they are so clean that one may walk a whole Year in them without meeting with any Dirt, and besides they are Pav'd with large square Stones; which always after a Shower grow as white as Marble. As one may go to most Houses in Venice by Water, so also by Land; there being about 430 Bridges over the Canals, the Principal of which is that of Rialto, an admirable Structure, consisting of one Arch Founded on ten Thousand Piles of Elm, and is said to have cost two hundred and fifty Thousand Ducats. Mr. Misson gives us the exact measure of this Arch, whose words are these, viz. The compass of the Arch makes exactly the third part of a Circle, and the Breadth on the Level of the Water, from one extremity of the Arch to the other is ninety five Foot, and the height twenty four Foot. The Air of Venice is pretty wholsome, but the Water not so; for of an hundred and fifty Wells that are within the City, there are but two or three good for any thing; and the best they have is Rain-water, which they preserve in Cisterns. Some have reckon'd the Palaces in Venice, to be about 400. but tho' this is a bold Assertion, one may venture to say that they are so numerous and Magnificent, that they are sufficient to Adorn Ten Cities; and the finest of them are upon the great Chanal.

The most remarkable things in Venice, next to the Place of St. Mark, are, the Arsenal, which claims a particular observation. It is almost two Miles in compass; for within its inclosure are comprehended the Magazines for their Vessels, Melting-Houses, Rope-yards, Forges, Lodges for the Galleasses, Gallies, and the Bucentaur, besides the Havens and Docks, for Building and Refitting of Vessels. The Ammunition with which the Arsenal is crowded, is said to be sufficient to Arm and Equip 15 Gallies, 4 Galleasses, as many Ships, and 10000 Men. It is Govern'd by three Noblemen, and under them by the Pilot of the Republick, whom they call the Admiral, who is entrusted with the Care and Inspection of the Stores; and Steers the Bucentaur on Ascension-day, when the Duke accompanied by all the Nobles performs the Ceremony of Wedding the Sea. The Treasury has been much Richer, but still contains a great deal of rare and valuable things, as the two Crowns of the Kingdoms of Candia and Cyprus, many fine Vessels of Agar, Emerald and Crystal a Sapphire of 10 Ounces, the Doge's Corno, Valued at 200000 Crowns, and many other rare and precious things, which the Reader may find in the latest Travellers. The Republick, as St. Didier says, had a Chain of Gold enough for 40 Men to Carry, to which there was a Link added every Year; and 15 Millions in Gold, which they kept as a reserve for extraordinary occasions; but this Treasure was partly Exhausted by the War of Candia, and partly by some Venetian Families, who have Enrich'd themselves with the Spoils of it. The Palace of St. Mark where the Doge Lodges, is a large Building, after the Gothick manner, but Magnificent. It has been Burnt 4 or 5 times, and the various Reparations of it, have spoil'd the Uniformity of the Structure. The Broglio is the Walk of the Nobles, who always take up one side of the Place. This is the general Rendezvous where Visits are made, and Business Dispatch'd. No inferior Person is suffer'd to Walk on that side where the Nobles are, but the other side is free. When a Nobleman is come to Age, and puts on the Gown, and is fit to sit in Council, he is Introduc'd by some of his Friends with a great deal of of Ceremony into the Breglio. St. Mark's Church is a large Structure, Square on the outside, cover'd with 4 Leadn Domes, without any Spires or Steeple. The Top is surrounded with Stone Balustrades, for the conveniency of Walking. The little Arsenal of the Nobles (which is the Parish of St. Mark) is full of the Noblemens Arms, which are always kept ready Charg'd in case of a Surprise. The Library of the Procuratives has several rare Greek Manuscripts in it, but no great number of Books, nor kept in good order, but has abundance of good Painting, of Titian's, and other Famous Masters doing; and several fine Greek Statues. There are several other good Libraries in Venice; and as many Paintings as there are at Rome.

The Carnival begins always the second Holy-day of Christmas, that is, from that time People are permitted to wear Masks, and to open the Play-Houses, and Gaming-Houses. There is then an Universal Change in the Habits, Customs and Laws. All marks of Distinction and Superiority are forgotten, or at least neglected; All Persons are, or seem to be equal; Respect, Constraint, Ceremony, Care and Business, are Banish'd from Society; and are succeeded by Joy, Liberty, and an agreeable sort of Folly. During the Fair, the whole Place of St. Mark, and part of the Breglio, is cover'd with Shops; the other part is full of Jugglers, Tumblers, Puppet Players, Dancing Bears and Mountebanks; which are frequented by all sorts of People, from the Noblemen to the Gondalier. The Opera's and Comedies may be reckon'd one of the Principal diversions of the Carnival. All the Beauty of the Opera's consist in vocal Musick and Machines; for there is nothing in the Habits, Dancing, and even in the Plays themselves, that deserves a particular description. The Radetti or Gaming-Houses, are properly Academies of Basset; and are opened at the same time with the Theaters: and none but Noblemen keep the Bank. There are a great number of fine Churches in this City, particularly that Dedicated to St. Mark, and one of the peculiarities of Venice is, that some of them are Dedicated to Saints that were never Canoniz'd, such as Job, Moses, Samuel, Jeremy, Daniel and Zachary, &c. There are also many rich Cabinets, particularly those of the Palace of Resini, of the Procurator Justiniani, of the Family of Capello, &c. There are a great many other Things which deserve particular Observation, but it would be tedious to insert them all; and therefore we must send the Reader to the latest and best Travellers to be more particularly inform'd.

The Noblemen of Venice are variously represented by Travellers; some making them a parcel of proud, insulting, and cruel Men; but we have good reason to believe that it is otherwise. 'Tis true, they take care to maintain the Honour of their Birth, and their Authority over the Citizens and the rest of their Subjects; but they are so far from insulting or Tyrannizing over them that they are always ready to grant their Protection to honest Men; and as for Strangers, there is no City in the World where they meet with a kinder and more civil Entertainment. And however the Barbarous Custom of employing Bravo's to Murder and abuse People, might have for a long time been too much used; yet the Government has taken such effectual ways for removing them, that now the whole Race of them seems to be almost extinguish'd. The Noblemen never appear Publicly but in their Black Robes: nor must they meet in Cabals, or Converse with the Servants of Foreign Ambassadors. A Nobleman may Poison his Wife for Adultery, and cause her Gallant to be Pondered, without fearing to be call'd in question for so Bloody a Revenge. Which cruel Custom, if it were in Fashion in some other great Cities of the World, the Prices of Poison would quickly Rise, and Dagger making become a considerable Trade. The Venetians in their Marriages regard only Kindred and Riches; and for the most part, the Persons to be Married never see one another till they come to be joyn'd in the Lawful Bond of Matrimony. It is ordinary here for Mothers to find out Concubines for their young Sons, to keep them out of Contagious Pits; and a Man that has a mind, may have choice of handom Girls, whom their Mothers expose to Sale as commonly, as Sheep with us in Smithfield. One may purchase a handom Maiden girl for 150 Crowns in hand, and as much a Year for Entertainment, and for 200 one may have the choice of the Market.

St. Theodore was formerly Patron of Venice, but St. Mark has had that Office ever since the Ninth Century; about the beginning of which, as the Story goes, the Merchants of Venice brought the Body of St. Mark thither, from the City of Alexandria. Greeks, Armenians, and Jews are allow'd the free Exercise of their Religion in Venice; but no Jesuits are allow'd to live there, except those that are Natives of the State, and their Superior must be one Born in the City.

The City of Venice is divided into 6 Parts, which they call Sestiers, viz Sestier di Castello, Sestier di Mon Marco, Sestier di Conarejo, Sestier di San Paulo, Sestier di Santa Croce, and Sestier di Dorso duro. It was from the Year 774 an Episcopal See, under the Patriarch of Grado; and then the Bishop was call'd Episcopus Olivulensis, and afterwards Castellanus. But in the Year 1455. Pope Nicolas V. Translated the Patriarchat from Grado to Venice, which is situated 260 Miles from Rome to the North, 280 from Vienna, 100 from Ravenna to the North, 150 from Milan to the East, 70 from Palma, and 80 from Grado. Lat. 45. 30. Long. 30. 20.

Chiczza, or Chicoggia, Clodia Fossa, a Town of Venetia, according to Pliny, call'd by later Authors, Clugia, stands in a little Island of the Gulf of Venice, on the Coast of the Dogado, near the Lagune di Veneta, about 15 Miles from Venice to the South, towards Loreda, near the Island Brondolo, and has a very good Harbour. It sprung from the Ruins of the ancient Motemaucum, and is the Seat of a Bishop, subject to the Patriarch of Venice. It was heretofore famous for the Victory which the Genouese obtain'd at it, when they made themselves Masters of it, in the Year 1350. but is now subject to the State of Venice.

Torcello, Torcellum, is a small Town, about 5 Miles from Venice to the North, near the Albino, from whence the Episcopal Seat was Translated hither, in the Year 635. It is very ill inhabited, by reason of the Unwholsomeness of the Air.

Grado. Gradus, or Aquileia Nova, stands in an Island of the Gulf of Venice, of the same Name, near the Borders of the Province of Friuli, but in the Dogado of Venice, (to which State it is subject) near the Continent, about 12 Miles from Aquileia to the South, and 50 from Venice to the East. It was Built by the Aquileians, after Attila had destroy'd their City. It was for some time the Seat of the Patriarch; but he returning to Aquileia, the People of Grado Grado, set up a Patriarch of their own, in the time of Charles the Great, as Egingha dus and Reginus relate; and so the Patriarchat was divided into that of Aquileia, and that of Grado; but in the Year 1455. Pope Nicolas V. Translated it to Venice, where it still continues.

Cabrie, Caprule, is a little Ill inhabited Town, because of the Unwholsomeness of the Air, in an Island of the same Name, near the Confines of Friuli, about 4 Miles from the River Lemene, about 20 from Venice to the North-East, 30 from Aquileia, and 11 from Concordia to the South. It is the Name of a small Bishoprick, under the Patriarch of Venice, to which State it belongs.

The Country call'd by the ITALIANS Il Po-lesine di Rovigno, Rodigina Peninsula, lies East and West between the Po and the Adige, South and North between the Paduano, and the Dutchy of Ferrara. It was formerly a part of Romandiola, subject to the Duke of Ferrara; but hath been under the jurisdiction of Venice ever since the Year 1500. The Towns of any Note in it are, Labadia.

Rovigo, Rhodigium, is a little City, encompass'd with a ruinous Wall, upon the Confines of the Paduano, 30 Miles from Venice to the South West, 25 from Ferrara to the North, and as many from Padua. It belong'd formerly to the Duke of Ferrara, but is now subject to the State of Venice; and is the Residence of the Bishop of Adria. That Ancient and Famous City, which gave its Name to the Gulf, being now but a pitiful half-drown'd Village.

Adria or Adila, anciently a Town in Gallia Transpadana, in the Country of Venetia, according to Strabo, which Mela calls Atria and Hadria, stands upon the little River Tartaro, almost 5 Miles from the Confines of the Ecclesiastical State, and Dutchy of Ferrara, 50 from Ravenna to the North, 30 from Ferrara to the North-East, and 25 from Venice to the South. It was formerly a Bishop's See, Suffragan to the See of Ravenna; but now a very considerable Town, being almost destroy'd by the Violence of the Waves of the Sea, so that the Bishop resides at Rovigo. Pliny calls it Atria, and the Sea had its Name from it, being first call'd Atriatum Mare, afterwards Adriaticum, and by Horace Adriaticum.

The PADUANO, Patavinus Ager, anciently inhabited by a part of the Veneti, is bounded on the North with the Marca di Trevigiana, on the East with the Dogado di Veneta, on the South with the Country of Rivigno, and on the West with the Venezese. It owes its Name to the Chief City of it, and has been under the Jurisdiction of Venice, since the Year 1403. The most considerable Towns in it are,

Padua, or Padoua, Patavium, anciently a City in the Country of Venetia, in Gallia Transpadana, according to Pliny, Ptolomy and Mela, stands about 24 Miles from Venice to the West, 18 from Vicenza, and 48 from Ferrara to the North. It was anciently, according to Mela, one of the Richest and most flourishing Cities in Italy; but is now (according to Misson) a Poor and Ill-peopled City. The Circuit of it is very considerable (some reckoning it 8 Miles) but there's a great deal of waste Ground, where there are no Houses, and many Houses wherein there are no Inhabitants. The Ancient Padua hath still retain'd its first Walls; but the City falling into the Hands of the Venetians, in the Year 1403. in 1519. they pull'd down the Suburbs, in which were 10 Monasteries, 6 Churches, 7 Hospitals, and about 3000 Houses. There are Porches or Piazza's almost throughout the whole City, which are convenient to shelter People from the Rain, but make the Streets both narrow and dark, and give opportunity to those frequent Robberies and Murders, which they call in Padua Qui va li. It is a sort of a Sport which the Students have there; who hiding themselves between the Pillars, watch the coming of some unhappy Passenger, whom they immediately kill or lame, without the least hope of Redress. But the University has of late been in so poor a Condition, and the Number of the Students so small, that People are not much afraid of the Qui va li. Some are of opinion, that Padua was anciently a Sea-Port Town; because the Ancients speak of it as a very rich Place; and because when they dig Wells and Foundations of Houses, they find in several Places Anchors and Masts. But whether it has so, or Ships brought up there by a large Canal, we will not determine. Antenor has commonly been believ'd to have been the Founder of this City; but tho' we are told that he came into this Country, and Built a City call'd Patavium, we are not very sure that this is the Place.

The most remarkable Things in Padua are, the Church of St. Anthony of Lisbon, whom they call St. Anthony of Padua, because (altho' he was a Franciscan of Lisbon) he Died and was Buried there. It is very large and full of fine pieces of Sculpture and Painting. Also many Magnificent Tombs, particularly that of Alexander Contarini, Admiral of the Republick, and Procurator of St. Mark; and that of Count Horatio Sizzo, who was kill'd at Vienna in the last Siege. In this Church are also the Chappels of St. Anthony and St. Felix, both very well worth an Ingenious Man's Observation. The Church of St. Justina, is also a very fine one; and the Monastery is very Large and Noble. The Hall of the Town-House is very large, but dark, being 256 Foot long, and 86 broad; and is of the Figure of a Rhomboides; but supported by no Pillars. Peter Aponus, who was the Architect, and a Famous Necromancer, says Cardan, adorn'd the Roof with Constellations, and Astronomical Figures, which are still to be seen. There is a Monument erected in the Palace of Justice, in Honour of Tit Livius, the Famous Roman Historian, who was Born in this Place; for in the Year 1413. there was found in the Gardens of St. Justina, a Coffin of Lead, which they presently concluded to be that of T. Livius; and putting what was within it in a Coffin of Wood, the most considerable Persons of the City carry'd it to St. Justina's Church, where it lay till the Year 1447. when it was remov'd to the aforesaid Palace, and the Monument erected; to which they added an Inscription, which was found near the Place where the Temple of Concord stood; and plac'd over the Inscription a Head of Marble, which had been in the possession of a Gentleman of Padua, thought to be that of Lentulus Marcellinus. 'Tis true, both Head and Inscription are old; but by a late Dissertation it appears, that this Inscription did not belong to the Famous Lombard. Famous Historian, but to one T. Livius, a Freed-Man of one of the Historians Daughters. There are in this City a great many knowing Antiquaries, and several Cabiners of Curiosities. The University is in a very mean condition: for of 10 Colleges there are 9 employ'd to other uses; but that which remains is a fine Building. This University was Founded, or (as some say) repair'd and re establish'd by the Emperor Frederick, Ann. 1222. This City was taken by the Emperor Maximilian, 1509. but recover'd not long after.

Este, Atteste, anciently a Town in Gallia Transpadana, according to Pliny and Tacitus, upon the River Bacigione, near the Hills call'd Monti di Padua, about 12 Miles to the South of Padua, 5 to Manfice, and 30 from Venice to the South-West. It was formerly a Bishop's Seat under the Patriarch of Aquileia; and from hence the Princes of Este had their Name, in whose Possession the Duchy of Ferrara was for a long time, as now Modena is.

The Country call'd VERONESE, Veronensis Ager, is bounded with the Country of Trent on the North, the Vicentino and Paduano on the East, the Duchy of Mantua on the South, and the Bresciano, and the Lago di Garda on the West; and was anciently inhabited by a Part of the Cenomani. It lies South East and North-West, for the Space of 56 Miles; and the Towns of any note in it are,

Verona.	}	Garda.
Peschiera.		Chiufa.
St. Benifacio.		Legnano.

Verona. Verona, anciently a City of the Cenomani, in Gallia Transpadana, according to Strabo, Livy and Ptolemy; in Rhetia, according to Pliny, was built by the Euganei and Rheti, and afterwards possess'd by the Cenomani. It has always been a famous City in many respects. The Situation of it is admirable, the Air good, and the City large; and affords a ravishing Prospect from any neighbouring Eminency. It is divided into two Parts by the Adige, over which there are Four stately Stone Bridges, which make the Communication between these Parts. The Castles of St. Felix and St. Peter, command the Town; but the other Fortifications of this Place are much neglected, and very irregular. The Amphitheatre in Verona is a most surprizing piece of Antiquity: The outward Wall is almost destroy'd; but Care has been taken to repair and preserve the Benches, whereof there are 44. The longest Diameter of the Arena is 233 French Feet, and the shortest or breadth 136. Every Step is 1 Foot 3 Inches of the same Measure, and about 2½ Foot broad. It is commonly believ'd that Augustus built it, tho' some attribute it to the Emperor Maximin. The Cathedral is a little dark Church; in which is to be seen the Monument of Pope Lucius III. who, as well as his Predecessor Alexander III. had great Broils with Frederick Barbarossa. The Church of St. Zeno is said to be built by Pepin, Son of Charlemain, and King of Italy; who, as some believe, lies Buried here. Near the Church of St. Maria Antica, there are several Magnificent Tombs of the Scaligers, who were Princes of Verona, before that City belong'd to the Republick of Venice. The Cabinet of Count Mascardo is a rare and wonderful Collection of Pictures, Books, Rings, Animals, Plants, Monstrous Productions of Nature, and curious Works of all Fashions; but especially, a vast Number of old Instruments and Utensils, which were us'd in the Pagan Sacrifices; above Five Thousand of all sorts of Medals, great Variety of Coins, some whereof are of Leather; and also a great Collection of Shells, Fossils, Lamps, Urns, and a Thousand other Things, too many to be inserted here.

This City has been subject to the Republick of Venice since the Year 1403. and in an old Inscription is call'd Colonia Augusta. It was the Birth-place of the Poet Catullus: And was taken by the Emperor Maximilian in the Year 1509. but restor'd in the Year 1516. to the Venetians. It is an Episcopal See, under the Patriarch of Aquileia: And is distant 35 Miles from Trento or Trente to the South, 22 from Mantua, 40 from Brescia to the East, and 70 from Venice to the West.

Chiufa, Veruca, which Cassiodorus makes mention of as a Fortrefs of Rhetia, stands upon the River Adige, 10 Miles above Verona, at the Foot of a high Rock, with a Passage leading to it, cut out of the same Rock; on the other side whereof is a Precipice, the Bottom whereof is wash'd by the River Adige. Cluverius thinks that Veruca is rather the Name of a Fort, call'd il Castello della Pietra, in the County of Tirol, belonging to the House of Austria, about 4 Miles from Rovereto or Rovere to the North, and 9 from Trente.

Legnago, Leonicum, stands upon the Adige, about 27 Miles below Verona, and as many from Ferrara: And is improperly taken by some for Liniacum.

On the North of the Veronese lies a small Territory which was part of the County of Tirol, but now under the Bishop of Trent, under Homage to the Emperor, wherein stands Roveredo, a strong fortified Town, which was often talk'd of during the late War, as lying on the Road by which the Imperialists pass'd into Italy.

The Country call'd il VICENTINO, Vicentinus Ager, is bounded with the Country of Trent on the North, the Marca di Trevigiana on the East, the Veronese on the West, and the Paduano on the South and partly on the East. The Towns of Note are Vicenza and Lenigo.

Vicenza, Vicentia, anciently a City in Gallia Cisalpina, according to Tacitus; by Ptolemy call'd Vicentia, and Vicetia by Pliny; stands at the Confluence of the Rivers Bacigione and Verone, 18 Miles from Padua to the West, 30 from Verona, and as many from Feltri to the South. It is about half as big as Verona, and encompass'd only by old Walls; and the two or three little Rivers which meet here, tho' they are very useful, yet are not Navigable till they all meet. There are some pretty good Churches in it; but these, as well as other Things that are to be seen here, do not at all deserve the lofty Names the Inhabitants give them. The Church call'd the Coronata is well Pav'd and Wainscoted: That of the Nuns of St. Catherine hath three fine Altars. The Town-House is very indifferent; but they boast of it as a rare Piece. There are some Ruins of an ancient Amphitheatre at Vicenza; and the Theatre of the Academy of the Olympicks is the Work of the famous Palladio. The Triumphal Arch without the Gates, at the Entrance of the Plain, which is call'd the Field of Mars, is in Imitation of the ancient way of Building, by the same Palladio. This City was taken by the Emperor Maximilian, in the Year 1509. but restor'd by a Treaty of Peace in 1516. and has continu'd ever since under the Republick of Venice. It is an Episcopal See under the Patriarch of Aquileia.
T

The Country of BRESCIANO, Brixianus Ager, which lies to the West of the Veronese, was formerly a part of the Dutchy of Milan, but has been subject to the Republick of Venice about 200 Years, is bounded on the North with the Valtelline and the County of Tirol, by the Cremonese on the South, the Veronese on the East, and the Bergomasco on the West; and was anciently inhabited by a part of the Cenomani and Enganei. The Towns of any Note in it are,

Brescia.	}	Roca d' Anso.
Asola.		Porto Vigo.
Montebiano.		Orci Nuovi.
Salo.		Orci Vecchi.
Iseo.

Brescia, Brixia, anciently a City and Colony of Gallia Transpadana, and Metropolis of the Cenomani, according to Strabo and Pliny, and at present a well-inhabited Town, and of considerable Traffick, stands on the River Mela, 15 Miles from the Lake of Garda to the S. W. almost as much from that of Iseo to the S. E. 30 from Mantua to the W. near as much from Bergamo to the E. and about 50 from Milan. It is a fortified Place with a Citadel upon an adjacent Rock. It is said to have been Built by the Insubres, or by the Senones, together with Como and Bergamo. It is a Bishop's Seat, Suffragan to the Arch-Bishop of Milan. The Palace of Justice in this City is a great and fair Building, of a certain hard Stone resembling Marble. Opposite to this Palace there is a Portico 500 Paces long, almost quite fill'd with Armourers Shops. The Fire Arms that are made here being famous all over Italy. In the Cathedral they preserve with great Veneration that which they call Constantine's Oriflame; which they say is a Blew Cross of an unknown Matter; but it is never fully shewn, and so we cannot describe it; only this much is certain, that this cannot be the Cross which appear'd to Constantine when he fought against Maxentius, since that was only a Figure in the Air, and not a palpable Substance.

Salo, Salodium, stands on the West side of the Lake Garda, between Brescia and Trente, 20 from the former, and 30 from the latter, and 30 also from Treviso to the West.

Orci Nuovi, Orci Novi, is a Place of considerable Strength, being upon the Confines of the Dutchy of Milan, near the River Oglio.

Calcinato, a small Town, seated in the midway between Brescia on the West, and Castiglione on the East; made notable by the Defeat of the Imperialists near it, by the French and Spaniards under the Duke of Vendôme, in April 1706.

Chiari, another small Town, which was made famous by a Battle in 1701. wherein the Imperialists defeated the French. It stands in the Western Confines, 5 Miles East from the River Oglio, and 12 Miles West from Brescia.

The Country call'd BERGAMOSCO, Bergomense Territorium, anciently a part of Gallia Transpadana, inhabited by the Orobii, formerly belong'd to the Dutchy of Milan; but in the Year 1428. it revolted to the Venetians, who still retain the Possession of it. It is bounded on the North with the Valtelline, on the East by the Bresciano, on the South and West by the Dutchy of Milan, and contains these Towns, Bergamo.	}	Romano.

Martinengo.		Calepio.
Clusano.

Bergamo, Bergamani, anciently a City in Gallia Lombarda Transpadana, inhabited by the Orobii Cenomani, is at present a strong Town, and a Place of considerable Traffick, seated on a little Hill at the Foot of the Alpes. Besides its Fortifications, which are well In'd, and in good Repair, it has a Citadel with some Forts and advanc'd Works, which defend the rising Grounds that command it. It has also five Suburbs, every one of which is worth a little Town. In the Cathedral Church is to be seen the Tomb of the brave Barth. Cagliene, Commander of the Venetian Forces against Milan; and who was the first General who brought Cannons into the Field. Ambrosius Calepinus, who was Born at Calepio, a Village near this Place, lies inter'd at the Augustin's. The Bergomense Fargon is reckon'd so ridiculous, that the Italian Buffoons affect to imitate it; but that which makes them more disagreeable, is the Wens or Lumps on their Throats, which disfigure their Countenances. These are natural to'em, and they think it an Ornament rather than a Blemish. This City was formerly subject to the Duke of Milan; but after the Death of Duke Philip, the Inhabitants came under the Venetian Jurisdiction. Lewis XII. King of France, having beat the Venetian Army in the Battle of Agnadel, took Bergamo, but restor'd it to that Republick six Years after, by a Treaty of Peace, An. 1516. It is an Episcopal See under the Arch-Bishop of Milan; and stands between the River Serio to the East, and that of Brembo to the West; 30 Miles from Brescia to the West, as many from Milan, and 30 also from Como.

Calepio, Calepium, is a little Town on the River Oglio, near the Confines of the Bresciano, about 12 Miles from Bergamo to the East, and 3 from the Lake of Iseo. It gives name to the adjacent Valley, and was the Birth-place of that Learned Man Ambrosius Calepinus.

The Country call'd CREMASCO, Cremonsis Ager, owes its Name to the Chief Town of it, and is surrounded by the Territories of the Duke of Milan. It is but of small Extent, but very Fertile, and well Water'd. It formerly belong'd to the Duke of Milan, but is now subject to the Venetians. The only Place of any Note in it is,

Crema. Crema, a fortified Town on the River Serio, 24 Miles from Brescia to the South West, 20 from Piacenza, and 24 from Bergamo to the South. It was formerly call'd Diuguntorum, according to Cluverius, and was erected into a Bishoprick, under the Arch-Bishop of Bolegnia, in the Year 1579.

The Venetian Dominions on the Coast of Dalmatia.

Dalmatia, so call'd either from Delmius or Delminium, a City in Illyricum, was anciently the Eastern Part of Illyricum proprium. The Dalmatini having asserted their Liberty in the Reign of Gentius King of Illyricum, and having twenty Cities under their Jurisdiction, gave the Country the Name of Dalmatia: And having afterwards added sixty Towns more to their former Dominions, and extended their Conquests as far as to the Sea Shoar, began to make Incursions into the Territories of the Tragurini and Epetini; which was the Ground of the first Dalmatian War; at which Time the Romans reduc'd that Country into a Province. But afterwards, the Dalmatians having acquir'd the

Western

Lombard. Western Part of the Country from the Liburni, as they did Illyrium proprium from the Romans, extended their Dominions all along between the Rivers Ticinus (now Il Kék) and Drilo (now la Drina) Liburnia being then included in Dalmatia. After the declining State of the Roman Empire its Limits were further extended: And a long time after it came to be confin'd within much narrower Bounds; so that it border'd with Pannonia Savia on the North, the Cypræ Melia on the East, Istria on the West, and the Adriatick or Illyrian Sea and Macedonia on the South. It was otherwise divided into Dalmatia on the Coast, and Inland Dalmatia: And of all the Provinces of the Western Illyricum, Dalmatia alone retain'd its ancient Name; till it fell into the Hands of the Slavi, and then it was divided into Croatia, Servia, and Dalmatia. The Slavi (People who came from the Palus Martia) were subdu'd by the Hungarians; from whom the Turks at last took the Inland Country of Dalmatia; and the Venetians possess'd themselves of a great part of the Sea Coast, and are now Masters of these Places following.

Zara. Jadera, anciently a Colony and City in Illyricum, according to Pliny, and Metropolis of Liburnia, stands on the Adriatick Sea, or rather is almost quite surrounded with it, and joyn'd to the Continent by a Bridge. It formerly belong'd to the Kingdom of Hungary, till the Year 1409. that King Ladislaus sold it, together with Novigrod and some other Places, to the Venetians, for 100000 Ducats, as Joh. Lucius relates. It is now the Metropolis of Dalmatia, and the Seat of an Arch-Bishop, and defended by a strong Castle. It stands in the Latitude of 44 30. and is distant 180 Miles from Venice to the East, 100 from Pola in Istria, 40 from Sebenico to the North West, and 116 from Ancona to the North-East; and gives a Name to the adjacent Country, vulgarly call'd il Contado di Zara. Near this Place lies Zara Vecchio, where the Ruins of the ancient Jadera are still to be seen.

Nona, Enona, or Enona, according to Pliny, stands on the Adriatick Sea, almost encompass'd with the Water, and well Fortified. It is no very large Town, but an Episcopal See under the Arch-Bishop of Zara. It stands over against the Island of Pago, from which it is divided by a Streight 4 Miles broad, about 10 Miles from Zara, and 35 from Segna or Zeng.

Spalato, Spalatum, and Aspalathum by Constantinus Porphyrogenitus, is a pretty large and strong Town, with a very safe and large Harbour; and was anciently Honour'd with the Palace of the Roman Emperor Dioclesian, to which it is said to owe its Name. It owes its Rise to the Ruins of Salona, an ancient Town 4 Miles to the North of it; in whose place it was made the Seat of an Archbishop. It has belong'd to the Venetians since the Year 1420. notwithstanding several fruitless Attempts made by the Turks to make themselves Masters of it. It is seated 70 Miles East from Zara.

Sebenico, Sebenicum, or Sibenicum (which some inconsiderately take for the ancient Sicum, the Ruins of which are to be seen on the Coast between Traw and those of Salona), is a fortified Town upon the Adriatick Sea, about 40 Miles from Zara to the S. E. 30 from Spalato to the North-West, and 300 from Venice to the South East. It has been under the Venetians Jurisdiction since the Year 1412. and Pope Boniface VIII. erected it into a Bishoprick.

Traw, Tragurium, which Strabo and Pliny make mention of as a Town in Dalmatia, is now a little but pretty strong Town, built upon a small Island, and joyn'd to the Continent by a Bridge, over against the Island of Bua, to which a Bridge likewise joyns it, 12 Miles West from Spalato. It is a Bishop's Seat, Suffragan to the Arch-Bishop of Spalato, and has belong'd to the Venetians since the Year 1420.

Cliffa. Cliffa, anciently call'd Andetrium, as Joh. Lucius of Traw relates, is a strong Castle in Dalmatia, built on a Rock, about 6 Miles from the Shoar, as many from Spalato to the North, and 4 from the Ruins of Salona. It formerly belong'd to the Turks, but was taken by the Venetians in the Year 1643. and confirm'd to them, together with a little part of the adjacent Country, by the Treaty of Peace at Candia.

Cattaro, Cattara, stands on a Gulf of the same Name, far more to the East, over against the farthest point of Italy, is defended by a strong Castle built on a neighbouring Hill. It, together with 17 little Villages, has been subject to the Republick of Venice since the Year 1420, and is the Seat of a Bishop, Suffragan to the Arch-Bishop of Bari, but formerly to Ragusa. Dominicus Niger takes this place for the ancient Ascrivium or Ascrovium, mention'd by Pliny and Ptolemy; others think that Name belongs rather to Castell- Novo, on the same Gulf; and some to Melata Grande, a Fortrels upon the Coast of the Adriatick.

The Island of CHERSO, which Pliny calls Cresa, Ptolemy Crespa, is one of the Abssyrtides, in the Golfo di Carnero, over against Venice, lies between Istria and Morlachia, and is joyn'd by a Bridge to the Island Ofero, whereof formerly it was a part. Upon this Island stands a Town of the same Name, about 12 Miles from Fiurme to the South, and as many from Fianano to the East.

The Island of OSERO, which Mela calls Abforus, Ptolemy Apforus, and Pliny Absyrtium, is also one of the Abssyrtides, according to Strabo, and separated by a small Streight from Cherso, to which it is joyn'd by a Bridge, having upon it a Town of the same Name, dignify'd with the Residence and Title of a Bishop, Suffragan to the Arch-Bishop of Zara. It lies 30 Miles from Segna in Morlachia to the South-West.

The Island of Vegia or Veglia, Curista, lies in the Golfo di Carnero, behind Cherso, a few Miles off the Coast of Liburnia or Morlachia, and is about 55 Miles in Circumference. The Town of the same Name (Caricum) stands upon the West side of the Island, and has the advantage of a good Harbour, and a Castle to defend it. It is about 16 Miles from Ofero to the East, and as many from Segna: It is an Episcopal See, and has been under the Venetian Jurisdiction since the Year 1430.

The Island of Arbe, Arba, lies also in the Golfo di Carnero, on the East of Vegia, 15 Miles East and West, and about 4 from the Coast of Liburnia. The Town of the same Name stands on the South side of it, and is dignified with the Title of an Episcopal See under the Arch-Bishop of Zara. It stands over against Segna, from which it is 13 Miles distant.

The Island of Pago or Gissa, lies on the East of Arbe, along the Coast of Morlachia also, from which it is divided by a Streight 3 Miles broad. It is reckon'd 16 Miles long, and 46 in compass, and lies between the Island Arbe to the North West and the Town of Nona, which is distant 4 Miles from it.

The Island of la Brazza, Brattia or Brachia, mention'd by Pliny and Antoninus, lies off the Coast of Dalmatia, between Spalato to the West and Narenta to the East, not far from Traw and the Isle of Lefina, which lies on the South of it.

11. Venetian Dominions in the Ionian and Aegean Seas.

C E P H A L O N I A, Cephalonia, an Island in the Ionian Sea between that of Leucada or St. Maura on the North, and Zante on the South, 12 Miles from the former, and 20 from the other, and not above 20 Miles from the West Coast of the Morea. It has formerly call'd Sonius, Melania, Techea and Techea, and is 9 Miles in Compass. It is an Episcopate, See under the Arch Bishop of Cosfu, and hath been subject to the State of Venice these several Ages; and the Inhabitants observe the Rites of the Greek Church. There were formerly Four considerable Towns in it; but now only a few Villages, with a Fort call'd Cefalonia, built on a Hill, about 6 Miles from which lies the Port call'd Aggesta, on the South side of the Island. It is said to have its Name from Cephalus an Attorian. And Homer reckons the Cephalones among those who follow'd Ulysses in his Trojan Expedition. Antinous, Cicero's Colleague in the Caesar's was banish'd to this Island. And being a Bishop of a City, but never arriv'd it.

The Island of C O R C Y R A, mention'd by Pliny call'd Corcyra, and call'd Placina by the Poet. Lies off the Coast of Epirus, the North part not being above 4 Miles from the Continent of Epirus extended 70 Miles long, from North to South, and is 12 in Compass between Monte de e Chimera, (Montes Acherontici) to the North, and the Island of Leucada to the South, from which it is 150 Miles distant, and 50 from Capo di Santa Maria di Luce (Tapigium Promontorium) to the South East. It has been under the Venetian Jurisdiction, since the Year 1386, that the Corcyrians willingly offer'd themselves Subjects to that Republick; and in the Year 1401, their Title was fully confirm'd, by Ladislaus King of Naples for 5000 Ducats. The Corinthians are said to have transplanted a Colony hither in the Reign of Numa. It was anciently famous for its Naval Force, and in it was Cassiope (now Sant Maria di Cassopo) where stood the Temple of Jupiter.

The Town of Cosfu, Corcyra Urbis, stands on that side of the Island that lies opposite to Epirus, from which it is distant above 12 Miles to the West.

The Island of Z A N T, Zacynthus Insula, lies in the Ionian Sea, about 15 Miles from the Cape Tonesse in the Morea, to the West, and 12 from Cephalonia to the South: And the Streight betwixt these two is call'd the Canal of Zant. It is divided into three Bars, viz. la Montagna, il Piedemonte, and la Pianura, and contains near 100 Miles in compass, and produces great store of delicious Wines, both Muscadine and other Sorts. But since Italy is sufficiently stock'd with these Commodities, the Inhabitants do most of their Grapes, and send 'em to England and Holland.

The City of Zant stands on the East part of the Island, which with the Harbour are command'd by a very fine Castle, where the Procuratore, who is always chosen out of the principal Nobility of Venice, resides. The Inhabitants are Rich, and there are several Gentlemen among 'em. Those of the Greek Church abound most in this Place; but the Venetians have built several Churches for the use of those of the Romish Faith; and do what they can to establish that Religion, in opposition to that of the Greeks. Here, as at Venice, those that come from the Levant are not suffer'd to go ashore till they have perform'd their Quarantine.

MILLO is fully describ'd in the Account of Turkey in Europe, and therefore we shall say nothing of it here.

The Island of C E R I G O, Cithera, anciently (according to Pliny) call'd Peophyrus, and Peophyrus by Arifotle, by others Scythia is the farthest West Island in the Aegean Sea, or Archipelago; and lies about 8 Miles from the Cape Malio in the Morea, to the South. It has been subject to the Venetians, since the Lords of Morea gave it them: and is reckon'd to be about 60 Miles in compass. It is a Mountainous Country, but has a good Harbour towards the South part of it: And is distant 15 Miles from the Island (or rather Rock) call'd Cecerigo, and 35 from the nearest part of the Island of Candia, to the North-West. There is a Bishop of the Greek Church in it.

The Island of T I N E, Teros, one of the Cyclades (according to Strabon and by Aristotle call'd Hydrussa, for its great plenty of Water (as Pliny relates). It is said to be about 37 Miles in compass; seated between Negropont and Samos, about 10 Miles from the former, and near 20 from the latter, and near 40 North from Cerigo. It has been subject to the Republick of Venice about 300 Years; and there is at present a Bishop of the Latin Church in it.

Rimelo, or Argentaria, Cimelus, is describ'd in our Account of Turkey in Europe; whither we must refer the Reader for a full Account of the Morea, with all the remarkable Places and Things in and about it.

C H A P. X.

The Republick of Lucca: Lucensis Ditio.

T H I S Little State lies on the Coast of the Mediterranean Sea, between the Genoese on the West, Modena on the North, and the Dominions of the Great Duke of Tuscany on the East: is reckon'd to be about 30 Miles long, and 20 broad. It is a Part of the Empire, and under its Protection. Its Government is purely Aristocratical, the Sovereignty being lodg'd in the Hands of 240 Nobles, who are divided into two Bodies; which succeed one another every six Months, with the Gonfaloniere, or Standard-bearer, at their Head. This Gonfaloniere is their Chief Magistrate, and is assisted by 9 Counsellors, call'd Azziani; but he enjoys the Supreme Dignity but two Months, during which time he has the Title of a Prince, and is styl'd his Excellency; but all the Advantage he gets by it, is to have his Table maintain'd at the Publick Charge; and after an Interval of six Years he is capable of being chosen again. The Publick Revenues are said to be about 100000 Crowns. How far this may go towards maintaining an Army, or supporting the Dignity of a free State, I will not determine: Some say they can raise, upon occasion, 15000 Foot, and 3000 Horse, and others screw it up to 30000 in all; but that is to be understood, I suppose, in Cases of great Danger and Necessity, when they put all in Arms that are able to carry them.

The City of Lucca, Luca, (which is said to have been built by the Tuscans, and owes its Name to Lucumo, one of their Kings) stands in the midst of a fertile Plain about 15 or 20 Miles long, and is surrounded with very rich and well-inhabited Hills, near the River Serchio, about 13 Miles from the Shoar of the Tuscan Sea to the East, 10 from Pisa to the North, 25 from Florence to the West, 60 from Sienna and 30 from Luna. It gives Name to the adjacent Country call'd il Lucchese, and is an Episcopal See under the Arch-Bishop of Pisa; from whose Jurisdiction it is now exempted. This City is not very large, since one may walk round the Ramparts in an Hour. The Fortifications are pretty regular and well lin'd; but their Foundations are almost level with the Plain. The Things most remarkable in this Place, are, the Palace of the Republick, where the Gonfalonier lodges with his 9 Counsellors. The Arsenal, where there is a considerable quantity of Arms for so small a State, and kept in very good Order. The Cathedral, Dedicated to St. Martin, in which is the Chappel of the Volto Santo, where the Famous Crucifix is kept, that the Angels finish'd after Nicodemus had for a long time in vain endeavour'd to do it. The Church of St. Fredian, in which there is a Tomb-stone, with this Inscription, Hic jacet Corpus Sancti Richardi Regis Ang. i.e. Here lies the Body of St. Richard King of England; but it is hard to tell who this Royal Saint should be, since it is very well known that all the Kings of England of that Name died and were buried elsewhere. This is still a populous City; but several Noble Families, as, the Calendrini, Burlamachi, Turretini, Micheli, Minfoli and Diodati, and several others remov'd from this Place to Geneva about the time of the Reformation.

C H A P. XI.

The Dominions of the Great Duke of Tuscany, Hettruria.

IT is certain, that the Bounds of the Ancient Hetruria, were much larger than those of the Modern Tuscany, this being but a part of that Hetruria or Etruria, which was bounded on the North and East, with the Appennine Mountains, and the River Tyber on the West, and on the South with the Tyrenian (now Tuscan Sea, from the River Magra, to the Mouth of the Tyber; but the Modern Tuscany, which the Italians call Toscana, comprehending the greater part of the Ancient Hetruria, is Bounded (according to Baudrand) with the Appennines on the North, on the West with the River Magra, on the South the Tuscan Sea, on the East with the Rivers Tyber and Arno: and comprehends the Territories of Florence, call'd il Fiorentino, those of Sienna, call'd ill Senese, of Pisa, call'd il Pisano, and ill Luca, call'd Lucchese (now a free and separate State) with several other Countries and Places belonging to the Duke of Modena, the State of Genoa, and the King of Spain.

The Dominions of the great Duke of Tuscany, are Bounded on the North and East with the Ecclesiastical State, on the South with the Tuscan Sea, on the West with the Territories of Lucca, and Modena. It is a Pleasant and Fruitful Country, producing abundance of Olives, Citrons, Oranges, Safron, Flax, and Wool, and in several Places there are Mineral Waters, which effectually cure many dangerous Distempers. The Manufactures also of Serges, Woollen-Cloath, Silks, Tapestries, Gilded-Leather, Earthen Vessels and Perfumes, contribute much to its Riches.

That the Reader may the more distinctly conceive the Constitution and Government of this Dukedom, it will not be amiss to refresh his Memory with some hints of its Rise and encrease; beginning from the very Original of the City of Florence, and tracing it down to the present time. The City of Florence, (as Machiavel relates) was begun by the Merchants of Fiesole, (Fesula) and Augmented by Colonies sent thither from Rome; for those Merchants finding it convenient for People to come thither, either to Buy from them, or Sell to them, by reason their Town stood on the Top of a Hill, appointed a place for them in the Plain, betwixt the Foot of the Mountains, and the River Arno, so that what was at first but Store-houses for keeping Commodities, became afterwards a Town, and a place of Habitation. After the Civil Wars in Rome, first betwixt Marius and Sylla, then betwixt Cesar and Pompey; afterwards betwixt the Murderers of Cesar and the Revengers of his Death; by Sylla first, and then by Cesar Augustus, M. Antonius, and M. Lepidus, who Revenged the Assassination, and divided the Empire, Colonies were sent to Fiesoli, all or most of whom settled in the aforesaid Plain, where the Town was already begun; which did so mightily enlarge its Bounds, and encrease the number of its Inhabitants, that it justly might claim a place among the Cities of Italy. It was at first call'd Arnina, afterwards Florentia; but whatever might be the Original of that Name, whether from one Florinus the Chief Man of the Colony, or the Flourishing State of this Infant City, this is certain, that it was Founded under the Emperors of Rome, being mention'd in the History of the first Emperors: That when the Barbarians made Inroads into, and Ravag'd the Empire, Totila, King of the Ostrogoths, Demolish'd Florence. That 250 Years after it was Rebuilt by Charles the Great, from whose time till the Year 1215, it followed the Fortune of the rest of Italy, and was subject to those that commanded; first to the Successors of Charles, afterwards to the Berengarii, and last of all to the Emperors of Germany. In those Days it was not in the Florentines Power to extend the Bounds of their Dominions, by reason they were subject to a Foreign Power, unless in the time of an Inter-regnum, between the Death of one Emperor, and the Creation of another when all the Cities were free; as in the Year 1010 when they took Fiesoli, when the Inhabitants were employ'd about Celebrating their Festival of St. Romulus. But afterwards the Popes assuming more Power, and the Emperors losing what they formerly had had, the Cities began to disregard their Princes, and Italy seem'd divided betwixt the Emperors and the Popes. The Florentines in the mean time submitting themselves to the Conquerors, kept themselves quiet and intire, till the Year 1215. After which, they fell into Divisions, and Civil Commotions were never long satisfied with any form of Government, but always contriving new Models; which bred infinite Confusion in the State, (a thing unavoidable in a Society, where Restless and Turbulent Spirits are suffer'd to Live) and Animosities among the People. Sometimes the Nobles fell out among themselves, sometimes with these the Citizens, and sometimes the Richest with the Inferior sort. In all which unreasonable Jars, no sooner was any Faction uppermost, than it split and divided again; and the true and natural effect of all this was, Murder, Banishment and Dispersion of Families, where oftentimes the Wisest and best deserving had the hardest Fate, whilst those of no Worth enjoy'd what was only due to true Merit; which often happens where Passion prevails over Reason, or the unthinking Multitude meddles in the Affairs of State. Notwithstanding all those Divisions, and the innumerable Changes in their Form of Government, the State of Florence preserv'd it self, but was certainly depriv'd of vast Advantages it might have reap'd, had it been Managed by Wise and constant Politicks. Had the Florentines been so happy, after they shook off the Emperors Yoke to assume such a form of Government, as would have preserv'd themselves in Unity; it is highly probable, that in process of time they might have vy'd in Riches and Power, with almost any State, ancient or Modern: as we may see in this one Instance. For after they had expell'd the Ghibelins, who were so numerous as to fill all Tuscany and Lombardy, the Guelfs and such as staid behind, in the expedition against Arezzo, were able to draw out of their own Citizens, 12000 Foot, and 1200 Horse. And in the War against Philippo Visconti, Duke of Milan, being to try their Fortune rather with their Purles than their Swords, in the space of 5 Years that the War lasted, the Florentines expended 5 Millions, and 5 hundred thousand Florins; and after all that, when the War was at an end, they March'd out with an Army, and belieg'd Lucca. Thus the Florentines continu'd in a free State, till about the Year 1410. that John de Medicis, (whose Posterity are now Dukes of Florence) became so Rich, and acquir'd such Repute among them, by defending the People against the Nobles, that almost the Sovereignty of the City was put into his Hands. His Son Cosmo Reform'd the State, and enlarg'd its Dominions, by the addition of Casentino, and several other Places. He died in the Year 1464 and left the Management of Publick Affairs to his Son Peter; who transmitted it to his Sons Lorenzo and Julian; but the People growing jealous of their Liberty, and fearing lest the Sovereignty should become Hereditary to this Family, put the Administration of the Government into the hands of that of the Sodo eni, whom they Entrusted with it, knowing how fickle the Multitude was, devolv'd all upon the 2 young Gentlemen; against whom the Pazzi conspiring, kill'd Julian, but Lorenzo escap'd and afterwards went to Naples, where he enter'd into a perpetual League with King Frederick. After his Death his Son Peter fell in Disgrace with the Florentines, and was Banish'd with his whole Family, but was Restor'd by his Kinsman Pope Leo X. After whose Death they were again Banish'd; but Pope Clement VII. Son to the aforesaid Julian, prevail'd with Charles the V. to Besiege the City, which yielded after two Years Resistance. The Emperor then gave it to Alexander de Medicis, Peter's Granchild, by his Son Lorenzo, Ann. 1531. but he was Murder'd by his Cousin Lorenzo de Medicis, who fled to Venice. After which the Family of Medicis sent to the Country for Cosmo, (who was then but 18 Years old) to be their Prince, being next Heir to the Family, according to the entail made by the Emperor Charles. He was Crown'd with the Title of Great Duke of Tuscany, in the Court of Rome, by Pope Pius, the V. Ann. 1570. By this the Reader may see how this State began, and advanc'd, and what the nature of its Government was, and how much different from what it is at present. The Duke of Tuscany is a Rich and Powerful Prince; his ordinary Revenue (as is generally reported) is above 1500000 Crowns, and some raise it to 2000000, and he is said to have in his Treasury 20000000 pieces of Gold, besides Jewels and other things of great Value. Which if it is so, 'tis no hard matter for him to raise 40000 Foot, and 3000 Horse, and to put to Sea 12 Gallies upon occasion, 2 Galleasses, and 20 Ships of War.

We have already told what the Bounds of the ancient Hetruria were, and how different that was from the Modern Tuscany, whose Bounds are of a much narrower compass, and also what share of Tuscany, in a larger Sense, belongs to the great Duke; whose Dominions are commonly divided into 3 parts, as you may see in the following Table.

FLORENCE, which the Italians call Fiorenza, Florentia, (of whose original and encrease we have spoke already, in our account of that State whereof it is the Metropolis) stands upon the River, Arno, in a delightful Plain, surrounded with very fertil Hillocks, on all sides, except that which looks to Pistoia; which rise insensibly, and unite themselves to the Mountains: The vast number of Houses which cover both the Hills and the Interjacent Plain, make a most Ravishing Prospect, from any Eminence or Tower within the City. It is said by some Travellers, to be 7 Miles in compass, by others but 6. According to one of our latest Travellers, it is said to contain within its Walls 8800 Houses, 60000 Souls, (tho' others screw up their number to 70000) 22 Hospitals, 89 Convents, 84 Fraternities, 152 Churches, 18 Halls or Galleries, belonging to Merchants, 72 Courts of Justice, 6 Columns, 2 Pyramids, 4 Bridges, 7 Fountains, 17 Palaces or Courts, and 160 publick Statues. The Streets are all Pav'd with large pieces of gray Stones, call'd by the Inhabitants Pietra forte, brought from the Neighbouring Quarries; and the Palaces

Palaces of Florence are reckoned the handsomest Structures in Italy. The most remarkable things in this City are, the Celebrated Palace Pitti, where the great Duke Lodovico, at the great Gate of which is a large Iron Cannon, said to weigh about 4000 Pound. In this Palace there are several Galleries, and other Rooms full of all manner of Rarities, both Ancient and Modern, the most precious and valuable of which are kept in the Octagonal Room, call'd the Treasure Room, by Brutus, which is 24 Foot in Diameter, and is cover'd with an Arced Dome. The Floor is Pav'd with several sorts of Marble, Artificially laid together, the Walls are Hang with damask Velvet. Beautified with an infinite number of rare Ornaments, the Windows are of Crystal, and the top of the Dome is cover'd with Mother of Pearl. Nothing is admitted into this Place, but what is of great Value, and exquisite Beauty. The Chief of which is that lovely and famous Diamond, which Weighs 130 Carrats and a half. There is also an Antique Head of Julius Caesar, of the same Dimension, as big as an Egg, a Cupboard full of Vessels of Silver, Lapis Lazuli, &c. A large Table and Cabinet wholly made up of Oriental Jasper, Chalcidony, Rubies, Topazes, and other precious Stones, admirably well Wrought: A Collection of rare Medals, and a prodigious number of Antique Pieces of Carved and Engraved Work, Select Pictures, and Statues. The Cathedral is a very large and richly Building, tho' several parts of it are of Gothic Architecture. It is all Cover'd over on the outside, and Pav'd within with Polished Marble, of several Colours. It is 300 Feet long, and 100 high, to the Top of the Cross on the Globe, and contains many pieces of fine Painting and Statues. St Laurence's Church is very Large and Rich, and the famous Crispell, it is said, is the finest Piece of that nation in the World. The Library of St. Laurence is particularly Famous for its Manuscripts; among which there is one of Virgil's Works, of the Age of Tiberius, and a large Greek one, containing the Chirurgery of Hippocrates, Galen, Alexander, and other Ancients. The Arsenal and Citadel of St. John Baptist is a Strong Place, and in very good order; but the 2 Forts of Benedicte and St. Miniato are in a manner wholly neglected. This City as we said before was begun by the Merchants of Florence, then Fiesole, enlarged by the Colonies sent thither by Augustus, M. Antonius, and Septimus. Sack'd by Tullius, Rebuilt by Charles the Great, and again almost quite reduced to Ashes, (whether by Accident or done on purpose by a certain Nobleman is uncertain) in the Month of July 1374, made an Archbishoprick by Pope Martin the V. 1425, and honour'd with a general Council, under Pope Eugenius the IV. Ann. 1439, in which Johannes Palaeologus, Emperor of Constantinople was present. It stands about 50 Miles from Benetia to the South, 60 from Milana to the South East, 90 from Parma, 104 from Manua to the South East, 126 from Venice to the South, and 120 from Rome to the North West.

Pistoia, which Pliny call's Pistorium, Antoninus, and Pistoris, stands in a Plain, on the Banks of the Rivulet Stella, 30 Miles from Lucca and 20 from Florence, 12 from the Borders of the Ecclesiastical State, and the Blogneti. It is at present (as Mr. Miffon Relates) a very Poor and Desolate City, quite destitute of Trade, and subsisting merely by the Fruitfulness of the Neighbouring Country. It is bigger then Lucca, and its Streets are large and streight, and the Remainders of its Ancient Beauty, are sufficient to convince one that it was formerly a fine City. Bruno tells us that Desiderius King of the Lombards Built a Wall round it; and that the Florentines threw it down. It is an Episcopal See under the Archbishop of Florence; and the People are great Admirers of S. James, to whom they say they are nightly beholden, and therefore preserve a great number of his Relicks.

Prato, Pratum, is a little Town in the mid'd between Florence to the East, and Pistoia to the West, and is the Seat of a Bishop, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Florence. Bruno calls it one of the four strongest Fortresses in Italy, and Built by Friedrich the II. and says that here the Girdle of the Blessed Virgin is carefully preserv'd.

Cortona, Cortuna, the name of a Colony, and one of the most Ancient Cities in Latium, according to Livy and Pliny, and call'd Cortunum, according to Plinius. Bruno tells us, that it is a very Ancient Town, having been Built long before the Trojan War; and that the Peasants took it from the Umbrians, under the Conduct of their Leader Tarco, and made use of it as a Bridge upon the Umbri; and that Herodotus says, that in his Days the Cortunians spoke the Pelasgic Language. It stands near the Confines of the Ecclesiastical State and Ombria, 2 Miles from the Lake of Perugia to the N. 45 S. E. from Florence, and 5 from the Lake of Chiana, and 35 from Siena to the East; and was made a Bishoprick by Pope John XXII. under the Archbishop of Florence, in the Year 1325, but it depends now immediately on the See of Rome.

Lucas-San-Sepulchro, Burgum S. Sepulchri, is a little Town in the Ombria, on the Confines of Tuscany, near the River Tyber, about 50 Miles from Florence to the East, and 5 from Citta di Castello to the North. It is the Seat of a Bishop, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Florence; and formerly belong'd to the Ecclesiastical State, before Pope Eugenius IV. Pav'd it to the Duke of Florence. It was made a Bishoprick by Leo X. Ann. 1515.

Empoli, Emporium, is a near little Town, upon the River Arno, 20 Miles from Florence to the West, and 40 from Pisa.

Arezzo, Aretium, according to Pliny, and by Pliny call'd Aretium, stands in a Valley, about 3 Miles from the Ferns of Chiana; which empty themselves into the Arno a little below, 25 from Siena to the North-East, 30 from Perugia to the North-West, and 40 from Florence, to the East. It is said to have been Built by Areta, the Son of Janus, and was one of the first 12 Trojan Colonies. It is an Episcopal See under the Archbishop of Florence, but exempted from his Jurisdiction; and S. Donatus was Bishop, and suffer'd Martyrdom here. The Vessels that were made in this Place, were in great esteem with the Ancients, as Martial in his 12 Book of Epigrams makes mention; and Guido the famous Musician, who invented the Musical Notes, ut, re, mi, fa, so, la, was Born here.

Fiesole, which Pliny call's Fesule, Persemy Fesula, and Silius Fesula was Anciently a Town of Note, being a Place of Commerce and Trade, to which Florence ow'd its beginning as we have said before in the description of that City. It was destroy'd by the Goths, afterwards taken by Stratagem by the Florentines, Ann. 1010, who sent all the Inhabitants to Florence; and now lies in its Rubbish, nothing remaining except the Cathedral Church, a Monastery and some few dwelling Houses. It has however the Title

Title of a Bishoprick under the Archbishop of Florence; from which City it is about 2 Miles distant to the North West.

PISA. Pisa or Pise, (Anciently Holonia Julia pisanus) said to have been Built by the Pisani, a People of Peloponnesus, according to Strabo, stands in an even and level Plain, on the River Arno, 6 Miles from the Mouth of it into the Tuscan Sea, 54 from Florence to the West, 10 from Lucca, 14 from Leghorn, and 55 from Siena to the West. It is a great City, being the second of Tuscany, and the Streets are large, Strait and Pav'd with great Stones, and the Houses generally well Built; but at present it is very Poor and Ill-inhabited, which seems partly to be owing to the Miseries it suffer'd during the last War with the Florentines, partly to its Situation in the Neighbourhood of Leghorn, to which many Inhabitants have remov'd. It was once a Free State, and while it was so, gave several Proofs of its Power; for it took Sardinia from the Saracens, made it self Master of the Balears, subdued Carthage, and prov'd very useful to the Eastern Christians. But it was taken by the Florentines; and tho' Charles VIII. King of France, Restor'd it to its former Freedom; yet it fell again into the hands of the Florentines, where it still remains. It was made an Archbishoprick, by Pope Urban II. Ann. 1092. Adorn'd with an University, Ann. 1349. There was a Council held in it in the year 1400. where Alexander V. was created Pope. Pope Gregory VIII. Died there, in the year 1187. and the Knights of the Pope and Martyr St. Stephen, (whom the great Duke Cosmo I. Instituted, on August 6. 1561. after he had won the Battle of Marciano) have their Residence here. The most remarkable Things in Pisa, are, the Cathederal Church, which was Finish'd An. 1153. The Baptitery, which is 180 Foot round, and in which there was formerly a Pillar, on which were discover'd all the private Machinations against the State, as in a Mirrour. The leaning Tower in shape of a Cylinder. Built by one Benannus, 188 Foot high. The Burial-place call'd Campo Santo, because of the Earth of the Pisani brought from the Holy Land, (when they assist'd Frederick I. call'd Barbarossa, who took Jerusalem) in the year 1228. is a kind of Cloyster, 190 Paces Long, and 66 Broad, comprehending the breadth of the Portico's; under one of which there is an Inscription, which is a Decree of the City of Pisa, occasion'd by the Death of Cesar, ordaining the People to wear Mourning a whole Year, and in the mean time to abstain from all Publick Divertisements.

Leghorn, which Polybius calls Liburnus, Antoninus, Liburni Portus, Cicero Labro and others Ligurnus, is a famous Sea-Port Town, standing in a Plain, about 14 Miles from Pisa to the South, 10 from the Mouth of the Arno, 17 from Vada, and about 60 from Florence to the S. W. It formerly belong'd to Pisa, while that City Flourish'd, but the Genouese took it from them, and while they were in Possession almost destroy'd it. It was afterwards by a Treaty of Peace, An. 1297. restor'd to Pisa. Afterwards Charles VIII. King of France, took it from the Pisani, and gave it to the Great Duke, in whose Possession it remains: and is his only Sea Port Town. It is surrounded with handsome Fortifications, lin'd with Brick. The Streets are large, strait, and parallel: the Houses equally high, and for the most part Pav'd on the outside. The Harbour (tho' it is both large and safe) is not so well stor'd with Ships (as Mr. Misson relates) as several others; but the Trade on the Bank is very considerable: and it is the Station of the Great Duke's Gallies. The ancient Liburni were so dextrous at making light, and swift-sailing Gallies, that the Romans call'd all such Vessels, wherever they were made, Liburnicae Naves.

Volaterra, Volaterra, the name of a very ancient City in Italy, and one of the 12 first Colonies of Etruria, stands on a Hill near the right Bank of the River Cecina, 34 Miles from Florence to the South, and 37 from Leghorn to the East. There were a Company of People who had been poscrib'd by Sylla that fled hither, and having form'd a Body of 4 Cohorts of Arm'd Men, held out the Place for the space of two years, before they yeilded it, and submitted to the Roman Government. Near to it is the ancient Vada Volaterrana, now Vada, and the Aque Volaterranae, which are very remarkable hot Springs, that send forth such strong sulphurous Steams, (that as Buno particularly relates) the Birds whose hard Fate it is to Fly over these Waters, immediately drop down Dead; and so violent a motion there is in them, that they rise about 9 Foot high, and fall down with a great noise, and the Heat so great, that if one throws in the Carcass of any Creature, in a trice you shall see it thrown up, Boil'd to that degree, that the Bones are as bare of Flesh as a Cane is. Volaterra, is an Episcopal See, under the Arch Bishop of Florence.

Siena, which Florus calls Sena, Ptolomy Sana, Pliny Colonia Senensis, others Sena Julia, and Sene, stands near the Confines of the Florentino, 32 Miles from Florence to the South, 107 from Rome, 26 from Mont Pulciano to the West, and 55 from Perugia. It was a Free City, and Head of a Republick for several Ages, but was taken by the Spaniards, in the year 1555. and restor'd to the Duke of Tuscany, 1557. together with the adjacent Country, excepting some few Towns, which still belong to Spain. It is an Archbishoprick, and the third City in Tuscany, and one of the most pleasant Places in it. Its Situation being high and low (as Mr. Misson observes) makes it somewhat incommodious, but it enjoys a good Air, and its Streets are neat, and almost all Pav'd with Bricks laid side-ways; besides, the Houses are handsome, and the waters excellent: and here the Tuscan Language is Taught, and Spoke to perfection; which obliges those who would Learn the Italian to reside for sometime here. The most remarkable Things in this City, are, the Cathedral, which tho' it be of Gothick Work, yet is compleat in all parts, the Walls being covered over with Marble, without and within; and the Pavement of Mosaick Work is very well worth Observation. The Place where the Library was formerly kept, where are now those fine Pictures, which represent the whole Story of Pope Pius II. design'd by Raphael, but the Painting was perform'd by Pietro Perugin, his Master, and some others. The Citadel of Siena is a very good one, and there are also 15 or 20 square Towers like those at Viterbo.

This City bears for its Arms, the famous She-wolf giving Suck to the Royal Twins, which was often set up (as appears by several Medals) in the Towns that were made Roman Colonies. The great Place of Siena is hollow, like a Boat or Scalop Shell, and may be fill'd with Water when any Fire happens in the City.

Pienza, Pientia, anciently Corfinianum, stands upon a Hill, about 30 Miles from Siena, and 55 from Florence to the South-East, and 10 from the Confines of the State of the Church. It was call'd Pienza by Pope Pius II. who before was call'd Aeneas Sylvius, because he was Born there while his Father was in his Banishment; and afterwards Erected into a Bishoprick by by him, under the Archbishop of Siena, in the year 1462.

Piombino, Piombinum, is said to owe its Rise to the Ruins of the ancient Populonium which are to be seen not far from it. It stands on the Coast of the Tuscan Sea, in the midst between Orbetello to the North-West, and Leghorn to the South-East, 50 Miles from either, as many from Siena, and about 10 from the Island Elba; which belongs to this little Principality, which is Govern'd by its own Princes, under the Protection of the King of Spain, who keeps a Garrison in this Place.

Monte Pulciano, Mons Politianus, is a little Town standing upon a Hill, near the Confines of the Pope's Dominions, about 28 Miles from Perugia to the West, as many from Siena to the South-East, and 12 from Chiafi. It is famous for the generous Wine that grows about it, and was Erected into a Bishoprick by Pope Pius IV. Ann. 1561.

Chiusi Clusium, which was the name of an ancient City in Etruria, according to Strabo and Polybius; and one of the first Tuscan Colonies, and ordinary Residence of old King Porfenna, stands on the Confines of the Pope's Dominions, in a little Country call'd Valle di Chiana, from a Lake of that name near to which this Town stands; about 40 Miles from Siena to the South-East, 20 from Perugia to the South-West, and 10 from the Lake of that name. It is a small Town, and but indifferently Inhabited, by reason of the unwholesomeness of the Air; but is an Episcopal See under the Archbishop of Siena.

Massa. Massa, or Massa Veterenensis, is a small Inhabited Town on the Coast of Tuscany, standing upon an height, 35 Miles from Siena to the S. W. and 15 from Porto Barato, where the Ruins of Popu- lonium are. It has the name of a Bishoprick, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Siena; under the Jurisdiction of which are the Islands of Elba and Capraia. Onuphrius says, the Emperor Constantius Gallus was Born here. This is the name of several other Places, particularly of a Duchy, belonging to the Family of Cibo, lying between the Territories of Genoa, on the West, those of the Great Duke of Tuscany on the North, those of Lucca on the East, and the Tuscan Sea on the South.

Groffetto, Rosetum, or Groffetum, stands 6 Miles from the Tuscan Shoar, about 3 from the River Ombro to the West, 6 from the Lago di Castiglione, 10 from Piombino, and 40 from Siena. It owes its Rise to the Ruins of ancient Ruffelle, near to which it stands, and is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Siena.

Orbetello, Orbetellum, and Urbatellum, stands near the Tuscan Shoar, at the Foot of the Mountain Argentario, 35 Miles from Civita Vecchia to the West, and 50 from the Island Elba to the East; and depends on the Abbot of le tre Fontane, in Spirituals, as it did formerly in Temporals. It owes its beginning to the Ruins of Coso, now lying in its Rubbish not far from this Place. This Town belong'd to the State of Siena, from the Year, 1451. till the Time that Siena fell into the Hands of the Great Duke: And then Orbetello came under the Jurisdiction of the Spaniards, together with Telamone, Porto Hercule, Porto Stefano and Mount Argentaro, which they Fortified, and put Garrisons into, insomuch that the adjacent Country lying along the Coast, is call'd commonly Lo Stato delli Presidii; The Country of Garrisons.

C H A P. XII.

The Pope's Dominions, Dominium Pontificis Romani.

THE Pope of Rome being no inconsiderable Temporal Prince, we shall take the same Method in describing his Dominions, as we have done in those of other Kingdoms and States. We have already, in our General Description of Italy, put the Reader in mind who the ancient Inhabitants of these Parts were, and what were the most remarkable Changes and Revolutions that happen'd in them: As also hinted a little at the Beginning, Progress, and Decay of the famous Roman Empire: And therefore we shall now only consider briefly the Ways and Methods by which this Ecclesiastical Monarchy, has rais'd it self, from so small a beginning to its present Grandeur: And what the Nature, Constitution and chief Pillars of it are.

The Increase of this Papal Monarchy is owing, First to that Barbarity and profound Ignorance, which after the Decay of the Roman Empire did overpread the Western Parts of it: For bad Wares are best vented in the Dark, or at least by a dim Light. Those barbarous Nations no sooner invaded this part of the Empire than they destroyed the Schools, and sent the Teachers to shift where they best could: And wherever they set up, either out of Zeal for their Religion, or hatred of the Heathen Philosophers, who were no Friends to it, they were sure to endeavour all they could to extirpate and forbid the Reading of Heathen-Authors; as appears by an Act of the Council of Carthage 400 Years after the Birth of Christ: And the small Remnants of Learning that were left, were lodg'd among the Clergy, who were the only Instructors of Youth, and in whose Power it was to form their tender Minds as they thought fit. But afterwards the Popes, perceiving that some among the most considerable Nations in Europe could be no longer kept in this gross Ignorance, introduc'd into the Schools (over which they had assum'd an absolute and supreme Direction) the most miserable sort of Pedantry, that ever plagued the Reason of Mankind; and which some are mighty fond of to this Day. And being ambitious to raise their own Authority and Power, did endeavour to lessen that of the Civil Magistrate, and breed a hatred of Monarchy in the Minds of those People over whom they had got an Ascendant; which the Emperors, by their Lives and tyrannical Proceedings soon confirmed.

Rome's being the Residence of this Ecclesiastical Monarch, did not a little contribute to the advancement of the Papal Power and Authority; for this was the glorious Seat of the celebrated Roman Empire, and here the Christian Religion did first rise and mightily encrease in those Parts: And therefore the Bishops of Rome thought this a plausible Topick for not their having the first Place, as those of Constantinople claim'd the Second, as Bishops of New Rome: And after the Western Empire had come to decay, and the City lost its primitive Lustre, disputed the Precedency with the Roman Bishop. The Emperor Phocas, out of Spite to the Patriarch of Constantinople, granted the Precedency to Boniface the III. the then Bishop of Rome; but this extended no farther than a bare Precedency, and imply'd nothing of Jurisdiction over the rest: Or if it did, it was owing merely to the Emperor's Bounty, whose Laws were of no force without the Limits of his Empire. And admitting that other States have allowed the Popes a certain Power over the Churches in their Dominions: This being an Act of the State, and probably done for Reasons of State, may be annull'd when the same State in other Circumstances sees good Reason for doing so.

The Emperors removing their Court from Rome gave the Popes a fair Opportunity: And the Barbarous Nations, who had establish'd several new Kingdoms within the Western Empire, being converted to Christianity by the Church of Rome, which on that account commanded a great deal of Respect and Veneration from them, did mightily contribute to the Growth of this rising Sovereignty. And 'tis to be remark'd, that after the 5th Century, the Bishops that liv'd on this side of the Alpes, us'd to go to Rome, to pay their Devoirs to the Sepulchres of St. Peter and St. Paul; which Voluntary Devotion was by degrees made necessary, and the Bishops at last oblig'd to come to Rome for his Holiness's Confirmation. It was usual also for some other Bishops and Churches, who were but Novices in respect of Rome, to come there for Advice in Matters of Moment, or when Debates happen'd (as 'tis natural for the younger to have recourse to those of greater Experience) which the Bishops of Rome so wisely improv'd, that they soon began to issue out their Decrees, before their Advice was desir'd, to decide Controversies, depose Bishops, and bring Causes before their Tribunals. In the 8th Century, an English Friar, whose Name was Winifred, before he chang'd it for that of Boniface, having a Zeal to reform the lewd Lives of some Clergy-men, and establish the Christian Religion in Germany, the better to procure the Pope's Favour, became a vigorous Defender of his Authority; in recompence of which good Service, he receiv'd the Episcopal Pall, with the Title of Arch-Bishop of Mayence: And was constituted Pope Gregory the Third's Vicar, with full Power to call Councils, and constitute Bishops in those Parts where he had planted the Faith. By which means, and the Assistance of the French King, his Authority became so great, that he brought over all the Clergy in Germany and France to the Papal Interest; and was the first who put it upon the German Bishops to receive the Pall from the Pope, who sent it to those of France without their Request, to unite them the more to the Chair. And this growing customary, at length became necessary; the Popes also assum'd a Power of translating Bishops, and annulling Acts of Provincial Synods; and Pope Gregory VII. forc'd the Bishops to swear Fealty to Him, and forbid all Condemnation where Appeals were made to him.

As this Ecclesiastical Sovereignty grew up and came to Perfection, the Wealth and Riches of the Church did increase in proportion. The Foundation was laid by the Liberality and Charity of Princes and others, and the Superstructure advanc'd by those who believ'd it meritorious, as certainly it is, when confin'd within moderate Bounds. As Wealth encreases, so Avarice rises in proportion with it, and that finds out Ways and Means to encrease the Stock, without considering whether these be just and reasonable or not. Then came in Masses for the Dead and Living, Purgatory, Indulgences, Dispensations, Pilgrimages, Jubilees and the like, without measure; and in the 11th and 12th Centuries Crossades too turn'd to very good Account. For in those Expeditions, after People had taken the Sign of the Cross to assist in the Recovery of the Holy Land, the Popes pretended to the Supreme Command and Direction; and took the Persons and Estates of such People under their Protection. And the Pope's Legats had the absolute Disposal of all the Alms, Collections and Legacies that were given for that purpose: And under the same Pretext receiv'd Tithes from the Clergy, and even put their Commands upon Princes themselves to receive the Cross.

In the 7th Century, Friars and Nuns (who first appear'd in the time of Persecution, and us'd to live by their Handy-work) were very much in Vogue, and multiply'd exceedingly, by the Bounty of Princes and Great Persons, who fill'd every Place with Monasteries and Nunneries; but at last, in the 13th Century, Charity began to cool, and even seem'd almost exhausted: And then the Mendicant Friars were erected; who, as they were a Plague to the Laity, and a Curb on the Clergy, so they were of singular use to the Pope, who employ'd them as so many Spies upon the Bishops, who could no sooner think of attempting any thing against the Papal Chair than they inform'd their General at Rome of it: And he told the Pope, who was sure to take effectual Ways for preventing any Designs the Bishops might have against him.

Thus the Wealth and Power of this Ecclesiastical Sovereignty began and advanc'd, and Ecclesiasticks multiply'd exceedingly; but without an Independence from any Temporal Power this Monarchy could never have been absolute: And therefore, First, it was necessary that he should reside at a Place free from all Subjection to any Civil Power, and be Master of an Estate sufficient to support his Grandeur; and which no Pretext whatsoever could deprive him of. But this was hard to bring about, so long as there was an Emperor of the West, or the Empire of the Goths lasted in Italy. But this being destroy'd by the Emperor Justinian, and Rome made a Province of the Roman Empire; and the Emperors Authority growing weak in Italy, partly by their own Fault, and partly by the Mismanagement of their Governors at Ravenna, the Popes had a fair Opportunity to bring about what they so earnestly long'd for. Besides, some of the Emperors being against the Adoration of Images, and Leo Isaurus, particularly, having thrown them out of the Churches, his Holiness was so nettled at it, that he stirr'd up the Romans and Italians to refuse to pay the Emperor his usual Tribute; and they kill'd his Governor at Ravenna, while he was endeavouring to maintain his Master's Rights. Whereby the Grecian Emperors lost all their Jurisdiction in those Parts; and the Cities and Countries began to set up for free and independent States. By these Means the Pope rid himself of the Eastern Emperors Jurisdiction; but was very hard put to't by the Kings of the Lombards, till Charles the Great, having conquer'd these, gave to the Papal Chair all that Tract of Land, which had been formerly under the Eastern Emperors Jurisdiction; which were held of the Emperors as Sovereigns, till the Reign of the Emperor Henry IV. And tho' Henry V. endeavour'd to recover what his Father had lost, and made Pope Paschal a Prisoner, yet the Clergy created him so much Trouble, that he was oblig'd to resign all into the Pope's Hands, about the Year 1122. And the two Factions of the Guelfs and Gibelins (the former whereof was for the Pope, the other for the Emperor) arising, and growing so powerful in Italy, created such Confusion, and gave the Emperors so much Work, that they were never able afterwards to reduce that Country to entire Obedience. And the long Vacancy happening after the Death of the Emperor Frederick II. the Empire was put into such a confus'd State, and the succeeding Emperors found so much Work in Germany, that they had no leisure to mind Italy; and by this Means the Pope had a fair Opportunity to establish an Independent Sovereignty over the Dominions of the Church.

The Popes having by degrees rais'd themselves to this pitch of Power and Grandeur, they began to assume a Superiority over Princes, to decide Controversies betwixt them, to relieve those that pretended to be oppress'd, to maintain Subjects in their Liberties and Properties, and free them from their Allegiance to their lawful Sovereigns, whom they sometimes Excommunicated; To forbid to Marry within the seventh degree of Consanguinity, and the fourth of Affinity, without a Dispensation from the Pope, which turn'd to very good Account, both as to the encrease of their Riches, and creating Dependence on them: And they also took special Care to have the ablest and wisest Men they could find about their Court, who were to be promoted according as they were able and diligent in advancing the Papal Greatness and Power.

But after the Popes seem'd to have fix'd and establish'd a lasting Spiritual Sovereignty over Christendom, and a Temporal Jurisdiction over their Dominions in Italy, there happen'd several Things which had almost reduc'd this Monarchy to a tottering Condition. The Schisms that arose about the Electing of the Popes, and their Antipopes, who mutually revild and excommunicated one another, were like to prove very pernicious, and laid open to publick View Things which they had no mind to discover. Clement the Fifth's transferring the Papal Seat from Rome to Avignon, weaken'd their Power in Italy, and prov'd very prejudicial to their Revenues there: And Rome it self grew Disobedient; but at last submitted, and suffer'd Boniface IX. to put on the Bridle, by Building the Castle of St. Angelo. Afterwards when the Papacy seem'd to have recover'd its former Grandeur, Luther stood up, and in all appearance would have given it a fatal Blow, had not the Divisions among the Protestants, and the licentious Lives of some of them prevented it. And now the Chair seems to be pretty well fix'd, that Church having in a great measure either quite abolish'd such Things as Luther most upbraided it with, and would have done it most Mischief; or Matters are transacted in a more decent Manner, and with greater Art and Cunning. Princes are treated more civilly, the Clergy are more Learned, and lead better Lives. They are active and diligent in the Conversion of Heathens, and bringing Protestants over to their Church, tho' by different Methods, Violence and Persecution being us'd where they safely may, and softer Ways where they may not: And the Riches of that Church enable them to provide a suitable Maintenance for those who want Bread, or would have more plentifully.

As to the Nature and Constitution of this Papal Sovereignty (which is certainly the most artificial Fabrick of this kind in the World) it is Monarchical: And a Monarchy it must be since no other Form would have been consistent with its Constitution. It is also an Elective Monarchy, and no other it could be; for if it had been Hereditary, Minors might sometimes have mounted the Chair, and then it would have been very unseemly to see the Head of the Church, and Christ's Vicar on Earth, under Tutors, and perhas riding a Hobby-Horse. Nor must this Spiritual Monarch be Marry'd; for then there must have been a vast Train of Ladies and Women about the Court, which would have been very unsuitable to the Gravity and Sanctity (tho' it had been but seeming) of such a Court: And besides, the Dominions of the Church must have been entail'd on a Family, and divided into several Appenages of the younger Sons.

The College of Cardinals is as it were the standing Council of the Ecclesiastical State, as the Chapters of Cathedrals are to Bishops. In the time of Pope Paschal I. about the Year 817. the Parish Priests in Rome, by reason they were near and ready at every Election, to adorn their Power with a more illustrious Title, began to be call'd Cardinals, assuming to themselves (after they had banish'd the popular Election) the sole Power of creating Popes; and that out of their own Number. With these Cardinals the Pope advises concerning Matters of the greatest Moment, only sometimes he with his Nephews do Business without them. Their chief Prerogative is that they have the Power of Chusing a Pope, and that out of their own Body, as being best acquainted with the Affairs of that Court. Their ordinary Number is 70; but that Number is seldom compleat. Their Title formerly was that of Illustrious; but that growing too common in Italy, they have now that of Eminence. The Election of them depends absolutely on the Pope; who in that Matter is often influenc'd by France, Spain, or some other State. They pretend to have the Precedency before the Electors of the Empire: And some of the Court Parasites maintain that their Cap is not inferior in Dignity to the Crown of some Sovereign Princes. Since the time of Pope Urban VIII. a Custom has been introduc'd to make one of the Pope's Nephews Chief Minister of the Ecclesiastical State, whom they call Cardinal Patrono, or Patron.

By what has been said, we may consider the Pope in two Respects, viz. as he's Spiritual Monarch of Christendom; and secondly, as a Prince in Italy. In the First, his Subjects may be divided into two several Sorts; the first of which comprehends the whole Clergy; the Second all the rest of Christendom, as far as the same professes the Roman Catholick Religion. The first may not unfitly be compar'd to the standing Army of a Prince, who thereby maintains his Conquests; the rest are to be deem'd as Subjects that are Tributaries to the Prince, and are oblig'd to maintain those Forces at their Charge. One may guess how vast the Number of the Clergy is, from what is related of Pope Paul IV. who us'd to brag that he had 228000 Parishes, and 4400 Monasteries under his Jurisdiction, if he did not mistake in his Account, especially as to the Monasteries.

nasteries. In the second Place we may consider the Pope as a Potent Prince in Italy, (whose Sovereignty is principally supported by a Jealousie and even Ballance betwixt the Crown of France and Spain) tho in no ways to be compar'd with the other Princes in Europe. The Popes Revenues (which we will not particularly determine) are very considerable, and out of them a good number of Soldiers could be maintain'd; but his Military Force is scarce worth taking notice of, since he uses means to maintain his State quite different from those of other Princes. He maintains about 20 Gallies; which have their Station at Civita Vecchia. The Countries under his Jurisdiction are, the City of Rome, with her Territories, situated on both sides of the Tyber, the Dukedom of Benevento in the Kingdom of Naples, the Dukedoms of Spoletto, Urbino and Ferrara, the Marquisate of Ancona, several places in Tuscany, Romaniola and Flaminia, where are situated Bologna and Ravenna. In France the Country of Avignon belongs to him. Parma is a Fief of the Church, which Paul the III. granted to his Son Lewis Farnese.

The Pope's Dominions, call'd by the Italians la Stato della Chiesa, lie about the middle of Italy, and are bounded (not including the Territories of Benevento in Naples, and Avignon in France) on the North with the Venetian Dominions, and the Gulf of Venice, on the East with the Kingdom of Naples, on the South with the Tuscan Sea, and on the West with the Dukedoms of Tuscany and Modena: And are in length (according to Baudrand) from North to South about 240 Miles, in breadth from East to West, at the broadest, that is. between Ancona to Civita Vecchia 120, but in other Places much less, as in Romaniola: And comprehend the abovesaid Countries, as you may see more plainly in the following Table, according to the forecited Author.

The Campaign of Rome, comprehending the Campagna di Roma, properly so call'd, and la Marina.

St. Peter's Patrimony, comprehending the Dutchy of Caieta, the Territory of Orvieto, and the County of Ronciiglione.

Salina.

Ombria, or the Dutchy of Spoletto, comprehending the Territories of Perugia, and the Contado di Citta di Castello.

The Marquisate of Ancona.

The Dutchy of Urbino.

The greatest Part of Romandiola, comprehending Romandiola, properly so call'd, or Romagna, the Bolegnese and the Dutchy of Ferrara.

The Campaign of R O M E, Campania Romana, which comprehends the greatest part of the ancient Latium, where the Latini, Aequi, Hernici, Rutuli, and most part of the Volsi dwelt, is bounded on the West with the Province of the Patrimony and the Tyber, on the North with Sabina, and the River Anio, now Tivernone, on the South with the Tuscan Sea, and on the East with l' Abruzzo Oltra, and the Terra di Lavoro, Provinces of Naples: And is divided, as we said. into la Campagna, properly so call'd, which lies most northerly, between the River Anio, and the Mountains call'd Mons Lepinus, or la Montagne di Segni, and is a very Mountainous Country; and la Marina, which lies between the foresaid Mountains and the Tuscan Sea extended from East to West; which tho' it be a plain Country is but indifferently Inhabited, because of the unwholsomness of the Air, and the neighbouring Lakes. The most noted Cities and Towns in the Campagna di Roma (as the Italians call it) are,

Rome.	}	Terracina.
Tivoli.		Veletri.
F. escati.		Segni.

R O M E, Roma, (once the Mistress of the World, and for several Ages last past the Seat of the Spiritual Monarch of Christendom) is said to have been founded by Romulus and Remus. It was anciently call'd Septicollis, because it stood on seven Hills or rising Grounds of an easie and almost insensible Aspect. Before the Reign of Servius Tullius, the number of these Hills was no more; but since that time it has been much enlarg'd, and at present contains 12 viz. Monte Capitolino, Palatino, Aventino, Celio, Esquilino, Viminale, Quirinale or Monte Cavallo, Janiculo, Pincino, Vaticano, Citorio and Giardano. Whatever Vopiscus (who liv'd under the Reign of Dio-clesian, and who positively asserts that the Walls which Aurelian built round this City were 50 Miles in compass) and others may say; it is certain (as several late Authors have demonstrated) that these Walls, which are almost the same with those which Aurelian built, did not exceed 13 Miles. 'Tis true the Suburbs extended very far on all sides, and made the City in a manner infinite; but we are not to imagine that all these were within the Walls. At present there is not above one third of that which is comprehended within the Walls inhabited; the other Two being fill'd with Gardens and Ruins. 'Tis as hard a matter almost to determine the exact number of the Present Inhabitants of this City (which as some say are about 200000 Souls,) as to reconcile the accounts of ancient Authors concerning it; for some tell us that under the Reign of Augustus there were 3001037, others 4000000, others 5000000; and Suetonius computes that in the Reign of Tiberus, who was the immediate Successor of Augustus, there were only 1600000.

It is not to be expected that in a Work of this Nature we should give the Reader a full and particular account of the ancient and present State of this famous City, especially considering that many learned and judicious Writers, as Onuphrius Panvinus, Boissard, Justus Lipsius, Phil. Cluverius, and some late Travellers have done that to so good purpose already; that it would only be repeating, and perhaps confounding, what they have said so well on the Subject, and swelling this Work beyond its design'd Bounds, if not altering the Nature of it. We shall therefore confine ourselves to that which is more properly our Business, and only take notice of such things as are most remarkable in and about this City, and refer those that have a Mind to be further inform'd to the fore-cited Authors, and the latest and best Travellers, particularly M. Misson, who seems to be a diligent and curious Enquirer into such Things.

The City of Rome stands on the River Tyber (which hath receiv'd more Honour from the City, than the City from it) about 12 Miles from the Sea, 120 from the City of Naples, 60 from Terracina to the North West, 140 from Florence, 300 from Genoua, 135 from Ancona, and 120 from Loreto to the South. About 365 Years after the Building of the City, and 3d of the 97 Olympiads, it was taken by the Galli Senones. In the Year of Christ, 410. by the the Greeks and their King Antiochus. In the Year, 455 by the Lombards, under their King Gaisericus; 15 Years after by the Huns; 14 Years after that by the Goths; 12 Years after that by the Goths under their King Thilas; and at last on the 6th Day of May, 1527. it was taken, and miserably plundered by the Emperor Charles the V's Army, when his Holiness was besieged in the Castle of St. Angelo, and forced by Famine to surrender, and comply with the Emperor's Conditions. There are above 300 little Towers upon the Walls of the City, but many of them are gone to Ruin. It is divided into 12 Parts or Regions call'd li Rioni, and has 20 Gates and 5 Bridges over the Tyber, one of which is famous. The Houses are, for the most part, built of Brick, plaistered and whited over on the outside: And the Roofs of them are ridgd; but the Angle at the Top is very obtuse. That part of the City which stands on the Right Bank of the River is not above a fifth or sixth part of the other: And is call'd Tropea. 'Tis impossible (says Mr. Misson) to walk fifty Paces in or about this City without observing some Reminders of its ancient Grandeur. The Statues of Rome have been call'd a Great Nation, and the Colleges might not unfitly been call'd the Giants. And besides these, the City was wonderfully adorn'd with Temples, Palaces, Theatres, Representations of Sea-Fights, Triumphal-Arches, Circuses, Columns, Fountains, Aqueducts, Obelisks, Mausoleums, and other magnificent Structures; which tho' at present they lie almost buried in their own Ruins, seem still to discover a great deal of their ancient Splendor. If we consider the Magnificent Monuments of Antiquity, and the Modern Structures and Ornaments of this City, we shall find it much easier to admire than form a right Imagination of it: And to frame an Idea of it than represent it distinctly to others. The Pantheon, tho' it hath lost much of its ancient Magnificence, is still one of the most entire and beautiful antique Edifices in Italy. Whether it was anciently so call'd because its figure resembled that of the Heavens, or because Agrippa consecrated it to Jupiter and all the Gods, is uncertain; but at present the Common People call it Rotunda from the Roundness of its Figure. Pope Boniface the IV. dedicated it to the Virgin, and all the Martyrs, and call'd it Santa Maria ad Martyres; but some of the succeeding Popes would have all the Saints come in for a share in the Dedication with the Martyrs. There are said to be 300 Churches in Rome, the greatest and most magnificent of which is that of St. Peter, the most noble and majestick Structure of that kind in the World. The Harmony and proportion of the Architecture are so judiciously observ'd, the fineness and great variety of Gilt-work, rare Pictures, Emboss'd-work, Statues of Brass and Marble, &c. all so happily contriv'd and regularly dispos'd, that one can no sooner see this glorious Structure than he must indispensably be struck with an agreeable Admiration and Astonishment. It was first built by Constantine the Great, and begun to be repair'd by Pope Julius the II. the Reparation was carried on by some of the succeeding Popes, and Paul the V. finish'd it; so that it was the Work of a whole Age, or 100 Years, as appears by this Inscription in the Church. *

but this is certain that it must have amounted to a vast Sum, since as Charles Fontana in his Templo Vaticano, proves by an Abstract of Registers that the adorning of Peter's Church cost 107551 Roman Crowns each Crown being worth 5s. 6d.

The measure of this Church, according to the latest Travellers is thus: The length within side 594 Foot, the length of the Cross from North to South 438 Foot; the breadth of the body of the Church 86 Foot, the height of the Body of the Church 144 Foot, the height of the Cupola, with the Lanthorn, to the very top of the Cross is 432 Foot, whereof the Ball and Cross may be reckon'd to take up the odd Feet; for the Diameter of the Ball alone is 5 Foot, and then the Cross which stands upon it, must needs be at least 3 times as high, the Circumference of the Cupola, within side 5620 Foot, its Diameter within 143 Foot, The Portico or Entrance is a large Plain, Surrounded with a Piazza of Circular Form, having in the midst an eminent Obelisk, and two large Fountains. The Palace of the Vatican is adjacent to St. Peter's Church; and is said to contain 12500 Chambers, Halls, and Closets. It is not a regular Building, but rather a heap of Beautiful pieces of Architecture ill tack'd together, and spoils in some Measure, the Prospect of St. Peter's. The Vatican Library has receiv'd considerable additions, (particularly by that of Hydelberg, and of the Duke of Urbino); but the opinions about the number of Books in it are so different, that we must leave it undecided. The Arsenal is said to be furnish'd with a sufficient number of Arms, for 20000 Horse, and 40000 Foot; but this is what many doubt. As his Holiness may conveniently descend from the Vatican Palace to St. Peter's Church, so on the other side, he may go without being seen to the Castle of St. Angelo, through a Gallery which Alexander VI. Built for this purpose. Urban VIII. Fortified the Castle with four Battions, and thought fit to give them the names of the four Evangelists. In a little Arsenal within this Castle the Popes Triple Crown is kept, as also an Armory of Prohibited Arms, taken from such as us'd them after they had been forb'd. The Capitol is a Modern Structure rais'd upon the Ruins, and even upon the Foundation of the ancient Edifice: and is full of remarkable and rare Pieces of Antiquity, as the She Wolf of Brass suckling Romulus and Remus: the famous Courier pulling a Thorn out of his Foot, a Statue of Cesar with his Cuirass, another of Augustus and a great many more. The famous Rupes Tarpeia, (so call'd from Tarpeia, a Roman Damsel, slain in this Place by the Sabines) is at present (says Mr. Misson) an inconsiderable Rock about 20 Foot high. The prodigious Amphitheatre, call'd Coliseum, is round on the outside, but the Arena or place of Combat is oval. It contain'd 85000 Spectators, without reckoning the Excursanti, who stood in the passages to the number of 20000. The Church of St. John of Lateran is very Large and Magnificent, and pretends to be Head and Mother of all Churches. It was repair'd in a great measure by Pope Innocent X. and owes its name to a certain Roman Nobleman, whose Gardens lay near that Place, call'd Plancius Lateranus, who had been nominated Consul, and was Kill'd by Nero's Order. There are a great many Cabinets butets of Rarities and Libraries at Rome, but since they frequently pass from the Possession of one to that of another, 'tis almost to no purpose to name the present owners of them. There are still many of those ancient Vaults, known by the name of Catacombs, in and about Rome; but the Earth has fallen in and Stopped up the Entries of many of them. Some of them are like to many Lanes, which turn, wind, and cross one another like Streets of a City, and spread themselves under all the Suburbs. The Romanists pretend the Vaults to have been the Sepulture of the primitive Christians, which Furnishes them with an opportunity of making great Markets of the Relicks drawn thence, but with much more reason they are believed to be only the Burying-place of the Roman Slaves. The Statues of Pasquin and Marforio must not be omitted; since many more hear of these two names than know the meaning of them. The former is an old maim'd Statue, leaning against the corner of a House, where several Streets meet, and owes its name to a Witty, Jovial and Satyrical Taylor call'd Pasquin, who liv'd near this Place. His Lampoons were usually call'd Pasquinades; and to persuade the World that he was the Author of all the witty and cutting jests that came out in his time, they took care to affix them to this Statue, which was at his Gate; and which by degrees came to be known by the name of Pasquin. Marforio is another maim'd Figure, standing in one of the Courts of the Capitol, representing the Rhine, as some say, or the Nere or as others say Jupiter Paravius; and owes its name to the Place call'd Fons Martis, where it stood. 'Tis probable (says Mr. Misson) that it was formerly the Mode to affix the Pasquinades on the Statue of Pasquin; but that Custom is laid aside, and he only answers the Questions that Marforio proposes to him: These are only very short and imperfect accounts of a few of the most considerable Places and things about Rome; for if we had attempted to describe all that's worth a curious observer's while, this Description of the City would have swell'd up to a large Volume; and that is not our present business.

Tivoli, Tibur, which Ovid calls Tybur, Procopius Tiburis, and Tiber Herculeum in some ancient Inscriptions, is a little Town, Seated on a Hillock, 18 Miles from Rome to the East, 12 from Frescati to the North, and as many from Palestrina. It is a Bishop's Seat, and the Duke of Medena has a Pleasure-house in it, which is commonly call'd the Cardinal d'Este's Palace, because it is set apart for the use of the Cardinals of that Family when there is any. The Palace is large and makes a handsom Show; but neither Apartments or Furniture are fine. The Gardens are not large, but are thought to excell all the Works of that nature in Italy. The Cascade of the River Anio or Teverone, is the most remarkable thing in this little Town. This River (says Mr. Misson) forms a very large and pleasant Sheet, but the Fall is not very high. The Hill of Tivoli has furnish'd time out of Mind the greatest part of the Stones that are used at Rome. The Coliseum or Amphitheatre was cover'd over with it, and the Front of St. Peter's Church is built of the same.

Frescati, Tusculum, which Livius, Strabo, Pliny and others, make mention of as a very ancient Town in Latium and which Kircher says was Built 300 Years before the Trojan War, is now a very small Town, Seated on the Brow of a Hill, 12 Miles from Rome; in which there are several Houses of Pleasure, belonging to some Roman Princes, as, the Monte Dracone, belonging to the Prince Borghese, Belvedere, to the Prince Pamphilio, and the Villa Ludovisia, to the Dutchess Guadagnola, the Constable Colona's Sister. There are some who think that not the Town of Tusculum, but Tusculanum, Cicero's Country-House, where he wrote his Questions stood formerly where Frescati is now; but both the Situation of Frescati and Strabo's Description of Tusculum contradict this Opinion; for the Tusculanum Cicero's, where there are a great many Ruins to be seen still, and where now the Grotta Ferrata stands, is 16 Miles from Rome, where as Frescati (as we have said) is but 12, and the great plenty of Water, and standing near a high and steep Rock, agrees with the latter, but not at all with the former. The ancient Tusculum was quite demolish'd in the time of Pope Celestin III. and Frescati was erected into a Bishoprick by Pope Paul III. in the Year 1537. the Bishop of which is call'd Episcopus Tusculanus, and is one of the 6 eldest Cardinals.

Ostia, Ostia, anciently a Town and Colony of Latium, 12 Miles from Rome, near the Mouth of the Tiber, and therefore call'd Ostia Tiberina by Strabo, Pliny and others, and said to have been Built by Ancus Martius. It was destroy'd by the Saracens, and now lies almost Buried in its Ruins, and Inhabited by few or none because of the unwholsomeness of the Air. It still retains the Title of a Bishoprick, which is joyn'd to that of Veletri and its Bishop is always Dean of the College of Cardinals. Here Monica St. Augustine's Mother Died.

Palestrina, Præneste anciently a Town in Latium, on the Confines of the Country of the Aequi, according to Ptolemy and Strabo, and call'd sometime Stephane according to Pliny; and from a Colony made a Free Town by Tiberius Augustus, as Gellius relates, stood anciently, partly on the Top of the Hill, and partly on the Valley, where there are still to be seen the Ruins of some old Walls, and Subterraneous Passages, through which C. Marius when he was Besieg'd by Lucretius Aselia, one of Sylla's Faction, in vain endeavouring to make his Escape, with Pontius Telestinus, who was in the same Circumstances. They both drew their Swords, and the former Kill'd the other; and afterwards procur'd the favour of his Servant to dispatch him. Here stood the famous Temple of Fortuna Primigenia, where the Sortes Prænestinae were kept. The old Town of Præneste was Demolish'd by Pope Boniface VIII. and the new one Built in the Valley, near the River Osa, about 22 Miles from Rome to the East, 12 from Tivoli to the South-East, 16 from Agnani, and 12 from Segni. It is the Title of a Bishoprick, which is commonly bestow'd on one of the eldest Cardinals: and is dignified with the Title of a Principality, belonging to the Family of the Barbarini. Whoever has a mind to be further inform'd concerning this Place may consult the description of it written by Joseph Maria Saresa a Frenchman.

Terracina, Anxur, Terracina or Tarracina, anciently a Town belonging to the Volsci, and sometime call'd Thranche. The old Castle stood on the Top of an Hill, where the Ruins are still to be seen, of a square Figure, but the greatest part of the Town was Built in the Plain where Terracina now stands. On the top of this Hill stood the Temple of Jupiter Anxur, and the Vestigia of the Harbour of Terracina are still to be seen in the Sea. We find mention made of the Aque Terracinenfes, which were very wholsom Waters, and the Fons Neptunius, of which (as Vitruvius says) whosoever had the ill luck to Drink, shortly after lost their lives. Solinus and Martianus rianus Capella are mightily mistaken, who think that Terracina was sometime an Island; but it is certain, that all that Plain about Veletri, Cori, Norma ruinata, Sermoneta, Sezze and Piperno, as far as Terracina, was call'd Campus, or Ager Pomptinus, from the Lake Pomptinus, which Julius Caesar design'd to have drain'd, and Augustus accomplish'd. This Town stands near the Mouth of the River Tyber, now call'd il Portatore, 2 Miles only from the Confines of the Kingdom of Naples to the West, 15 from Gaeta, and about 30 from Rome; but is very ill-inhabited, because of the Unwholsomeness of the Air, which is occasion'd by the neighbouring Lake, now call'd Paludi Pontine.

Veltri, Velitrae, the Name of a Colony, and very ancient Town belonging to the Volschi, according to Livy, Halicarnassæus and Suetonius, said to have been taken by King Ancus Martius, and almost quite dispeopled by the Plague afterwards (as Livy relates) in the Consulship of Furius Camillus and C. Menius Nepos, its Walls were demolish'd, because of its frequent Rebellicions, and the Inhabitants sent to dwell on the other side of the Tiber. It is an Episcopal See, joyn'd to that of Osia, and is a pretty handsome Town, and well inhabited, distant about 20 Miles from Rome to the East.

Signi, Signina, a Town anciently belonging to the Volschi, according to Strabo, Livy and Pliny, which owes its Name to the Signa or Ensigns, which the Roman Soldiers set up there; for the Soldiers keeping their Winter Quarters there, did so fortifie themselves and dispose every thing for their Convenience and Accomodation, that the Camp differ'd very little from a Town, insomuch that King Tarquin led a Colony thither, as Dion Halicarn relates. It is now an Episcopal See, and honour'd with the Title of a Dukedom, which one of the Family of Sforza enjoys; and is distant about 32 Miles from Rome to the East, and 12 from Palestrina to the South.

Anagni, Anagnina, anciently the Chief Town of the Hernici, and now an Episcopal See, Suffragan to none. It stands on a Hill, and is of no great Compass, but neat and well inhabited at the distance of 36 Miles from Rome to the East, 16 from Palestrina, 32 from Terracina. It was here that Marcus Antonius, after he had Divorc'd Octavia, Augustus's Sister, Marry'd Cleopatra; and here were Born Pope Innocent III. Gregory IX. Alexander IV. and Boniface VIII.

Albano, Albanum, anciently call'd Villa Pompeii, (according to Baudrand) which afterwards became so considerable as to bear the Title of a Bishoprick, whose Bishop is subject only to the See of Rome, and one of the first six Cardinals. Mr. Misson in his Travels, says, he visited this little Town of Albano, where the famous City of Alba formerly stood; and that he saw there a kind of ruin'd Mausoleum, commonly call'd the Tomb of Ascanius. This little Town is distant 14 Miles from Rome to the East, and about 2 from the Ruins of Alba Longa, which Tullius Hostilius raz'd, and from the Ruins of which Albano sprung; it is mention'd by Horace, and was Famous for the Excellent Wine that grew thereabouts.

The PATRIMONY, or Province of the PATRIMONY of St. PETER, which the Italians call the Provincia del Patrimonio, makes a great part of the Dominions of the Pope, and was anciently the South part of Hetruria. It was given to the Church by that Famous Woman Mathildis, and comprehends (according to Baudrand and others) the Country call'd il Orvietano, the Duchy of Castro, and the Country call'd La Stato di Ronciglione. It is bounded on the North with Ombria, on the East with Sabina, and the Campagna di Roma, on the West with the Senese, in the South of Tuscany, and on the South with the Tuscan Sea; and the most considerable Towns in it are,

Viterbo.	}	Suni.
Civita Vecchia.		Bracciano.
Civita Castellana	}	Castro.
Corneto.		Orvieto.
Toscanella.	}	Aquapendente.
Orti.		Bagnarca.
Nepi.

Viterbo, Viterbium, (sometimes call'd Tetrapolis, and the Inhabitants Quaterni Populi, because it was one of the four Cities which Desides, last King of the Insubrians, united under the Name of Viterbo) is at present a City indifferently big, almost wholly built of Stone, and enclos'd with a Wall, distant about 40 Miles from Rome to the North-West, and among other Things remarkable in this City, there are 8 or 10 square Towers, which are seen at a distance, and make an odd kind of Prospect, and were a sort of Forts or retiring Places, built hard by the Houses of the richest Inhabitants, during the Fury of the Guelf and Gibelin Factions.

Civita Vecchia, Centumcellæ, a Town in Hetruria, (according to Pliny, Antoninus and Paterculus) on the Coast of the Tyrrhenian or Tuscan Sea, formerly a Bishop's Seat. It was destroy'd by the Saracens, and afterwards rebuilt by Pope Leo III. on a Hill about 5 Miles distant, and call'd Cincelle; which now lies hid in its Rubbish, the Inhabitants having all return'd to their old City, which some of the late Popes, particularly Urban VIII. have been at the Charge to fortifie, and make a good and large Harbour, which is the Station of the Pope's Gallies, and defended by a strong Castle. It is but ill-inhabited by reason of the Air; and is distant about 40 Miles from Rome to the West. The last Pope made it a free Port.

Corneto, Cornuetum or Cornetum, stands on a Hill near the River Marta, on the Confines of the Duchy of Castro, near the Ruins of Graviscæ and Tarquinia, 4 Miles from the Tuscan Shoar, 22 from Viterbo to the South, and 46 from Rome. It is an Episcopal See, Suffragan to none; but is very ill-inhabited because of the South Winds, which are great Enemies to Health in those Parts.

Toscanella, Tuscania, is now but a small Town, on the River Marta, on the Confines of the Duchy of Castro, and 15 Miles from Viterbo to the South-West. It was anciently call'd Salumbrina, afterwards Tyrrhenia, Tuscia and Tuscania; and was then a very large and flourishing City, which probably gave the Name of Tuscia to the Country; but it has been sixteen times taken and ruin'd, and now lies in its own Rubbish.

Orti, Hortanum, or Orta, (according to Paulus Diaconus) is a little Town in the Province of the Patrimony, standing on the Tyber, where the River Nara falls into it, on the Confines of Ombria near Oricoli, about 34 Miles from Rome to the North, and 14 from Viterbo to the East. It has the Title of a Bishoprick, which in the Year 1437. was perpetually united to that of Civita Castellana, by Pope Eugenius IV.

Nepi, Nepes, which Livy calls Nepete, Protony Nepeta, Strabo Nepita, and Procopius Nepetes, stands on the Rivulet Pozzolo, between Rome and Viterbo, and has the Title of a Bishoprick, which has been united united to that of Sutri since the time of Pope Eugenius IV. An. 1436. and is Suffragan to no other See but that of Rome.

The Dutchy of CASTRO, Castrensis Ducatus, was formerly subject to the Duke of Parma, but has been in possession of the Pope since the Year 1649. and is bounded on the North with the Orvietano, on the East with the Province of the Patrimony, on the South with the Tuscan Sea, and on the West with the Senese. The chief Town of it was Castro, which now lies so hid in its own Rubbish, that one can hardly know that ever there was a Town there. It was a strong Town, and the Seat of a Bishop till the Year 1649. that Pope Innocent X. caus'd it to raz'd, to avenge the Death of Christopher Giarda, last Bishop of it, who was slain April 18. 1649. near Monterosi; and the Bishoprick was translated to Acquapendente. It stood about 13 Miles from the Tuscan Shoar to the North, and as many from Toscanelle to the West, and sprung from the Ruins of a neighbouring Town call'd Volscia.

The Territory of ORVIETO, or il Orvietano, Urbevetanus Ager, is bounded with Ombria on the East and North, the Senese on the West, and the Patrimony, properly and strictly so call'd, on the South. It was anciently a part of Etruria; and the most considerable Places in it now are, Orvieto, Acquapendente and Bagnarea.

Orvieto, Oropitum, or Urbs Vetus by Paulus Diaconus, Herbanum by Pliny, Urbevetanum by Procopius, Urbiventum or Orbiu-tum by others; is a Town built on a rising Ground, and naturally strong, being surrounded with high Rocks and Precipices; about 20 Miles distant from Viterbo to the North, 60 from Rome to the North-West, and about 15 from the Confines of the Duke of Tuscany's Dominions, and the Senese to the East.

Acquapendente, Acula or Aquila, stands on a rising Ground, about 40 Miles from Siena to the East, and 20 from Orvieto to the South-West. It was erected into a Bishoprick by Pope Innocent X. in the Year 1650. in the room of Castro, which he caus'd to be raz'd, to punish the Inhabitants for murdering their Bishop.

Bagnarea Balneoregium, stands upon a Hill, between Orvieto to the North, and Montefiascone to the South, about 6 Miles from either, and 10 from Viterbo to the North. It is an Episcopal See, but a small and ill-inhabited Town; and by some thought to be the Novempagi mention'd by Pliny.

Ronciglione, Roncilio, stands about 30 Miles from Rome, and 10 from Viterbo. It belong'd formerly to the Duke of Parma, and gives Name to the adjacent Country, which the Italians call la Stato di Ronciglione.

The Province of SABINA. Sabina is bounded on the North with Ombria, on the East with the farther Abruzzo, on the South with Compagna di Roma, and on the West with the Province of the Patrimony, is of much narrower Bounds than the Country of Sabina formerly was, and has only one Town of any Note, call'd Magliano, the Residence of the Bishop of Sabina, near the Tyber, and 30 Miles North from Rome.

Ombria, or the Dutchy of SPOLETO, Umbria sive Ducatus Spoletanus, seems to have had the latter of these Names from those Dukes whom Longinus the Exarch appointed. The Longobards having made themselves Masters of it, under King Alboinus, about the Year 571. it retain'd the Name of a Dutchy, and was govern'd by 8 Dukes successively of its own, and 13 likewise descended from Charles the Great, till the Year 1198. Afterwards it retain'd the same Name and Dignity under the Popes of Rome, till the Year 1440. when it recover'd the ancient Name of Umbria, or Ombria; but the ancient Umbria was of much larger Extent than this Country is now. It lies on the North of the Patrimony and Sabina.

These are the Chief Towns.	{	Spoleto.	{	Todi.
		Narni.		Nocera.
		Otricoli.		Torni.
		Reati.		Affisi.
		Foligno.		Amelia.

Spoleto, Spoletum, mention'd by Liwy, Cicero and Ptolomy, as a City in Umbria, and the Chief one of the Dutchy of Spoleto, now of the Province of Ombria is distant 40 Miles from Rome to the North, and as many from Perugia to the South-East. Baudrand says it is a large Town, built partly on a Hill, partly in the Valley; and Mr. Misson says, it is a poor City, thinly Peopled, ill Built, and in a very uneven Situation. The most remarkable Things in it are, the Cathedral, the Castle, (which as the latter of these two says) is only strong by its Situation, and has nothing in it to recompence the Trouble of going up to it. About half a Mile from the City there is a Temple anciently Consecrated to Concord, which is now call'd the Chappel of the Holy Crucifix. There are also to be seen here a Triumphal Arch half ruin'd, some Remains of an Amphitheatre, and an Aqueduct, which joyns the Mountain of St. Francis to that of Spoleto; which is entire, and has been in use ever since it was first built. 'Tis 350 Paces long, and about 700 English Foot high. Maphæo Cardinal Barbarini, afterwards Pope Urban VIII. was Bishop of this Place.

Narni, Narna, or Narnia, stands at the Foot of a Hill, on the River Nera, (from which it has its Name) near the Confines of Sabina, between Terni and Gericioli, 6 Miles from the former, and 8 from the other, and 40 from Rome. It was one of the 12 Towns which refus'd to assist the Romans against Hannibal; and was anciently (according to Pliny) call'd Nequinum, from Nequitia (Frowardness) because when it was Besieg'd, the Inhabitants chose rather to kill themselves and their Children than Surrender. It is at present (as Mr. Misson relates) a desolate, dirty and beggarly Place; but that there are observable in it, two pretty handsome Fountains of Brass; and near it the Ruins of a stately Bridge, (Built as they say) by Augustus, which joyn'd the Mountain of Spoleto to a neighbouring Mountain; it is of an extraordinary Height, but of its 4 Arches there remains but 1 entire. The Top of the greatest is broken; but he says he was credibly inform'd that the Breadth of this Arch is 170 Foot.

Otricoli, Otriculum, or Otriculun, stands in a Plain about 2 Miles from the Tyber, about 3 from the Conflux of that River with the Nera, between Narni and Civita Castellana, and about 30 Miles from Rome. The ancient Otriculum is often confounded with the Ocrea or Interocrea of Antoninus; but most Authors believe that Otricoli stands now where the ancient Otriculum stood, and that the Ruins that appear a little lower on the Right-hand towards the Tyber, are the Remains of the Ocrea; but the Conjecture would not be unreasonable, if one should say that Otriculum is only a Diminutive of Ocrea, implying the Suburbs of it.

Reate, Reate, mention'd by Strabo and Ptolemy, a Town in the Salines, stands upon the River Vellina, near a Lake of that Name, upon the Confines of the Kingdom of Naples, and the farther Abruzzo, in the midit between Aquila to the East, and Narni to the West, and 25 from Spoleto to the East. It is a pretty well inhabited Town, considering the Air; which is unwholsome, by reason of the neighbouring Marshes; and is an Episcopal See, subject immediately to that of Rome.

Foligno, Fulginium, stands at the foot of the Apennines, in a Plain, 21 Miles from Perugia to the South East, 10 from Affisi, and 13 from Spoleto, and has the Title of a Bishoprick. It is seated in a Terrestrial Paradise, (as Mr Misson says) but has nothing else to recommend it, except that it is said to have a better Trade than most other Cities in the Ecclesiastical State. The Trade of it consists in Cloth, Gold and Silver Lace, some Silks, and Spicery. It was several times plunder'd by the Goths, and there are no old Monuments remaining.

Todi, Tuder, or Turde, according to Ptolemy, stands on a Hill near the Tyber, almost in the midit between Perugia to the North, and Narni to the South, about 20 Miles from either, and has the Name of an Episcopal See.

Nocera, Nuceria, call'd Constantia Colonia, in the Itinerary of Antoninus, stands at the Foot of the Apennines on the Confines of the Marca d' Ancona, 16 Miles from Spoleto to the North, 15 from Camerino to the West, and as many from Foligno to the North-East; and is an Episcopal See, immediately subject to that of Rome.

Terni, Interamna, or Interamnina, stands in a Plain, on the River Narsa, near the Confines of Sabina, about 12 Miles from Spoleto to the South, and 6 from Narni. It is a very ancient City, having been Built about 670 Years before Christ, in the Days of Numa Pompilius. It owes its ancient Name to its Situation, between the two Arms of the River which waters it, and the Bridge, (as the Inscription which was put on it in the time of Pope Urban VIII. says) was Built by Pompey the Great. The whole Trade of this City consists in Oyl, of which (as they say) they make during six Months of the Year, 100 Charges every Day, each Charge weighing 600 Pounds, and is worth 12 English Crowns.

Affisi, Affisium, or Æsisium, stands on a Hill, 4 Miles from the River Chiascio, 11 from Perugia to the East, and near 60 from Rome to the North-West. It is an Episcopal See, Suffragan to none, and the Birth place of St. Francis, and St. Clara.

The Country of PERUGIA, Perusinus Ager, call'd by the Italians il Peruzino, is bounded with the Tyber, and ancient Umbria on the East, the Marshes of Chiana, and the Territories of Florence on the West, and the Territories of Orvieto on the South; and owes its Name to the chief Town in it.

Perugia, Perusia, Perusum, and Petrasium, was a very ancient City, and Famous for the Calamity which beset it, when Octavius Augustus block'd up L. Antonius, the Brother of Marcus the Triumvir, within it; and having forc'd him to surrender, let him go without any harm, pardon'd the Soldiers, but executed the utmost degree of Rage, not only on the Perusians, but also on the Romans, nor sparing those of the first and second Quality, who were cruelly Butcher'd at the Altar of Julius Caesar, tho' this seems to have been the effect rather of the brutal Fury of the Soldiers than the Orders of the General.

One of the Citizens of Perusia having set Fire to his House with all his Goods, and thrown himself into the Flame, it burnt so violently that it quickly brought the Neighbourhood into the same Calamity; and in a little time the whole Town, except the Temple of Vulcan, was reduc'd to Ashes. But not long after a new City sprung up from these, which was call'd Augusta Perusia. Between this City and Cortona lies the Lacus Tirasimenus, or Perusinus, Famous for the signal Overthrow which the Romans, under the Consul Faminius, in the second Punic War, liv'd from Hannibal the Carthaginian General, on the North Borders of it. It was one of the first 12 Tuscan Colonies, and is at present a large and pretty well inhabited City, situated on a Hill near the Tybur, about 28 Miles from Orvieto to the North, and 60 from Rome to the North-West, and 12 from Affisi, towards the Lake now call'd Lago di Perugia, or Lugo di Castiglione, which is about 9 Miles from the City. It has the Title of a Bishoprick, and is adorn'd with an University, and defended by a strong Citadel.

Citta di Castello, Tifernium Tiberinum, is a fortified Town, and well inhabited, on the Confines of Tuscany, near the Tyber, 25 Miles North from Perugia, and gives Name to the Country about it, call'd il Contado di Citta di Castello.

The Marquitate of ANCONA, or Marca d' Ancona, Marchia Anconitana, which anciently made up the greater part of Picenum, is a fertile and pleasant Country, producing particularly abundance of Wax and Flax; only the Air is bad. It is bounded on the North with the Gulf of Venice, on the East with the Duchy of Urbino, on the West with the farther Abruzzo, and on the South divided from Umbria, by the Apennines. The most considerable Towns in it are,

Ancona.	}	Osimo.	}	Recanati.
Macerata.		Camerino.		Tolentino.
Ascoli.		Fermo.		San Severino.
Jesi.		Loretto.

Ancona, Ancona is a very ancient City, said to have been Built by the Syracusians, who left their Country to avoid the Tyranny of Dionysius. It stands on the Adriatick Shoar, over against Dalmatia, near the Promontory, anciently call'd Crumerum, now, monte S. Ciriaco, about 30 Miles from Fermo to the North, 13 from Osimo to the North-East, between Loretto to the East, and Sinigaglia to the West, and 110 from Rome to the North. It has a very good Harbour (as Mr. Misson relates) but the Trade is quite ruin'd. The Unevenness of its Situation renders it very inconvenient. The Streets are narrow and dark. There are neither fair Houses, nor fine Churches in it. The Citadel commands both the City and Haven; and at the entrance of the Mole or Peer, there is a Triumphal Arch of very fine white Marble, which was erected by Trajan by order of the Senate. The fore-cited Author says, that Victuals are very dear and scarce in this Place, insomuch that a Fricasse of 3 Eggs, or as many Pilchards, was brought them for a Supper to serve six Persons; and that you must fight for them too, before you can have them.

Macerate, Macerata, stands on a Hill not far from the Ruins of Hevia Recina, in the midit between Recanati to the East, and Tolentino on the West, and 20 Miles South from Ancona. It was Built (as some say) from the Ruins of Hevia Recina, An. 410. Pope Nicholas IV. erected its University in the Year

Year 1200. and Pope Jehn XXII. made it a Bishoprick in the Year 1586.

Anc. Picenum, stands on a Hill near the River Tronto, on the Confines of the farther Abruzzo, and was anciently the Chief City of Picenum. It is divided (as Baudrand says) into 4 Parts, has two old Castles, 100 old Towers, 6 Bridges and 9 Gates; and is distant 20 Miles from the Adriatick Sea to the West, 9 from Montalto to the South, 18 from Fermo, and 20 from Aquila; and is a well Inhabited and Fortified Town.

Osimo, Auxunum, or Oxinum, stands on a Hill, about 10 Miles from Ancona to the South, and about as much from Jesi to the West, and Loretto to the East: and is in a decaying condition, tho' it has the name of a Bishoprick; which in Italy are generally small, as they are very numerous.

Camerino, Camerinum, is situated at the Foot of the Apennines, on the Confines of Umbria in the midlt between Macerata to the South West, and Spoleto to the North East, and 60 from Rome to the North. It is an Episcopal See, subject to none but the Pope, and formerly was govern'd by its own Dukes.

Fermo, Firmium, mention'd by Strabo, Mela and Cicero as a Town and Colony of Picenum in Italy, is pretty well Inhabited, and Built on the rising Ground, near the Coast of the Adriatick Sea, 30 Miles South-East from Ancona, and 90 from Rome to the North-East. It was dignified with the Title of an Archiepiscopal See by Pope Sixtus V. who had formerly been Bishop there.

Loretto, Lauretum, stands about 3 Miles from the Shoar of the Adriatick Sea, 10 from Fermo to the North-West, 20 from Ancona to the South-East, and near 100 from Rome to the North-East. It is a little Place, but very well Fortified, and has the Title of a City and Bishoprick, Erected by Pope Sixtus V. Anno 1586. to which the See of Recanati was united Anno. 1591. Loretto has been a famous Place for a long time, but because every body does not particularly know the reason why it is so, they must be put in mind, that it is pretended that the House in which the Virgin Mary is said to have been Born, where she was Betroth'd and Married to Joseph, where the Angel saluted her, and where the Son of God was Incarnated, was brought by the Angels from Nazareth to Dalmatia, and plac'd on a little Mountain call'd Terfatto, on 12 May, 1291. That 3 Years and 7 Months after it was remov'd thence, and brought by them to a Forest in the Territory of Recanati in the Marca d' Ancona; from whence after it had been 8 Month there, it was remov'd a Mile further to the same Hill where it now stands. But a difference happening between 2 Brothers to whom the Ground belong'd, it was remov'd some Paces from thence, and set down in the midlt of a High-way, from whence it has never been stir'd since. To prevent inconveniences that might happen, particularly a new removal, they Built a Magnificent Church in the midlt of which it remains secure against all Assaults; about which they have since Built 4 Walls. The Sacra Casa consists of one Chamber, 44 Spans Long within, 18 Broad, and 23 High; 1½ Palm, being 13 Inches English Measure. The Holy Tabernacle stands East and West, and over the little Chimney in the Chamber, in a Nich, stands the great Lady of Loretto, about 4 Foot High, made (as they say) of Cedar wood, and wrought by St. Luke. The Ornaments with which she is usually deck'd, especially the Mantle, which is adorn'd with an infinite number of precious Stones, are of an inestimable Value. She has a great number of Robes for change, and 7 different Mourning Habits for the Holy Week. Her Triple Crown was presented her by Lewis XIII. of France who also gave a little Crown to the Infant Jesus, both wonderful Rich, the former being all cover'd with precious Stones. The Altar made by the hands of the Apostles, and the Stone upon which St. Peter Celebrated his first Mass, were Transported at the same time with the House. All round the Statue there is nothing but Lamps, Statues, Busts, and other Figures of Gold and Silver; 28 Candlesticks of Silver and Vermilion, 12 of Malt-y Gold, Weighing 37 Pound each. 'Tis incredible what vast numbers of Pilgrims come here to pay their Devotion, especially at Easter, and the Virgin's Nativity; (which is Solemniz'd in the Month of September) insomuch that in the Years of greatest concourse, they have counted 20000 Pilgrims and upwards during these 2 Festivals. The Treasury-Chamber is a spacious Room, having 17 large Presses with Folding-Doors, instead of Wainscot to the Walls; which are fill'd with pure Gold, Jewels of the greatest Value, and Vessels and Ornaments more precious than Gold; for Silver is not admitted into these Presses but lies in confus'd Heaps, in several Places till they have occasion for't. 'Tis impossible to imagine the vast quantity and variety of Riches that are amass'd here; and it would be in vain to attempt a particular account of them. They have been bestow'd by Princes, States, and People that own the Papal Supremacy, who have emulously strive who should out-do one another. Nor is the Treasury all the Riches that belong to this Place: There are settl'd Revenues, and Lands Purchas'd out of Sight, and they have built not only a stately Church, but also a Magnificent Palace, and no doubt have Chests full of Money. There is also an Arsenal; but not very considerable. In the publick Place an admirably beautiful Fountain of white Marble, enrich'd with Statues of Brass, and a fine Statue of Pope Sixtus V. Erected by the Inhabitants of Loretto, in acknowledgment of the Privileges they received from him. The principal Trade of this little City, consists in Medals, Rosaries, Sanctified Beads, Images, Agnus Dei's, and such like Commodities.

Recanati, Recinetum, is a little City on the Top of a Hill, near the River Potenza, about 4 Miles from Loretto to the South-west, 10 from Macerata and 13 from Ancona to the South. It has been an Episcopal See, since the Year 1240. but in the Year 1591. it was united to that of Loretto.

Tolentino, Tolentinum, is a little Town, Situated on a rising Ground, about 25 Miles from Ancona to the South, and 15 from Camerino to the North-East. It was made a Bishoprick by Pope Sixtus V. Anno. 1586. under the Archbishop of Fermo, but it is now united with the See of Macerata.

San Severino, Septempeda, is a little Town, on the Banks of the River Potenza, 6 Miles from Tolentino to the West, and 12 from Camerino to the North. The ancient Town of Septempeda was destroy'd by the Goths, in the Year 543, and from its Ruins Septempeda Nova did arise, or Fanum Sancti Severini (from whence the Modern Italian name San Verino) in the Year 1198. where formerly a little Castle stood call'd Castrum Regale, near the Ruins of the old Town. It was erected into a Bishoprick by Pope Sixtus V. Anno. 1586. whereas formerly it was in the Diocess of Camerino. In passing now North west thro' the rest of the Pope's Dominions we enter Urbino, formerly called Ugentum, was the Capital of the Ducatus, a part of the Marche d'Ancona, in the Apennines, where the Umbri dwell. It is bounded to the North with the Gallia, to the East with the Marca d'Ancona, or the Senones, to the South with the Comitia, and on the West with the Tuscani. It was formerly Dukes of its own; and the Family of Montefeltro was the last that had it; for the Male Race failing in the Person of Francis Maria Duke, he sometime before he died, to prevent all disputes that might happen after his Death, gave it to Pope Urban VIII. in the Year 1631. It is about 30 Miles extent, and may be divided into these Countries, the Duchy of Urbino, the County of Montefeltro, the Territory of Gubio, the Signiory of Pesaro, and the Vicariate of Senigaglia; and comprehends these Towns,

Urbino.	}	{	Fossombrone.
Cagli.			Pesaro.
Gubio.			Sinigaglia.

Urbino, Urbium, stands on a Hill near the Head of the River Foglia, about 20 Miles from the Adriatick Shoar, 80 from Florence to the East, and 100 from Rome to the North. It was Erected into an Archbishoprick by Pope Pius IV. Ann. 1563. and was the Birth-place of Polydore Virgil, and the famous Painter Raphael.

Gubio, Eugubium, anciently call'd Iguvium, stands at the foot of the Apennines, on the Confines of the Marca d'Ancona, 26 Miles from Urbino to the South, and 16 from Perugia. It is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Urbino, but not subject to his Jurisdiction.

Fossombrone, Forum Sempronii, stands near the River Marro, about half a Mile from the old Town, 10 Miles from Urbino to the East, in the midst between Pesaro to the North, and Cagli to the South, about 15 Miles from either. It was Sold to Frederick Duke of Urbino by Galeazzo Malatesta, Lord of it, for the Sum of 13000 Florins of Gold, in the time of Pope Sixtus the IV.

Pesaro, Pisaurum, the Name anciently of a Town and Colony of Umbria in Italy, according to Pliny and Ptolemy, is at present a large, well built and pleasantly situated Town, on the River Foglia near to where it empties it self into the Adriatick Sea, in the midst between Sinigaglia to the East, and Rimini to the West, and 20 Miles from Urbino to the North East. It was rais'd by Turila King of the Goths, and rebuilt by Belisarius (as Procopius relates) and is an Episcopal See Suffragan to the Archbishop of Urbino. It is tolerably well Fortified, tho' somewhat after the old Fashion, and the Houses are generally handsome: And it is excellently provided with all the Conveniencies of Life. The best Meat (as Mr. Misson says) costs not full two Farthings a Pound, which weighs 18 Ounces; and the Bread, Wine and other Things are proportionally cheaper: But the Air is very bad in Summer, and extremely dangerous in July and August.

Sinigaglia, Senigallia, anciently a Town of Umbria in Italy, according to Pliny, Strabo, Paul Diaconus and others. Ptolemy calls it Sena Gallica: And it is mentioned by Livy, Polybius and Stephanus. It was built by the Galli Senones, in the 396th Year of the City of Rome: And is now a little but delightfully situated Town in a Plain, near the Adriatick Sea, and on the Confines of the Marca d'Ancona, in the midst almost between Ancona to the East, and Pesaro to the West, 22 Miles from either, and 34 from Urbino to the East. It belong'd formerly to the Family of Malatesta, afterwards to the Dukes of Urbino, till it fell into the Church in the time of Pope Urban VIII.

ROMANDIOLA Propria, or ROMAGNA, anciently call'd Æmia Regio, lies next to Urbino between the Bojense, on the West, the Duchy of Modena, on the North, Urbino and Tuscany on the South and East. A great part of it towards the Apennines is subject to the Duke of Tuscany, and therefore call'd Romandicla Fiorentina. The most considerable Towns in that part of it which belongs to the Church are,

Ravenna	}	{	Ferli.	}	{	Cervia.
Faenza.			Bertinoro.			Cesena.
Imola.			Rimini.			Sassima.

Ravenna, Ravenna, anciently a City of Gallia Cispadana, according to Pliny, Strabo and Ptolemy, was one of the chief Cities in that Country we now call Italy, and the Residence of the Exarch or Governour sent by the Emperour of the East to govern that Country. It was formerly the Principal Haven that the Romans had on the Adriatick Gulf: And its situation is represented by the ancient Geographers like that of Venice; but the Case is quite altered now; for not only the Lagunes are dried up, but the Sea has retir'd almost four Miles from it, and those Plains that were formerly under Water, are now the most fruitful Fields in Italy. There are to be seen in the Walls towards the Sea, great Rings of Iron, which served formerly to fasten the Vessels, and the Remains of the Pharos are still visible. Fresh Water is very scarce here, which gave occasion to that Epigram of Martial, which Mr. Addison has so wittily translated, that I cannot omit inserting it.

By a Ravenna Vintner once betray'd,
So much for Wine and Water mix'd I paid;
But when I thought the purchas'd Liqueur mine,
The Rascal fobb'd me off with only Wine.

By reason of the many Disasters which this City hath suffered by the Wars there are but few Marks of Antiquity left in it. Without the Walls, near the ancient Haven, stands the Mausoleum which Amalasuntha erected for her Father Theodoric, King of the Ostrogoths, who kept his Court at Ravenna, which they have turn'd to a little Church, and call it Rotunda; and which is covered with a Stone 38 Foot in Diameter and 15 thick. The Cathedral is an old Church, the Nave or Body of which is supported by 56 Pillars of Marble, of the Archipelago. There are several other fine Churches, as, that of the Theatines, St. Vitalis, St. Apolinarius, St. Romulus, St. Andrew, St. Celsus. In the Great Place stands a fair brazen Statue of Pope Alexander the VII. and at the other end of it are two Columns, upon which were the ancient Patron, and the Arms of Venice, while Ravenna belong'd to that State; but since it belong'd to the Church, the Pope has plac'd on these Pillars, the Statues of Victor and Apollonarius, who are the Patrons of Ravenna. The City was taken by the Longobards in the Year, 744. and is now the chief City of Romandiola, distant about 45 Miles from Bologna to the East, 102 from Ancona to the North-West, 60 from Florence to the North-East, and 42 from Ferrara to the South-East.

Faenza, Faventia, anciently a Town in Gallia Cisalpina, according to Livy and Pliny, upon the River Anemo now Lamone, in the midst between Imola to the West, and Forli to the East, and 8 from the the Confines of the Great Duke of Tuscany's Dominions, 25 Miles West from Ravenna to the South-West. It is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Ravenna.

Imola or Jumola, Forum Cornelii, anciently a City belonging to the Lingones in Gallia Cispadana, sometimes call'd Connelium, and Syllæ Forum, is at present a pretty neat Town, and well Inhabited, distant about 20 Miles from Bologna, to the East, 10 from Favenza, 25 from Ravenna, and 16 from the Confines of the Dominions of Florence to the North; and is an Episcopal See under the Archbishop of Ravenna.

Ferli, Forum Livii, anciently a City of the Senones, in Gallia Cispadana, Situated in a Plain near the Mountains, 15 Miles from Ravenna to the South, and 4 from Citta di Sole, and the Confines of Tuscany; and is an Episcopal See under the Archbishop of Ravenna.

Rimini, Ariminum, stands in a Plain, on the Coast of the Adriatick Gulf, at the Mouth of the River Ariminus, now la Marecchia. Baudrand, (who Travell'd that Country not very long ago, and is reckon'd a pretty good Geographer) calls it culta & elegans; but Mr. Misson says, it is a little poor City. It is distant 20 Miles from Pesaro to the North-West, 25 from Ravenna to the South-East, somewhat less from Urbino to the North, and in the midit between Bologna to the West, and Ancona to the South East: It was Fortified by Sigismundus Pandolphus Malatesta, but at present it has only a Wall, and that in no good condition. The Bridge of Marble Built by Augustus and Tiberius, and the Triumphal Arch Erected by Augustus, the Ruins of an Amphitheatre, the Tower of Brick, which was anciently the Pharos, but now encompass'd with Gardens (since the Sea has fallen back half a Mile) are the only Monuments of Antiquity now remaining. It is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Ravenna. Not far from Rimini on the side towards Ravenna, the River Pisatello falls into the Sea. This was the ancient Rubicen, so fam'd in the Roman Story on account of Julius Cæsar.

Cervia, Cervia, anciently call'd Phicocle, Ficocle, and Ficode, stands in the midit of a Boggy Country, near the Coast of the Adriatick Gulf, about 12 Miles from Ravenna to the S. E. and 15 from Rimini. It is but thinly Inhabited, by reason the Air is very bad, in omuch (as Baudrand relates) there are not above 400 Inhabitants in it: but it has the Title of a Bishoprick, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Ravenna.

The Country call'd BOLOGNESE, Bononiensis Ager, was anciently Inhabited by a part of the Bœii, and Lingones in Gallia Cispadana; and is Bounded on the North with the Dutchy of Ferrara, on the East with Romandiola, properly so call'd, on the West with the Dutchy of Modena, and on the South with Tuscany, from which it is separated by the Appennine Mountains. It's Soil is very Fertile and well Improv'd; and it was given to the Church by Pepin King of France, and Charles the Great. The most considerable Places in it are, Bologna, and Bentivoglio, tho' there are several others of less Note.

Bologna, Bononia (commonly call'd the Fat) is plac'd in Gallia Cispadana by Pliny, Livy and Tacitus; and was at first call'd Felsina, from Felsinus a Tuscan King, by whom it is said to have been Built. It stands on the little River Reno, 25 Miles from Ferrara, and 92 from Venice to the South, 54 from Florence, and 192 from Rome to the North-West, between Milan to the West, and Ancona to the East, 125 from the former, and 135 from the other. It has been the Seat of an Archbishop (who has also the Title of a Prince of the Empire) since the year 1582. that Pope Gregory XIII Erected it; and is Greater and Richer, as Mr. Misson relates, than Florence, and containing more Inhabitants by a third part. All the Fortification of this City is a single Wall; for when it submitted it self to the Pope, Ann. 1278. (Nicholas being then in the Chair) they made an Honourable Composition with his Holiness, viz. That he should never Bridle them by a Citadel, or Confiscate their Estates upon any pretext whatsoever; and that they should have an Auditor of the Rota, and an Ambassador at Rome. The Houses are generally Built of Stones or Brick, Plaster'd over, and the Streets are pretty streight. The University was Founded by Theodosius the younger, Ann. 425. but it owes most of its splendor to Charlemain. There are several fine Churches in this City, particularly that of St. Petronius which is the greatest; and in which is to be seen Cassini's Meridian Line, drawn on a Copper Plate, set in the Pavement, and is 220 Foot long. The Church of the Dominicans, in which are the Chappel and Tomb of St. Dominick, is very magnificent. There are also several stately Palaces in this City, whereof that which belongs to General Caprara is the finest. The Cardinal Legate, and the Gonfalonier with his Counsellors lodge in the Publick Palace, above the Gate of which there is a Statue in Brass of Gregory XIII. which weighs 11000 Pounds, and on one side of the Gate, that of Boniface VIII. There are likewise in this City several Cabinets of Curiosities, particularly that of Aldrovandus. It is also worth ones while to observe the great Tower Asinelli, which was Built by Gerrard Asinelli, Ann. 1109. It is 376 Foot high, as that of the other Tower near to it, call'd Garisenda from its Founder, is 130. The latter was Built by Otho, and Philip Garisendi, Ann. 1110. and leans to one side like the Tower of Pisa; and its inclination is about 9 Foot. The shining Stones, known by the name of Bononian Stones, are found on the Hill Paderno, about 3 Miles from the City. There are in this City 400 Silk-mills; and the Trade consists chiefly in Wax, Hemp, Flax, Hams, Sauciges, Soap, Snuff and Perfumes; and sometime their little Dogs turn'd to a very good Account.

Bentivoglio, Bentivolium, formerly call'd Pons Poledranus, stands about 10 Miles to the North of Bologna, towards Ferrara. It was formerly a very fine Place, but now is almost quite Ruin'd. From hence the Bentivoglio's had their name, who had the Jurisdiction of this Place many Years.

The Dutchy of FERRARA, properly so call'd, became a part of the Ecclesiastical State, after the Death of Alphonfus II. Ann. 1598. and is Bounded on the North with the Polesine di Rovigno, on the West with the Dutchy of Mantua, on the South with the Bolognese, and Romandiola properly so call'd and on the East with the Gulf of Venice. It is divided (by Baudrand) into these following Parts, il Polesine di Ariano, il Polesine di Ferrara, il Polesine di S. Giorgio, la Valle di Commachio, la Valle di Marrara, la Valle di Maremorta; and the most considerable Towns in it are, Ferrara, Comachio, and Cento.

Ferrara, Ferraria, anciently call'd Forum Asieni, stands on a little Branch of the Po, call'd Po Morto, from whence there is a Canal made to Fransolino, about 6 Miles long, for the conveniency of Commerce. It stands in the midit between Mirandola and Comachio, and about 28 Miles from Bologna to the North-East, 30 from the Adriatick Sea to the West, and 60 from Venice to the South: While it remain'd in the Hands of the Princes of the House of Este, it might justly have been reckon'd one of the most flourishing Cities in Italy; but since it became a part of the Ecclesiastical State, it has mightily decay'd, insomuch that at present tho' it be a large and pretty handsome Town, it is very ill Peopled, Poor and almost Desolate. In the Year 1570. in the space of 40 Hours, it suffer'd 160 Jolts of a dreadful Earthquake, which had well nigh reduc'd it all to Rubbish. The Citadel, which was Built by Clement VIII. and which they say, cost 2000000 Crowns, is still in good order; but the other Fortifications are quite neglected. The Ducal Palace, the Marquis de Villa's House, the Cathedral and several other Churches and Convents, are worth a Traveller's Notice; but do not deserve a particular Description.

Comacchio, Comaculum, or Comacula, is a little Town standing in a Marshy Ground, about 3 Miles from the Adriatick Shoar to the West, 20 from Ravenna to the North, and 35 from Ferrara to the East. It is inhabited only by a few Fishermen, by reason of its unwholesome Situation; but is however an Episcopal See under the Arch-Bishop of Ravenna.

The Republick of St. MARINO has its Name from a Mountain in the Province of Romandiola, and a Town of that same Name, which is so call'd from a certain Holy Man call'd Marinus, who liv'd a Hermit there in the time of the Emperor Diocletian. It has been a free State ever since the Year 600. and has under its Jurisdiction several little Towns and Villages in the adjacent Country; for in the Year 1100. in the time of the Emperor Otho III. it Bought the Castle of Pennarossa from the Count of Mentseirat, and that of Cesolo, in the Reign of the Emperor Frederick Enobarbus; each of which Places is about a Mile distant from St. Marino. In the Year 1463. Pope Pius II. gave them the Castles and Villages of Serravalle, Fuente, Mongiandano, and Fiorentino, and the Village of Piogge. It had several others, but the Dukes of Urbino have taken them from this State; so that the whole Inhabitants of this little State, are not thought to be above 6000. The Town of St. Marino (Titinus) stands on a steep Hill, and is pretty well Fortified. It is govern'd by two Officers, call'd Captains, who are chang'd twice a Year, viz in the Months of March and September. This Town is distant above 30 Miles from Ravenna to the S. E. 20 from Urbino to the N. E. and about 60 from Florence to the E.

C H A P. XIII.

The Kingdom of Naples, Regnum Neapolitanum.

THE Kingdom of Naples, which comprehends those Parts of Italy, that were anciently call'd Samnium, Campania, Apulia, and Magna Græcia, owes its Modern Name to the City of Naples; it having been formerly call'd the Kingdom of Sicily, on this side the Pharo (viz. of Messina). It came to be reduc'd into the form of a Kingdom (as Cluverius and others relate) in this manner. About the Year of Christ 1000. the Saracens being in possession of this Country and the Island of Sicily, one Tancred a Norman, who had 12 Sons, and not overmuch to give them, came together with them into Italy, and offer'd his Service against the Saracens, who being happily expell'd Italy and Sicily, he and his Sons had large Possessions assign'd them, both in the Kingdom of Naples and Sicily. After which his Son Robert was made first Duke of Apulia and Calabria; whose Son Roger was created King of Sicily and Naples, and both together were call'd the Kingdom of the 2 Sicily's; for that which is now call'd the Kingdom of Naples, was then call'd Sicily on this side the Pharo, and the Island it self Sicily beyond the Pharo. Roger was succeeded by his Son William, Ann. 1135. His Son William, surnam'd the Good, (as his Father had been call'd the Bad) succeeded him, Ann. 1166. who left both the Kingdoms to his Bastard Son Tancred, against whom the Pope conceiving a mortal Hatred, and resolving to do him a Mischief, caus'd Henry VI. Son of the Emperor Frederick I. Duke of Swaben to Marry one Constantia, whom he brought out of a Nunnery, and declar'd him Heir of those Kingdoms. The Emperor Frederick II. Henry VI's Son by that Marriage, marry'd Iole, John of Brenne's Daughter, King of Jerusalem, and by that means laid claim to the Title; and therefore the succeeding Kings of Sicily were likewise call'd Kings of Jerusalem. The Popes still entertaining an inveterate Hatred against this Frederick and his Posterity, Pope Urban VIII. prevail'd with Charles I. Earl of Anjou, to come from France and invade Manfred; and having first kill'd him, and then Conradin, Frederick II's Grand child, he took possession of the Kingdom. But he did not enjoy it long; for he with his Frenchmen did so oppress the Sicilians, that they form'd a Conspiracy against them, and on Easter Eve, An. 1282. upon a Signal given as was agreed, put all the French to the Sword; which Action is still known by the name of the Sicilian Vespers. Peter of Arragon, who had Marry'd Constantia, Manfred's Daughter, and whom Comad a little before his Death had appointed his Heir, deliver'd the Sicilians from the Tyranny of the French; and having made Charles II. who had been beat at Sea, his Prisoner, did not dismiss him before he had consented to content himself with Naples, Calabria, Apulia and Tarentum, and resign Sicily and Sardinia to the Arragonians. Robert, who in vain attempted to recover Sicily, succeeded Charles, to whom succeeded Joanna I. After her Charles of Durazzo, then Ladislaus; next Joanna II. who first nam'd Alphonfus of Arragon her Heir; but repenting of that before 2 Years were at an end, she nam'd Lewis IV. Duke of Anjou, who disputed the Kingdom of Naples with Alphonfus, till the Year 1434. that both he and Joanna Died. Afterwards Alphonfus did expel Rene, who pretended to succeed his Brother; and by his latter Will appointed Ferdinand I. his Bastard, his Heir, with whom John Duke of Lorrain, Rene's Son, disputed the Title, and was Crown'd by Pope Pius II. But after several Battles, fought with various Success, was forc'd to leave the Kingdom, Charles VIII.

VIII. King of France, claiming the Crown as Heir to the Earl of Anjou. Charles did also drive Ferdinand II. out of the Kingdom; but shortly after, Charles's Affairs obliging him to return to France, Ferdinand was call'd home by the Neapolitans. At last Frederick, Ferdinand's Uncle, being at once attack'd by Lewis XII. of France, and Ferdinand the Catholic, and not being able to make head against both, surrender'd himself to the former, and let his Kingdom fall to the Conquerors; but a Strife arising about the dividing of it, they went by the Ears, and the Spaniards drove the French clear out; and Ferdinand united Sicily and Naples to his other Dominions. And so ever since the Year 1504. it hath been subject to the King of Spain, who pays a certain Acknowledgement of Homage due to the Pope, as a vassal Gennet, and a Sum of Money, presented with great Ceremony every Year, in Testimony of this Kingdom's Dependence on the Holy See.

This Country has been variously divided at different times. Under its first Kings, it was divided into 4 Parts, viz. The Provinces of Lavaro, Abruzzo, Apulia and Calabria; afterwards into 7 Provinces, and at last into 12, of which we shall treat particularly hereafter. It is bounded on the North with the Gulf of Venice, on the South with the Tuscan Sea, on the East with the Mouth of the Gulf of Venice and the Ionian Sea, and on the West with the Ecclesiastical State; and is in Length (according to Cruvier) from the River Tronto, to the Promontory now call'd Capo Spartivento. 360 Miles in Breadth from the Promontory Massa to Monte di St. Angelo, 120.

The Air in some places is excessively hot, especially on the South side of the Appennines, but on the other Temperate, except in Apulia. It is almost every where well provided with Springs and Rivers, which flow from both sides of the Appennines. The Soil produces Wine and Oyl, and pretty good Pasture; and the Neapolitan Horses are in great Esteem. Also good store of Almonds, Olives, Figs, Citrons, Oranges, Grapes, Corn, Hemp, Line, Pulse, Anniseed and Coriander-seed. There are said to be no Venomous Creatures in this Country, except the Tarantula and Chersydros, an amphibious kind of Serpent; and the Locust that sometimes annoys the product of the Ground. The Soil of Campania is so Fertile, that it produces the same Flowers twice a Year. The Air of the hither Principality is reckon'd very temperate, and the People live to a great Age. The farther Principality abounds in Cattle, and several sorts of good Fruit. Basilicate produces Saffron, and plenty of Honey and Wax. Calabria especially affords good store of Manna. The hither Calabria produces Corn, Oyl and Mulberries; the farther excels in good Horses, and fine Honey. Apulia, by reason of the excessive Heat, is so plagu'd with Flies, that it is a common Proverb, If one would have a Fore-taste of Hell Torments, let him go spend a Summer in Apulia. In Capitanata the Soil is dry and sandy, and the Grass short, but very good. In Bari the Air is pretty temperate; but the Tarantula is very troublesome, and so are some other little Serpents, whom the Stork is a great Enemy to. Otranto is said to produce as much Oyl as might serve all Italy. In Molise there's so great plenty of Venison, that it is much cheaper than Beef or Mutton. The hither Abruzzo is the coolest place of the Kingdom, yet produces plenty of Corn, Wine, Oyl and Saffron.

As to the Genius and Manners of the Neapolitans, we shall only tell you the Proverb that passes commonly in Italy, viz. The Kingdom of Naples is a Paradise, but the Inhabitants Devils. They are naturally Seditious, and abominably Unclean. They are very Sumptuous in their Apparel, especially on Sundays and Holy-days, insomuch that 'tis hard to distinguish a Lady from a Cocker's Wife.

It is very well known the Kingdom of Naples is govern'd by a Viceroy sent by the King of Spain, whose Government is generally for 3 Years: He is commonly one of the Grandeas of Spain; and the People have no great reason to brag of the Gentleness of his Government. The Revenues of this Kingdom are said to be about 3000000 Ducats, and if we may believe Mr. Lassels, the Kingdom is able to raise 150000 Foot, and 100000 Horse. The Number of Cities and great Towns in this Kingdom are said to be 148. Arch-Bishopricks 20. Bishopricks 128. and the number of Princes, Dukes, Marquises and Earls is incredible.

The latest and most common Division of the Kingdom of Naples, as we said before, is into 12 Provinces, as you may see in the following Table.

- I. The Province of Lavaro.
- II. The farther Principality.
- III. The hither Principality.
- IV. Basilicata.
- V. The hither Calabria.
- VI. The farther Calabria.
- VII. The hither Abruzzo.
- VIII. The farther Abruzzo.
- IX. The County of Molise.
- X. The Province of Capitanata.
- XI. The Province of Bari.
- XII. The Province of Otranto.

The Province of LAVARO, Terra Laboris, comprehends a part of the ancient Campania Felix, (so call'd by Pliny for its Fruitfulness) and Latium Novum; and is bounded on the North with the Country of Abruzzo, on the East with the Country of Molise, and the farther Principality, on the South with the hither, and on the West with the Tyrrhenian Sea, and the Campaign of Rome. It is water'd by the Garigliano, and the Volturno; and is said to be about 74 Miles long, and 40 broad. The most considerable Towns in it are,

Naples, Neapolis, which Cicero, Pliny and Strabo place in Campania Felix, was anciently call'd Parthenope, from the Sea Nymph, or Syrene of that Name, whose Enchantments, as the Story goes, Ulysses and his Companions had enough to do to escape; or from Eumelus, the King of Theffaly's Daughter, who is said to have brought hither a Colony. Some are of opinion that the Grecians built it, and call'd it Neapolis; others affirm that Augustus gave it that Name; but however that may be, it is certainly one of the noblest and finest Cities in the World, distant about 100 Miles from Rome to the South East, East, 200 from Palermo to the North-East, 200 from Florence to the South-East, and about 300 from Verice, Lat. 41. Long. 32. 40. It is seated on a Gulf of the same Name with the City, and has a large and safe Harbour to the Mediterranean Sea. It is a large and well Peopl'd City, and is reckon'd 9 Miles in Compass round the Walls, and 18 if you include the Suburbs. It is divided into 29 Parts, call'd Ottine, and is pav'd throughout with large square Stones, Chequer-wise. The Streets are strait, and most of 'em broad. The Houses are high and uniform, and have flat Roofs, and are generally very beautiful. The Sea washes it on the South-side; on the North there are little Hills, that rise insensibly into Campania Felix; on the East, a Plain which leads to Mount Vesuvius; and on the West the upper Town. There are in this City many very fine Palaces, viz. that of the Viceroy, those of the Dukes of Matalone, Gravina, Airola and de la Tour, &c. The three Castles which defend the City, the Academy which they call Studii Nuovi, the Academy for riding the great Horse, the Convents, Arsenal and Magazines for the Gallies, are all very fine Buildings. There are also many Fountains, which are very convenient, and serve to adorn the City. But above all, the Number and Magnificence of Churches surpasses Imagination. Their Frontispices and Gates, the Chappels, Altars and Tombs, seem to be Pieces of the finest Architecture in the World. One that would see the rarest Pictures, Sculptures, and Vessels of Gold and Silver, must go to the Churches. The Roofs, Wainscots, Walls are all cover'd with pieces of precious Marble, most artificially laid together or with Compartiments of Bass Relievo, or Joiners Work, Gilded and Enrich'd with the Work of the most famous Painters. There is nothing to be seen, but Jasper, Porphyre, Mosaick of all Fashions, all Master-pieces. In a Cloyster belonging to the Carthusians, is to be seen the famous Crucifix of Michael Angelo, drawn, as they say, after the Life from a certain Peasant, whom that Painter Crucified for the purpose. The Picture is upon Wood, and is not above half a Foot high. Mr. Misson finds fault with Michael, for he says the Crucifix holds his Head exactly strait, which is not like a Man expiring on a Cross.

Altho' the greatest part of the Antiquities of this Place be buried in the Ruins, yet there are several to be seen still. The Front of St. Paul Major, one of the Theatine Churches, is the old Frontispice of the Temple of Apollo. The Columns of San. Restituta are said to have been taken from the Temple of Neptune. There are also some Remains of an Amphitheatre, and a Statue of the Nile, supported by a Crocodile: Also the Head and Neck of a large Brazen Horse, without a Bridle; which formerly stood in one of the Publick Places of Naples, as an Emblem of its Liberty, when it was a Common-wealth; but King Conrad caus'd a Bit to be put in the Mouth of it, to signify they had now lost it. In this City, as in most places in Italy, the Women are all hid. The Habits and Equipages of this City are of Black and Dark Colours. They are forbidden to wear Gold or Silver, or Silk upon Silk, and the Spanish Dreis is generally us'd. The greatest Lord can keep but two Staffieri, or Footmen, and their Coaches are for the most part drawn by Mules. The Trade of this City is much decay'd, and consists at present in Soap, Snuff, Stockings, Waistcoats of fine Naples Silk &c.

It will not be improper to subjoin to this short Description of Naples, a brief account of those Things that are most remarkable in the Neighbourhood of it. In the first place the famous Mount Vesuvius, to which the Ancients gave different Names, but all ending or sounding very like this. It is now call'd by the Italians Vesuvio, or Monte di Somma, and is distant about 8 Miles from the City of Naples. During the first 4 Miles along the Coast, there are many good Villages, and a very well manur'd Country, which seems to have receiv'd little or no Damage by Eruptions; but tho' one may travel on Horieback 2 Miles further, it must be thro' loose Stones, and Heaps of burnt Earth, which the Mountain hath vomited up; and the further one advances, he finds the Ground crack'd, dry, and cover'd with calcin'd Stones, and the Channels of Sulphur and Bitumen, which have run down the Mountain. To omit the less formidable and more recent Eruptions, since the Birth of Christ it is said to have had 12 dreadful ones, particularly that in December, 1631. when the Sea retir'd several times, and left the Ships dry on the Shoar, and the Floods of Fire ran in great Streams into the Sea, many Villages were turn'd topsy turvy, and above 30000 Persons, with an infinite number of Cattle perish'd; and the beautiful City of Naples was threatned with its last Calamity. But we must refer the Reader to be more fully and particularly inform'd, concerning the more ancient Eruptions before Augustus's time, and those that have happen'd since the middle of this Age, with the several Alterations they have made on the Mountain, to those Authors who have wrote fully and learnedly on the Subject, particularly Julius Caesar Recupitus, and Mr. Misson, the latter of which tells us, that the Country about it is very Rich, and that the East-side of the Mountain it self bears abundance of good Vines; and 'tis from hence we have the famous Greco, Malateste, and Lacrymæ Christi.

Between the Suburbs of Naples and Puzzoli, there's a little Hill call'd Paustypus, which has a most Charming Situation, and is all cover'd over with Houses of Pleasure, and abundance of excellent Vines, and is very well cultivated. The Ascent to it is not very difficult, and might have been easie, but out of an extravagant Humour, they have pierc'd the Mountain, and made a Hole, which is a shorter, but much more troublesome Passage. This Cave is call'd the Grotta of Puzzoli, and is in some places cut thro' the Rock, in other places thro' the Sand. It is almost a Mile long, between 30 and 40 Foot high, and about 18 broad. It has no Light but at the Ends, and thro' a little Hole in the middle, over an Oratory which is made in the Rock, by enlarging that part of the Way a little. This is an ancient Work, and Seneca makes mention of it. It is said to have been made by one Cocceius; but whether he was a Prince of that Country, or only the Undertaker, is no easie matter to tell.

A little beyond Paustypus is the Lake of Agnane, between two little Hills. It is round, and about a Mile in Circumference. On the Banks of it are two Caves, which deserve to be taken notice of, viz. the Caves call'd the Barb of St. German, and the Grotto del Cane. The former of which is said to be an excellent Remedy for the Gout, and several other Distempers; for you no sooner go down 3 or 4 Stairs, than you are seiz'd with a Heat, which smells of Brimstone, and puts one into a sudden Sweat. The other is as it were the beginning of a Cave, at the Foot of a Hill, and is 9 or 10 Foot long or deep, 10 Foot broad, and 5 high. There arises out of the Earth in this Grotto, a thin and piercing Exhalation, without any Smoak, which seizes on the Breath and choaks one in a Moment; but 2 Foot or less from the Earth there is no danger, because the Spirits or Steams, grow thin, and are dispers'd. The Experiment has been try'd on Dogs, and other Animals, and sometimes on Malefactors; who in an instant lost their Breath, and seem'd to be quite dead, and would really have been so, if they had not immediately been put into the Lake, (which is not above 20 Pace from this Grotto) where in a Minute they resume their Spirits, and come to themselves again; which Effect the open and free Air has often produc'd.

Puzgoli, Putcoli, anciently a great and famous City, which Pliny says was formerly call'd Dicearchia, and De's Minor, according to Festus, because there was a Temple there Dedicated to Apollo, after the manner of that at Delos. It was Built by the Samii, (according to Stephanus) and is said to owe its Name to the word Putor, Stink or Rankness, because of the Sulphurous Exhalations that arise from it. It was anciently (according to Strabo) a Haven belonging to the Cumani, and that which is now call'd the Gulf of Naples, was then call'd Sinus Cumanus. It was the most famous Port on all that Coast, for the Corn and Goods brought thither from Egypt: And here were the Houses of Pleasure, and delightful Retreats of the Roman Emperors; but now it is a very inconsiderable Place, about 8 Miles from Naples to the West, and 3 from Baia. Wars, Earthquakes, Insults of the Sea, and Time, that brings all things to Destruction, having almost reduc'd it to nothing. The great quantity and variety of stately Ruins that are to be found among it, do evidently demonstrate its former Magnificence. There are the Ruins of an Amphitheatre, the Arena of which was 172 Foot long, and 88 broad; near to which there are other Ruins, almost quite buried, which they say was anciently a Labyrinth, but it looks like those of a Fish-pond. The Cathedral is built on the Ruins of a Temple of Jupiter. Betwixt the City and the Amphitheatre, are to be seen the Ruins of a Temple of Diana; and when the Sea is turbulent, it throws out several Marks of the Magnificence and Richness of the ancient Palaces of this place, among which are oftentimes Cornelian Stones, Agats, Jasper, Amethysts, &c. and between this and the Lake Lucrin, are to be seen the Remains, as they call 'em, of the famous Bridge, which Caligula built between Baia and Puzgoli; tho' there is better Reasons for believing that Caligula's Bridge was of Boats, and not of Stone or Bricks.

The Lake of Lucrin is about 2 Miles from Puzgoli, and is now but a little Pond (as Mr. Misson says) a Quarter of a Mile long, 100 Paces broad, and about 70 from the Sea, to which it was formerly join'd, but separated from it by Art. The Waters of it are salt, and the Oysters found in it were anciently reckon'd the best. The new Mountain, call'd Monte Nuovo, hath almost fill'd it up. This Mountain was brought forth in the Night, between the 19th and 20 of September, 1538. Its perpendicular Height is about 400 Fathoms, and its Circuit about 3000 Paces. On the other side of the Lucrin Lake stands another Mountain, call'd Monte di Christo, and about a large Mile from it is the Lake of Averno, that other Gulf of Hell, which is as big almost as that of Agnino. Whatever Virgil, Lucretius, Si- lius Italicus, Pliny, and others have written concerning the deadly Vapours that ascended from it, and choak'd those poor Creatures, whose hard Fate it was to fly over it, it is certain (says Mr. Misson) that now Birds fly over it, and swim in it, without any harm.

Near to this is the Cave which they call the Grotto of Sybill, the principal Entry to which, they say, was near Cuma, but is now fill'd up. It has been about a League long, 10 Foot broad, and 12 high, and does not at all seem to be the Lodging of Sybill, it being too large for her either to have Made or Liv'd in. The Italian Cimerians, who liv'd between Baia, and the Lake Averno, were notorious Robbers and Murderers, seem rather to have been both the Work-men and Inhabitants of it. See Mr. Misson's Discourse concerning it.

Capua. Capua, anciently a famous City in Campania Felix, standing in a Plain, near the River Volturnus, and built by the Ofci, according to Hannibal. It revolted to Hannibal in the second Punic War, which so enrag'd the Romans against it, that they laid Siege to it, and having taken it, put 80 of their Senate to Death, made 300 of their greatest Men of their City Prisoners, and sold a vast number of the Inhabitants. It was raz'd by Genfericus, King of the Vandals, rebuilt by Narses, and afterwards destroy'd by the Longobards. From its Ruins there arose another Capua, upon a neighbouring Hill call'd Pisfiscus; but it being often almost quite destroy'd by Fire, Count Lando, and Landulphus the Bishop, remov'd it to the Place where New Capua now stands, about the Year 856. It is situated in a most fertile Plain, on the River Volturno, 2 Miles from the Ruins of the ancient City of Capua, 16 from Naples to the North, as many from Sessa to the South-East, and 12 from the Tuscan Shoar. Pope John XIII. made it an Arch-Bishoprick, in the Year 968. Conrad, Son of the Emperor Frederick II. did almost quite ruin it; which, with several other Calamities it hath since suffer'd, have put it into a decaying Condition, insomuch that at present (as Mr. Misson relates) it is a very small and inconsiderable City in all respects.

Sorrento, Surrentum, mention'd by Pliny, Strabo and Livy, as a Town in Campania, stands on the Shoar of the Gulf of Naples, in a pleasant Plain, on the Confines of the hither Principality, 24 Miles from Naples to the South, and 6 from il Capo Campanello, or Promontorium Minervæ. It is thought by some to owe its Name to the Sirenes, who had their Residence near this Place. The Surrentini Colles, (now la Montagna Sorrento) were famous for the excellent Wine that grew upon them.

Nola. Nola, anciently the Name of a Town and Colony in Campania, stands about 14 Miles from Naples to the East, and somewhat nearer to Sarno and Acerra. It is pretty well inhabited, and is an Episcopal See, under the Arch-Bishop of Naples. Augustus Caesar Died in or near this Place, and St. Paulinus its famous Bishop was Born in it.

Aversa, or Adversa. Aversa is a little City, situated in a delightful Plain, in the midst between Capua to the North, and Naples to the South. It is said to have been built from the Ruins of Atella, or St. Arpino, by Robert Guiscard Duke of Normandy. It was destroy'd by Charles I. King of both Sicilies, and afterwards rebuilt. The Bishoprick of Atella was translated hither by Pope Leo IX. and tho' the Bishop lives within the See of Naples, he is not under that Arch-Bishop's Jurisdiction.

Gaeta,

Gasta, Caieta, anciently a City belonging to the Aurunci in Latium Novum, according to Ptolemy, is situated on a Rock, on the Tyrrhenian Shoar, about 40 Miles from Naples to the N. W. 155 from Rome, and 15 from the Confines of the Pope's Dominions to the East. Between this Town and Formia, (now M. Formia, called the Villa Ciceronis, call'd also Formia, where Cicero was Murder'd by an Order from Antony, by Herennius a Centurion, and Papilius a Tribune, (for whom he had once Pleaded when he was Try'd for Murder,) in the 64th Year of his Age. Here are to be seen the Tomb of Charles of Bourbon, Countable of France, who was Kill'd at the Sacking of Rome, and an ancient Mausoleum of Minutius Plancus, now call'd the Tower of Orlando, or della Guardia. The Cathedral Church, (the Steeple of which they say, was built by the Emperor Frederick Barbarossa by way of Penance for his Sins) is very well worth the seeing. There is a Pillar in it which they pretend belongs to Solomon's Temple, and an ancient Vessel in form of a Bell, made of white Marble, which serves for a Font in the Baptistry of the Church; and is a curious piece of Work. This Place is defended by a Garrison of Spaniards and is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Capua, but not subject to his Jurisdiction.

Aquino Aquinum, anciently the name of a Town and Colony, on the Confines of Campania, stands on the Rivulet Melita, not far from the Liris or Garigliano, and about 5 Miles from the Borders of the Pope's Dominions, and 45 from Naples. It was Sack'd by the Emperor Conrad, and is at present a place of no great Note, but an Episcopal See, and the Birth-place of Thomas Aquinas, that famous Schoolman.

Sora, Sora stands on the Liris or Garigliano about 16 Miles from Aquino to the North, 25 from Gasta to the North, and 55 from Rome to the East. It is an Episcopal See, Suffragan to none; and the Title of Duchy impropriated to the Family of Boncompagni, and the Birth-place of the Learned Cardinal Cesar Baronius.

Caserta, Casinum, anciently a City of the Volturni, in Latium Novum, on the Confines of Campania, but now lying in its Rubbish; from which hath arisen the Town of St. Germano, distant about 25 Miles from Naples to the N. W. towards Aquila, 5 from the River Garigliano, 6 from Aquino to the North-East, and 12 from the Confines of the Pope's Dominions. Near to this place is the Hill call'd Monte Caserta, upon which stands the fair Monastery of the Benedictines, where their Founder liv'd many Years, and where he also Died.

Teano, Teanum is a little Town situated upon a rising Ground near the River Volturno, 26 Miles from Gasta to the North-East, and 22 from Capua to the North. It is Honour'd with the Title of a Principality, which one of the Family of Sabellii in Rome enjoy, and is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Capua.

Teano, Teanum Sidicinum, is a small Town situated on a Hill, in the midst between Sessa to the West, and Calvi to the South-East. 6 Miles from either, 12 from Capua and 20 from Caserta. It is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Capua.

The Farther PRINCIPALITY Principatus Ugentini, anciently Inhabited by the Hirpini, lies towards the Appennine Mountains, between the Capitanata to the North and East, Campania Felix to the West, and the higher Principality to the South. The most considerable Towns in it are

Benevento ,	} St. Agatha { Monte Morone , Trevi { Monte Verole , Bisaccia { Nusco , la Cedogna }
Conza ,
Avellino ,
Ariano .

Benevento, Beneventum, anciently a City and Colony of the Samnites. Bordering upon the Hirpini, Pliny says, it was formerly call'd Maleventum, and Ptolemy calls it Venebentus. It is said to have been built by Diomedes, and is distant 28 Miles from Capua to the East; as many from Salerno to the North, and 32 from Naples to the North East. It stands at the Conflux of the Rivers Sabato and Calore, and call'd by Frontinus Concordia Colonia. It was given to Pope Leo IX. by the Emperor Henry III. in the Year 1053. for Bamberg, a Town in Germany, and is an Archiepiscopal See. Near to this place Manfred, King of both the Sicilies, was Deceated and Kill'd by King Charles of Anjou, Ann. 1266. It gives name to the adjacent Country call'd by the Italians, il Territorio di Benevento: But the Duchy of Benevento was of much larger extent, comprehending all Apulia, Sannium, Campania, and a small part of the Country of the Bruttii. It was Erected by Autharis King of the Lombards, and lasted till about the Year 850. Consult Camillus Peregrinus of Capua's Dissertation on this Subject.

Conza, Compsa or Consa, stands on a rising Ground at the Foot of the Appennines, near the Springs of the River Aufidus, or Ofanto, on the Confines of the Capitanata, and the higher Principality. 50 Miles from Naples, 25 from Salerno, and 30 from Benevento to the South-East. Baudrand says, there are not above 70 Families, and 120 Souls in it; so small a Town is it at present, and yet an Archbishoprick.

Avellino, Abellinum, anciently a Town belonging to the Hirpini, stands about a Mile from the River Salato, in the midst between Benevento to the North, and Salerno to the South, 16 Miles from either, and 40 from Naples to the East, and 4 from Monte Vergerne. It is Honour'd with the Title of a Principality, Enjoy'd by the Family of Caraccioli, and is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Benevento, but united to that of Frigenti.

Ariano, Arianum, stands on a steep Hill, at the Foot of the Appennines, 12 Miles from Benevento to the East, and 30 from Salerno to the North-East. It is a pretty near Town, subject to the Duke of Bovino, who is Count of this place, and an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Benevento. There is another Town of this name in the Duchy of Ferrara, near the Confines of the Venetian Dominions.

Sant, Agatha di Goti, Agathopolis, or Fanum S. Agathae Gothorum, stands near the Confines of the Terra di Lavoro, in the midst between Benevento to the East, and Capua to the West, 14 Miles from either, and is an Episcopal See, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Benevento.

La Cedogna, Laquadenia, or Aquilonia, anciently a Town of the Hirpini, in Sannium, according to Livy and Pliny, but destroyed a long time since, Cluverius thinks this ancient name belongs rather to Carbonara, a little Town in this Principality, near the River Aufidus or Ofanto, in Capitanata, between the ancient Alcidonia to the West, and Monte Verde to the East, and as many from Benevento; but the former Opinion seems more probable. It is an Episcopal See under the Archbishop of Conza.

Monte Marano, Mons Maranus, is a very small Town on the Banks of the River Calore, about 10 Miles from Avellino to the East, and 6 from Nusco.

It is an Episcopal See, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Benevento.

Monte Verde, Mons Viridii, a small Town, on the Banks of the Aufidus, or Ofanto, on the Frontiers of the Capitanata, and Basilicata, between Melfi and Cedogna, 13 Miles from Conza to the East, and 23 from Acerenza to the North-West, and is an Episcopal See, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Conza.

Nusco Nuscum, is a very little Town, at the Foot of the Appennines, between Monte Marano and St. Angelo, 18 Miles from Benevento to the South-East, and 25 from Salerno to the North-East.

The hither PRINCIPALITY, Principatus Lucania, comprehends that part of Italy which the Picentini anciently Inhabited, and the West part of Lucania; and is bounded on the North with the former Principality, and part of Campania Felix on the West with the Tyrrhenian Sea, and on the South and East with the Province of Basilicata. It reaches from North-West to South East, for the space of 70 Miles; and the most considerable Towns in it are,

Salerno.	}	{	Campagna.	}	{	Nocera.
Amalfi.			Scala.			Minori.
Acerno.			Policastro.			Capaccia.
Sarno.			Marisco Nuovo.			Caggiana.

Salerno, Salernum, anciently a Town and Colony of the Picentini, stands on a Bay of the same name, near the Coast of the Tyrrhenian Sea, 24 Miles from Naples to the South-East, as many from Capo Capua, and 30 from Benevento to the South. It is the chief City of the Province, and was formerly the Title of the eldest Sons of the Kings of Naples. It is an Archiepiscopal See, and has a very good Harbour and strong Castle, and is pretty well Inhabited. On a Hill hard by it, there are to be seen several Vestiges of a Town, which has made some People think that Salernum stood formerly there. The University of this place has been famous for the study of Physick.

Amalfi, Amalfis, anciently a Town belonging to the Picentini, now a little and Ill-Inhabited one, on the Bay of Salerno, (the West part of which is call'd la Costa d'Almafi) 11 Miles from Salerno to the South-West, and 24 from Naples to the South-East. It is an Archiepiscopal See, and Honour'd with the Title of a Duchy. The use of the Seaman's Compass is said to have been first found out here, by one Flavius Blondus, or Gicia, about the Year 1300, where they lay the Body of St. Andrew the Apostle.

Acerno, Acernum, anciently a Town belonging to the Picentini, is now a very small one, (tho' a Bishop's Seat, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Salerno) standing at the Foot of the Hills, about 15 Miles to the North-East of Salerno.

Sarno, Sarnum, stands partly on a Hill, and partly on a Plain, about 13 Miles from Salerno to the North, 5 from Nola, and 5 from Nocera, and the Source of the River of the same name. It is an Episcopal See, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Salerno, and belongs to the Family of Barberini.

Campagna, Campania, stands near the Rivers Atro and Tenza, 16 Miles from Salerno to the East, and 11 from the Sea-Coast. It is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Conza, and formerly belong'd to the Prince of Monacho.

Scala, Scala, anciently call'd Cama, stands about 2 Miles from Amalfi to the East, and as many from the Bay of Salerno. It seems by the Ruins and Vestiges that are still to be seen, that it was formerly a great Town, but at present it is a very inconsiderable one, not containing above 150 Houses. It is an Episcopal See, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Amalfi.

Policastro, Policastrum, or Paleocastrum, is a small Town, almost deserted, and no better than a Village, on the Coast of the Tuscan Sea, 8 Miles from the Confines of the Province of Basilicata, 17 from Promontory of Polinuro to the East, and 55 from Salerno to the South-East. It is an Episcopal See, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Salerno.

Marisco Nuovo, Mariscum, is so call'd to distinguish it from Marisco Vecchio, in the Province of Basilicata; and is a pretty little Town standing on a rising Ground, at the Foot of the Appennines, near the Source of the River Agri, on the Contines of the Basilicata; 6 Miles from Marisco Vecchio to the North-West, 55 from Salerno, and 10 from the Gulf of Policastro to the North; and is an Episcopal See, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Salerno.

Nocera, Nuceria, anciently a Town of Campania Felix, by Livy call'd Alphaterna, and mention'd by Silius in his 8th Book, stands between Sarno and Cava, 10 Miles from Amalphi to the North, 8 from Salerno to the North-West, and 22 from Naples. It is an Episcopal See under the Archbishop of Salerno, and Honour'd with the Title of a Duchy, enjoy'd by the Family of Barberini. There is another Town of this name in Ombria, within the Pope's Dominions.

Capaccio, Caput-aqueum, a Town of no great Note, which sprung from the Ruins of the ancient Pastum, or Pesti; which was Raz'd by the Saracens, Anno. 930. and stood 3 Miles from Capaccio, which formerly stood on a Neighbouring Hill, and was defended by a strong Castle, before it was destroy'd by the Emperor Frederick, Ann. 1249. but was afterwards built on a Plain at the Foot of the same Hill, and lies now in Ruins, about 22 Miles from Salerno to the South, and retains the Title of a Bishoprick under the Archbishop of Salerno.

The Province of BASILICATA, which formerly comprehended the greater and better part of Lucania, is bounded on the North with the Province of Bari, and a part of Otranto; on the East with the Bay of Taranto; on the West with the 2 Principalities, and on the South, with the hither Calabria: and is a Barren Country, and no ways improv'd or well Inhabited. The Towns of any note in it are,

Acerenza.	}	{	Melfi.
Potenza.			Rapolla.
Tricarico.			Venosa.
Lavello.

Acerenza, or Cirenza, Acherontia, or Acherontus, is the chief Town of Basilicata, and stands at the Foot of the Appennines, 10 Miles from Venosa to the South-East, and 28 from Matera. It is a little Town, and in a decaying condition, but has the Title of an Archbishoprick, to which the See of Venosa is united.

Potenza, Potentia, stands at the Foot of the Appennines, about 15 Miles from Acerenza to the South-West, and as many from Marisco Nuovo to the South: and is an Episcopal See under the Archbishop of Acerenza.

Lavello, Lavellum, or Labellum, is a little Town on the Confines of the Capitanata, about 3 Miles from the River Aufidus, or Ofanto, between Melfi to the West, and Minervino to the East, and 20 from Acerenza to the North-West. It is Subject to the Prince of Minervino, and an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Bari; and there are several pieces of Antiquity to be seen about it.

Melfi, Melfis, stands upon an uneven Height, on the Rivulet Melfa, on the Confines of the Capitana, and the farther Principality; 4 Miles from the River Otento, 65 from Naples to the East, and 40 from Policastro. It is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Acerenza, and has been united with the See of Rapolla, since the Year 1528. It is a pretty large and well-Inhabited Town, and is honoured with the Title of a Principality, enjoy'd by the Family of Doria.

Rapolla, Rapolla, is a little Town, almost desolate, about a Mile from Melfi to the East, 20 from Conza to the East, and 50 from Policastro to the North. It is an Episcopal See, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Siponto; but was united to the See of Melfi, by Pope Clement VII. in the Year 1528.

CALABRIA, which was otherwise call'd Mesapia, was quite different from the Country that bears that name now. It was bounded on the North and East with the Adriatick Sea, on the South with the Salemitina, and on the West with Apulia Peucetia. The Country that bears that name now, lies towards the South, overagainst Sicily, and is that part of Magna Græcia which the Bruttii anciently Possess'd. It hath the Title of a Duchy, which formerly the Eldest Son of the King of Naples used to have: And is Bounded with the Province of Basilicata on the North, with the Ionian Sea on the East, the Tyrrhenian Sea on the West, and on the South with that of Sicily; and sometime comprehended the Country of Basilicata. Also Calabria strictly taken, is divided into the hither and further Calabria. The former of which lies most Northerly, and comprehends these Towns, viz.

Cosenza .	}	Amantea .
Rossano .		Martorano .
Cassano .		Cariati .
Bisignano .		Umbriatico .
Strongoli .		Cirifano .

Cosenza, Consentina, anciently a City belonging to the Bruttii, according to Pliny, Strabo, and others, stands on a Plain near the River Grati, where the Vasento falls into it, about 12 Miles from the Shoar of the Tuscan Sea to the East, 40 from the Ionian Sea, 60 from Policastro, and 150 from Naples to the South-East. It is the chief Town of the hither Calabria, and an Archbishoprick. Isabel of Aragon, Philip the Hardy's Queen, died here, in the Year, 1270. As did also Alaricus, King of the Visigoths.

Rossano, Roscianum, or Ruscianum, is a pretty large and well-Inhabited Town, built on a Hill, surrounded almost with high Rocks, about 3 Miles from the Gulf of Tarento, 16 from that of Bisignano, 35 from Cosenza to the North-East, and 12 from the Ruins of the ancient Tburium. It has the Title of a Principality, and is an Archiepiscopal See.

Cassano, Cassanum, or Cosanum, is a little Town, near the River Bano, about 10 Miles from the Apennine Mountains, as many from the Gulph of Tarento, and 20 from Rossano to the North. It is an Episcopal See, under the Arch-Bishop of Cosenza.

Bisignano, Besidia, or Desidia, anciently a Town belonging to the Bruttii, stands on a Hill, and is defended by a Castle, distant 15 Miles from Rossano to the West, as many from the Coast of the Tuscan Sea, and 36 from Cosenza to the North. It has the Title of a Principality, belonging to the Family of San Severino, and is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Rossano, but exempted from his Jurisdiction.

Amantea, Amantia, or Adamantia, anciently a City of the Bruttii, stands on the Coast of the Tuscan Sea, near the Golpho di S. Euphemia, and 15 Miles from Cosenza to the South-west. It belongs to the Prince of Bisignano, and was once a Bishoprick under the Archbishop of Regio,

The Farther CALABRIA, Calabria ulterior, makes up the South-part of the Duchy, and is wash'd by the Sea on the East, South and West. There are few Towns of any Note in it; but the most considerable are these,

Regio .	}	Taverno .	}	Melito .
S. Severina .		Nicastro .		Oppido .
Cotrone .		Monte .		Booa .
Isola .		Leone .		Givra .
Belcastro .		Seminara .
Nicotera .		Squillaci .

Rhegio, Rhegio Julium, anciently a City belonging to the Bruttii, stands overagainst Sicily, on the opposite Coast of the Pharo of Messina, 28 Miles from the Zephyrium Promontorium, now Tarfu, and about 90 from Cosenza to the South. It is said to have been built by the Chalcidenses, and is at present pretty well Inhabited, considering how oft it has been Pillag'd by the Turks.

San Severina, Siberena, a small, but well-built City, and the See of an Archbishop, stands on the Confines of the hither Calabria, near the Coast of the Ionian Sea, 40 Miles South-East from Rossano, and as many East from Cosenza.

Cotrone, Cotron, anciently a Town in Magna Græcia, belonging to the Bruttii, and more lately call'd Crotona, stands on the Mouth of the Esaro, on the Coast of the Ionian Sea, about 6 Miles from the Promontory, call'd Capo della Colonne, to the North, and 50 from Cosenza to the East. It is said to have been Built by Miscellus. 80 Years after the Building of Rome, and was anciently a great City, 12 Miles in compass (as Baudrand from Livy relates) the River running through the middle of it. The best Wrestlers and Boxers used to be brought from this Place, among whom Milo call'd from hence Crotoniates, who was very Famous. The Emperor Charles V. Built a Fort, and put a good Garrison in it, for a Guard to that Coast; but this place is now dwindled into a little Town, and but indifferently Inhabited, and nothing like what it was formerly.

Nicotera Nicotera is a little Town, which sprung from the Ruins of Medama or Rossano, about 10 Miles from the Mouth of the River Marro to the North, and as many from Tropea. It stands on a Hill, and was almost reduc'd to Rubbish by an Earthquake, in the Year 1638. but still retains the Title of a Bishoprick, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Regio.

Taverno, Taberna, stands at the Foot of the Apennines, near the Ruins of the Trischene, from which it took its rise, about 8 Miles from Catanzaro to the North, 15 from Squillaci, 37 from Rossano, and 14 from Nicastro to the East. It was formerly an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Regio, but in the Year 1122, Pope Calistus the II^d. remov'd it to Catanzaro.

Squillaci, Scyllacum, anciently a Town and Colony in Magna Græcia, according to Mela and Solinus, stands on a Hill, near the Rivulet Favelone, about 3 Miles from the Coast of the Ionian Sea, 18 from that of the Tyrrhenian, 75 from Regio to the North, 45 from Palepoli, or the Ruins of the ancient Locri, and 36 from Cosenza. It is at present a little ill Inhabited.

bited town, consisting of about 300 Houses, but is Honour'd with the Title of a Principality, and is an Episcopal See under the Archbishop of Regio.

Bova. Bova, anciently a Town belonging to the Buthi, stands on a very high Hill, surrounded with Rocks, about 5 Miles from the Shoar, 7 from the Cap di Spartivento, anciently call'd Herculis Promontorium to the West, and 22 from Regio. It is an Episcopal See under the Archbishop of Regio.

Having now pass'd Naples from West to East on the South side, we shall return back to view the Provinces on the Adriatick Coast, beginning in the West, as before.

ABRUZZO. Aprutium, taken in a large Sense, comprehends the County of Molise also, and was formerly Inhabited by the Frentani, Marrucini, Marsi, Peligni, Vestini, and a great part of the Samnites; but taken strictly it contains only the farther and hither Abruzzo.

The farther ABRUZZO, Aprutium ulterius, where the Marsi Vestini, and part of the Picentini anciently dwelt, is bounded on the North and West with the Pope's Dominions; on the South with the Campagna di Roma, and Terra di Lavarò, on the East with the Adriatick Sea, and the hither Abruzzo, and is almost divided in two by the Appennines. The Towns in it of greatest note are,

Andria.			Graviano.			Trani.
Bitonto.			Melfetto.			Biseglia.
Monopoli.			Polignano.			Canosa.

Bari, Barium, Baris Vetus, stands on the Adriatick Sea, in the midst between Polignano to the East, and Trani to the West, 20 Miles from either, 35 from Manfredonia, and 120 from Naples to the East, and (according to Festus) has its name from Bare, a little Island near Brindisi. It has the Title of an Archbishoprick.

Andria, Andria, is a pretty large and well-inhabited Town, Situated in a Plain, 4 Miles from Bari, 6 from Trani, and 25 from Bari to the West. It is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Trani, but a very little one, for it reaches no farther than the Town.

Monopoli, Monopolis, is a little but finely Built Town, 20 Miles from Bari to the East, 25 from Taranto to the North, and 40 from Brindisi to the North-West. It stands on the Gulf of Venice, and is an Episcopal See under the Archbishop of Bari, but has little or nothing under its Jurisdiction without the Town.

Trani, Tranium, stands on the Coast of the Adriatick, in a fruitful Country, about 6 Miles from Andria, and 24 from Bari to the West. The Inhabitants pretend that it was anciently call'd Trajanum, from the Emperor Trajan, who they say, Built it. It is an Archiepiscopal See, and once had a very good Harbour, but now 'tis fill'd up with Stones.

The Province of OTRANTO, Hydruntina Provincia, where anciently the Salentini and Calabri dwelt, is almost in form of a Peninsula, and is Bounded with the Adriatick Sea on the East, and partly on the North, the Gulf of Taranto on the South, the Province of Bari on the North, and Basilicata on the West. The most considerable Towns in it are,

Otranto.	}	{	Castellaneta.	}	{	Matera.
Brindisi.			Gallipoli.			Nardo.
Lecce.			Ostuni.			Taranto.

Otranto, Hydruntum, anciently a City Inhabited by the Calabri, stands on the Adriatick Sea, and is a Place of Strength with a Castle, which Mahomet II. Emperor of the Turks, Took and Pillag'd in the Year 1230. but was retaken by the Christians, and is possess'd by the Spaniards. It was formerly the chief City of this Province, but is in a decaying state. It stands on the Sea-shore, on the extreme South part of Italy, 40 Miles from Brindisi to the South, 20 from Lecce, 24 from Gallipoli to the East, about 20 Leagues from the nearest part of the Coast of Epirus, and 19 from Capo d' S. Maria di Leuca to the North, and has the Title of an Archbishoprick.

Brindisi, Brindisium, anciently a City of the Salentini, call'd otherwise Brendisium, by Ptolomy, and Brentesium by Stephanus, is a Town with a large and safe Harbour, on the Adriatick Sea, 36 Miles from Taranto to the East, 40 from Otranto to the North, and 64 from Bari to the East. It is said to have been Built by the Æoli, Diomedes's Companions; and here Cæsar Octavius, and M. Antonius lay Encamp'd, the latter being nearer the Town, because he had invested it: and Servilius designing to go over from hence to Cæsar, with a Body of 7000 Horse, was surpris'd by Antonius with a handful, and routed near (Uria) before they were quite awake. Cæsar in the 1st Book of his Commentaries, gives a description of the Harbour of this Place.

Lecce, Aletium, and Litium by latter Writers, anciently a Town belonging to the Salentini, is a large and well inhabited City, and one of the most Populous in all the Kingdom of Naples, the City of that name name only excepted. It stands between Brindisi to the North, and Otranto to the South, at the distance of 20 Miles from either, 7 from the Adriatick Sea to the West, 15 from Nardo, 50 from Taranto. It is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Otranto.

Callipoli, Gallipolis, or Callipolis, anciently belonging to the Salentini, stands on a Rock in the Gulf of Taranto, and tho' it be little, is a very strong and well inhabited Place; being surrounded by the Sea, except at one Place where it is joyn'd to the Land by a Bridge, which is defended by a strong Fort; which with its Situation makes it almost impregnable. It is distant 25 Miles from Otranto to the West, 35 from Taranto to the South-East, and 24 from the Promontory call'd Capo di S. Marcadi di Luca, and is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Otranto, but the Bounds of the Diocess, are the same with those of the City.

Taranto, Tarentum, anciently a City of the Salentini, call'd Taras by Strabo, and Oebalia by Virgil. It was Built by the Lacedemonians, and was once the Head of a Republick, which made War against the Romans, in the Year of their City, 472. After Pyrrhus, whom the Tarentines had invok'd over to their Assistance, was defeated, the Romans became Masters of it. In the Punick War, Hannibal Took it, but it was Retaken by Q. Fabius Maximus, who brought away their famous Coleffus of Hercules, made of Brass, and the Workmanship of Lysippus and set it up in the Capitol at Rome. In the Year of the City, 631. Tarentum was (according to Velleius) made a Roman Colony. It is now a little Town, but well Inhabited, and defended by a Fort. in which there are a strong Garrison of Spaniards. It is Situated in a Peninsula, in the bottom of the Gulf of Taranto, near the Mouth of the River Tara, 32 Miles from Brindisi to the West, 20 from the Ruins of Metapontus, 90 from Promentorium Japygium, now il Capo di S. Maria di Leuca to the West, and 35 from Matera to the East. It has the Title of an Archbishoprick, and had once a very large Harbour, but it is now so stopp'd up with great Stones, and spoil'd, that none but very small Vessels can come into it.

The Islands on the Coast of I T A L Y.

THESE Islands, since they belong to some State or another in the Continent of Italy, cannot be more properly plac'd than after the description of that Country. We shall Treat of them according to their Dignity, and in their particular descriptions inform the Reader, in whose Possession they are at present. The number and order of them are to be seen in this short Table.

Sicily .	}	{	The Isles of Lapari .	}	{	Capri .
Sardinia .			The Isles about Sardinia .			Ischia .
Corsica .			The Isle of Elbe , &c.			Ponza .

The Island of SICILY.

SICILY, is the Largest and most Fertile Island in the Mediterranean Sea; and if we will believe the ancient accounts of it, once a part of the Continent of Italy. We shall not trouble the Reader with a tedious Enquiry into the Etymology of its Name, only putting him in mind that it was call'd Sicilia from the Siculi, a People in Italy, and Sicania, from a King call'd Sicanus, who before the time of the Troian War, Landed there with a great Body of Iberians or Spaniards, and call'd both the Island and People after his own Name. It has also been call'd Tri-naria and Triquetra, from its Triangular Form. It lies between 35 Deg. 40 Min. and 38 Deg. 30 Min. Latitude, and 35 and 39 Longitude. Its greatest Length (according to Cluverius) between Pelorum, or the Capo di Faro, and Lilybaeum, or the Capo Boco, is 200 Miles; its Breadth from Pachinum, or il Capo Pessaro to the Town Cephalidis, or Cefalus, 180. and its Circuit 600.

The Air of Sicily is very good, and Healthful, and the Soil so Fertile, that this Island hath been deservedly call'd, the Store-house of Italy; for it abounds in Corn, Wine, Fruits, Sugar, Honey, Wax, Oyl, Saffron, and Silk. It affords also some Mines of Gold, Silver, Iron and other Metals; Salt Agates, Emeralds, Jasper, Porphyry, &c. and on the Coasts towards Trapano, the Inhabitants find a good deal of excellent Coral.

The first Inhabitants of this Island (according to Cluverius) were the Cyclopes and Leſſigrones, Barbarous and Savage People. After these came the Iberi from Spain, under the Conduct of Sicanus, as we said before. Next came the Siculi from Sicily in Italy. After these came the Phenices from Tyre and Sidon, and Possess'd themselves on the Coast of this Island; but the Grecians drove these away, and introduc'd their own Language.

The Form of Government that was first used here was Monarchical; which continued till the Cartbaginians had made themselves Masters of the greatest part of the Island. But the Romans having Defeated these, became Masters of it, and reduc'd it into the Form of a Province, which was the first they ever made. In the time of the Emperor Justinian, the Vandals from Africk, took Possession of it; but Belisarius, General of that Emperor's Forces, having driven them out, the Saracens afterwards Invaded it. At last Tancred the Norman Expell'd them, and his Grandchild Roger was declar'd King of Apulia and Sicily. Afterwards the Sucvi from Germany became Masters of Sicily; but were Expell'd by the French; who being all cut off, at the famous Sicilian Vespers, the Island fell first into the hands of the Kings of Aragon, and at last into those of the Kings of Castile.

This Island is govern'd by a Viceroy, sent from the King of Spain, and the yearly Revenue Paid to His Catholick Majesty, is said to be about Four Millions of Crowns; the Inhabitants (as Puffendorf observes) are an ill sort of People, who must be kept under, according to the old Proverb, Insulani quidem mali, Siculi autem pessimi.

Sicily has been variously divided at different times, but is now commonly divided into 3 Parts or Provinces call'd Valleys, as you may see in the following Table.

Palermo, Panormum, or Panormus, is a large and well built City, on the North Coast of the Island, distant about 60 Miles from the Promontory, anciently call'd Lilybæum Promontorium, now il Capo Bæo to the North-East, 4 from Mont Real, 140 from Messina to the West, and 150 from the Promontory, now call'd Capo di Faro, anciently Pelorum Promontorium. It was built by the Phanicians, about the time of the Grecians coming into Sicily, and made the Metropolis of the Island, in the time of Roger, Count or Earl of Sicily; and is now the ordinary Residence of the Spanish Viceroy. It has a large and safe Harbour, and is defended by a strong Castle, call'd Castel a Mare, with a Garrison of Spaniards. It is an Archiepiscopal See, and near it the Spaniards and Dutch were soundly beat by the French, in the Year 1676.

Montreal. Mons Regalis, is a little Town standing on a Hill, about 4 Miles from Palermo, where William II. King of Sicily, built a magnificent Church, and endow'd it with large Revenues, and procured to it the Title of an Archbishoprick, from Pope Lucius III. in the Year 1182.

Mazara or Mazera. Mazara stands on the South-side of the Island, at the Mouth of a River of the same Name, with a large, safe and well defended Harbour, in the midst almost between Termini to the East, and the Capo Bæo to the West, 24 Miles from Trepani to the South-East, and 55 from Gergenti to the West. It was formerly the Residence of the Saracen Princes, and is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Palermo.

Gergenti, Agrigentum, call'd Agragas by the Grecians, was anciently the greatest and richest City in all this Island; and no less Famous for its Hospitality to Strangers, than 'twas Infamous for its Luxury. It was built by the Geiens, near the River Agragas, now call'd (according to Baudrand) il Fiume di S. Biagio, or Gergenti. It stands about 3 Miles from the Sea, 55 from Palermo to the South, 64 from the Capo Bæo to the East, and 72 from the Capo Pessaro, or Pachynum. It was anciently 10 Miles in Compass, but is now much decay'd. On the North-side it is defended by a strong Fort, and there is but one Passage into it. It was formerly remarkable for the Cruelty of the bloody Phalaris, who us'd to torment People in his Brazen Bull, which Perillus made; and had the first Experiment of it try'd upon himself. It is an Episcopal See under the Archbishop of Palermo.

Marsalla, Marsala, stands on the West-side of the Island, on the Promontory, call'd il Capo Bæo, and has risen from the Ruins of the Town of Lilybæum.

It was so call'd by the Saracens, and had once an excellent Harbour, before Charles V. caus'd the Mouth of it to be stop'd up with great Stones, lest the Africans should make use of it.

Trapano, Drepanum, anciently a famous Mart-Town, with an excellent Harbour, on the West-side of the Island, about 15 Miles from Lilybæum Promontorium to the North, 22 from Mazara, and 55 from Palermo to the South-West, near the Foot of the Mountain Eryx, now il Monte di Trapano, where there was a Temple of Venus, and Anchises's Burial-place. It was well fortified by Hamilcar, Hanibal's Father, who kept it a considerable time, and made it the Seat of War against the Romans, till by an Order from Carthage, he made a Peace with Lutatus.

Messina, Messana, Mesene or Messane, anciently call'd Zanche, is a large and fine City, and the greatest Mart-Town in all the Mediterranean Sea, having a very large and safe Harbour, about 6 Miles from the Coast of the farther Calabria to the West. 12 from Regio, about 140 from Palermo, 12 from the Capo di Faro to the South, and 60 from Catania. The private Houses in it are very fine, and the public Buildings magnificent, especially the Viceroy's Palace, and the Arsenal, which is very well furnish'd with Arms and Ammunition. It has 4 Suburbs, call'd Zacra, San Filippo, San Deo, and Porta Imperial, which lie stretch'd along the Shoar for a great way; and its Situation between the Mountains and the Sea, makes it a very long City. The Emperor Charles V. fortified it with 14 Bastions, and 4 Forts, in the Year 1535. whereof one is within the Town, the rest without for the Defence of the Port. This City was recover'd from the Saracens by Roger the Norman, in the Year 1060. and afterwards govern'd by the Kings of Sicily, now by a Spanish Officer, whom they call il Stradigo. But being mightily gall'd by the Spanish Yoke, it was provok'd to shake it off, on the 7th of July, 1674. and maintain'd its Liberty, with the Assistance of the French, till the 16th of March, 1678. when it willingly return'd to its former Allegiance. Its chief Trade consists in Silk, with which it furnishes a great part of Europe; and it is an Archiepiscopal See.

Catania, Catana, or Catina, stands on the Coast of the Ionian Sea, on a Gulf of the same Name, near the little River Judicello, 40 Miles from Syracuse to the North, and 50 from Messina. It was built by the Chalcidenses, as Eusebius relates, and was fortified by Charles V. It is the great Unhappiness of this Town, that it stands too near Mount Ætna, which is now call'd il Mont Gibello, whose fiery Streams have have often prov'd fatal to the neighbouring Country. This Mountain is reckon'd 9 Miles high, but not of perpendicular Height, and in Compass 50. The South-side of it is almost cover'd over with Vines, and the North-side with other Trees and Shrubs, and no part of it is Barren and Unmanur'd, except the Top. The most considerable Eruptions that have happen'd, were in the Years 1169. 1329. 1408. 1444. 1447. 1536. 1554. by the last of which, Catania and the adjacent Country were well nigh destroy'd, as they were also in the Year 1669. But we must refer the Reader for the Causes of those Eruptions, and a particular Account of them to those who have written fully on the Subject, particularly Thomas Fazellus, and Philippus Cluverius.

Patti, Paëta, or Paëta, a pretty well inhabited little Sea Town, on the North-Coast of the Island, near the Ruins of Tyndaris, now call'd S. Maria di Tindari. 48 Miles from Messina to the West, and half a Mile from the Tyrrhenian Sea. It has the Title of a Bishoprick, under the Archbishop of Messina.

Nea, Netum or Nea, from which the third Division, or Valley of Sicily has its Name, is a large and well inhabited Town, standing on a high Hill, surrounded with high and steep Rocks, in the South part of the Island, 8 Miles from the Sea, 15 from Capo Pessaro to the North-West, and 25 from Syracuse to the South.

Syracuse or Saracossa, Syracuse, anciently a famous and great City, said to have been Built by Archias, a Cornthian consisting of 5 Parts, viz. Acradina, Troeta, Neapolis, Insula and Epipolæ, and 180 Stadia, or 22 Miles and half in Compass. It was first grievously oppress'd by the Dionysii, afterwards by Agathocles and others. It suffer'd a Siege of 3 Years by the Romans, in the first Punick War, when its holding out so long was owing to the singular Art of that famous Mathematician Archimedes who was unhappily murder'd by a barbarous Soldier, contrary to the express Orders of the Roman General Marcellus, when he took the City. It has now lost much of its ancient Splendor and Greatness, being confin'd within the Island Otygia, but has 2 Harbours, which the Inhabitants call il Porto Maggiore, and il Porto Piccolo, and one Gate on the little Isthmus, defended by 2 Forts. It is distant 40 Miles from Catania to the South, 23 from Augusta, 38 from the Capo Pessaro, and 60 from the little Town, now call'd Castro Joanni. It was formerly an Archbishoprick, but is now under the See of Montreal.

Augusta, Augusta, a little but well inhabited and strong Town, built at first in a Peninsula, on the East-side of the Island, about 18 Miles from Catania to the South, and 24 from Syracuse. It was built by the Emperor Frederick in the Year 1229. who also built a Fort which commands it, in the Year 1232. Above an Hundred Years since it was fortified, and the Peninsula on which it stood made an Island, and joyn'd to the Continent by a Wooden Bridge. It was taken by the French, after a vigorous Resistance, in the Year 1675. and deserted by them 3 Years after. It has a very large and safe Harbour, and as Cluverius says, was anciently call'd Viphenia.

The Island of SARDINIA.

The Island of Sardinia, which the Grecians call'd Sardon and Fehnusa, lies North and South, between the Tuscan Sea on the East, and the Sea of Sardinia on the West, between 37 Deg. 20 Min. and 40 Deg.

10 Min. Lat. and 31 Deg. 10 Min. and 33 Deg. 15 Min. Long. It is in Length from Calaris or Cagliari, to the Channel betwixt Sardinia and Corfica (according to Cluverius) 180 Miles, and in Breadth from the Capo di Monte Falcone, and Capo di Argentera, to the Capo Sarda 104. But Baudand, who makes it 500 Miles in Compass, will have it to be only 170 in Length, from South to North, and 90 in Breadth; and others less, as to both. We shall not trouble the Reader with the various Conjectures about the Etymologies of its Name, and the first Inhabitants of it, but only put him in mind, that anciently the Carthaginians were Masters of it; next them the Romans, who kept possession of it, till the declining State of that Empire, when it fell into the hands of the Saracens, who were expell'd by the Genouese and Pisans. At last in the Year 1326. Pope Boniface VIII. gave it to James II. King of Arragon, who after a great deal of struggling made himself Master of it, and handed it down to his Posterity. It is now subject to the King of Spain, who governs it by its Viceroy.

The Air of this Island is very Unhealthful, but the Soil is good, and fit to produce Corn, Wine, and Oyl; but the Inhabitants being for the most part Barbarians, are Lazy, and do not Cultivate and Improve the Ground as it ought to be, which is the reason why this Island, tho' it be large, is not very Rich. It was formerly divided into 4 Parts, which were subject to their respective petty Princes; but now it is divided into 2 Parts or Provinces, call'd il Capo di Cagliari, and il Capo di Logudori; which, with their several Towns, are to be seen in the following Table.

I.	{ Cagliari .
	{ Oristagni .
Capo di Cagliari ,	{ Villa d' Iglesias .
in which are	{ Galtelli .
these Towns.	{ S. Pietro .
II.	{ Sassari .
	{ Castel Aragonese .
Capo di Logudori ,	{ Bosa .
in which	{ Algheri .
are these	{ Sandata .
Towns.	{ Terra Nuovo .

Cagliari, Calaris, is the chief City of Sardinia, and gives Name to a Province, a Gulf, and a Promontory, and is the Residence of the Spanish Governor. It is said to have been Built by the Phœnicians, and afterwards inhabited by the Carthaginians. It was destroy'd by the Arabians, and afterwards rebuilt by the Pisans. It was taken by James II. King of Arragon, in the Year 1330. since which time it, together with the whole Island, has been subject to Spain. It is a pretty large City, having 3 Suburbs, viz. Estampache, Villa-Nova, and la Marina, and is distant 30 Miles from Oristagni to the East; and has the Title of an Archbishoprick.

Oristagni, Arborea, stands in the West part of the Island, 6 Miles from the Sea, 60 from Sassari, and 30 from Bosa. It has the Title of an Archbishoprick, as also that of a Marquisate, which was formerly govern'd by its own Princes, call'd Judges, who are famous in the Histories of those Times, when the Arragonians invaded this Island; but at present it is very thinly inhabited, because of the Unhealthfulness of the Air.

Sassari, or Sacer Sassari, is a pretty large Town, in the North part of the Island, about 12 Miles from from the Ruins of Turritana, or Turris Libiſſonis, (which the Longobards raz'd in the Year 596, to the South, as many from the Sea, and 18 from Algeri. It stands in a Plain, but is well fortified; and the Archbishop's See of Turritana was translated hither by Pope Eugenius IV. An. 1441.

Castel Aragonese, Castrum Aragonense, is a little well inhabited and fortified Town, with a Castle, in the North part of the Island, standing on a Rock, and having the advantage of a good and large Harbour, at the Mouth of the River Coquina. It is distant about 100 Miles from Caligari to the North, 50 from Oristagni, and 24 from Saffari. The See of Emporie was remov'd from thence to this Place, in the Year 1503. and is under the Archbishop of Saffari.

B-fa. Bofa, stands on the West part of the Island, on the Coast of the Sea of Sardinia, at the Mouth of the River B-fa, 30 Miles from Oristagni to the North, and 35 from Saffari. It has the advantage of a large Harbour, and a Fort call'd Sancti Le.

Algher or Algher, Alerium or Algharia, is a little but well fortified and inhabited Town, in the North-West part of the Island, about 16 Miles from Saffari to the South, and as many from B-fa. Cluverius says it was anciently call'd Ceraxa; but Franciscus a Vico, a Sardinian, says it sprung from the Ruins of a neighbouring Town, call'd Tylium. It is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Saffari.

The Island of CORSIKA.

The Island of Corsica, call'd also Cyrnus by Ptolemy and Strabo, lies between 40 Deg. 20 Min. and 42 Deg. 15 Min. Lat. and 31 Deg. 20 Min. and 32 Deg. 30 Min. Long. It is in Length, according to Cluverius, from the Sacrum Promontorium, now Punta di Marone, or Capo Corso, to the Promontory Gratianum, or Capo di Manza, 120 Miles; in Breadth, from the Promontory call'd Capo di Foro, to Aleria Desirata &c. But Baudrand, who makes it 250 Miles in Compass, allows it only 110 of Length, and 50 of Breadth.

It has been subject to the Republick of Genova, since the Year 1144. that they expell'd the Saracens out of it, notwithstanding the several Attempts that have been made by the Pisans, and the Kings of Aragon to take it from them, particularly in the Years 1320. and 1435. and the Doge of Genova is Crown'd with a Royal Crown of Gold, and a Scepter put in his Hand, because of the Kingdom of Corsica. It is govern'd by one sent thither every 2 Years from that State, who is assisted by a Lieutenant, and several Commissaries.

The Air of this Island is very unwholesome, and the Soil for the most part but indifferent, the Country being Mountainous and Woody, and the Ground Stony. In some Places however, it brings forth good Corn, Vines, and several sorts of Fruit, as Figs, Almonds, and Chestnuts; nor are the Forests and Pastures unprovided of Venison, Cattle and Wild Fowl. The Natives of Corsica are said to be Revengeful, Cruel and Unciviliz'd; and some are of Opinion that the word Corsairs, which signifies Pirates, or Robbers on the Sea, has its Original from them.

The Island of Corsica is computed to be about 100 Miles from Genova to the South, 60 from Leghorn to the South-West, and 65 from Picmbino to the West. It was formerly divided into two Parts, viz. South and North, but is now (according to Baudrand) divided into four, viz. Di quo di Monti, or on this side the Mountains; Il lato di dentro, or the inner side; Di la di Monti, on the other side of the Mountains; and Il lato di fuori, or on the outer side: And the Towns that are now, or have been of any Note in it, are,

Bastia .	}	Ajaçço .
Corte .		Bonifacio .
Nebbio .	}	St. Fiorenzo .
Mariana .		Calvi .
Aleria .	}	Accia .
Sagona		Sarteni .
St. Pietro .

Bastia. Bastia, or Bastila, is the chief City of this Island, situated in the North part of it, with the advantage of a good Harbour, and a Fort, distant about 20 Miles from the Capo di Corso to the South, and 70 from Bonifacio to the North. It stands where the Town of Mantinum formerly stood, and is the ordinary Residence of the Genouese Governor.

Corte, Conestum, a small City next Bastia, reckon'd the Chief of the Island, it stands in the very Centre of it, and is an Episcopal See.

Nebbio, Nell'Isola, a ruinous and decay'd Town, in the North part of the Island, about a Mile from the Sea, not above half a Mile from St. Fiorenzo, which some think arose from its Ruins, and 9 from Bastia to the South-West. It was the Seat of a Bishop, who now resides at St. Fiorenzo, and is Suffragan to the Archbishop of Genova; but at present there are not above 15 Houses, and about 70 Souls in it.

Mariana. Mariana was anciently a considerable Town, and the Name of a Roman Colony, and adorn'd with several magnificent Buildings, and a Colossus; but is now lying in its Ruins, which are call'd le Rovina di Mariana, nothing remaining but the Cathedral Church, and some other Buildings, without Roofs. It stood upon the River Eolus, which divided it into 2 Parts, viz. the South, call'd Casinea, and the North, call'd Mariana; and is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Genova. It is distant 20 Miles from the Ruins of Aleria to the North, and 15 from Bastia, where its Bishop hath resided since the Year 1575.

Ajaçço, Adjacium, anciently call'd Urcinium, is a pretty well inhabited Town, with a Fort and a good Harbour, on the West side of the Island, on a Bay of its own Name, about 40 Miles from Bonifacio to the North-West, 40 from Calvi to the South, and about 1 from the Ruins of the old Adjacium. It is subject to the State of Genova, but its Bishop is under the Archbishop of Pisa.

Bonifacio, Bonifacium, is a fortified and well inhabited little Town, on the South-Coast of the Island, situated on a Rock, which is almost surrounded by the Sea; and from it the Channel which separates this Island from Sardinia is call'd, le bocche di Bonifacio, formerly Fretum Taphros.

Calvi, Calvium, stands on the West-side of the Island, with a very strong Fort, in form of a Peninsula, which makes it only accessible at one Place, where the Franciscans Convent stands. It has been several times in vain attempted by the Saracens and French; and is distant 35 Miles from Bastia to the West, and 30 from Ajaçço to the North.

Several

Several other Islands of less Note.

The Liparean Islands, which Pliny calls the Æoliae, and Vulcanicæ, and the Grecians Hephestiades, lie off the North-Coast of Sicily, in the Tyrrhenian or Tuscan Sea, where, as the Poets say, bintring King Æolus Reign'd of old. These Islands did anciently belong to Sicily; but afterwards the Kings of Naples unjustly wrested them from it, and Charles V. confirm'd the Possession of them to Naples, till at last, in the Year 1609. they were restor'd to Sicily, to which they are still subject. They are in Number seven, viz.

Liparæ, now Lipari.

Hiera, now Vulcano.

Strongylæ, now le Saline.

Evonymos, now Lisca bianca.

Didyme, now Stromboli.

Ericusa, now Paschu.

Phenicusa, now Felicur.

Lipari, Lipara, is the biggest of all the Æolian or Vulcanian Islands, being 18 Miles in Compass; and distant about 40 Miles from the North-Coast of Sicily, and 50 from the nearest Part of the Farther Calabria. This Island did formerly vomit up Fire, as may be seen still by the Vestiges and Marks of it; and its Baths were very wholesome. There is a Town in it of its own Name, which was almost destroy'd by Barbarossa, the Turkish Admiral, in the Year 1544. but afterwards repair'd, and is now pretty neat and well inhabited, and has a strong Fort, call'd la Pignatara. Pope Eugenius III. erect'd this Place into a Bishoprick, in the Year 1151. and since the 1627. it has been exempted from the Jurisdiction of the Archbishop of Messina, till of late, that it owns its Subjection to that Metropolitan.

The most considerable of those little Islands that lie about Sardinia, are,

St. Pietro.	}	Di Toro.
St. Antiocha.		Tavolato.
Di Vaccha.		Asinaria.

The most considerable of those that lie along the Coast of Italy, between the Liparean Islands and Genoua, are these,

Capri	}	Monte Christo.
Ischia.		Formiche.
Ponza.		Pianosa.
Gianuti.		Capracia.
Giglio.		Maloria.
Elba.		Gorgona.

Capri, Capree, an Island in the Tyrrhenian Sea, belonging to the Kingdom of Naples, in the Province of Terra di Lavarò, at the entry of the Gulf of Naples, near the Capo Campanello, from which it is divided by a Channel 3 Miles broad, call'd le bocche di Capri. It is about 12 Miles in Circuit, and has a little Town in the South part of it, of its own Name, which has the Title of a Bishoprick; the Revenues of which are paid in Quails, which at two Seasons of the Year are catch'd in vast Numbers in this Island.

This Place was once the delightful Retreat of the Emperor Tiberius Augustus; and the Island is call'd Telonis by Silius. It contains at present about 1500 Souls, who are exempted from all manner of Taxes.

Ischia, or Iscla. Ischia. otherwise call'd Inarime, and Ænaria, lies in the Tyrrhenian Sea, off the Coast of Naples, in the Province of Terra di Lavarò, from the Coast of which it is distant 2 Miles, as many from the Capo Miseno, and 1 from the Island of Prochita. It is about 20 Miles in Compass, having a Town of its own Name, with a strong Fort, on the South-side of it, join'd to the Island by a Bridge. Ferdinand King of Naples made this his Refuge, in the time of Charles VIII King of France, who in a few Days overran that whole Kingdom, in the year 1495. This Town has the Title of a Bishoprick, under the Archbishop of Naples.

Ponza, Pontia, is an Island in the Tyrrhenian Sea, reckon'd a part of the Kingdom of Naples, but belonging to the Duke of Parma, 13 Miles from the Circeum Promontorium, now Monte Circella, 20 from Terracina, and 8 from Pandataria, now Santa Maria. There was a Colony sent into this Island (as Livy relates) in the Year of the City 441. and a Town built in it by the Volsci; but being quite dil-peopl'd afterwards, there were new Inhabitants sent into it, in the Year of Christ 1583. It was anciently a Place where many banish'd Romans were oblig'd to go, particularly Caligula's Sitters, whom he sent thither.

Giglio, Ægilium, or Igium, is an Island in the Tuscan Sea, off the Coast of the Sinefe, of which it is a Part, and subject to the Great Duke of Tuscany, 10 Miles from the Shoar of Cosano, and as many from il Monte Argentario. It is subject to the Spiritual Jurisdiction of the Abbot of Tre fontane, near Rome, and about 25 Miles in Compass.

Elba, Ilua, or Æthalia, is an Island in the Tuscan Sea, over against Piombino in Tuscany, from which it is distant about 10 Miles. It is about 40 Miles in Compass, and abounds in Iron, belong'd formerly to the Republick of Siena, but is now a part of the Principality of Piombino, under the Protection of the King of Spain, who has a Fort in it of considerable Strength, call'd Porto-longone, and the Duke of Tuscany has another, call'd Porto-Ferraro.

Capraria. Capraria, so call'd, from the great abundance of Goats which us'd to be in it, is an Island in the Tuscan Sea, lying between the State of Tuscany to the East, and Corfica (on which it depends) to the West. It is very Mountainous, and about 18 Miles in Compass. It belongs to the State of Genoua, who have a Fort and a Garrison in it, to defend it from the Pyrats, and contains about 600 Inhabitants.

Gorgona, Gorgon, or Urgo, according to Pliny, is a little Island in the Tuscan Sea, between the Coast of Tuscany to the East, and Corfica to the West, and about 25 Miles from Leghorn to the South-West. It was formerly subject to the Pisans, but belongs now to the Great Duke of Tuscany. It is 10 Miles in Compass, and has only one little Town, and a sort of a Fort in it.

SPAIN.

SPAIN and PORTUGAL

Among all the Countries of Europe this of Spain, altho' it may justly claim an equal rank with the best, is unhappily pass'd over by modern Geographers with slight Accounts of it, as if with the Grandeur of the Monarchy, the Country too were so far sunk as to deserve little notice; perhaps the little visiting it by Strangers, except in the Maritime Towns of Trade, may be the reason that we are unappriz'd of the Magnitude and Beauty of its many Cities; for the unhappy Lazyness of its Inhabitants hinders 'em from making any curious Manufactures, which in other Countries tempt the Merchants to Travel over the Land; and withal this Kingdom being a Peninsula, lies not on the Road to the Countries beyond it, and so is not travell'd thro' by those that make the Tour of Europe. If therefore we presume to say that the former descriptions of this Land are imperfect, and the differences that will be found between what has yet appear'd in English and this Account that follows, are only alterations for the sake of Truth; we hope we shall be believ'd, when we tell the Reader that it is wholly Collected out of these Authors, viz.

C H A P. I.

S P A I N.

S PAIN is the most Western Part of all the Continent of Europe, encompass'd on all sides with the Sea, except towards France, from which it is separated by the Pyrenean Mountains. On the East and South, it is bounded by the Mediterranean Sea, the Streights of Gibraltar, anciently call'd Fretum Gaditanum, and part of the Atlantick Ocean; on the West, by the same Ocean, and on the North, by the Sea call'd the Bay of Biscay, and the Pyrenean Mountains; which last divide it from France. Its situation is in the Temperate Zone, betwixt 35 and 44 Degrees of North Latitude, and the 8th and 24th of Longitude, under the 5th, 6th, and 7th Climates. Thus we see it is a long Peninsula, and in form of an Ox's Hide extended, the Neck being the Isthmus, which joyns it to France, along which the Pyrenean Mountains run from Sea to Sea; that is, from Cape Olarso, near Fuenterabia, on the Bay of Biscay, to Cape Creuz, or Cruzes, formerly Veneris Promontorium, on the Mediterranean, being 80 Leagues. From the aforesaid Cape Creuz, or Cruzes, to Cape S. Vincent, along the Coast of the Mediterranean Ocean, are reckon'd by all Spanish Geographers, 275 Leagues, which we may call the East and South sides. The West-side from Cape S. Vincent, to Cape Finisterre, 125 Leagues. The Northern Coast from Cape Finistre to Fuenterabia, 140 Leagues: All which, with the 80 along the Pyrenean Mountains, make the whole compass of Spain 620 Leagues; which is to be understood Travelling by Land from Town to Town, and Port to Port, without running round all Creeks and Bays, or taking it directly in a strait Line.

We have told you already in the Introduction, that of Spanish Leagues there go Seventeen and a half to a Degree, whereby their League is about 3 Miles and a half: But in all Dimensions following it must be observ'd once for all, that we have, to avoid all Controversie or Mistake, Calculated the Leagues to the most usual measure of 20 to a Degree, or 3 Miles to a League, which the Reader is desir'd to observe, that he may proceed upon sure Grounds.] But taking the greatest Length, which is from Cape S. Vincent to Cape Creuz, or Cruzes, across the Country in a direct Line, it extends near 700 Miles North-East, and South-West. And the greatest Breadth North-West and South-East, from Cape Finisterre in Galicia, to Cape Palos in the Kingdom of Murcia, over-Land also in a strait Line, being about 550.

Among the Ancients We find this Country call'd HESPERIA, which some derive from Hesperus, a Fabulous King of it; and others with more Reason, from Hesperus, the Evening Star, because of its Western Position: But Italy being also call'd Hesperia, for Distinction sake, that was call'd Minor, the Lesser, and this Ultima, the Remotest. Another Name it had was IBERIA; from the Iberi, a People of Asia, who are said to have first Inhabited it: As also Celtiberia, from the Celts of Gaul, mixing with the Iberi. The Scripture calls it Scpharad, being the Hebrew name which S. Jerom says signifies a Bound or Limit, because it is the furthest part of Europe. The Chaldeans nam'd it SPHAMIA; the Syrians, ISPANIA, or Sphania, as appears by the Chaldaick and Spanish Versions of the Bible; and from this last, the common Name of HISPANIA might proceed, as well as from any other Derivation, and much more probably than from Bochart's Notion of Spania, in the Punick Language a Cony, or from Justin's imaginary King Hispanus, or Cluverius's Conceit of Hispalis, the name of the City of Sevil. However it may be Deriv'd, most certain it is, the Romans, and we after them, in Latin, call it HISPANIA, the Spaniards themselves Espanna, and we by Corruption, Spain.

The Romans anciently divided it into three Provinces, TARRACONENSIS, BOETICA, and LUSITANIA. The first had its name from Taragona, now an Archbishoprick in Catalonia, and was bounded on the East by that part of the Mediterranean call'd the Balearick Sea; on the North by the Pyrenean Mountains and Bay of Biscay; on the West by the main Ocean; and on the South, by the River Duero, which separated it from Lusitania; beyond which a Line is to be drawn including the greatest part of Old and New Castile, and terminating with the farthest extent of the Kingdom of Murcia. Thus we see this Province contain'd the Kingdom of Murcia, Valencia, Aragon, Navarre, and Galicia; the Principality of Catalonia, most of Old and New Castile, and the Countries of Biscay, Asturias, Entre Duero, y Minho, and Tralos Montes. BOETICA on the North, was enclos'd by the River Guadiana, parting it from Lusitania; on the West, by the same River and the Ocean; on the South by the Mediterranean, and on the East by a Line drawn from Cape Gata to the Fountains of Guadiana; which shews that within it were the Kingdoms of Sevil, Cordova and Granada, and the Province of Estremadura, beginning at the City Badajoz. LUSITANIA reach'd on the North, from the Mouth of the River Duero, as far as Simancas; on the West, it ran along the Ocean, from the said Mouth of Duero, as far as Cape S. Vincent, along the Ocean: On the South the same Ocean wash'd it, from Cape S. Vincent, to the Mouth of Guadiana: There on the East, the same River divides it from Betice, as does a Line drawn from Old Calatrava to the Bridge of Simancas, separate it from the Province Tarracensis; so that it wanted that which is now the Northern part of Portugal, beyond the Duero, and on the East took in a part of Estremadura, Old Castile, and the Kingdom of Leon.

Besides this ancient Division, there was another, into only two Provinces, CITERIOR, and ULTERIOR, the nearer and the farther, which was in respect to ROME. The first being only that Part which lies North of the River Ebro, and the other all beyond the said River, which was beyond all comparison, the Greater. There was also another Sub-division into 14 DISTRICTS, each subject to its Sovereign Court; for the Great Provinces being under the Direction of Prætors, or Pro-consuls, who were in the nature of Vice-Roys, there were Courts erected in several Parts for the administration of Justice, whereof there were 7 in the Province Tarracensis, settled at Tarragona, Zaragoza, Cartagena, Astorga, Lugo, Braga and Crunna, now a small Town in the Bishoprick of Osma. In Betice there were 4; at Cadiz, Cordova, Exija, and Sevil. And in Lusitania only 3, at Merida, Badajoz, and Santaren.

When the GOTHS had expell'd the Romans, and made themselves Masters of all Spain, they united it into one solid Body, without any distinction of Provinces that we know of, and so it continued many Years, as long as their Sovereignty, till the Moss overrunning the greatest part of it, several small Christian Kingdoms were erected, and the Infidels themselves set up a greater Number: Of all which, it would be too tedious to speak; but from thence proceeded the present Division of Spain into 14 Kingdoms and Provinces, besides the Islands, and without including Portugal, as being under a distinct Sovereign. Each of these is to be particularly describ'd, for which Reason, we shall here only give their Names in the same order we design to treat of them, and then go through with the general Account of Spain, before we come to the Particular; First observing, that in describing Spain, hitherto Portugal has been of necessity included, as being a part of the whole, and not well to be separated, till we come to each Province. The 14 Divisions we mention'd, are

The Islands of MAJORCA, MINORCA, YVIZA, and FORMENTERA.

The next in course to be spoken of, are the principal RIVERS and Mountains in Spain.

To begin with the Rivers; The EBRO, anciently Iberus, rises at Fontibre, a small Town near Aqui'a del Campo, on the Borders of Biscay, thence crosses Navarre, Aragon, and Catalonia, and falls into the Mediterranean, below Tortosa, after a course of about 100 Leagues: By the way it takes in the smaller Rivers Baya, Zadorra, Alava, Oja, Tiron, Nagerilla, Fruega, Lecia and Meloro, before it comes into Navarre: In that Kingdom, the Egac, Arga, and Aragon: In the Kingdom of Aragon, the Gallego, Torio, Xalon, Conguedo, Veron and Sigre. DUERO, formerly Durius, springs near the City Soria, in Old Castile, and running through Old Castile, Leon, and Portugal, loses itself in the Ocean a League below the City Porto Port, in the Kingdom last nam'd. TAGO, or TAGUS, has its Source in the Mountains of Molina, cuts all New Castile, Estremadura, and Portugal, into two Parts, and falls into the Sea at Cascaes, below Lisbon, after running 120 Leagues, and taking in the Rivers Henares, Xarama, Guadarama, Alberche, and many others. It was formerly famous for its Golden Sands. QUADALQUIVIR, formerly BETIS, in Arabick signifies a great River, has its Origin in the Mountains of Segura, crosses all Andalusia, and mixes with the Ocean at S. Lucar in the same Province, when it has run 64 Leagues, and reciev'd many lesser Waters. GUADIANA, in Latin Anas flows from certain Lakes 4 Leagues from Montiel, in New Castile, where it has first the name of Ruydera; and having run about 8 Leagues, sinks all together under Ground, near the Village of Argamasilla, continuing a subterraneous course 7 Leagues; after which, it comes up again near the Town of Daymiel, in another Lake. Here it takes the name of Guadiana, and loses that of Ruydera. Besides this, it again sinks twice under Ground, till having cross'd Estremadura and part of Portugal, it is finally swallow'd up by the Ocean at Ayamonte, between Algarve and Estremadura. Besides these, we might sum up near 150 other Rivers, not contemptible, were it not too tedious; and for Springs the number is infinite. For Bridges, the Curious have reckon'd 700 of Note.

The most noted MOUNTAINS are first the PYRENEANS, beginning at Cape Olarso, near Fuenterabia in Biscay, do not run in a strait Line to the Mediterranean, but make a great Bow, taking the compass into Spain; first entering Navarre, where they run to Val de Salazar, and Val de Romcal, to Hisara, which is the end of them in Navarre; whence they proceed into Aragon above Jaca, and thence to Catalonia, at the City call'd Sen de Urgel, then passing by Belver, Puicerdan, Villa Franca de Conflent, the Fortrefs of Guardia and Lampurdan, they stretch to Cape Creuz, or Cruzes, on the Mediterranean, their whole length being 80 Leagues. On the Frontiers of Biscay and Navarre, at the place place call'd Roncivallés, there branches out from the Pyreneans, a ridge of Mountains, which running to the Westward, is the Southern Boundary of Biscay and Asturias, cuts Galicia in two, and end at Cape Finisterre, upon the Ocean, yet has not any general Name, but receives several Appellations from the places it passes by. Again, from this last Mountain, on the South-side of it, near the Springs of Ebro, sprouts out another call'd Idubeda, now Montes de Oca, from an ancient City then nam'd Auca, 5 Leagues above Burgos; thence stretches to Briviesca, so to Calatayud and Deroca, and at last expires in the Mediterranean, near Tortosa. From this Idubeda jus out the Mountain OROSPEDA, rising very gently, till it forms the Mountains of MOLINA, then those of CUENCA, where the River Tagus springs. Next, it makes the Mountains of Consuegra, then passes on to Alcaraz and Segura, at Cazorla. This Mountain Orospeda divides itself into two Branches, one of which terminates in the Sea, opposite to Murcia, near the Town of Muxacra, formerly Murgis: The other stretches towards Malaga, and joining the Mountains of Granada, runs on beyond Gibraltar and Farifa. From the same Orospeda, near Alcaraz, proceed the Marian Mountains, now call'd SIERRA MORENA; along the bottom of which, the River Guadalquivir keeps close almost all the way to the Ocean. Besides these, there are many other Mountains all Branches from the Pyreneans, now call'd by several Names, from the places of Note near them, as of Soria, Segovia and Avila, and these divide Castile into the Old and the New: These run on by Coria and Plasencia, and entering Portugal on the North-side of Tagus, divide that Kingdom into two Parts, and terminate in the Ocean at Sintra, forming the Cape formerly call'd Promontorium Arrabrum, now Rocca de Sintra, and by our Sailors, the Rock of Lisbon.

Many of the Rivers and Mountains running through Portugal or part of it, and the ancient Division concerning it as well as the rest of Spain, there was no speaking of it apart, as to those Particulars; for what follows, the Reader must observe, that in speaking of Spain, we no way include Portugal, which is to be spoken of apart, as a distinct Kingdom. In Spain therefore, as abstracted from Portugal; there are at present 8 Archbishopricks, 46 Bishopricks, and 14 Universities, the Names of all which will be found in their proper Places, and therefore are not mention'd here. There are 16000 Towns, 125 Cities, 110000 Churches, 75000 Parishes, 9300 Monasteries of Religious Men, 370 of Nuns, above 5000 Hospitals; and about the Year 1650, the Inhabitants were reckon'd to amount to 8500000 Souls.

The Temperature of the AIR is generally wholesome and delightful, its situation being about the middle of the Temperate Zone, and therefore not so much scorch'd as Africk, nor subject to such violent Frosts, continual Rains, and stormy Winds, as the Northern Parts. It is true the Summer Heats are by Northern People thought excessive in the height of Summer; yet it is certain they are nothing compar'd with other Countries nearer and within the Tropicks, and as that does not last above 2 or 3 Months, as all the remaining part of the Year is Temperate: Besides, the Air is generally serene and pleasant, and the great Rains fall regularly in their Seasons, of Spring and Autumn. And it is to be observ'd, that as with us, most Di-stempers proceed from Colds, so in Spain they are generally the Effect of Heat, as burning Fevers, Pleurisies, Quinsies and Lethargies, all which are very Mortal, without speedy and frequent Bleeding. But the Degrees of Heat and Cold, vary much in the Northern and Southern Parts, and not only in regard to Latitude, but to other Circumstances; as the Sea-Coasts, much cool'd by constant Sea Breezes, and Mountains, which are naturally cold, and sometimes communicate cooling Breezes to the adjacent Plains.

The SOIL, as in other Countries, is not all alike, but generally very Fruitful, notwithstanding the false Representations of some Writers, who knew nothing of it: And there needs no other proof of its Fertility, than the Product, so well known throughout all Europe. The Barrenest part is the most Northern, and yet even that does not deserve that Name. The Mountains are the worst, and even they produce something for use, the most uncouth part of them is cover'd with stately Trees of all sorts, yielding excellent Timber and Fuel; in other Places there grows the Plant they call Esparto, whereof, they make all sorts of Ropes; in Boggy Lands, Rushes for Mats and other uses; and the sides of Hills of any moderate height, have always Grass and many Sweet-Herbs, which feeds vast Flocks of Sheep. If these happen to be scorch'd up with too much Heat in Summer, the Cattle are drove down to the Meadows, by the River sides, some whereof are so order'd that they can Water them, and there a sufficient quantity of Grass is always preserv'd to supply the Flocks; so that there is never any Want. The Spanish Wheat is inferior to none, if not the best in Europe, as all Men testify by the goodness of the Bread who have eaten of it; and the common Product is more than the Natives can consume; for Portugal has always been supply'd from thence, being in continual Want; which is now supply'd from the North. Barley is the common Grain for Horses and Mules, for they use no Oats, neither do they make Hay, but instead of it, the Cattle eat Straw. Wine is so plentiful, that the meanest People drink it; and there is no occasion to speak of its Goodness, where most Men are acquainted with several sorts of it, as Malaga, Sherry, Galicia, Navarre, Alicant, Barcelona, and many other Names of it, which seldom or never come among us, tho' nothing Inferior to those above, only because being higher up the Country, the Land Carriage hinders their Exportation. Besides the Fruits which England affords, which there grow in greater Perfection, we have had from thence Oranges, Lemmons, Almonds, Raisins, Pruens, Olives, Capers; Figs. Chesnuts. and Pomgranates; and there are many too tedious to name. Herbs and Flowers are most sweet and odoriferous, and many of them grow wild, which other Places cannot produce without much Industry. Nor is there less Diversity and Plenty of Fowl both Wild and Tame, or of Four-footed Game, as Deer Red and Fallow, Rabbits, Wild-Boars. And as for the Tame Swine, all that have had Experience, allow the Spanish Bacon exceeds the Westphalia. Then for Oil, there is as good as that of Florence; and Wax and Honey as good as any in the World. We must not forget the Horses, so famous for Swiftness, that the Poets Feign'd they were engender'd by the Wind; the great Value of them among us testify what they are; and of these there are large Breeds in Estremadura and Parts adjacent; other Provinces breeding good serviceable serviceable Horses, tho' not so valuable. Mules it has of no less Price than good Horses, so sure Footed, that they are always us'd to travel over the craggiest Mountains, and so strong as to carry mighty Burdens, many of them 16, and some 17 Hands high. Nor are the Sheep to be forgotten; nor to speak of the Excellency of their Flesh, but for their incomparable Wool, known to exceed all other, which all the English Cloath-workers can testify. So much Silk is made, that Spanish Authors affirm it employs a Million of People, in feeding, gathering, curing the Worms spinning, weaving, and making rich Tabbies, Velvets, Damasks, Taffata's, Satins, Shags, and many other sorts. In short, some Parts produce Flax, Hemp, Cotton, Saffron, Sugar, Pitch, Rozin, and Scarlet Dye. Then if we descend into the Bowels of the Earth, we shall find rich Quicksilver Mines, whereof great Quantities are sent to the West-Indies, Sulphur, Lead, Jeat, Alom, Copper; and for Iron, all Europe receives great Quantities from Biscay, and it is better than any other; and of Stones, Agates, Cornelians, Granets, Crystal, Marble, Alabaster and Jasper. We will not run into the Variety of delicious Fish, which would be endless, nor discourse of the vast Treasures of Gold and Silver all Authors unanimously agree the Carthaginians, Phenicians, Greeks and Romans drew from this Nation, because these Metals are not sought for here, since the West-Indies have sent over such endless Masses of them.

In speaking of the PEOPLE of Spain, we shall not go to fetch their Original from Tubal, the Grandson of Noah, and a Colony most Spanish Authors pretend he brought from the Tower of Babel; or examine how the IBERI, a People of Asia, should come to it, and give it their Name, these fabulous Accounts deserving little Credit, and nothing appearing more likely than that it was first peopled either out of France, which is contiguous, or out of Africk, which is only divided by the narrow Streight of Gibraltar. Their most ancient History, like all others, is too Romanick to be rely'd on. But this is certain, that their Government was Monarchical and Hereditary, till thro' what Accidents no Man can tell, the Country came to be divided, and so weakened, that all other Nations skill'd in Sea Affairs attempted to make Conquests in it, and to carry away its Treasures. The Greeks gain'd Footing on the Eastern Coast of Reses, and Saguntum, now Morvedro; the Phenicians at Cadiz, and other Places; but the Carthaginians made a much greater Progress, and conquer'd a very considerable Part of the Country. The Romans after much Bloodshed expell'd them, and by degrees brought it all into Subjection; which was not compleated till the Emperor Augustus subdu'd the Cantabrians, which are the Biscainers and Parts adjacent. From that Time it continu'd as a Province, till the Roman Empire declining, and many barbarous Nations sharing it among them, the Vandals, Suevians, Alans and Silingians overrun the Country in the Days of Honorius the Emperor, which was in the Beginning of the 5th Century, destroy'd all they found, and had almost made themselves Masters of all the Country, but were stop'd in their Career by the Goths. Ataulfus, Brother to the famous Alaricus, King of that Nation, having Marry'd the Emperor Honorius's Sister, had the Parts of France and Spain about the Pyreneans assign'd him, and kept his Court at Barcelona; whence that Nation spread all over Spain, and a considerable Part of Africk. Peace and Plenty having debauch'd the Goths, and Roderick their last King Ravishing Count Julian's Daughter, that Nobleman in revenge brought over the Saracens into Spain, in the Year 714. who overthrowing the degenerate Goths, in 8 Months time overran the greatest part of Spain, almost 300 Years after the Conquest of it by the Goths. The Mountains descending Biscay and Asturias, Pelago, or PELAGIUS was there receiv'd as King, and gain'd several considerable Advantages over the Moors, as did several of his Successors, who advancing their Conquests, remov'd the Court from the City of Oviedo to that of Leon, about the Year 920. Others had before this time erected the Kingdoms of Aragon and Navarre, and the Earldom of Barcelona, as shall be touch'd in the Catalogue of Kings here subjoyn'd.

The Succession of the KINGS of SPAIN.

1. Ataulfus, Brother to Alaricus King of the Goths in Italy. Marry'd Galla Placidia, Sister to the Emperor Honorius, and had the Country about the Pyrenean Mountains allotted him to settle in with his People, keeping his Court sometimes at Barcelona and sometimes at Narbonne; and being a peaceable Prince was murder'd by his barbarous Subjects in the Year 417. when he had Reign'd but 2 or 3 Years.
2. Sigericus succeeded him, and was also murder'd in a very short time.
3. Walia, or Ubalia, increas'd his Dominions, and Died Ann. 420. after 3 Years Reign.
4. Theodoredus, or Theodorick, or Thierry, Reign'd 31. Years, assisted the Romans in the great Battle against Attila the Hun in France, where he was bore down and tramp'd to Death by his own Men, in the Year 451.
5. Torismund was Son to the last, help'd to drive Attila out of France, yet Reign'd but 3 Years and was murder'd by the Contrivance of his own Brothers; of whom,
6. Theoderick, ascended the Throne, and enlarg'd his Dominions in Spain by gaining upon the Suevians; and having Reign'd 13 Years, was in 466 murder'd by his own Brother.
7. Euricus, who succeeded him, and extended his Dominions both in France and Spain; Reign'd 11 Years, and Died in 483.
8. Alaricus, Son to Euricus, was kill'd in a Battle by Clovis King of France, in the Year 506. when he had Reign'd 23.
9. Gesaleycus, his Bastard Son, usurp'd the Crown and Reign'd 4 Years.
10. Amalaricus, lawful Son to Alaricus, was Enthron'd by the Ostrogoths, and Reign'd 21 Years.
11. Theudis, of the Race of the Ostrogoths, was Chosen King, the Family of the Visigoths being extinct, and was murder'd by one that feign'd himself Mad in the Year 548.
12. Theudiselus, of another Family, and a wicked Prince; Reign'd but one Year.
13. Agila was also Elected, but murder'd after being defeated by,
14. Athanagildus, who Reign'd 13 Years, and Died in 567.
15. Liuba was next Chosen, and Reign'd 5 Years.
16. Leuvigildus, Reign'd 4 Years in conjunction with his Brother Liuba, overthrew the Suevians and joyn'd their Kingdom to his own, his whole Reign being 18 Years.

17. Flavius Recaredus, was the first Catholick Gothic King of Spain (his Predecessors being Arians) and converted his Subjects. He Reign'd 15 Years, and Died in 601.
18. Lioba II. Son to Recaredus. succeeded him, and Reign'd but 2 Years, being murder'd by,
19. Witericus, who Reign'd 7 Years, and was murder'd by the Multitude.
20. Flavius Gundemarus, Died after a Reign of 2 Years.
21. Sisebutus, subdu'd the Asturians, and Reign'd 8 Years and a half.
22. Recaredus II. Son to the last, 3 Months.
23. Flavius Suinthila, Son to Recaredus I. quite expell'd the Romans, and was the first absolute Monarch of all Spain; but was expell'd, after 10 Years Reign, by,
24. Sisenandus, who held the Crown almost 4 Years, and Died in 635.
25. Chintila, Elected, Reign'd 4 Years.
26. Tulga, but 2 Years
27. Flavius Chindasuindus, got the Crown by Force, and held it 7 Years.
28. Flavius Reccesuinthus, 24 Years.
29. Wamba, Ubamba, or Bamba, of whom many fabulous Stories are written, was depos'd by,
30. Flavius Ervigius, who Reign'd 7 Years.
31. Flavius Egica, his Son-in-Law, 14 Years.
32. Wiriza, Son to Egica, a most wicked Prince, to disable the People from Revolting, threw down the Walls of most Towns, and destroy'd all the Arms that could be found. He Reign'd 10 Years.
33. Roderick, succeeded him in the Throne and his Lewdness, which prov'd the Ruin of him and Spain; for having ravish'd the Daughter of Count Julian, his great Favourite, that Traitor call'd in the Saracens, who coming over 600000 strong, overthrew the King in a Battle, which lasted 8 Days. What became of him was never known; but the Infidels in 8 Months overran the greatest Part of Spain; which afterwards took up above 700 Years to recover from them. He Reign'd but 3 Years, and was thus overthrown in 714.
34. Pelago, or Pelagius, of what Race is uncertain; being powerful in Biscay and Asturias. gather'd a small Body of Men, routed and gave a Check to the Infidels, and recover'd many Places from them; for which he was declar'd King, and Reign'd 19 Years in these Mountainous Countries.
35. Favila, his Son, succeeded, and Reign'd but 2 Years.
36. Alonso, the Crown now becoming Hereditary, succeeded in Right of his Wife Ermesenda, the Daughter of Pelagius; overthrew the Moors in 34 Battles, and Reign'd 18 Years.
37. Fruela, his Son, kill'd 54000 Moors in one Battle; and Reign'd 11 Years, was murder'd by his Brother
38. Aurelius, who Rul'd 6 Years.
39. Silon, in the Right of his Wife Adosinda, the Daughter of King Alonso, enjoy'd the Crown 9 Years.
40. Mauregatus, Bastard-Son to King Alonso, usurp'd the Throne, and sat in it 5 Years, with the Assistance of the Moors.
41. Bermudo, or Veremundus, whose Son not known, but of the Royal Family, 6 Years.
42. Alonso II. call'd the Chast, Son to Fruela, the first that call'd himself King of Oviedo. gain'd much from the Moors, Reign'd 48 Years, and Died in 843.
43. Ramiro, Son to Bermudo, slew 60000 Moors at the Battle of Clavijo, and Reign'd 7 Years.
44. O donno, Son to Ramiro, gain'd much upon the Infidels, and Reign'd 12 Years.
45. Alonso III. call'd the Great, Son to Ordonno, gain'd many Victories, and Reign'd 48 Years.
46. Garcia, Son to Alonso, 3 Years.
47. Ordonno II. Brother to Garcia, settled his Court at Leon, gain'd some Victories over the Moors, but was himself defeated by them, going to assist the King of Navarre. He put to Death the Earls of Castile, James Porcelos, Nunno Fernandez, and Ferdinand Anzules Almondar. The King of Navarre here mention'd, was descended from Garcia Ximenez I. Proclaim'd by a few People about the Pyrenean Mountains, the Time of whose Inauguration is uncertain; but he Died in the Year 758. His Successors by degrees extending their Dominions, were at last Masters of all that we now call Navarre. The first Earl of Castile we find in History, was Roderick, who liv'd in the Days of Alonso the Chast, above-mention'd. These Earls were created by the Kings of Leon, and subject to them, till growing powerful they usurp'd a Sovereign Authority. About the Year 815. Lewis, Son to Charlemain, King of France, having taken Barcelona from the Moors, made one Bernard, a French Man, Governor and Earl of it; and his Successors, like those of Castile, at length pretended to be Absolute. Much the same, and about the same Time, was the Rise of the Kingdom of Aragon, which began in one Aznar, created Earl of Aragon by Garcia, King of Navarre, whose Successors afterwards grew up to be Kings of Aragon. But to return to the Lines of the Kings of Spain.
48. Fruela II. Brother to Ordonno, usurp'd the Crown from his Nephews, and Reign'd 1 Year and 2 Months.
49. Alonso IV. Son to Ordonno, Reign'd 6 Years, and resign'd the Crown to
50. Ramiro, his Brother, who was very successful against the Moors, killing 80000 of them in one Battle, and Died in 950. when he had Reign'd 20 Years.
51. Ordonno III. Son to Ramiro, 5 Years.
52. Sancho, call'd the Fat, or the Gross, Brother to Ordonno, was expell'd for a Time by Ordonno, Son to King Alonso; but recover'd his Crown, with the Assistance of the Moors; was the first that made the Gentry of Spain free from Taxes; and was Poison'd in the Year 967. when he had Reign'd 12 Years.
53. Ramiro III. Son to Sancho, 15 Years.
54. Bermudo II. call'd the Goury, Son to King Ordonno, suffer'd mighty Losses by the Moors and rebellious Counts of Castile; the former destroying many Cities, and even those of Leon and Compostella in Galicie; yet he afterward overthrew them, and Reig'd 17 Years.
55. Alonso V. Son to Bermudo, recover'd the City of Leon; but was kill'd at the Siege of Viseo in Portugal, after 29 Years Reign, Anno 1028.
56. Bermudo III. had Peace with the Moors; but King Sancho of Navarre having possess'd himself of Castile, in Right of his Wife Nunna, eldest Sister to Garcia, Earl of that Country, compell'd him by force of Arms to give his Sister Sancho in Marriage to his Son Ferdinand, before by him declar'd King of Castile, that so Bermudo having no Issue, he might inherit the Crown, Yet this did did not hinder the renewing of the War,, in which Bermudo was kill'd. after a Reign of 9 Years.

57. Ferdinand, then possess'd himself of the Kingdom of León, in Right of his Wife, and gain'd many Places from the Infidels, overthrew his elder Brother Garcia, King of Navarre, and Reign'd gloriously 28 Years. At his Death he divided his Dominions.

58. Sancho II. his eldest Son, had Castile; Alonso II. León; and Garcia III. Galicia; both whom he soon expell'd, and was himself kill'd at the Siege of the City of Zamora, which his Father had left to his Sister Urraca, in the Year 1073. when he had Reign'd 6 Years and 9 Months.

59. Alonso VI. of León, and I. of Castile, Brother to Sancho, succeeded him in all his Dominions; was successful against the Moors, and took from them the City of Toledo, and made it his Residence. His Reign lasted 35 Years, and he Died in 1108.

60. Alonso VII. before King of Aragon, now inherited the Dominions of Castile and León, in Right of his Wife Urraca, Sister and Heiress to Alonso VI. but she being a Lewd Woman, he was divorced from her; and the Crown being hers, his Right ceas'd; so that,

61. Alonso VIII. the Son of the said Queen Urraca, by her first Husband Raymund, Earl of Burgundy, compelling her to resign, after a Reign of 15 Years, was Crown'd at Toledo, and took the Title of Emperor. In his Days Alonso, Son to King Henry of Burgundy, whom King Alonso VI. had made Earl of Portugal, usurp'd that Dominion, and took upon him the Title of King, which he left to his Posterity. Our Alonso took many Towns from the Moors, and Reign'd 34 Years. His Death was in 1157.

62. Sancho, Son to King Alonso, succeeded in the Dominions of Castile, those of León being given to his Brother Ferdinand, and Reign'd but one Year.

63. Alonso IX. call'd the Good and the Noble, Son to Sancho, Marry'd Ellenor the Daughter of Henry II. King of England; and being joyn'd by the Kings of Aragon and Navarre. slew 200000 Moors in one Battle, which was call'd of Nabas de Tolosa. and by that Advantage gain'd many Towns. He Reign'd 56 Years, and Died in 1214.

64. Henry, Son to Alonso, Reign'd but 3 Years, being kill'd at the Age of 14 by a Tile falling from the top of the House.

65. Ferdinand III. call'd the Holy, Son to Berengaria, King Henry's Sister, succeeding in both the Kingdoms of Castile and León, took from the Moors the Cities of Cordova, Murcia, Jaca, Carmona, Sevil, and many other Places; and Reign'd 35 Years. His Death was in Anno 1252.

66. Alonso X. Son to Ferdinand, call'd the Learned, for his great Knowledge in Astrology and other Sciences, was Chosen Emperor by some of the Electors, and took upon him the Title; but his many Troubles hindred his going out of Spain, where he suffer'd much from rebellious Subjects, and his wicked Son Sancho; yet Reign'd 32 Years, and Died in 1284.

67. Sancho IV. call'd the Brave, second Son to Alonso, usurp'd the Crown from his two Nephews, Alonso and Ferdinand, Sons to his elder Brother Ferdinand, from whom the present Dukes of Medina Celi are lineally descended. Much Blood was spilt in his Time, on account of the rightful Heirs to the Crown; but he prevail'd, and Dying in the Year 1295. after a Reign of 11 Years, he left the Crown to his Son, 68. Ferdinand IV. who had many Troubles, being unlawfully possess'd of the Throne. In his Days the Order of Knights Templars was suppress'd; and he having wrongfully condemn'd two Gentlemen to Death, they at their Execution summon'd him to appear before the Tribunal of God within 30 Days, and the 30th Day he Died, after a Reign of 17 Years, in 1312. for which he was afterwards call'd Ferdinand the Summon'd.

69. Alonso XI. Son to Ferdinand, in whose Time the famous Battle was fought at Tarifa, by all the Spanish Kings united, against the Moors, of which 200000 were slain. He Reign'd 38 Years, and Died in 1350.

70. Peter, commonly call'd the Cruel, Son to Alonso, had continual Broils with his Subjects, and was in the end murder'd by his Bastard Brother Henry, after 19 Years Reign.

71. Henry II. Bastard Son to Alonso, enjoy'd the Fruits of his Uturpation and Murder 10 Years

72. John, Son to Henry, had Wars with Portugal, to assert his Right to that Crown by his Wife Beatrice, who was Heiress to it; but John, the Bastard of King Ferdinand, carry'd it from him, and he at last was kill'd by a Fall from his Horse, in the Year 1390. when he had Reign'd 11.

73. Henry III. call'd the Sickly, Son to John; he Marry'd the Lady Catherine, Daughter to John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster. and Grandchild to King Peter of Castile; Reign'd 16 Years, and Died in 1406.

74. John II. Son to Henry, who being an Infant, the rebellious Nobility would have given the Crown to his Uncle Ferdinand, which he generously refus'd; a wonderful Example of Justice, and supported the young King in his Throne, till he was call'd himself to take Possession of that of Aragon. He being son. Don Alvaro de Luna so entirely won the young King's Heart, that he had the whole Power of Government; for which the Great-ones maliciously persecuted him, till they had his Head cut off, without being able to prove any one Crime upon him. The rest of this King's Reign was no less full of Troubles than the former part, yet he held it 48 Years, and Died in 1454.

75. Henry, Son to John, was most villainously treated by his rebellious Subjects, who would have set up his Brother Alonso against him; but he Dying, some of them submitted, and others offer'd the Crown to his Sister Elizabeth, whom they had oblig'd the King to declare his Heiress, tho' he had a Daughter of his own. In this turbulent Condition he Reign'd 20 Years, and Died in 1474.

76. Ferdinand, Son to King John of Aragon, having Marry'd Elizabeth, commonly call'd Isabel, Sister to King Henry, they jointly usurp'd the Crown due to Joanna. Daughter of the said Henry, and thus united the Crowns of Castile and Aragon. They conquer'd the Kingdom of Granada, which was the last Footing the Moors had in Spain. In their Days Columbus discover'd the West-Indies, which have since been such an Addition to the Monarchy of Spain. Next they added the Kingdom of Navarre to their Dominions, and subdu'd all the Kingdom of Naples in Italy. Thus was all Spain, except Portugal, united under one Monarch, and mighty Foreign Dominions added to it, which has continu'd ever since in the same Posture

76. Posture. They reign'd 30 Years, and Elizabeth dying in 1504, the Crown devolv'd to,
77. Philip, Son to the Emperor Maximilian, Arch-Duke of Austria and Duke of Burgundy, who marry'd Joanna Daughter of Isabel, in whose Right he succeeded in the Kingdoms of Castile, but Dy'd in the Year 1506, when he had reign'd but 2 Years, and Queen Joanna being distracted, her Father Ferdinand took upon him the Government again, and held it till 1516, when he departed this Life, and with him ends her Reign, which was of 13 Years, for by reason of the Queen's incapacity to Govern.
78. Charles, her Son by Philip, came into Spain, from Flanders, where he had been born and bred, and was proclaim'd King of the united Kindoms in 1517. The Emperor Maximilian dying in 1519. Charles was chosen in his Place, being the 5th of that Name, and became thereby the greatest Prince that ever was in Europe at least since Charlemaign; for as we have shewn in its place, as Grandson to Maximilian (who marry'd the Heiress of Charles the Warlike, Duke of Burgundy) he possessed in his own right the XVII. Provinces of the Netherlands, and now in his Mother's Right he succeeded to Spain, Naples and the Indies; By Election, as we have said, he wore the Imperial Crown. And to all this added the Dutchy of Milan. In his time there was a Rebellion of the Commons in Spain, which was soon suppress'd, and no such thing has been since known in the Dominions of Castile. The next War was with France, in which King Francis was taken Prisoner by the Spaniards. The Emperor had also Wars in Germany; Took Tunis in Africk, made an unfortunate Expedition to Argier, and reign'd gloriously 40 Years, at the end whereof in 1556 the Year he more gloriously, of his own free will resign'd the Empire to his Brother Ferdinand, and the Dominions of Spain to his Son Philip. By him the Crown of Spain had the Addition of all the Low-Countries, the Dukedom of Burgundy and that of Milan. After his Resignation, he liv'd two Years a Holy Life, in the Monastery of St. Justa, of the Order of St. Jerome, near Placencia and dy'd in 1558.
79. Philip II. Son to Charles V. from whom the Dutch revolted, and being supported by France and England could never be reduc'd. The Moriscoes, or Race of the Moors, rebell'd in Spain, but were entirely subdu'd. Prince Charles the King's eldest Son was put to Death by his Father's Command, on some jealousy. In the Year 1571 Don John of Austria, Philip's Bastard Brother, obtain'd the famous Naval Victory over the Turks at Lepanto. Henry the Cardinal, King of Portugal, dying without Issue, King Philip in 1580 possess'd himself of that Crown, as Son of Elizabeth, the Daughter of King Emanuel, and by that means, united all the Kingdoms of Spain under one Head. In 1588, he set out the famous Fleet against England, most of which perish'd by Storms. He built the Escorial in 30 Years, and besides many other Cruelties he was guilty of, oppress'd the Kingdom of Aragon, for asserting its own Rights, and at length dy'd, in the Year 1598, after a bustling, but inglorious Reign of 42 Years.
80. Philip III. Son to Philip II. The most remarkable Action of whose Reign was the Banishing of the Moriscoes, or Progeny of the Moors out of Spain. The number of those that departed, is by some set at 8, by others 900000 Souls. He Reign'd above 22 Years, and departed this life in 1621.

81. Philip IV. Son to Philip III. was a Prince wholly addicted to Pleasure, yet intangled in bloody Wars all his life time. With the Dutch, who revolted under his Grandfather, and whom at last he was oblig'd to allow to be a free State. With France upon many old Pretensions; with the Rebellious Catalonians, whom he reduc'd; and with Portugal, which revolted, and by the assistance of France and England, prevail'd and has been ever since an independent Monarchy. He Reign'd 44 Years, and dy'd in 1665.

82. Charles II. Son to Philip, a weak Prince, both in Body and Mind, in whose Minority a Peace was concluded with Portugal. He had Wars with France the greatest part of his Life, but always came off loser. He reign'd 35 Years, and dy'd in 1700, being the last of the Spanish Male Line, which was the occasion of the bloody Wars that ensu'd and still continue, on Account of the Succession to that Crown. Philip Duke of Anjou, Grandson to the present King of France Lewis XIV. being immediately proclaim'd King, and soon after receiv'd in Spain, as Grandson to King Charles II's eldest Sister. But Lewis XIV. having upon his Marriage with the Infanta of Spain, for himself and his Heirs. in the most solemn manner renounc'd all pretention to the Succession by virtue of this Marriage; The late Emperor Leopold being the next Heir laid claim to the Crown, and gave his Right to his second Son, the Arch Duke Charles, who was immediately declar'd King of Spain, and at this present time (Ann. 1708) is in possession of all the Italian part of the Spanish Dominions, and a good part of the Continent of Spain, and is in a fair way of obtaining the whole.

By this succinct Table of Kings it appears, that the Crown of Spain is hereditary, and has been so ever since the Moors overran that Country: And it is to be observ'd that the Heir to the Crown is always call'd Prince of Asturias.

The DOMINIONS of this Crown are certainly the largest, and perhaps the wealthiest of any Monarchy in the World; for the Kingdoms of Mexico and Peru in America extend about 2000 Leagues in Length from North to South, besides all the Islands and other vast Dominions in those Parts, whose infinite Wealth is well known: Spain itself we see here is one of the largest Countries of Europe, besides which it possesses the Kingdom of Naples, the Islands of Sicily and Sardinia, the Dukedom of Milan, part of the Low Countries, all in Europe: the Canary Islands in Africk and the Philippine Islands in Asia, wherefore the Spaniards with Reason say, the Sun never sets upon their Kings Dominions. It seems almost incredible that a Kingdom having such large and wealthy Dominions, should be so weak, as experience shews it to be; yet this will seem no wonder, if we consider that the great distance between all those several Dominions is a great weakness; then the continual Wars we may say for some Ages have extremely wasted it; but above all the ill Government ever since Charles V. has been more destructive than even all the rest, the Revenues have been extravagantly wasted by extortion, and consum'd by Pensions to such an infinite number of Persons that very little remains to the Crown.

Having mention'd the REVENUE it will not be improper to give the Estimate of it we find in Rodrigo Mendez Silva, as it stood in the Year 1675, when he writ, which is thus. The Revenue of the Crown arising from Spain only, without including the West Indies, or any foreign Parts: is 28 Millions of Ducats, which is near eight Millions Sterling, Yearly. The Revenue of the Archbishops and Bishops of Spain all together 1900000 Ducats. The Prebendaries Parishes and other Ecclesiastical Benefices, as much more. The Estates of the Dukes, who are Grantees 1990000 Ducats; those of Marquesses Grantees 350000; those of Earls Grantees 350000; those of Dukes Marquesses and Earls who are no Grantees 3150000. By this some Guess may be given at the rest, which it is impossible for us to come at.

The Money of Spain is of several sorts; Gold Pieces, as Pistoles about 17 Shillings value, half Pistoles, double Pistoles and Quadruples; the Pistoles are call'd also Doblones. The Silver Coin, Royals, which we commonly reckon worth 6 Pence; Pieces of Eight, that is 8 Royals, which we find are worth 4 Shillings 6 Pence, or more, and therefore the Royal must be above 6 Pence; half and quarter pieces of Eight, but these are rare. Royals Brads, which they call Vellon, are not any particular Pieces, but only a way of reckoning as we do by Pounds, and the Royal Brad is worth but 4 Pence. Of small Brads Money call'd Quartos and Ochavos, or Half-pence and Farthings there is an infinite quantity. Maravedies, tho' often nam'd in Accounts, have no being but the Name, as Mites among us. Ducats will frequently be here mention'd, and which are no particular Pieces, but are of the same value as the Spanish Escudos, or Crowns, and those are worth five Shillings and Sixpence of our Money, at Sixpence for a Royal Plate, but six Shillings, allowing the Royal to be above Sixpence, as was observ'd above.

The CORTES are the same thing as a Parliament, being an Assembly of Lords Spiritual and Temporal and Commons, whereof the Nobility and Clergy are much more numerous than in England, and the Commons much fewer, for there are generally but 17 Cities, and one Market Town, that send their Representatives to the Cortes of Castile; each sends two, and are these; Burgos, Soria, Segovia, Avila, Valladolid, in old Castile; Leon, Salamanca, Zamora, Toro in the Kingdom of Leon; Toledo, Cuenca, Gaudalajara, Madrid in new Castile; Sevil, Granada, Cordova, Murcia and Jaen for Andaluzia. This is for the Dominions of Castile; for those of Aragon, Catalonia and Valencia meet apart, and Biscay is a separate Lordship. In the chusing of the Commons, the King generally recommends the Persons, and is always comply'd with.

The great Councils which sit in the King's Palace at Madrid are, 1. The Cabinet Council, to which seldom above 3 are admitted, besides the King. and resolves matters of the greatest moment. 2. The Council of State, like our Privy Council, instituted by Charles V. Ann. 1526. 3. The Royal Council of Castile, instituted by King Ferdinand III. Ann. 1246. for the particular Affairs of that Kingdom, and the ultimate Appeal in all Law Sutes, for which reason there are 12 able Lawyers in it, and the Person appealing to it is to lay down 1500 Pistoles, which he forfeits if cast, to prevent vexatious and needless Appeals. 4. The Council of Aragon for the Affairs of that Crown and its dependences, by Charles V. Ann. 1542. 5. The Council of War for all for martial Affairs. 6. The Council of Italy for the Spanish Dominions there, by Charles V. Ann. 1556. 7. The Council of the Indies for disposing of all things in those Parts, by Charles V. Ann. 1524. 8. The Council de Hazienda, or of the Revenues, for the better management of them, by Philip III. An. 1602. 9. The Council of Orders for regulating all things belonging to the Knights of Santiago, Alcantara and Calatrava, by King Ferdinand, Ann. 1489. 10. The Council of Flanders, to take Charge of the Low-Countries, by Philip IV. Ann. 1628. 11. The Council of the Inquisition, by Ferdinand, Ann. 1483. 12. La Junta de Millones, or Council of Millions, by Philip IV. Ann. 1653, so call'd because the Revenue passes through its Hands, and is an Exchequer Court, to assist the Council of the Revenue. 13. The Council of the Croizade, by Queen Joanna, Ann. 1509, for the receiving and disposing of the Money rais'd upon the Bull of the Croisade. 14. The Council de Aposento, or of Lodgings, for Lodging and Quarters all Persons in the King's Service, by King Alonso, Ann. 1341. 15. The Council de Camara, or of the Chamber, for furnishing all Posts and Offices vacant. 16. La Junta de Bosques Reales, by Charles V. to take care of all the King's Woods and Forreits.

The GRANDEES of Spain, are the Prime Nobility, who have that Title given them for some extraordinary Service, and their Privilege is to be cover'd before the King. There are Noblemen of all Degrees, as Dukes, Marquesses and Earls admitted to this Honour, and others of all the said Degrees have it not, it being as has been said, a peculiar distinctive mark of Favour, bestow'd on some Families, and not inherent to the Titles of Dukes, Marquesses and Earls. There are two Classes, or Ranks of them, only distinguishable by their being so call'd, and that the last created of the first Class, takes Place of the Eldest of the second Class, for they are all cover'd in the King's Presence, and the method is, that as soon as the King puts on his Hat, they put on theirs.

To give an account of the Genius, Manners and Customs of our Neighbour European Nations, seems needless, where every Man sets up for a Judge of them, and believing he knows as much as another, seldom Credits any thing, but what jures with his own Notion, and that for the most part is only Reflection and Scandal. Thus we generally see the Characters given by our Writers of Forreign Nations, are rather Invectives and Libels, than impartial Representations. To give the Spaniards their due, no Man, who has read any thing of History can deny their Bravery, and being excellent Soldiers in all Ages. Their Genius for Learning is inferior to none, and yet it must be own'd that of late Years, they have so much apply'd themselves to metaphysical Notions, wherein they exceed all others, that they have in a manner forsaken more useful Studies. For Loyalty to their Princes no Nation can compare, especially with the Subjects of the Crown of Castile, and all of them in general have been known to starve in the Armies, yet none of them ever to desert. What account may be given of their Wit, appears by the many Books, of that sort we have Translated into English, besides many more: In a word, they are zealous in Religion, constant in Friendship, modest in Behaviour, undaunted in Danger, patient in Hardships, charitable, charitable, generous and free hearted. This, those who can endure nothing but railing will call a Panegyrick, rather than a Character, and yet it is no more than what is literally true. But they are not without their Faults, they are too much addicted to the fair Sex, and what Nation is not? They are Haughty, which is rather in Appearance than otherwise, for no People in the World are more Courteous. 'Tis true, this Humour is too Epidemical, for those of the lowest Ranks and Condition are as Proud as the highest, which has this very ill effect, namely, that they think themselves above mechanick Arts and servile Employments, whereby themselves are Starv'd, while French Men and other Foreigners run away with great Earnings by performing those Works here. They are Passionate, and carry their Resentments too high, and being nice to a Fault in points of Honour, are apt to be guilty of Bloodshed. To conclude, this is a Subject too difficult to handle, and there are good and bad of all Nations.

But these Spanish Authors have been a little too kind to their own Country, if we may believe Mr. Willoughby's Character of it, who spent near three Months there, in the Year, 1664. and pass'd from Reussillon thro' Catalonia, Valencia, Murcia, Granada, Andalusia and Castile, and so to Guiposcoa, whereby he may be thought to have seen enough of the Land to be able to give an account of it; but a transient view only is not sufficient to enable a Man to give a full Judgment of a Country, since the appearance of many things at that instant may be different from what they are at other times; and the novelty and strangeness of Persons and Places we see but once, may make us have wrong Notions of them. It is apparent that Gentleman was not inclin'd to speak with any advantage of Spain, since he passes over many things worthy of observation without so much as naming 'em, and those he does name he gives not their due praise; as for Example, the Plaza Mayor, or great Square at Madrid, which every Body grants to be both Magnificent and Beautiful to a high degree, he only calls a fair Piazza, or Market. And the Escorial which is past contradiction a most noble Palace, he only names, as if not worthy of any Character: Abundance of instances of like sort are found in the relation of his Journey, and therefore his descriptions of Towns are not to be very much regarded. His general Character of the Country is in sum as follows:

Spain is in many Places, not to say most, very thin of People, and almost desolate; and in all the Towns, especially in the South and West Parts, many Ruins of Houses are seen. The Tilled Land is only so much as lies near Towns, the rest a wild Country wherein grows Rosemary, Lavender, Juniper, &c. and at least one half of Spain is Mountainous. They have little or no Hay, the Horses and Mules feeding on Straw. The People (says he) are not abstemious, as is reported, Poverty more than Virtue leads 'em to that, for where they Eat at another Man's Cost they are free enough; they are so Lazy that the Shopkeepers will often deny they have a Commodity, rather than take the Pains to reach it, and the ordinary People will not be hired to carry a Burden under an excessive Price. Of their fantastick Pride, even in the midst of Poverty, all the World rings; if you would employ them upon any thing servile, they cry, send for a French Man; and indeed the French do almost all the Work in Spain, and I believe (says he) one fourth or fifth part of the People in Spain are of that Nation. In all kind of Learning the Spaniards are far behind all the rest of Europe, their chief Study being the old Philosophy and School Divinity. In Religion they are the most rigid Romanists in the World, and have a Saying, If you leave the Church in one Puntillo, God b' w' y'. For Fornication and Impurity they are the worst of all Nations in Europe, and have impudent Whores in their Inns, who are to be hired at a very cheap rate. They Travel mostly on Mules, who are better at climbing Mountains than Horses, will endure longer and harder Travel, and are maintained with less charge. The People take great liberty in censuring the evil Counsellors, and complaining of Taxes, but at the same time express great Honour for the King, who they say means well. Bread is often very scarce and dear, especially when the Summer proves Dry, for the Soil is in great part barren, and the People's Sloth makes a great deal lie Untill'd that would be Prolifick. As to their Dress which that Author describes, every Body is acquainted with it. And the rest of what he remarks is too Trite, and therefore we shall here conclude the summary of what he has said.

The general LANGUAGE of Spain is that they commonly call Romance or Espannol, and sometimes Castellano. The first Name is taken from its Affinity to the Latin or Roman, which is so great that it frequently agrees in Words and Composition, so that there are several Pieces to be seen, which are both Spanish and Latin. The second Name is plain Spanish, and the third Castilian, because in that Kingdom it is spoken in most perfection. The Portuguese resembles it, but is more harsh and uncoth. In Catalonia and Valencia they have a peculiar Language used most by the poorest sort, which is a Dialect of the old French, but very corrupt and unintelligible to others. The Biscayners retain the old Language of Spain, that was in use before the Conquest of the Romans, quite different from all the rest, yet Biscayners, Catalonians and Valencians, all speak Spanish, tho' not generally so perfectly as the Castilians.

Spanish Authors contend that the Christian RELIGION was first planted among them by St. James the Apostle, four Years after our Saviour's Death. St. Chrisostome, Theodoret and others affirm that St. Paul was actually there, and others assert that St. Peter sent Bishops thither. No doubt but Christianity was very early in Spain, and imbraced by many Thousands. The Gothish Kings were Arrians, till Reccaredus, the XVII. of that Race, coming to the Crown in the Year 586. restor'd the Catholic Religion, since when there has never been any Change. Having thus run through all that need be said of it in general, it is time we come to speak of the particular Kingdoms and Provinces, in the same Order as they have been rank'd in speaking of the modern Division of Spain.

C H A P. II.

The Kingdom of GALICIA.

THIS Kingdom is wash'd on the West by the Ocean, on the North by the Cantabrian Sea, or Bay of Biscay, on the East it borders on Asturias and Leon, and on the South upon Portugal, from which it is parted next the Sea by the River Minho; its figure almost square, being about 40 Leagues over every way. The Name has alter'd very little since the time of the Romans, for Justin calls it Gallicia, and says it abounded in excellent Horses, Copper, Lead, Vermilion, and was wonderful Rich in Gold, insomuch that they often turn'd it up in Plowing. Gallicia is suppos'd to be a corruption of Gallio-Græcia.

To speak of what it is at present, it produces Wheat, Miller, all sorts of Herbs, plenty of Cattle, especially Swine, whose Bacon far exceeds the Westphalia; strong Mules, good Horses, but not large, and noble Wines, as is well known, particularly that of Ribadavia. The Turnips here grow to such a Bulk that they often serve for Children to sit on like Blocks, and are so sweet that they often eat slices of them raw. It is Cold for Spain, and very Mountainous, but those Mountains afford plenty of Firing and Timber for building Houses and Ships, and in them were Mines of Gold, Silver and other Metals, as all ancient Authors affirm, but at present either worn out or neglected; but there is very good Marble. The Soil also produces Flax, whereof they make Linnen Cloth.

The Natives speak Spanish somewhat mix'd with Portuguese, which makes it harsh like our Northern English. They are naturally Compassionate, Docile, Affable and Constant in what they take to; the meaner sort Laborious and Industrious. Pennalosa, says they, can serve their King with 8000 Foot, and 2000 Horse; being under an Adelantado or Lord-Lieutenant, a Dignity entail'd in the Family of the Earls of Ribadavia, under whom the King appoints a Governour and Captain General.

In this Kingdom there are 7 Cities, very many Towns and Villages, 54 strong Holds, but most of them gon to ruin, 48 Sea-Ports great and small, one Archbishoprick, and 4 Bishopricks. The Chief Towns of Galicia are,

Compostela.	} Mondonnedo.
Lugo.
Tuy.
Orense.
	} Corunna, or the Groyne.
	} Betanzos.

COMPOSTELA, or St. Jago de Compostela, the Capital City of Galicia, is seated betwixt the two Rivers Sar and Sarela, which meet half a League from it, and are call'd the Archbishop's River, at the Foot of the high Mountain Pedroso, encompass'd with strong Walls, in which there are 7 Gates, the Work of Don Sancho the I. King of Leon, An. 966. It has several fair Streets and spacious Squares, and stately Structures, besides a Castle. The Territory yields all necessary Provisions for the support of Life; the Inhabitants of the City amount to 10000, in 12 Parishes, with 7 Monasteries of Friars, 5 of Nuns, 4 Chappels, and 4 Hospitals, one of which is the magnificent and delicate reception for Pilgrims, which never has less than 200 Sick. Here is a sovereign Court, consisting of 6 Judges, a Court of Inquisition, and an University erected by D. Alonso de Fonseca, Archbishop of the Place, An. 1532. with 4 magnificent Colleges. when the City was made Tax-free. The Archbishops is absolute in Spirituals and Temporals, but the City is govern'd by a Corregidor and two Alcaldes, keeps two Fairs in a Year, and a Market every Week. The Name of Compostela is a Composition of Campo Estela, the Field of the Star, given it by the Founder King Alonso the Chast, on Account of a Star said to have appear'd over it several Nights, to shew where the Apostle St. James's Body lay hid. It was erected into an Archbishoprick by Pope Calixtus, in the Year, 1120. and has 20 dignify'd Priests, 43 Canons, 18 Demi-Canons, 100 principal Chaplains, and 50 smaller in the Cathedral; the Archbishop's Revenue is 80000 Ducats a Year, or better; within his Diocess are 1183 Parishes. All the dignify'd Priests, and 7 of the Canons, have the Title of Cardinals, like those of Rome, and are allow'd to say a Pontifical Mass in St. James's Chappel. The Apostle's Church is most Majestick, the Cloister joyning to it the best in all Spain, the Cupula of a vast height and extent, adorn'd with four stately Towers about it, besides another far exceeding them all, built by Lewis the XI. King of France, in which there are 24 extraordinary great Bells, one of them of a wonderful Magnitude. The Tabernacle is the noblest in the World, whereon four Kings of Spain hold up the Effigies of the Apostle, and six Angels standing on as many Columns support all the Tabernacle.

Lugo, formerly Lucus Augusti, whence the present Name by Corruption, is a handsome, tho' small City, not far from the source of the River Minho, 70 Miles from Compostela to the East, enclos'd with strong Walls, so wide that two Coaches can go abreast on them, on which are 30 Towers and 5 Gates. The Territory produces all sorts of Provisions, and among the rest excellent Turnips of 50 Pounds weight. The Inhabitants 1000 Families, many of them Gentry of Quality, in 3 Parishes, with 2 Monasteries of Friars and 2 of Nuns, 1 Seminary, 5 Chappels and 2 Hospitals. It is the See of a Bishop, and to the Cathedral belong 11 Dignify'd Priests, 24 Canons, and 8 Demi-Canons, the Bishoprick containing 1020 Parishes, the Prelates Revenue 18000 Ducats.

Tuy, another pleasant City, seated near the Mouth of the River Tuy, in a Valley about 40 Miles South from Compostela, has 5 Gates, 3 Markets, curious Gardens, delicious Wines, variety of Fish, and 1000 Families, in 2 Parishes, with one Monastery of Dominicans, 2 of Nuns and an Hospital. It is also a Bishop's See, and to the Cathedral belong 8 dignify'd Priests, 27 Canons, and 4 Demi-Canons, the Diocess containing 246 Parishes, the Prelate's Revenue 10000 Ducats.

Orense, another Episcopal Sea, is seated on the Banks of the River Minho, over which it has a strong Bridge, 40 Miles South-East from Compostela, the Place Wall'd, well Built, with handfom Streets, has plenty of Provisions, 2000 Families, in 4 Parishes one Monastery of Friars, a College of Jesuits, a good Hospital, 4 Chappels. The Romans call'd it Aque Calida and Orentes, from which last by Corruption came Orense, which name it had by reason that within it there are Springs so hot, that they will boil an Egg, and are us'd for washing, but not medicinally, but without it there are other hot Springs resorted to for the Cure of many Diseases. The Cathedral has 19 dignify'd Priests, 18 Canons, 12 Demi-Canons, in the Diocess 654 Parishes, the Prelate's Revenue 10000 Ducats.

Mondonedo, seated in a Hollow, not far from the Bay of Biscay, 70 Miles North East from Compostella, and but 16 from the Sea-coast, and Water'd by the Rivers Valinadares and Sixto: The City is Wall'd, has 5 Gates, handfom Buildings, 400 Families, one Parish, and without it one Monastery of Fryers, and one of Nuns. Its ancient Name was Brutonia and Britonia. The Cathedral has 11 Dignify'd Priests, 4 Canons, and 6 Demi-Canons; the Diocess 356 Parishes; The Bishop's Revenue 7000 Ducats; and he is Lord of the City.

Corunna; by English Seamen corruptly call'd The Groin, a famous Sea-port, on the Bay of Biscay, safe against the Winds, and defended by two Castles against Enemies. The City is Wall'd, and contains 1500 Families, in 4 Parishes; one of them Collegiate, besides 3 Monasteries of Friars, one of Nuns, 3 Hospitals, and 10 Chappels. It stands between the two Promontories of Cape Finisterre and Cape Ortegal, 30 Miles North from Compostella, and is Wealthy, being a Place of considerable Trade.

Betanzos, seated in a Plain to the Northward of Corunna, is a Sea-port, between the Rivers Mandeo and Casca, the City Wall'd, has 5 Gates, 1000 Families, 2 Parishes, 2 Monasteries of Friars, 1 Hospital, and 3 Chappels. The ancient Name was Flavium Brigantium, the last corrupted to Betanzos.

Besides these Cities, there are many Towns of Note, as Padron, on the Ocean; and has 2 stately Bridges over the Rivers Sar and Ulla; the one built by Pompey the Great, the other by Julius Caesar. Noya, between the Rivers Tamor and St. Justo, Wall'd. Pontevedra, Inhabited by 1500 Families. Ribadavia, famous for its delicious Wine, on the River Avia, not far from Minho, has 400 Houses. Vigo, not far from Tuy, famous of late, for the Burning of the Spanish and French Ships near it, by the English and Dutch, in the Year, 1702. Wall'd, and contains 500 Houses. Bayona, below Vigo, without the Mouth of Minho, 400 Houses. Bivero, a Sea-port, next to Asturias, at the Mouth of the River Landrove, 400 Houses, 2 Parishes, 4 Monasteries, 2 Hospitals, and a College. Ribadeo, another Port on the very Edge next Asturias, Wall'd, and containing 350 Houses, and the Title of an Earl. Monforte, another Earldom, has a Castle and Palace, with a stately Bridge over the River Babe, contains 100 Houses, 2 Parishes, 3 Monasteries, and 1 Colledge. Monterrey, within Land, towards the Frontiers of Portugal, Wall'd, with an old Castle, 1 College, 1 Monastery, and 1 Parish. Ferrol, on the Bay of Biscay, a good Harbour, 2 Leagues from Corunna. Aranjo, Celanova, Viana, Condomar, and many more, too tedious to describe.

It must be Noted, that Cape Finisterre, often mention'd by our Seamen, is the most Western Point of this Province.

The Principality of ASTURIAS.

Some say ASTURIAS signifies a forgotten Land, in the Basquish Tongue; others derive the name from the Asturians, a Nation among the Celts, who came out of Gaul; and those who deduce all things from Troy, pretend it was call'd Astiria; some Astir, who after the Destruction of that City, came and Settled there. On the North it lyes along the Bay of Biscay; on the West borders on Galicia; on the South it is divided from Castile and Leon, by a ridge of Mountains, which, as was said in the General Description, has no Name to express it all, but takes several from the Places it passes by. On the Coast it reaches to the Port of Llanes, where it joyns a narrow slip of Land belonging to Old Castile, which runs to the Sea between Asturias and Biscay. The whole Length is about 45 Leagues, and the greatest Breadth under 20.

The General and Great Division of it is into two Parts, the one call'd Asturias de Oviedo, and the other Asturias de Santillana; but the Sub-division is into 7 Liberties, call'd Merindades, and a little separate Province, call'd Liebana. The whole makes a Principality, and is the Title of the King's Eldest Son, who is Stil'd Prince of Asturias, ever since the Year, 1388, when it was first conferr'd on Henry, Son to King John the First, upon that Prince's Marrying Catherine, the Daughter of John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, in Imitation of the English Heirs, call'd Princes of Wales. And this Province was pitch'd upon to give the Title, because it was that where Pelayo, or Pelagius, made a stand and oppos'd the Moors, when they had overcome the rest of Spain; this Country being never Subdu'd by them. The Places of chiefest Note are,

Oviedo. } { Gijon.
Santillana: } { Liebania. Prov:

OVIDEO is the only City in Asturias, seated on a high Flat, betwixt the Rivers Ove and Deva, from which with some little Alteration the name proceeded; formerly the Court of the First Christian Kings, after the conquest of the Moors, till they remov'd to Leon. It is Wall'd, has 7 Gates, an old Castle, 1400 Houses, a Cathedral, 4 Parishes, 4 Monasteries of Friars, and 3 of Nuns; 4 Hospitals, and 6 Chappels; and is an University, and Episcopal See. To the Cathedral belong 17 Dignify'd Priests, 50 Canons, 24 Demi-Canons. The Bishoprick contains 1048 Parishes; and the Prelate's Revenue is, 12000 Ducats. The country about it Mountainous, abounding in Cattle, Indian Wheat, Chestnuts, Corn, and all sorts of Game. The City is about 7 Leagues distant from the Bay of Biscay.

Santillana, tho' no City, is the Capital of that part of Asturias which takes Name from it, and is 5 Leagues East from Santander, on a small River, and contains but 300 Houses, in one Parish, which is Collegiate. The name of it is a Corruption of Santa Juliana; and it is a Marquisat, in the House of the Dukes Del Infantado, thought to have been formerly call'd Concana.

Gijon, was once the Capital of Asturias and the Court of Pelayo, or Pelagius, the first Christian King

King after the Moors Invasion; seated on a Plain near the Sea: It is Wall'd, and has a Castle, a good Port, about 200 handfom Houses, and one Parish. The Romans gave it the name of Ara Sexti.

The little Province of Leizana, above-mentioned, is 9 Leagues in length, and 4 in breadth, being one of the most craggy Mountainous parts of Spain, excessive high, and almost inaccessible, call'd Euzops, in sight of the Sea, and produces plenty of Corn, Wine, Fruit, Cattle and Game, containing 366 Towns and Villages; the chief of them call'd, Potes, 9 Leagues from Santillana, on the River Deza, and has 200 Houses, one Parish, and one Monastery, with another half a League from it. The Province consists of 5 Valleys, call'd Cillerigo, Valdegrado, Uabeharo, Cereceda and Polanes. It is an Earldom belonging to the Dukes del Infantado, and was never conquer'd by the Moors, by reason of its natural Strength. Unless it be here we shall not know where to look for the fabulous Mountain Country, by some confidently reported to have lain unknown many Ages in Spain, and accidentally discover'd by the Duke of Alva's Servants looking after a Hawk, which Story being no better than a Dream, it is needless to say any more of it, than to warn the Reader not to credit such Chimeras.

The Lordship of BISCAY.

BISCAY, As generally taken, is divided into three Provinces, Biscay properly so call'd, Guipuzcoa and Alaba. The whole is bounded on the West, by that slip of Castile, which reaches to the Sea, and parts Asturias and Biscay on the South. The ridge of Mountains, before taken notice of, branching from the Pyrenees, parts it from Old Castile and Navarre; on the East the same Mountains separate it from Navarre, as does the little River Vidazo from France; all the North-side is washed by that Sea, we commonly call the Bay of Biscay. The whole length from East to West is near 40 Leagues, the greatest Breadth from North to South not 20, and much less in other Parts. This is properly the ancient Cantabria, never subdu'd by the Romans till the Emperor Augustus came in Person to reduce it. The Country is Mountainous, and produces neither Wheat, Wine, nor Oyl, but abundance of Millet and Fruit, so that Cyder is the common Drink, unless we reckon a small sort of Wine made there call'd Chacelin, which will keep but a short time, yet is pleasant, and drank there like small Beer. Flax also grows here, and abundance of Timber fit for building of Ships: But its greatest Treasure lyes in the inexhaustible Mines of Iron, the best in the World, and transported thence to all Parts. There are whole Towns of Smiths, who make all sorts of Iron Ware, and great store of Swords and Fire-arms. There is also much Wool Ship'd off in the Sea-ports, but most of that comes out of Castile, tho' this Country is not altogether without it, but not so fine as the other.

The Natives speak the Original Spanish us'd before the coming of the Romans, which they have preserv'd under all Governments, tho' there are none but what speak the present Spanish also. They are Generous, Brave, Warlike, Hardy, using few words, Colerick, Active, excellent Pen-men, which advances them to high Posts; and able Sailors. Their Valour has acquir'd their extraordinary Privileges, from all that have govern'd them, and at present the King of Spain, only stiles himself Lord of Biscay, they are extraordinary Loyal, are govern'd by their own Laws, and never admit of any Innovation. The chief places,

In Biscay , proper.	{ Ordunna .
	{ Bilbao .
	{ Durango .
In Guipuzcoa :	{ Fuenterabia .
	{ St. Sebastian .
	{ Tolosa .
In Alaba .	Vitoria .

BISCAY, properly so call'd, on the West, borders upon that slip of Old Castile which runs to the Sea, on the South upon Castile, and part of Alaba, East-ward upon Guipuzcoa, and has the Bay of Biscay on the North.

Ordunna, is the only place in this Province, dignified with the Title of a City, seated in a pleasant Vale under high Mountains, about 6 Leagues from the Sea, being a Town of good Trade, containing 300 Houses, 2 Parishes, one of them Collegiate, one Monastery of Friars, and one of Nuns.

Bilbao, tho' no City, is now the Capital of Biscay, as being a place of great Trade, by reason it has a good Port, small Vessels coming up to the Mole, and others of lesser Bulk lying further out. The great Export here is of Wool and Iron, most of this in Bars, but very much also in Swords, Horseshoes, Fire-Arms and other necessities. The Town stands 2 Leagues from the Sea, on the River Ibañabal, formerly call'd Nervius. It contains about 1200 Houses, 5 Parishes, 5 Monasteries of Friars, and 7 of Nuns, and a Bridge over the River. It was built by Don James Lopez de Haro, Lord of Biscay, Ann. 1300, calling it Bello Vado, that is, Good Ford, from one there is by it, corruptly Bilbao, and hither remov'd the Trade of Bermeo, the ancient Flaviobriga, which some mistake for this Place, which stands where formerly was the Portus Amanus. It lies in the Latit. 43 Deg. 20 Long. 16 Deg. If any Stranger takes a House in this Town, before the Year is up, they oblige him to give an account of himself, to prove that he is well Born, and of ancient Christian extraction, which done he is never more disturb'd, but if he cannot do it, they oblige him to quit the Place. The Reason is, because the People of this Country, have always preserv'd themselves from mixing with any of Jewish, or Moorish Race, and therefore will have none to settle among them, but such as are untainted in Blood, and for the same reason they admit of no Slaves among them. The same is practis'd through all Biscay, taken in the largest extent, Durango, is 5 Leagues to the South East from Bilbao, on a small River, among Mountains, inhabited by 1400 Families, most employ'd in Forging of Sword Hilts, and other sorts of Iron Work.

GUIPUZCA follows next, borders West-ward on Biscay and Alaba, South-ward on Alaba and Navarre, Eastward on Navarre and France, and North-ward lyes along the Bay of Biscay.

Fuenterabia is its only City, seated on an Eminence which is almost a Peninsula, on the River Vidazo, near that part of the Pyreneans, call'd Sierras de Jasquivel, and Cape Olearzo, on the utmost Borders of Spain next to France, from which 'tis only separated by the aforesaid River. It is well fortified, but has not above 200 Houses, and one Parish: The Original name was Ondarribaya, signifying, the Strand of the River, by Corruption Fuenterabia. Flavius Flavius Suinthila the Gothish King built it, in the Year 626, but the Castle was erected by Sancho VIII, King of Navarre. Ann. 1194. Here the Kings Henry IV. of Castile, and Lewis XI. of France had a meeting in the Year 1463. And in a small Island form'd by the River Vidazo, (which is the Boundary of France and Spain) call'd the Island of Pheasants, was the famous Congress Ann. 1659, when the Peace was concluded betwixt France and Spain. It is 3 Leagues from St. Sebastian Eastward, and 6 from Bayonne in France Westward.

St. Sebastian, a noted Port on the Bay of Biscay, 3 Leagues West from Fuenterabia, almost enclos'd by Rivers falling into the Sea, particularly that they call Brunco. The Mole will receive 200 Ships. The Town is enclos'd by a triple Wall, the Work of Charles V. besides a strong Castle built by Sancho VIII, King of Navarre, Ann. 1194. The Inhabitants amount to 1500 Families, in two Parishes, with three Monasteries of Friars, two of Nuns, and an Hospital. Some suppose it to have been anciently call'd Salus Bassiani, and thence corruptly St. Sebastian. Others say the name of the Place was Yzum.

Telesia, by the French call'd Tolosette, to distinguish it from Toulouse in Languedoc, lies in a Valley, between two Mountains, a pleasant Place, 4 Leagues South from St. Sebastian, on the Banks of the River Araxes, over which it has a stately Bridge; the Town is Wall'd and has a good Ditch, contains 400 Houses, one Parish, one Monastery of Friars, and one of Nuns.

Besides these here mention'd, Villa Franca, on the same River Araxes, is wall'd, as is Mondragon on the River Deva, Placencia, on the same River, Segura, on the River Araxes, and many more.

Alava borders Westward, on Biscay, and Old Castile, Southward still on Old Castile, Eastward on Navarre, and Northward on Guipuzcoa and Biscay.

Vitoria, its Capital City, is seated on the side of a Hill, Wall'd, and has 10 Gates, and 11 Streets, 9 of them ending in the great Market-place, where a Market is kept 3 Days in the Week. There are in it 1200 Houses, 5 parishes, one of them Collegiate, 2 Monasteries of Friars, 2 of Nuns 6 Chappels, 3 Hospitals and a Grammar School. Some will have it to have been anciently call'd Bizantium, and others give it other names, but the most probable Opinion is, that it was built by King Leuvigildus, Ann. 580, and call'd Vitoriacum. It is needless to mention Trevinno, Salvatierra, Alegria, Muga and several others places of less note, there being nothing in them remarkable.

Before we quit these Provinces, it will be proper to observe that Biscay is by Spanish Authors of good note, said to have been a Lordship in the days of the Gothish Kings, and they name Andeca, one of those Lords, slain in the unfortunate Battle with King Roderick against the Moors. Whatever there was before, certain it is that Biscay was never subdued by those Infidels, nor will the Natives ever suffer any of them, or the Jews to live among them, and have been always extraordinary nice in preserving themselves, from mixing with any of those Races. The House of Haro were a long time Lords of Biscay, (till the Province properly so call'd, was annex'd to the Crown of Spain, by King John the first, Ann. 1371) he coming to it by Inheritance, in the Right of his Mother the Lady Joanna Manuel, sole Heiress of that Family. This Prince according to the Custom of the Country was Sworn, under the Tree, near the little Town of Garnica; King Alonso IX. Ann. 1200 united the Province of Guipuzcoa to Castile, having taken it from the King of Navarre. Alaba voluntarily submitted it self to King Alonso XII. Ann. 1332, who in Return, not only confirm'd all its ancient Privileges, but added many new ones.

C H A P. III.

The Kingdom of N A V A R R E.

Navarre is one of the ancient Kingdoms of Spain, erected soon after the Conquest of the Moors, as may be seen in the Table of Kings, it was the Country of the Vascones, and said to have been call'd by the Romans Ruronia. The present name some fetch as far as from Mount Vinius, whence the People call'd Navinii, corruptly Navaii, and thence Navarre, which is a strange notion. Others say King Sancho VII. taking for his Device, a Bar with two Lyons tugging at it, which were the Kings of Castile and Aragon, from thence his Country was call'd la Barra, the Bar, and by changing one letter Navarra. Others again derive it from Nova Ara, an new Alter, but the most natural and likely is, that it is so call'd from the Valleys, at the Foot of the Pyrenean Mountains, in the Basquish Tongue call'd Navas, and a Country of such Valleys Navarraea, whence easily came Navarra, only omitting the Letters e and i.

On the North it is divided from France by the Pyrenean Mountains, which also cut it into two parts, the upper and the lower, the former being much the largest, and on the Spanish side is that we are to speak of; the other beyond the Mountains being much smaller, and belonging to France, which the Reader may see describ'd in that Kingdom. On the West, this we here speak of borders upon Biscay and Old-Castile, Southward upon Old-Castile and Aragon, and Eastward upon Aragon. The length of it from North to South is 30 Leagues, the greatest breadth from East to West 27.

It is divided into 5 Districts call'd Merindades, which are those of Pamplona, Tudela, Estela, Olite and Sanguessa, parted by prodigious high and uncoth Mountains, yet yielding good Corn, Wine, Oyl, Honey, Fruit, Grain, Herbs, and feeding much Cattle, besides infinite number of Fowl wild and tame. Here are abundance of curious Springs, and healthful Baths; and formerly there was Gold and Silver. The Natives speak the Basquish Tongue, somewhat different from the Biscainers. They are affable, brave, martial, pleasant, compassionate, charitable, religious, laborious, little talkers, but have good Wits when improv'd.

This

This Country had Kings of its own from about the Year 724, for Authors vary some Years, but was united to the Crown of Castile by King Ferdinand, in 1515, when he had expell'd the lawful Possessor John d. Albret, on no other account but to satisfy his unbounded Ambition. Ever since this Navarre has continu'd annex'd to the Crown of Castile, the lower Navarre which is on the French side, the Alps remaining to the rightful Kings, who afterward inheriting the Crowns of France, annex'd it to that. In the Spanish Navarre there are 7 Cities, one Bishoprick and several good Towns. The chief whereof are,

Pamplona.	}	Olite.
Tudela.		Viana.
Estela.		Tafalla.
Cascante.		Paleata, Tudela, &c.

PAMPLONA, the Capital of this Kingdom, is seated in a spacious Plain, at the Foot of the Pyrenean Mountains, on the Banks of the River Arga, over which it has 5 Bridges, every way encompass'd with high Hills, and under them pleasant Meadows and delightful Gardens. The Walls have 5 Gates and the Castle is strong, built after the model of that at Antwerp, by King Philip II. on the West side, with several Bastions and Cazemats, and within it a Church, Mills, and a good Well, and all other conveniences, with 100 Families, besides the Garrison. The City is divided into 3 Quarters or Wards, call'd the Burrough of St. Cernon, the Town of St. Nicolas and the Navarria, amongst which there were formerly great Factions, which ran so high that much Blood was shed among them, till united by King Charles III. of Navarre, Ann. 1423. The Country about produces Wine, Fruit and some Corn, and has plenty of Cattle, and all sorts of Fowl. The Inhabitants are 5000 Families, in three Parishes, with 8 Monasteries of Friars, 5 of Nuns, 4 Hospitals. Here is an University founded in the Year 1608, and a Bishop's See, under which are 1156 Parishes, the Prelates Revenue 28000 Ducats, and to the Cathedral belong 10 dignify'd Priests, 24 Canons and 16 Demi-Canons. Spanish Authors suppose this City to be built by the Greeks, and rebuilt by Pompey the Great, by the name of Pompeopolis, whence corruptly Pamplona. The Moors took and call'd it Sanfuerza, the Emperor Charlemain recover'd it; but being lost again it was retaken by King Garcia Imiguez, Ann. 785, who thereupon stil'd himself King of Pamplona. In 831, it fell again under the Moorish Dominion, and was again recover'd 8 Years after by King Innigo Arista, from which time it was possess'd by the Kings of Navarre, till Ferdinand of Aragon took it in 1512, and united the Kingdom to Castile, as has been said. It is Head of a District, or Merindad, in which there are 11 Towns, and 258 Villages.

Tudela, a City on the Banks of the River Ebro, about 18 Leagues South from Pamplona, on the side of a Hill, is Wall'd, has an old Castle and fruitful Territory, with about 3000 Houses, in 10 Parishes, one of them Collegiate, 6 Monasteries of Friars and 2 of Nuns, and is Head of a Merindad, or District, in which there are 2 Cities and 22 Towns. It has a stately Stone Bridge over the River Ebro, built by King Sancho VIII. Ann. 1194. The Latin Name is Tutela, corruptly Tudela:

Estela, a City built by Sancho Remirez, King of Navarre, Ann. 1128, for the conveniency of Pilgrims going to Santiago, through the difficult pass call'd Lizarra, signifying a Star, whence the name of Estela from Stella. It is seated in a Plain, on the River Ega, over which it has 4 handsome Bridge, 5 Gates in the Walls, a good old Castle stately Buildings, the Houses about 2000, in 6 Parishes, with 4 Monasteries of Friars, 2 of Nuns, a noble Hospital and a College, as being an University ever since the Year 1565, abounding in all things necessary for Humane Life, and being Head of a District, or Merindad, in which is one City, 24 Towns and 106 Villages.

Cascante, on the Banks of the River Quelles, not far from Tudela to the South, in a fruitful Territory, inhabited by 800 Families in one Parish, with one Monastery of Friars, and another of Nuns. King Philip IV. made it a City, Ann. 1630, having been anciently a Roman Colony, and is in the District of Tudela.

Olite, a small City on the Banks of the River Cidazo, in a pleasant Plain, betwixt Pamplona and Tudela, Wall'd, and in such a fruitful Territory, that it is become a Proverb, Olite and Tafalla the flower of Navarre. A stately Palace built by King Charles III. of Navarre, is a great Ornament to it, the Houses being but 400 in 4 Parishes, with 2 Monasteries of Friars; but is Head of a District or Merindad, in which are one City, 19 Towns, and 26 Villages.

Viana, stands on the Frontiers next Castile, in sight of Logronno, on the opposite Banks on the River Ebro, wall'd, and has 4 Gates and a Castle, all in a very fertile Territory. The Houses 700, in 2 Parishes, with one Monastery, and a good Hospital: King Philip made it a City, Ann. 1630, and suposed to have had this name of Viana; by Corruption from Diana, a Temple of which Goddess is said to have been formerly in that Place.

Tafalla, the River Zidazo washes the Walls and Castle of this City, which stands on a Declivity, with a noble Palace built by King Charles III. of Navarre, in a most delightful and exuberant Territory, the Houses in it being 800 in 2 Parishes, with one Monastery of Friars, made a City by King Philip IV. Ann. 1630.

Besides these Cities there are many good Towns, as Peralta, 6 Leagues from Tudela, with 400 Houses, one Parish, one Monastery, an Hospital and 5 Chappels; Puente de la Reyna, 4 Leagues from Pamplona of 500 Houses; Vera of 150, Milagro of 200 and many others.

This Kingdom lies along the Pyrenean Mountains 22 Leagues, and has 10 Passes over them to France, all an uncouth craggy Country, the most tolerable parts whereof are certain Vales, known by several names. Among these is Baxtan, a prodigious height, extending 7 Leagues in length, from North to South, and 3 and a half in breadth, in which are 29 ancient Seats of Heads of noble Families, and 14 Parishes, inhabited by a Race of People of great Antiquity, fierce, active, daring, and skilful at their Weapons. Roncesvalles is famous in Spanish History, for the overthrow there given by King Alonso the Chast to Charlemain, Ann. 809. The Vale of Roncal, lies East and West betwixt Spain and France, enclos'd by almost inaccessible Mountains, in whose Rocks are found Caves, and in them Bones of humane Bodies of great Antiquity.

C H A P. IV.

The Kingdom of A R A G O N.

IS the second in Dignity of the Kingdoms of Spain; so call'd from the River of the same Name, and was first an Earldom, in the Year, 780. under Don Aznar, Son to Eudo, Duke of Guienne in France, and Lord of Biscay, as it continu'd till 1034. when it was made a Kingdom, under Don Ramiro, Son to Don Sancho the Greater of Navarre. In 1137. the Principality of Catalonia was annex'd to it, and in 1238. the Kingdom of Valencia. At last King Ferdinand marrying Isabel, or Elizabeth, Princess of Castile, in 1469. those two Crowns were united, as they have continu'd ever since. The Privileges of this Nation were so great, that they had always a Supreme Magistrate, call'd El Justicia Mayor de Aragon, or Chief Justice of Aragon, who was a check upon the King, his Business being to do the Subject Right against the Sovereign, and therefore Appeals were brought to him from the other Courts, and from the King himself. Nor was this all, for by Contract made with their first King, and Sworn to by all his Successors, if any of them infring'd their Franchises, they might lawfully take up Arms against him, under the said Justice, without being reputed Rebels. King Peter of Aragon prevail'd with the Cortes, or Parliament, to abolish this Privilege, granting them others in lieu of it; but King Philip the II. of Spain, inrag'd at their defending his Secretary Antony Perez, sent an Army, which broke through all their Liberties, and reduc'd them to no better Condition than the meanest Province.

This Kingdom is bounded on the North by the Pyrenean Mountains, dividing it from France; on the West it has Navarre, and the 2 Castiles, New and Old; on the South the Kingdom of Valencia, and on the East the Principality of Catalonia, and part of Valencia. The whole length of it from North to South is 70 Leagues, and the Breadth between 30 and 40. The Country is Mountainous, but full of delightful Vales, extraordinary fertile, producing Wheat, Wine, Oyl, Saffron, and most delicious Fruit, and Breeding great Numbers of Cartel, and multitudes of wild and tame Fowl. The Mountains are said to have Mines of Gold and Iron, of which little is made, but the Rivers have great store of Fish.

The Natives are Generous, Courteous, well Bred, Ingenious, good Soldiers, zealous in Religion, and strict observers of their Laws; being at the same time austere in Conversation, and positive in their Opinions. In some Parts a Dialect of the Catalonian, or the old French, of the Province of Limosin is spoken, which is only among the meaner Sort, but all in general speak the common Spanish, tho' not so Elegantly as in Castile. The River Ebro cuts the whole Kingdom into two equal Parts, North-West and South-East, yet that Division is not taken notice of, there being no other Provinces now than what are made by the Diocesses, which are 7, being 1 Archbishoprick, and 6 Bishopricks. There are also 10 Cities, 7 very rich Abbeys, and 2 famous Universities. Which are,

ZARAGOZA, or Saragossa, the Metropolis of this Kingdom, is seated almost in the midst of it, on the Banks of the noble River Ebro, in a large, fertile and delightful Plain, water'd by the Rivers Xalon, Gallego and Guerva, in Lat. 41. 30. Long. 42. The Walls of it, tho' old, are strong, with many handsome Towers and 4 Gates. It has two stately Bridges, spacious fine Streets, stately Palaces, other magnificent Structures, and pleasant Gardens, Orchards, and shady Walks. Besides, the Air is serene and healthy, and the Country furnishes it with all Things for Service and Delight. The Inhabitants amount to 15000 Families, very many of Quality, divided into 14 great Parishes, besides 3 small ones, as also 23 Monasteries of Friars, 13 of Nuns, a noble Hospital, endow'd with Revenues to serve 800 Sick Persons, and 2 others for Orphans. It has an University founded in the Year 1474. by Don Peter Cerbuna, Bishop of Tarazona, and enlarg'd by King Philip the II. Ann. 1542. The Exchange is a good Structure, and was Built in 1551. The Archbishop's Revenue is 45000 Ducats a Year; for it was made Metropolitan by Pope John the XXII. Ann. 1318. and the Cathedral is serv'd by 12 Dignify'd Priests, 24 Canons, 39 Demi-Canons, and 70 Benefic'd Priests. The Tabernacle of it, which is most curiously wrought, weighs 612 Pounds, all of massive Silver. The King's Palace stood without the City, and since their residing at Madrid, has been given to the Inquisition, which keeps its Court there. The Name of it is a Corruption of Cesar Augustus, given it by Augustus, when he either built or repair'd it, during his War with the Cantabrians. The Church call'd of Our Lady of the Pillar, from a Statue of the Blessed Virgin standing on a Column, Spanish Authors say was Founded by S. James the Apostle, and is resorted to from all Parts, as a Place of singular Devotion. The Moors, when they overran Spain, made themselves Masters of this Place, and several of their Kings made it their Residence, till retaken by King Alonso the I. of Aragon and Navarre, in 1118. who kept his Court in it, as did all his Successors, till the Kingdom being united to Castile, as was said before, the Kings have ever since resided in Castile.

HUESCA, formerly call'd Osc, about 10 Leagues North-East from Zaragoza, stands on an Oval rising Ground, in the midst of a spacious delightful Plain, on the River Isuela, in a healthy, pleasant Air, and fertile Soil. The strong Walls of it were Built by the Moors, and have on them 99 Towers, and 10 Gates. The Inhabitants amount to 5000 Families, in 4 Parishes, with 5 Monasteries of Friars, and one of Nuns. Being an University, it has 6 stately Colleges; and is also a Bishoprick, worth 13000 Ducats a Year to its Prelate, and he takes Place next to the Archbishop of Zaragoza. To the Cathedral belong 9 Dignify'd Priests, 28 Canons, and 6 Demi Canons, and the Tabernacle in it weighs 232 Pounds of Silver. It continu'd, after the Conquest of the Moors, 380 Years under the Power of those Infidels; and was recover'd from them by King Peter I. of Aragon, in the Year 1096.

Jaca is at the Foot of the Pyrenean Mountains, in a Plain about 20 Leagues North from Zaragoza, and 10 from Huesca. It is Round, Wall'd, has a strong Castle, good Buildings, a wholesom Air and fruitful Soil. The Inhabitants not above 800 Families; only one Parish, which is also the Cathedral; 3 Monasteries of Friars, one of Nuns, and a good Hospital. Don Aznar, the first Earl of Aragon, recover'd it from the Moors, Ann. 795. It is an Episcopal See, and to the Cathedral belong 9 Dignify'd Priests, 17 Canons, the same number of Demi-Canons; and the Bishop's Revenue is but 3000 Ducats, the smallest of any in all Spain.

Teruel, in the South part of the Kingdom, 27 Leagues from Saragossa, on the Banks of the River Turia, or Guadalquivar, as the Moors call it, signifying clear Water, on an Eminence, encompass'd by large Meadows, and those shut in by Mountains, affording a delightful Prospect, being cover'd with stately Trees, odoriferous Plants and fragrant Flowers, in curious Gardens and Orchards, besides exuberant Corn-fields. The City Wall'd, Inhabited by 1300 Families, in 8 Parishes, with 4 Monasteries of Men, one of Nuns, and a wealthy Hospital. The Romans either founded or rebuilt it, by whom it was call'd Tintania, Turupia, and Tiar-Julia: Being destroy'd by the Moors, it was rebuilt by King Alonso II. of Aragon, Ann. 1171. The Dignity of a Bishoprick was conferr'd on it, Ann. 1577. The Prelate's Revenue being 12000 Ducats; the Cathedral serv'd by 6 Dignify'd Priests, and 14 Canons.

Tarazona, Seated on the Foot of the famous Mountain Moncayo, 3 Leagues from the Frontiers of Castile and Navarre, and 12 Leagues North West, from Saragossa, is Wall'd, well-built, and has a considerable Trade; water'd by many Springs, and the little River Chiles, fertilizing its Territory to produce Corn, Wine, and Oyl. The Inhabitants are 5000 Families, in 3 Parishes; with 4 Monasteries of Friars, 3 of Nuns, and a good Hospital. the present Name is a corruption of the Ancient, which was Tyria Ausonia. The Moors destroy'd it in 724, but repair'd it: From whom it was Taken by King Alonso I. of Aragon, Ann. 1119. and is a Bishoprick, worth above 20000 Ducats a Year.

Albarracin, on the side of a craggy Hill, surrounded with uncouth Mountains and broken Rocks, near the South-west Frontiers, towards Castile, about 5 Leagues West from Teruel, the River Turia running by its strong Walls and stately Castle; Inhabited by 1000 Families, in 3 Parishes, with one Monastery of Friars, and another of Nuns. King Jame, or Jaymes II. of Aragon, raised it to the Dignity of a City, Ann. 1300. The ancient name was Ausa; the present it took from Abenracin, a Moor, who was Lord of it; Corruptly, Albarracin. It was long in the Christian Family of the *Azagra*s of Navarre, who call'd themselves Vassals of St. Mary; till sub'd by King Peter IV. of Aragon. It is a Bishoprick worth 6000 Ducats a Year to its Prelate.

Balbastro stands about 17 Leagues East from Zaragoza, on the pleasant River Vero; over which it has a stately Bridge, in a spacious Plain; Wall'd with many strong Towers; Inhabited by 1500 Families, in one Parish, which is also the Cathedral; having 7 dignified Priests, 12 Canons, as many Demi-Canons, and 40 Chaplains. Here are also 4 Monasteries of Friars, one of Nuns, an Hospital, and 18 Chappels. The Goths call'd it Bigastro; whence, with little Alteration, Balbastro. The Bishoprick is worth to its Prelate, 8000 Ducats a Year.

Calatayud, about 15 Leagues West South-west from Zaragoza, at the Foot of a high Hill, on the delightful Banks of the River Xalon, where it receives the Xiloca, inferior to none for pleasant Air and fertile Soil. The strong Walls have many Towers on them; the Inhabitants are 3000 Families, in 13 Parishes, with 11 Monasteries of Friars, and 4 of Nuns. The ancient Name of it was Bilbilis; which being destroy'd, was Re-built by Ajud the Moorish King of Sevil, calling it Calatayud, which is the present Name. It was gain'd by King Alonso I. of Aragon, Ann. 1120.

Daroca, 16 Leagues South-west from Zaragoza, strongly seated on a craggy Ground, between two Hills, with strong Walls, and on them 114 Towers, with 7 Gates; the whole Circumference being 8527 Roman Feet, the River Xiloca passing by it, and watering its delicious Fertile Plain with several Trenches drawn from it. The Inhabitants are 1000 Families, in 7 Parishes, one of them Collegiate, where are the Corporals, or Linnen Cloths, said to be stain'd with the Blood gushing from a Consecrated Host, when it was Wounded; to which there is a vast resort of People from all Parts. Here are also 4 Monasteries of Friars, and one of Nuns; 8 Chappels, 7 Squares, as many Conduits, and an Hospital. King Alonso I. of Aragon, recover'd it from the Moors, Ann. 1122. Near this City is a wonderful Cave, 8 Yards in Breadth, the same in Height, and 78 in Length.

Borja, is 10 Leagues from Zaragoza to the Westward, a little inclining Northward, not far from the High Mountain Moncayo, at the Foot of a Hill, near the Borders of Castile and Navarre, abounding in all Things; and well Water'd by several Springs and Rivulets; the Walls adorn'd with many Towers; the Castle strong; the Inhabitants 800 Families, in 3 Parishes, one of them Collegiate; 4 Monasteries of Friars, and one of Nuns; a noble Hospital, and several Chappels. The Romans call'd it Belsinum. The Moors gave it the Name of Borja; from whom it was Taken by Alonso I. of Aragon Ann. 1121..

We cannot descend to particularize any below Cities, tho' there are Towns not Inferior to some of them, and others of good Note; as Caspe, 6 Leagues from Zaragoza, of 1000 Houses: Exea, 12 Leagues from that Capital, of 600 Houses: Alcaniz, of 1500 Houses; Monzon, of 800; Epila, of 650; Ayerre and Montalvan, of 400 each; Hijar, of 500; Taufte of the like number; Sos the same; Ariza the same; Belchite, the same; Miquinenza and Sarinnena, 400 each; Villa de un Castillo, of 500; Ainza, 500; Canta Vieja 400; not to mention others of lesser Note. Only the small Village of Telilla, tho' it contains not above 60 Houses, is Remarkable on account of a Bell there is in the Steeple Steeple of its Church, said to ring of itself, without any help, before any extraordinary Revolution or Calamity happens in Spain, whereof several Authors mention many Instances, too long for this Place; nor do we pretend to vouch for the Truth of it.

Ribagorça is an ancient Earldom, in the North part of this Kingdom, 15 Leagues in Length, and 6 in Breadth, in which space, there are 350 Towns and Villages, most of them so small, that in the whole they contain but 4600 Houses; the little Town of Benabarre being the Head of all the rest, and has plenty of Provisions. Here a Noble Man of the same Family with Charlemain, first began, in 741, to oppose the Moors, (who had overrun all Spain) and succeeded so well, through his Valour, that he recover'd all this Country, and call'd himself Earl of Ribagorça; since which the Country has retain'd the Title of an Earldom, and is a distinct Liberty from the rest of the Kingdom.

Sallent, and Val de Tena, the first the principal Town of the latter. This is a Valley in the very Heart of the Pyrenean Mountains, the highest and remotest toward Gascogn in France, and utmost extent of Aragon. The Town of Sallent has 200 Houses; all the rest of the Valley but 500 more. The Town a League and a half from the Spring of the River Gallego, which runs down to it. The name of Sallent, is deriv'd from Salto, to Leap, from a mighty Fall the River call'd Agualimpida, has close by it. In Summer this Place has a good Trade but is inaccessible in Winter, by reason of the Snow lying on the Mountains; and the Trade is occasion'd by 2 Passes leading into France, the one on the West, over the River Gallego to Bearn, and the other on the East, through Forqueta to Bizgorre. Here are above 200 Springs, which bring up abundance of Grass to feed above 30000 Head of Cattle: Besides which, there are great Numbers of Deer and Hares, and multitudes of Wild-Fowl. Wheat they have very little, but great store of Rye, Barley and Hay.

CATALONIA

Is no Kingdom, but a Principality, by the Spaniards call'd Catalunna, by the French Catalogne, and by us between both Catalonia. This Name some will derive from Castellani, because there were many Castles in the Country; others from Catalon, or Cartalon, a French, or German Commander, who came into these Parts to assist the Christians against the Moors; others from the Goths and Alans, who came into Spain from Gothalandia; and by Corruption, Catalonia: And lastly, others from the Catti, a Nation that came in with the Alans, and thence Catalonia.

On the North it borders upon France, and is parted from it by the Pyrenean Mountains; on the West, by the Kingdom of Aragon, and a small part of that of Valencia; from the first of which it is separated in part, by the Rivers Noguera and Martorell, and some Hills; and from the latter, by the River Genia: On the South and East, the Mediterranean washes its Shoars, and forms several good Ports. The Land is a mixture of Plains and Mountains, the Part next to France most Hilly, but farther in, many large and delightful Levels. The Climate is neither so hot as Andalusia, nor so cold as the most Northern parts of Spain. This Tempe-ration and the many pleasant Streams, make the Soil very Fruitful. The Product, which it has in great plenty, is excellent Wheat, rich Wine, sweet Oyl, exquisite Honey, delicious Fruit, abundance of Cattle, swarms of Fowl, great store of Deer, Hares, Rabbits, and all other Game; good Hemp, fine Flax, excellent Saffron, all sorts of Grain, variety of Herbs, a considerable quantity of Silk, fine Wool, and infinite Fish and Salt; besides Quarries of Marble, Alabaster, and Jasper-Stone, and Coral, taken out of the Sea.

The Language is the ancient Limosin, with a mixture of other Languages, not intelligible to other Spaniards; but all People whatsoever speak Spanish also. The Natives have generally sharp and ready Wits, and are naturally Warlike, which makes them often in Arms and Rebellion; Inasmuch, that the Castilians and other Spaniards, will scarce allow the Catalans for their Countrymen, looking upon them as a disloyal and faithless People; and not without Reason. This is, for the most part understood of the meaner sort, who are very rude, and had rather Rob than Work; which makes them always joyn with any that enters their Country, in hopes of Plundering their Neighbours. But the Nobility and Gentry have preserv'd their Reputation, and been always look'd upon as Men of Honour, Worth and Gallantry.

In this Principality there are 11 Cities, one Archbishoprick, 8 Bishopricks, abundance of considerable Towns, a vast number of Villages, 28 Miter-Abbeys, 30000 Churches, 13 strong Towns, and 7 Universities. The ancient Inhabitants of it, are the Ausetani, Castellani, Illegetes, Laflani, and Lacetani; and this a Part of Hispania Tarraconensis, or Citerior.

Catalonia and its City Tarragona, was the Metropolis of the Roman Dominions in Spain, that City giving its name to the Province, which contain'd about one half of the whole Country. The Goths entering Spain, for a considerable time kept their Court at Barcelona, and the Moors overrunning Spain, Catalonia sunk under the common Calamity. Charles Martel of France began to recover some part of this Province from the Infidels; and Charlemain his Grandson, prosecuted it with more Vigour, creating Bernard, one of his Commanders, Earl of Barcelona. From that time, the Affairs of the Christians in Catalonia began to prosper; the Earls took upon them a Sovereign Power, and left it to their Posterity for several Successions. In the Year 1137, Raymond the Fifth of the Name, and XIIth Earl of Barcelona, Marry'd Petronila, only Daughter and Heiress to D. Ramiro, King of Aragon; by which March, the two Dominions were United, and so continu'd ever after in their Line. Ferdinand and Isabel, or Elizabeth, afterwards uniting the Crowns of Aragon and Castile, as has been before observ'd, Catalonia became a Province of the Spanish Monarchy, and so has continu'd. The Chief Towns in Catalonia are,

BARCELONA, the Capital, inferior to few in Europe, that are not the Courts of Princes, is seated betwixt the Rivers Lobregat and Besòs, which pay their Tribute to the Sea on both sides of it. The Coast it stands on is a good safe Road, but the Port small, yet as much as has made it a Place of considerable Trade, but had much more when the India Commodities were brought from Turky and Aegypt through the Mediterranean. It is in a large Plain, at the foot of the Mountain Monjuque, on which is a strong Castle, which generally decides the Fate of the Town. The Walls have Ramparts in some Places, in others are only Stone Work, with several Bastions, and 9 stately Gates. The Streets are fair and wide, the Churches Beautiful and Rich, the Gardens delightful, with many Fountains of excellent Water. The Territory is stor'd with Necessaries for Sustenance and Delight, as Wheat, rich Wines, Oyl, Fowl, Cattle, Fruit, Honey, Wood, and all sorts of Game. The Inhabitants about 15000 Families, in 9 Parishes, with 19 Monasteries of Friars, 15 of Nuns, 6 Colleges and 6 Hospitals. It is an University of great Reputation, and a considerable Bishoprick, worth to its Prelate 12000 Ducats a Year, and the Cathedral serv'd by 11 Dignify'd Priests, 34 Canons, 12 Parrors, being a sort of Demi-Canons, 280 Benefices, and several Chaplains. By the Cathedral is a Church, call'd Capitlimisna, where 300 Poor are Fed every Day. The ancient Name Barcinone, corruptly Barcelona, was given it from Amilcar Barcinus, the Carthaginian General, Father to Hannibal, who Built it 250 Years before Christ. The Moors over-running Spain, made themselves Masters of it in 717. from whom it was recover'd in 793. After being united to the Crown of Aragon, it rebell'd against King John the II. and own'd King Henry of Castile, Ann. 1462. and was reduc'd in 1471. In 1640. this City again Rebell'd, and gave it self into the Hands of the French; yet repenting in 1650. they betray'd the French they had call'd into their Assistance. In 1697. the Duke of Vendôme Commanding the French Army, lay'd Siege to this City on the 12th of July, and took it on the 15th of August. Being with the rest of the Kingdom subjected to Philip, Duke of Anjou, it was in the Year, 1705. attack'd by K. Charles III. who, assisted by the Confederate Forces of England and Holland, with Sword in Hand immediately gain'd the strong Fort or Castle Monjuque, which lay on the West side at some distance from the Town, and then having secur'd a Hill which Commands the Town, in 17 Days after, viz. October the 4th N. S. the City Capitulated. An Action that will always be admir'd, when 'tis consider'd, that the Army of the Assailants were hardly so numerous as the Garrison, who had the advantage of such Fortifications as enabled the Confederates the next Year to defend the City against a Royal Army, well furnished with Artillery and all Necessaries, and Commanded by K. Philip, and the Marshal Tesse, who with all their Force, attack'd it from the 2d of April to the 11th of May, when most happily the English Fleet arriving with Succours, they were forc'd to raise the Siege, and retire with the greatest Precipitation, leaving a noble Train of Artillery (above 100 Brass Cannon) and great Stores of Ammunition behind 'em.

Tarragona, now the second, formerly the first City of Catalonia, call'd Tarraco, and from it all the Province Tarraconensis, stands near the Coast of the Mediterranean Sea, on the brink of a pleasant Hill, at the foot whereof is a safe Harbour for small Ships, betwixt the Rivers Gaya and Francoli. The ancient Walls are said to have been 40842 Yards in Compass, the present 2361, with 6 Gates. The Climate so Temperate, that the Trees bear Fruit and Blossoms in December; the Territory beautify'd with delightful Gardens, Orchards and Country seats, the Fields abounding in Corn, Wine, Oyl, Fowl, Game, Flax, Hemp, and the Sea furnishing it with Fish. The Inhabitants about 3000 Families, in 4 Parishes, with 8 Monasteries of Friars, 1 of Nuns, a stately Hospital, and learned University. S. Francis's Square, or Market-Place in it was once a Roman Amphitheatre. It is an Archbishoprick, worth to its Prelate 16000 Ducats a Year. In the Year 719. the Moors took and level'd that with the Ground, putting all the Inhabitants to the Sword. In 1705. it follow'd the Example of Barcelona, and submitted to the English and Dutch Forces. It is about 17 Leagues West from Barcelona, and 15 East from Tortosa.

Tortosa, Stands 4 Leagues from the Frontiers of the Kingdom of Valencia, on the Banks of the River Ebro, not far from the Sea, which forms a good Bay that comes up near to it. The Situation is in the midst of a pleasant Wood, and has a Bridge over the River. The Walls are Ancient, and of great Compass, without any Outworks, but what have been made since the present War, which are said to be considerable; besides which there is a Castle, call'd Zuda. The Gates are 5, the Streets 78, and a spacious Square, or Market-place, on the Bank of the River, planted with Poplar Trees, near which are 2 Towers to defend it, call'd Carroba and Campredo. Without is a most beautiful Plain, 6 Leagues in length, and 2 in breadth, Water'd by the River, and producing Corn, Wine, Oyl, Fruit, Timber for Shipping, Palm Trees, and has plenty of Fowl, Game, Cattle, and much Silk, made here into Sarcenets. There are abundance of curious Springs, Quarries of Jasper Stone, and Salt-Pits. The Inhabitants amount to about 3000 Families, in 4 Parishes, 7 Monasteries of Friars, 2 of Nuns, an Hospital, and an University Founded in 1540. Scipio is thought to have Built and made it a Roman Free-Town, by the Name of Dertosa, corruptly Tortosa. The Moors took it in 716. and it was recover'd by Don Raymond Berengarius, Prince of Aragon, An. 1149. The Cathedral erected here in 1347. is reckned one of the best Structures in Catalonia, serv'd by 11 Dignify'd Clergy-men, 20 Canons, and as many Petty-Canons. Under the Diocels are 125 Towns and Villages, and the Bishops Revenue is 14000 Ducats. In 1705. it follow'd the Fate of Barcelona, and surrendred to the English and Dutch Forces, but was taken by the Spanish and French Forces, under the Command of the Duke of Orleans, in July 1708. Mr. Willoughby calls this a poor desolate Town. At two Miles from it there is a Quarry of Jasper Stone.

Lerida is on the Borders of Catalonia, next to Aragon, and on the Banks of the River Segre; over which it has a good Stone-Bridge: Not far from whence the Cinca falls into it. The Situation is strong, and the Place has been always Fortify'd, but much more of late; the Walls being ancient, of Stone, have 7 Gates: And besides all other Works, there is a Castle very difficult of Access. The Country about it is pleasant and Fruitful, and the City

City particularly noted for making good Gloves. The Inhabitants are about 3000 Families, in 6 Parishes, 9 Monasteries of Friars, 2 of Nuns, a good Hospital, and a famous University, founded by King James II. of Aragon. It was Built by the Ibergetes, and call'd Ilerda, whence corruptly Lerida, where Africanus and Petreius, Pompey's Legates, were Defeated by Julius Caesar. Raimond Berengarius, last Earl of Barcelona, recover'd it from the Moors, Ann. 1149. The Bishop's Revenue is worth 12000 Ducats. From Barcelona, it is 35 Leagues West, somewhat Northerly, 24 East from Zaragoza, and about 18 North from Tortosa. King Charles III. took this City, and held it till (after the unfortunate Battle of Almanza) the Duke of Orleans commanding the Spanish and French Forces, took it, after a long Siege, Nov. 12, 1677, N. S. It is a Place of good Strength, especially the Castle, which with a small Garrison, defended itself a long time after the Town was Taken. And it is withal so conveniently Seated, as to be a País from Aragon to Catalonia.

Urgel lies betwixt two Mountains, on the Banks of the River Segre, not far from the Foot of the Pyrenean Mountains, about 30 Leagues North, somewhat Easterly, from Barcelona, is Wall'd, and has an ancient Castle: Its Territory wonderful Fertile, yielding an Hundred for One in Corn, abundance of Almonds, and other Fruit, and feeding multitudes of Cattle. The Inhabitants are not above 600 Families, 2 Parishes, and 3 Monasteries of Friars. The ancient Names of it were Orgelium, Urgela, and Orgia; and it was formerly a famous Earldom, and is still a Bishoprick, whose Prelate's Revenue is worth 9000 Ducats a Year.

Girona, lies along the side of a Hill, in the East part of the Province, on the Banks of the River Ter which washes its ancient Walls, in which are 4 Gates, and several Fortifications about them, its Figure being almost Triangular. On the top of the Hill stands the Cathedral, the Bishop's Palace, and the Tower call'd Gironela. The Inhabitants are about 2500 Families, 3 Parishes, 9 Monasteries of Friars, 4 of Nuns, and a good Hospital. The Bishop's Revenue is 8000 Ducats: The Altar of the Cathedral is of great Value, being all of rare Stones. The Eldest Sons of the Kings of Aragon, were call'd Dukes of Girona, from the Year 1351, till 1414, when they took that of Princes of Girona; which was afterwards continu'd. The ancient name of it was Gerunda, and it is about 7 Leagues from the Sea, and 20 to the North-East of Barcelona. In the Revolution happening in Catalonia, Ann. 1705, this Place Declar'd for King Charles, and is still kept by his Forces.

Vicque, or as we Write it, Vich, is a small City, in a sort of Peninsula, made by the Rivers Ter and Gurre, which almost encompass it, 12 Leagues North from Barcelona, at the Foot of Hill, Wall'd, and has 7 Gates, 3 Bridges, and near it a fruitful Plain. On the Mountain Mosen, 2 Leagues from the City, are found excellent White and Purple Amethests and Topazes. It contains about 1200 Families, one Parish, 8 Monasteries of Friars, 2 of Nuns, and an Hospital. The first Name we find of it, was Ausa; afterwards the Romans call'd it Vicus Aquarius; as also Aque Vaconie; and from Vicus came the present Name of Vique. The Emperor Ludovicus Pius, recover'd it from the Moors, Ann. 825. The Bishop's Revenue is 600 Ducats. This was the first Place in Catalonia that Declar'd for King Charles, and still continues in his Hands:

At 2 Leagues distance from Vicque are Mines of Amethests, on the side of a Hill: They are found in a fat yellowish or reddish Earth; and the best sort are of a deep Violet Colour. And in the Neighbouring Mountains are some Emeralds, Gold, and other Minerals and Stones, but so little as not to answer the Labour of Searching. And on the Shoar of the Lake Silles, near Gironna, Topazes are found. [Willoughby,] Solsona stands upon the River Cardona, in the middle of this Province, at the Foot of the Mountains, in a pleasant Plain, above 20 Leagues North-West from Barcelona, and near the same Distance North from Tarragona; is Wall'd and has two Castles, an old and a new. It is thinly inhabited, and has but one Parish, and two Monasteries, yet is an University and a Bishoprick, worth 4000 Ducats a Year to its Prelate. Great Quantities of dry'd Peaches are sent from hence to several Parts.

Balaguer, on the Banks of the River Segre, over which it has a great Stone Bridge, 20 Leagues West from Solsona, and 3 Leagues North-East from Lerida, at the Foot of a Hill, Wall'd, and has an old Castle, 800 Families, one Parish, 3 Monasteries of Friars, and one of Nuns. Here is an Image of our Saviour in great Veneration, reported to have been made by Nicodemus. Don Armengol, Earl of Urgel, recover'd it from the Moors, An. 1091. Its ancient Name was Ballegonium.

Manresa, 10 Leagues North from Barcelona, on the River Cardoner, which a little below falls into the Llobregat; seated in a spacious Plain, Wall'd, and has an old Castle, 1000 Families, one Parish, 5 Monasteries of Friars, and one of Nuns. Its ancient Name was Minorissa, corruptly Manresa: Don Raimund Berengarius, Earl of Barcelona, recover'd it from the Moors, Ann. 1038.

All these hitherto mention'd are Cities; but we must not forget to take notice of Roses, or Rosas, according to the Spaniards, tho' but a Town, as being a Place of considerable Strength and a good Harbour; seated at the Point of the Pyrenean Mountains next the Mediterranean, 10 Leagues South from Perpignan, and about the same Distance from Girona North-East. It was founded by the Rhodians 910 Years before Christ, calling it Rhodope, and grew very great under the Romans; but declin'd, and came to nothing, till the Emperor Charles V. fortified and peopled it. Since then it has always held up, and been several times taken by the French and restor'd upon Peace. During the present War the Spanish Garrison in it kept it for King Philip, when all the rest of Catalonia took part with King Charles; and the French have always taken care to supply and maintain it.

Puycerda, formerly Jugum Ceretanorum, is the Capital of the Province of CERDANNA, often spoken of since this present War, as being in the way out of France, on the River Segre, about 7 Leagues East from Urgel, and 30 North, somewhat Westward, from Barcelona. It is no way considerable either for Strength, or number of Inhabitants, being easily taken by any small Power. Palamos has also been spoken of in these Wars, which is an inconsiderable Town on the Sea, about 20 Leagues from Barcelona to the North-East. Cardona, is 3 Leagues South from Solsona, 12 or 14 North-West from Barce-

Barcelona, Wall'd, is a Dukedom, and contains about 400 Families. Ager, Wall'd, 3 Leagues North from Bagner, 400 Families: Tarrega, Wall'd, 6 Leagues South-East from Lerida. Libia, 400 Families, and Wall'd. Blanes, 8 Leagues South from Girona, no Walls but an old Castle, and 600 Families. Guisona, betwixt Manresa and Lerida, 600 Families, and Wall'd; besides many more of less Note, too tedious to mention.

Near Cardena, (which stands 20 Miles from Girona), there is a Mountain of Salt, which yields an annual Revenue of 30000 Pieces of Eight. The Salt is Transparent, and when Powder'd, exceeding White.

Cardena gives Title to a Duke, who is one of the richest Grandees of Spain, and is Sovereign of this Town and 3 or 4 Villages, which he governs by a Council of 36, chosen by themselves every Year, and receives Tythes of the Corn, Wine, &c. which is the only Taxes they are subject to. [Willoughby]

The Country of Rousillon, being formerly a Part of Catalonia, has been long since annex'd to the Crown of France, and therefore is spoken of in that Kingdom.

CH A P. V.

The Kingdom of VALENCIA.

THE Kingdom so call'd from its Capital City of the same Name, was anciently the Country of the Edetani and Contestani. On the East it lies along the Mediterranean, facing the Islands of Majorca and Yviza, only one small Part lying next Catalonia, and parted from it by the little River Cenia; on the North it has the Kingdom of Aragon, on the West New-Castile and Murcia; and the small Part of it which runs to the South, joyns with the same Kingdom of Murcia. The Length of it is 70 Leagues the greatest Breadth 18.

This whole Kingdom is a Garden of Delight, or Earthly Paradise, the Air being always so Temperate that it enjoys a perpetual Spring, the Fields and Trees being always green, and the Weather pleasant, never excessive hot, nor cold, nor disturb'd with immoderate Rains; so that it is not only the most delicious Part of Spain, but perhaps of the World. This kind Disposition of the Heavens is the Cause that the whole Country is cover'd with curious Gardens, pleasant Orchards, delightful Groves, Gentlemens Seats and Farm-Houses, the Ground that is not employ'd for Pleasure, producing immense Plenty of Wheat, Wine, Oyl, Honey, Flax, and all sorts of Herbs, Flowers, and most Charming Fruit: Besides all which, the Silk, Sugar and Rice it produces every Year, are valu'd at 3 Millions of Pieces of Eight. Not to speak of Gold, Silver and Precious Stones found here formerly, but not of late. Here is abundance of Alum, the best and finest of white Lime, and store of scarlet Berries for dying that Colour. The Earth about Valencia, Gandia, &c. is so well Cultivated, that they have five Crops a Year, viz. Mulberry Leaves for Silk, Wheat and other Grain, Grapes, Olives, Maiz, or Indian Wheat, and Sugar Canes. [Willoughby]

The Natives are Pleasant, Free-hearted, Witty, inclin'd to Learning, addicted to good Cheer, Courteous, Well-behav'd, fond of doing Good, Bold and Resolute, and will take no Wrong. The common Sort retain that old Limosin French above spoken of in Catalonia and Aragon; but besides that, all Persons whatsoever speak Spanish. This Province seems to be more free than the rest of Spain for Mr. Willoughby tells us the King cannot raise Taxes here without consent of the 3 Estates, Clergy, Nobility and Cities, which are represented by 6 Deputies. This Kingdom, together with that of Murcia, according to Pennalosa, is able to raise and maintain 16000 Foot, and 8000 Horse. King James I. of Aragon, recover'd this Kingdom from the Moors, and annex'd it to the Crown of Aragon, in the Year 1238. and it was united to Castile, with that Kingdom, as has been said above.

In it are 6 Cities, a great number of notable Towns and Villages, 1 Archbishoprick, 2 Bishopricks, 4 Collegiate Churches, 2 great Abbeys, 2500 simple Benefices, 600 Parsonages, 1 Military Order, 4 Universities, 3 principal Sea-Ports, and 300 Forts and Watch-Towers along the Sea-Coast. The Chief whereof are,

Valencia.	}	Denia.
Segorbe.		Gandia.
Xativa.		Morvedro.
Alicant.

VALENCIA, the noble Capital of this Kingdom, is seated on the shady Banks of the River Turia, over which it has 5 Bridges, in Lat. 39. 20. its Figure round, the ancient Walls strong, and adorn'd with many Towers and 13 Gates, being 6440 Paces in Compass; half a League distant from the Grac, which is its Port on the Mediterranean, abounding in all Things for Conveniency and Delight, as was said speaking of the Country, the Sea furnishing all possible Variety of Fish, the neighbouring Lake, call'd Albufera, infinite numbers of Water-Fowl. The Inhabitants amount to 15000 Families, in 14 Parishes, 48 Monasteries of religious Men and Women, besides 4 of Military Orders, 6 Chappels, 6 Hospitals, and 20 Brotherhoods, which every Year Marry off 130 poor Maidens, 5 Colleges, a noble University, (In the University of Valencia they know nothing of the new Philosophy; and in short, they are just at that pitch of Learning that our Universities were 100 Years ago.) [Willoughby] a Sovereign Court of Justice, a Court of Inquisition, a curious Exchange, a Guild-Hall, which has a Revenue of 100000 Ducats a Year. The Archbishop's Revenue is worth 30000 Ducats a Year, the Cathedral serv'd by 7 dignified Priests, 24 Canons; rons; in it, besides other Treasure, is a Chalice of a rich sort of Agat, said to be the same our Saviour us'd at the last Supper with his Disciples. Here are also two of the Pieces for which Judas sold our Saviour, being Silver, each weighing two Royals and a half, or Fifteen-pence, with the Emperor's Head on the one side, and a Branch on the reverse. The Scipio's are suppos'd to have Built it, and given it the Name it now bears. The Moors possessing themselves of it, with the rest of Spain, are said to have call'd it Medina Tiarech, the City of Air, and made it the Seat of many Kings, till they were finally expell'd by King James I. of Aragon, Ann. 1238. In the Year 1705. all Catalonia having submitted to King Charles, this City follow'd their Example and open'd its Gates to the Earl of Peterborough and the English Forces; but in 1707. after the Battle of Almanza, the Duke of Orleans commanding the Spanish Forces recover'd it, and the Inhabitants have suffer'd for their forwardness in Revolting. It is about 60 Leagues South-East from Madrid, 45 from Zaragoza almost South, and about 60 from Barcelona South-West.

Segorbe, the ancient Segobriga, as most Authors agree, is seated on a rising Ground, in the midst of a spacious Valley, shut in with Mountains. It stands on the Banks of the River Morviedro, formerly call'd Palancia; is wall'd and defended by a stately old Castle. The Number of Inhabitants about 800 Families, in one Parish, 7 Monasteries of Friers, and 1 of Nuns, within and without it. Nebrija says the Romans carry'd the finest Marble from its neighbouring Mountain Segarra, to beautify their stateliest Structures. King James I. of Aragon, recover'd it from the Moors, in the Year 1245. Its Bishoprick is worth to the Prelate 12000 Ducats a Year, and it is a Dukedom in the noble Family of Cardona; distant from the City Valencia 10 Leagues North, somewhat Westerly, near as much West from the Sea, and about 50 South-East from Madrid.

Origuela, is in a Plain at the Foot of a Mountain, on the Banks of the River Segura, near the Borders of Murcia, strong by Situation, Wall'd and has a good old Castle; the Inhabitants 2500 Families, in 3 Parishes, with 6 Monasteries of Friers, 3 of Nuns, and 2 Houses for Women to live retir'd; being a Government distinct from Valencia, only subject to the Sovereign Court and Chancery, its Territory extending 12 Leagues in Length and 6 in Breadth, and that so fertile, that it is become a Proverb, Whether it Rains or not, there is Corn at Origuela, the Reason whereof is, because they have Trenches cut every way to water the Ground in case of need; and in Spain there is never any Scarcity but for want of Rain. The Romans call'd it Auriolla, Pot of Gold, from the Mines of that Metal they found about it, whence by Corruption Origuela. King James I. of Aragon regain'd it from the Moors, Ann. 1264. King Philip II. made it a Bishop's See, worth to its Prelate 10000 Ducats a Year, and yet it contains but 60 Parishes, the Cathedral serv'd by 6 dignified Clergy-men, 16 Canons, and 12 petty Canons; distant from Murcia, Capital of the Kingdom of that Name. 4 Leagues East, 26 South from Valencia, 5 from the Sea, and about 68 from Madrid South-East. During the present War it receiv'd the Confederate Forces in the Year 1705. and in the Year 1707. the Spanish Troops, commanded by the Duke of Berwick, took it again by Storm.

Xativa, is a City Inhabited by 1800 Families, in 4 Parishes, one of them Collegiate, with 10 Monasteries of Friers, 2 of Nuns, and 3 Hospitals, standing on the side of a Hill, over a River of its own Name, Wall'd, hath 9 Gates, and a strong Castle, seated on a craggy Rock, which has 4 Gates, 30 Towers, and 12 great Cisterns for Water, being sometimes a Prison for Persons of the greatest Quality. The Romans call'd it Setabis; and it is 12 Leagues North, a little Westerly from Alicant, 7 due West from Gandia, 10 South from Valencia, and near 60 South-East from Madrid.

Alicant, formerly Alone, a famous City and Sea-Port on the Mediterranean, 14 Leagues from Murcia to the North-East, 20 South from Valencia, and about 70 South-East from Madrid. The City is Wall'd, and over it a Castle on a Rock, Built by King Philip II. About 1700 Families inhabited it before the present War, in 2 Parishes, one of them Collegiate, with 6 Monasteries of Friers, 2 of Nuns, and 3 handsome Market-places. It is well known for a Place of considerable Trade, whence the English us'd to bring rich Wine, and delicious Fruit; and in 1705. some of their Forces Landed there out of the Fleet, made themselves Masters of it and the Castle, and maintain it to this Day.

Denia, another small City of about 500 Families, and 11 Leagues distant from Alicant to the North-East, was also taken the same Year by the Confederate Forces, and still kept. It stands at the Foot of the high Mountain Mongon, is a Sea-Port on the Mediterranean, Wall'd, with a good old Castle, 1 Parish, 1 Monastery of Friers, 1 of Nuns, and a good Hospital. The ancient Name was Dianium, from a famous Temple of Diana, whence by Corruption Denia, being at this time a Marquisate under the Dukes del Infantado.

Gandia, as well as the 2 last submitted to King Charles, in 1705. and is still kept for him, being but 5 Leagues from the last to the North-West, half a League from the Sea, on the River Alcoi, is Head of a District, Wall'd, with 4 Gates, a strong old Castle, 1200 Families, 1 Collegiate Parish, 2 Monasteries of Friers, 1 of Nuns, and is an University, and a Dukedom in the noble Family of Borja. Whether it be a City or no, is not decided, the Inhabitants pretending to it; but Rodrigo Mendez Silva says he search'd the Records and could not find it. In its Territory, besides all other Things, grows the finest Sugar in the World.

Morviedro, a Town about a League from the Sea, and 4 from Valencia to the North, on the River Palencia or Morviedro, with a large Tower, on which some Cannon are planted. This is the famous ancient Saguntum, so well known for its Fidelity to the Romans and miserable Destruction by Hannibal. It stands at the Foot of a Hill, Wall'd, with many Towers, 5 Gates, and on the Hill a large Fort. It is inhabited by 700 Families, in one Parish, which has 4 Churches, besides which there are 2 Monasteries of Friers, 1 of Nuns, and 2 Hospitals. The Name is properly Murviedro, from Muro Viejo, an old Wall, on account of its ancient Ruins. This Place has been made remarkable in our Days by the witty Stratagem of the Earl of Peterborough, in gaining the Town and adjacent Country, and frightening away the Spanish Forces, whereby he open'd himself a Way to the City Valencia.

The other Towns of Note are too many to mention them all; some of the most remarkable are Concentanea, 14 Leagues from Valencia, of 600 Families. Liria, 4 Leagues from Valencia, of 500 Families. Onda, 2 Leagues from the Sea, 400 Families. Morella, in the Frontiers of Aragon and Catalonia, 700 Families. Villa-Real, 8 Leagues from Valencia, 400 Families. Castello de Plana, 9 Leagues from Valencia, 1200 Families. Sexona, near Alicant, 600 Families. Alcira, in the Center of the Kingdom, 800 Families. Ontinente, near the Borders of Castile, 1000 Families. Bacayrente, 13 Leagues from Valencia, 500 Families. Alcoy, 15 Leagues from Valencia, 1000 Families. Xelva, 7 Leagues from Valencia, 500 Families. Trayguera, next the Borders of Catalonia, 400 Families. Benicarlón, near the Sea, 400 Families. Elche, 4 Leagues from Alicant, 1000 Families. S. Mateo, on the Road to Barcelona, not far from Catalonia, 600 Families. Sueca, 4 Leagues from Valencia, 400 Families. Binaroz, a Sea-Port, 500 Families. Xerica, on the River Morviedro, 600 Families. Oliva, a League from Gandia, 600 Families. Elda, near Alicant, 600 Families. Biar, near the Frontiers of Castile, 400 Families. Aspe, near Elche, 500 Families. Xavea, near Denia, 500 Families. Ayora, near the Frontiers of Castile, 800 Families. Carcaxente, near Alzira, 450 Families. Most of these, if not all, are Wall'd; besides which there are many more we have not room to treat of.

CHAP. VI.

The Kingdom of NEW-CASTILE.

THIS, the Old-Castile and Estremadura, are rather three Parts of one Province, than three distinct Provinces; and most Spanish Authors do speak of them as such; for we shall often hear them name Castile, without distinguishing which of them; and speaking of Places in Estremadura, say they are in Castile. However, since this Division has prevail'd, and they are generally known by these three Names, we will speak of each apart.

NEW-CASTILE was in the Days of the Romans the Country of the Carpetani, and Oretani, and Vaccei, and a Part of Hispania Tarraconensis; and after the Conquest of the Moors, distinguish'd by the Name of the Kingdom of Toledo, those Princes having possess'd the greatest part of the Country we now know by the more modern Name of New-Castile. On the North it borders all along upon Old-Castile, from which it is every where divided by Mountains, taking their Names from such places of Note as they pass by; on the East from Estremadura, by the Mountains of Guadalupe, and La Serena; on the South by those call'd Sierra Morena from Andaluzia, and by an imaginary Line from Murcia; and on the East by the River Segura, and Mountains of Almanza and Requena from Valencia, and by those of Maja, Daroca and Molina from Aragon. The Length of it from North to South is about 60 Leagues, and the greatest Breadth from East to West as much; but the Figure somewhat irregular.

The Climate is hotter in Summer, and colder in Winter, than the other Parts of Spain, which are in the same Latitude upon the Sea, this Country being all Mediterranean, and consequently wanting to be temper'd by the Sea Air. The Soil is generally Fruitful, producing Wheat, Barley, Wine, Oyl, all sorts of Herbs, and feeds great numbers of Cattle, all sorts of Game and Tame-Fowl; and the Rivers which fertilize it, are well stor'd with excellent Fish.

The Natives are Brave, Ambitious, wonderful Loyal, Upright, Generous, Modest, Affable, Courteous, Well-bred, Witty and addicted to Learning; but are prone to Feasting, Pleasure and Delight, contrary to the Practice of former Ages, when the People of this Country were Laborious, and enur'd to Hardships, as the Roman Authors inform us, and had several Laws to protect the Husbandmen, who are now too much condemn'd, which discourages them from following their Profession.

The Name of Castile is said to have been given it from the many Castles there were in it; but whether that Appellation might not come from the Castellani, an ancient People, is not certain; for tho' they were seated about Catalonia, yet we see all England took its Name from the Angles, who were but a small part of the Saxons, which same might as well happen elsewhere; however, we see the Arms of Castile are still a Castle. Here the Spanish Tongue is spoken in the greatest Perfection, the City of Toledo being famous for purity of Language, and the Court of Madrid enjoying it to the highest Degree, as generally all Courts do, being the Resort of all the Learned and Polite People of every Nation.

This great and principal Province has but 6 Cities, 1 Archbishoprick and 1 Bishoprick; but we shall find sufficient Amends made by its having Madrid, tho' no City, yet the Court of the Kings of Spain, and finest Town in the World; Alcala de Henares, a famous University, and many other Towns not inferior to Cities, and the Archbishoprick of Toledo, the greatest and richest in the Universe, next to Rome, of all which we are now to speak. First, observing that there is an ancient Division of this Castile into 3 Parts, the Northern call'd Algarria, the Southern La Mancha, and the Eastern La Sierra, now little taken notice of. The Chief Places of New-Castile are,

MADRID, the Court of the Kings of Spain, and Capital of those Kingdoms, never receiv'd the Title

Title of a City, as is falsely attributed to it by many, but is call'd Villa, signifying a Market-Town. It is seated in the heart of Spain, in 40 Degrees, 25 Minutes Latitude; and 15 Degrees, 45 Minutes Longitude, on the Banks of the little River Manzanares, in a wholesome Air and fertile Soil. The Time of its first Foundation is uncertain, some placing it in 878. others in 1154 Years before Christ. By the Romans it was call'd Mantua Carpetana, or Carpetanorum, from the Carpetani, People inhabiting that part of Castile in which it stands; tho' some falsely call it Mantua Carpentana, deriving the Name from Carpentum, a Cart or Waggon, which is a gross Mistake. It is true, some will have Villamanta, a Village 2 or 3 Miles from Madrid, to be the true Mantua Carpetana, which is a bare arbitrary Supposition, contrary to all ancient Authority. The Town at present contains 400 Streets, the Houses fair and lofty, built of Brick, with Lattice Windows. But the better sort have Glafs in Winter, which during the Summer Heats they take down, and put up either Lattice or Canvas, 14 Squares, 18 Parishes, and many Chappels, 57 Monasteries of Religious Men and Women, and 22 Hospitals and charitable Foundations. Among them the general Hospital for all Nations and Distempers, seldom entertains less than 500 sick Persons, and sometimes 1000, with 100 Persons to attend them, and the constant Revenue 30000 Ducats, besides a greater Sum in charitable Gifts and Contributions. The Plaza Mayor, or Great Square, is 426 Foot one way, and 334 the other, all Arch'd, after the manner of Convent-Garden, with open Walks underneath to be shelter'd from the Rain or Sun, and on the Arches or Pillars 136 stately Houses, all Uniform, with continu'd Rows of Balconies joyning to one another, and all exactly alike, none being permitted to vary in the least from the appointed Form of Building, either in Windows, Balconies, or any thing else that may any way be a Blemish to Uniformity. This is the Place where the Bull-Feasts are kept, and all other publick Shows, and it contains 50000 Spectators with Ease and Conveniency. The King's Palace in the Town is Magnificent, Spacious and richly Furnish'd, the main Structure consisting of 3 fair Courts, about which are several Apartments for the Royal Family, Offices and Lodgings. The better sort of Inhabitants Houses are about 12000. all Spacious and Beautiful, and most of them containing several Families. Besides which, there are many ancient, and some modern Majestick Palaces of the Nobility and Great Men, all built with Stone, and many of them so stor'd with Plate, that to mention it would appear incredible. The Bridge call'd of Segovia, over the little River Manzanares, cost King Philip II. 200000 Ducats building; and being so long and lofty, a Biscayner, who saw it in Summer, when that River is almost dry, is reported to have said, Madrid should either buy Water, or sell the Bridge. However in Winter, when the Rains fall, and the Floods come down from the Mountains, the Bridge is found to be little enough for it. At the end of the Town is the Prado, a delightful Plain, shaded with orderly Rows of Poplar Trees, and water'd by 23 curious Fountains, being the Place of Recreation for all the Inhabitants, where they go out to air and divert themselves, the Nobility and Gentry in their Coaches and on Horseback, and the Common Sort walking and using several Exercises. Many of the Monasteries above-mention'd are stately Structures, as are generally all the Churches, especially the Great one. The Town is govern'd by a Corregidor, who is like a Lord-Mayor, but chosen by the King, and not a Citizen, but a Gentleman, and one that understands the Law, being a Judge, and under him 41 Regidores, answerable to Aldermen. At the end of the Prado above-mention'd, is a new Majestick Palace, call'd El Buen Retiro, or the Good Retreat, as serving the Kings to retire out of the Town. It consists of a large Square, containing most stately Rooms and curious Apartments, adorn'd with the costliest Furniture, and Paintings of the greatest Masters. The Gardens are a perfect Paradise, for shady Walks, Fountains, Water-works and all Productions of Art and Nature. The common Annual Expence of Provisions in Madrid, is 500000 Sheep, 12000 black Cattle, 6000 Kids, 10000 Calves, 13000 Swine, 90000 Arrobas, each of which is 25 Pounds weight of Oyl, and 80000 of Wine, this last every Month, and an infinite Number of Tame and Wild-Fowl; these Quantities are known, as paying Duties at the Gates when brought in; besides, a vast Expence of all sorts, the Duties whereof are stolen. The Number of the better sort of Houses, was said to be about 12000, the poorer sort at least as many more, and the whole Compass of the Town reckon'd about 3 Leagues.

TOLEDO is the ancient Capital City, not only of Castile, but of all Spain, and yet we have given the Precedence to the Town of Madrid, on account of its being the King's Court, and daily improving, (as the other declines. It's Situation is on a high, steep and craggy Hill, very strong by Nature, as being almost inaccessible, and yet much more fortified by the Waters of the famous River Tagus, over which it has 2 Bridges, its Waters encompassing 3 parts of the Rock, and surrounding it like a Horse-shoe, at the same time fertilizing the spacious Plain about it, which abundantly produces all Things for Conveniency and Delight. The Land-side is shut in by strong double Walls, with 150 Towers, and 5 great Gates, besides Posterns. The Streets are after the ancient manner, steep and narrow, but the Buildings lofty; and there are in it 17 Squares or Market-places. Formerly it was extraordinary Populous, but since forsaken by the Court so much declin'd, that it scarce contains above 5000 Families, among which very many of Quality, divided into 23 Quarters or Wards, and 27 Parishes, 38 Monasteries of Religious Men and Women, 2 Colleges, being an University, 4 stately Houses for Women to live retir'd, 20 Chappels, 28 Hospitals, one of them call'd the Nuncio's, Famous for Curing of Distracted Persons. Here is a stately Palace, Built by King Alonso VI. who took it from the Moors, and an ancient Mint. It has no Water but what is brought up from the River Tagus, and kept in great Pans and Cisterns; and the same is brought up to the Top of the Palace, which is 500 Cubits above the River, by an admirable Machine, invented by a Flemming; but according to Mr. Willoughby this Engine is ruin'd. What is not common in other Places, it has large Common-Shoars, which convey all the Filth of the City down to the River. It has the Title of Imperial City, given by King Alonso VI. when he took it from the Moors, and styl'd himself Emperor; King Henry IV. gave it the other Title of Right Noble and Loyal City. The Time of its Foundation is so variously deliver'd, that nothing of Certainty appears yet we know it was the Capital City of the Carpetani.

Sancti. a Place of Arms with the Romans, the Court of several Goths, Moorish and Christian Kings. The Cathedral some will have to be erected by the Apostle St. James; certain it is, that King Recaredus restor'd it; after being profan'd by the Arrians, the Moors made use of it as their Chief Mosque, till the Year 1036, when King Alonso recovering the City, as has been said, plac'd one Bernard, a Frenchman, Archbishop. The Church was rebuilt in 1227. by King Ferdinand III. and is 384 Feet in Length, 191 in Breadth, and 107 in Height, all of curious white Stone, artificially Carv'd, the high Roof supported by 88 Columns, which divide it into 5 spacious Isles, the middlemost Beauteous and Majestick, divided into 2 Choirs, wonderfully Carved and Inlaid; the one of them the Chappel of the Blessed Sacrament and Burial-place of many Kings, shut in with most costly Iron Grates, fix'd on Bases of Jasper Stone, and on each Side a Brass Pulpit fix'd on Pillars of the same Metal. The other Choir belongs to the Canons, shut in no less nobly, and adorn'd to Admiration with curious Works in Wood and Jasper Stone; all the Outside of them adorn'd with excellent Imagery in Niches, representing the History of the Old and New Testament. Eight great Gates of Brass, with magnificent Portico's, lead into this glorious Fabrick, over which is a surable Tower, and Bells of a prodigious Magnitude. The Altars, Lamps and Windows, are a greater Number than we can exactly tell; but there are 34 Chappels, many of which might pass for stately Churches. To describe it particularly would take up a Volume; but it is serv'd by 14 dignify'd Clergy-men, 40 Canons, 50 Perry-Canons, and in all has 600 Persons belonging to it. In the Diocess there are 802 Parishes; the whole Revenue of the Archbishoprick is 600000 Ducats, the one half whereof belongs to the Archbishop, the other half to the Cathedral, where there are every Day 8 Bushels of bak'd Bread given to the Poor, besides 30 needy Persons always maintain'd out of the Prelate's Revenue. The Treasury is of inestimable Value in Gifts and Presents made in all Ages, and all the Utenils for the Service of the Church are wonderfully Rich. In short it is one of the noblest and wealthiest Cathedrals in the Universe, and the Archbishop the greatest next to the Pope. The City was formerly Famous for many National Councils held in it, being above 20. Without the Walls on the North-side, still remain some Ruins of an ancient Roman Theatre; and about half a League from the City, of an enchanted Tower, fabulous Historians pretend King Roderick caus'd to be open'd, and there saw the Fatal Destruction of Spain, which soon ensu'd by the Moors. Toledo is 12 Leagues from Madrid, 51 from Burgos, from Zaragoza 63, from Sevil 72, from Granada 54, and from Murcia 59. Its Situation almost in the Center of Spain.

Cuenca, formerly Concha, or Conchana, in that part of Castile call'd La Sierra, being the Mountain part, towards the East, seated on a high Hill, and difficult of Access, the River Xucar, which in Arabick signifies sweet Water, running by the one side of it, and the Hucar by the other. along whose Banks there are pleasant Gardens. The Ascent to the City, which is Wall'd, and has 5 Gates, is steep, the Streets narrow, the Fountains many, brought from the neighbouring Mountains, not far from the Sources of the Rivers Tagus, Xucar, Cabriel and Turia, which fertilize the Country, and make it abound in all Things that Luxury can desire. The Inhabitants are about 1300 Families, in 14 Parishes, with 8 Monasteries of Friars, 6 of Nuns, and 16 Chappels and Hospitals, a Mint, a noble Free-School and Court of the Inquisition. Its Bishop's Revenue is worth 50000 Ducats a Year, the Parishes in the Diocess 354, the Cathedral serv'd by 13 dignify'd Clergy-men, 26 Canons, and 22 Petty-Canons. It is about 26 Leagues East from Toledo, near the same Distance from Madrid East, somewhat Southerly, and about 30 North-East from Valencia.

Guadalajara is the Capital City of the Territory call'd Alcarria, seated on the Banks of the River Henarez, with a stately Bridge over it, on an uneven rising Ground, Wall'd, and has handsome Streets, lofty Houses, delicate Springs, curious Gardens and plenty of Provisions, besides noble Structures built by Men of Quality, 1000 Families, 10 Parishes, 7 Monasteries of Nuns, as many of Friars, 2 Hospitals, 8 Chappels and a Free-School. Its first Name was Turria, afterwards Caraza; the Moors having enlarg'd it, gave it the Name of Guadalbichara, signifying River of Stones, because the River is there Stony, and by Corruption Guadalajara. It is 10 Leagues from Madrid to the North-East.

Huete, or Guete, Built by the Celtiberi, and call'd Opta, had by Julius Caesar the Title of Julia added to it, which was by the Moors chang'd into Gasta. It is seated in a delightful Plain, Wall'd, with 8 Gates and a Castle, call'd de Luna, or of the Moon, by which runs the pleasant Brook Cada, which bubbles out of the Ground hard by, and drives seventeen Corn and several Fulling-Mills. The Inhabitants are 600 Families, in 10 Parishes, with 5 Monasteries of Friars, 2 of Nuns, 3 Hospitals and a large Territory, producing, besides all Necessaries for Life, 40000 Pounds of Saffron every good Year. It is about 20 Leagues from Madrid West, somewhat Southerly, and a little more from Toledo West, a little Northerly.

Alcaraz, a small City, seated on a high Hill, Wall'd, with 8 Gates and a strong old Castle, on the Banks of the River Guadarmena, which rises 4 Leagues from it, on whose Banks noble Horses are bred. The Inhabitants are 600 Families, in 5 Parishes, 5 Monasteries of Friars, and 2 of Nuns. It is about 5 Leagues from the Frontiers of Andaluzia, the same from those of Murcia, and about 40 Leagues South-West from Madrid.

Ciudad Real is about 20 Leagues South from Toledo, 32 the same way from Madrid, and 27 North from Granada, seated in a deep Bottom, which has prov'd dangerous, as wanting a Current to carry off the Rain; so that in 1508. a great Part of it was Drown'd, with the Concurrence of the River Guadiana overflowing, tho' it is a League distant, and this, notwithstanding its strong Walls, in which there are 6 Gates. The Inhabitants 1200 Families, in 3 Parishes, 4 Monasteries of Friars, 2 of Nuns, a College to maintain 12 ancient Men of good Birth, and 3 Hospitals. It is famous for making good Gloves, and was Built by King Alonso the Wise, Ann. 1262.

Alcala de Henares, is a Town but 6 Leagues from Madrid, well deserving a Place among Cities, standing in a spacious Plain, on the River Henares, with delightful Woods and Groves about it. a stately Bridge over the River, Wall'd, has 12 Gates, spacious Streets, lofty Buildings, stately Churches, a mag-magnificent Palace, 2 large Squares, besides other open Places, 4 publick Conduits. 1000 Familis, 3 Parishes, 19 Monasteries of Friars, 9 of Nuns, 20 Colleges, 4 Hospitals, and several Chappels. The University was Founded by the Cardinal Don Francisco de Ximenes Cisneros, Archbishop of Toledo, in the Year 1499. The great College, call'd of St. Ildefonsus, which has the Direction over all the University, maintains 40 Professors, has a noble Theater, for all publick Acts, and is frequented by 2000 Scholars. The Town was founded by the Romans, and call'd Complutum; the name of Alcala was given it by the Moors, with the addition of Henares, from the River it stands on.

Talavera de la Reyna, may not be forgot among the Towns of Note, as containing 3000 Families, 7 Parishes, 7 Monasteries of Friars, 5 of Nuns, 7 Hospitals, and 8 Chappels, seated on the River Tagus, 12 Leagues West from Toledo, famous for its Woolen Manufacture of Stuffs, and particularly for extraordinary fine Earthen Ware. The ancient Name was Talabriga, corruptly call'd Talavera, with the addition of la Reyna, or the Queen's, because it was given in Dower to some Queens.

Other Towns are too numerous to be mention'd, tho' many of them considerable enough; but it would require a Volume to treat of them all; but the little Town of Almanza has been lately made Remarkable, on account of the Battle fought near it on the 14th of April, 1707, O. S. between the Confederate Forces under the Earl of Galway, and the French and Spanish, under the Duke of Berwick, which proved fatal to the former. The Town is in a Plain, on the Borders of Castile, next those of Valencia, in 39 Degrees Latitude, 8 or 9 Leagues West from Xativa.

The Escorial, tho' the name of a poor Village, is also that of the King of Spain's Palace, and one of the Noblest in the World, with the Monastery of Jeronimites and their Church, the whole Building by King Philip II. of Spain, under the Invocation of St. Laurence, on whose Festival his Forces obtain'd a Signal Victory over the French, at St. Quintin in the Low Countries, Ann. 1557. The Pantheon or round Chappel, for the Burial of Kings, added afterwards by King Philip IV. The whole Structure is one large Square, 2980 Foot in Compass. all of curious white speckled Stone, besides the Ornaments of Marble and Jasper. This main Pile contains 13 several Cloisters, besides two without the great Square, 3 great Courts, 9 lofty Towers; the Windows on the four out-Fronts of the Square 1110, those within 1578, 16 great Gates into the main Building, 14 Halls, 86 Fountains within, 80 Stair-cases. The number of Rooms of all sorts cannot be told, but there are 8 Galleries, 24 publick Rooms in the Monastery and Colleges, in which there are 200 Religious Men, and as many Seculars, by which some guests may be given at other Cells and Chambers, not to speak of the Royal Apartments. Seven Oratories and Chappels without the Church, 5 large Refectories, or Eating-Rooms, 5 Infirmaryes, or Hospitals for the Sick, 5 large Rooms for the Apothecary's Shop, besides small ones; 2 Apartments to entertain Strangers, 9 Kitchens, above 40 stately Rooms under Ground for Offices, with 11 vast Cisterns, the least of them containing 200 Tun of Water. The Church is 364 Foot Long, and 230 in Breadth, divided into 6 stately Isles with 48 Altars, and 26 Arches, and the Sacristy or Vestry, tho very large, has 8 great Rooms depending on it. In fine, it is computed to be 4 whole Days Journey, to visit all the Rooms and Apartments of the House, and that to go through them all, would make out 33 measur'd Leagues. Besides for Ornament, there are 51 large Statues, 50 small, Paintings 1622, most of them of Famous Masters. The Library is no less Magnificent, all the Stands or Shelves for the Books, being Inlay'd with the richest sort of Wood in Spain and the Indies. To conclude, the description of the Escorial, from which this is Collected, is itself a Volume in Folio, and thence we may judge how much more is to be said of this wonderful Structure, which is 7 Leagues from Madrid Westward.

Aranjuez, is another Palace of the King's on the River Tagus, inferior to the Escorial for Structure, but no less exceeding it in delicious Gardens and surprizing Water-works, all which it has to the greatest Perfection; the Gardens being in an Island in the midst of the River, so that abounding with Water, they are never scorch'd with the Sun, but kept continually Green, and the immense variety of Water-works abundantly supply'd by the River. Yet this delicious Place has been somewhat neglected for the Escorial, but never loses its Beauty; which we have not room to Speak of more at large.

C H A P. VII.

The Kingdom of OLD-CASTILE,

IS that which was formerly an Earldom; the New Castile, as has been said, being properly the Kingdom of Toledo. The Moors having overrun Spain, and the Christians from the Mountains beginning to recover their own, we find this Earldom very early, for Garibay shews, by ancient Records, that one Roderick was call'd Earl of Castile, in the Year 762. But the History of those Times is so obscure, that no other Earl is mention'd till 860, when we have Don James Porcellos, who, upon what account is not known, was put to Death by King Ordonno of Oviedo. The Castilians wanting a Head, made choice of Don Nunno Nunez Rasura and Lain Calvo, to Govern them, with the Title of Judges, in the Year 898. Don Gonzalo Nunnez was the next Judge after them, and his Successor Ferdinand Gonzalez, again took the Stile of Earl, which continu'd under his Successors, Don Garcia Fernandez, Don Sancho Garcia, and Don Garcia, who was Murder'd by three Brothers call'd Belas, and by his Death, that Earldom was united to the Crown of Navarre, in the Person of Don Sancho, the great King of Na.

carre, as Husband to Munia, Daughter and Heiress to the aforesaid Earl; and in this King ended the Earls of Castile. Ferdinand, Son to Don Sancho succeeded his Father, and call'd himself King of Castile, in the Year 1034, his Elder Brother Don Garcia Sanchez, inheriting the Crown of Navarre. This Ferdinand soon after falling at Variance with his Brother-in-Law King Bermudo, Slew him in Battle, and possess'd himself of that Crown, in the Right of his Wife Sancha, Sister and Heiress to the said Bermudo, from which time the two Crowns of Castile and Leon, have ever continu'd United.

Old Castile being a part of the ancient Province Tarraconensis, borders all along the South upon New Castile, from which it is divided by Mountains, taking their Names from the Places of Note they pass by, as of Molina, Siguenza, Segovia, &c. The Ridge call'd Sierra de Tablada, on the West, the Mountains of Pico and Banos, part it from Estremadura, as do those of Avila and Pernia, with the little Rivers Carrion, Pisuerga, and Heban, from Leon. On the North-part the Ridge of Mountains, which runs Westward from the Pyreneans, separates it from Asturias, between which Country and Biscay, a narrow slip of it runs up to the Bay of Biscay, in which are the four Seaport Towns of Laredo, Santander, Castro de Urdiales, and San Vicente de la Barquera, which are a part of this Castile; notwithstanding most Foreign Geographers, not well acquainted with Spain, place them in Biscay. The same ridge of Mountains above-mention'd, continues to part Castile on the North from Biscay. Lastly, on the East, the River Ebro and Mountains Duca, for a considerable Part make the Boundaries betwixt Castile and Navarre, and Aragon. Its greatest Extent from North to South, is about 60 Leagues, and about the same from East to West, both ways taken where largest, for the Figure is very Irregular, and not near answerable in other Parts.

The Climate differs somewhat from that of New-Castile, the Country being more Mountainous, which makes several Parts vary according to their Situation; some deep Valleys being excessive Hot, the upper Grounds Cool and Temperate, and so others, as the Proximity of the Hills either sends down refreshing Gales, or causes a more violent Reflection of the Sun. The Soil for the most part is good, the Plains yielding all sorts of Grain and Fruit, and the sides of Hills good Pasture, while the tops furnish Fewel, and in some Places Snow in the midst of Summer, which is carry'd to the Towns, as is usual, throughout all Spain, to cool their Wine.

The Natives are, for the most part, a sincere hearty People, Brave, Ambitious, and great asserters of the Nobility and Antiquity of their Families, especially those on the Mountains, who tho' reduc'd to Poverty, still endeavour to maintain the Honour gain'd by their Progenitors, and are accordingly respected, tho' their Fortunes are not suitable to their Birth. Many of these Gentry, notwithstanding the lowliness of their Condition, preserve the Purity of the Spanish Language among them; so that it is observ'd, they speak as Politely as in the Court, but among the meaner Sort, the Tongue is corrupted, and there is a Tone and Dialect very disagreeable to such as have been us'd to Madrid and other parts of New Castile.

The number of Cities here is greater than in New Castile, being 11 in number, one Archbishoprick, 6 Bishopricks, 6 Universities, besides many Towns of Note. Of the former we are now to speak, as much as this Volume will allow. The Chief whereof are,

Burgos.	}	Calahorra.
Valladolid.		St. Domingo de la
Segovia.		Calzada.
Avila.		Soria.
Osma.		Logronno.
Siguenza.		Nagera.

BURGOS, the Capital of this Kingdom, so call'd from Burgo, a Borough, because Don James Porcellos, the first noted Earl of Castile, gather'd the People from many scatter'd Boroughs to build this City, in the Year 884, and therefore in Latin nam'd Burgi. It is seated betwixt the Rivers Alarcon and Arlanza, which water the Plains about it, on a high Ground, encompass'd with Mountains. The Walls are strong, but ancient, in which are 7 Gates; over the River Arlanza 3 stately Bridges, and on an inaccessible Rock, on the North side, a strong Castle, of which the Dukes of Lerma are Hereditary Constables. The Situation is very disagreeable for temperature of Air, whence it is become a Proverb in Spain, that Burgos has, Nueve meses de Invierno y tres de Infierno, Nine Months of Winter, and three of Hell; the Nine being continual Cold, or Rains, and the other three intolerably Hot, by Reason of the violent reflection of the Sun from the Mountains, and want of Air. In former Ages it was very Populous, at present reduc'd to about 1000 Families, in 15 Parishes, with 5 Hospitals, 6 Chappels, one College, 10 Monasteries of Friars, and 9 of Nuns, one of which is the Royal Foundation of Huelgas, of the Order of St. Bernard, by King Alonso IX. Ann. 1187. to whose Abbess 12 other Monasteries, 13 Towns, and 50 Villages are subject, and it's Revenue 80000 Ducats a Year. Besides the Monastery of St. Augustin, is Famous for a Miraculous Crucifix in it, said to be made by Nicodemus. The Cathedral built by K. Ferdinand III. Ann. 1122, is one of the noblest in Spain, 260 Foot long, and 206 in breadth, where, in 5 several Chappels Divine Service may be Sung with Musick, and not disturb one another. To it belong 18 Dignify'd Clergy-men, 45 Canons, of which the King is always the first, and 40 Petti-Canons, the Archbishoprick extending over 1756 Parishes, and that Prelate's Revenue amounting to 40000 Ducats. It was first made a Bishoprick, translated thither from Oca, the ancient Auca, by King Alonso VI. Ann. 1076, and rais'd to the Archiepiscopal Dignity, by King Philip II. Ann. 1571. In the City there are several stately ancient Palaces of Nobility; the other Houses after the old manner of Structure, and the Streets narrow; but there are several Squares or Market-places, and many curious Fountains. This City claims the Precedence of all others in the Cortes or Parliament of Castile, which being oppos'd by Toledo, the Difference was reconcil'd by King Alonso XII. Ann. 1349. Ordering that the Representatives of Burgos should speak first, and he would speak himself for Toledo, which ended the Dispute, without disobliging either Party; and that Custom remains to this Day. This was the ancient Court of the Earls of Castile, but not reckon'd Healthy, for the Reasons aforesaid. It is distant from Madrid 39 Leagues to the North; from Bilbao, 30 Leagues to the South, 52 West, somewhat Northerly from Zaragoza, and 119 North-East from Lisbon.
Valladolid,

Valladolid, formerly Pintia, according to some, had its present Name from one Ulid a Moor, who Enlarg'd it, whence call'd Valle de Ulid, the Vale of Ulid. Another Opinion is, it came from Valle de Lid, the Valley of Contention, because it was the Boundary of the ancient Arevaci, Carpetani, Celestini and Astures, who all repair'd to this Place to decide their Differences. It stands on the Banks of the River Pisuerga, over which it has a stately Bridge, besides 19 small ones over another Rivulet call'd Esgueva, which runs through several of the Streets, and passing thence Waters the Fields and Meadows, and fertilizes the Soil, to produce all things necessary. It is Wall'd, and has 6 Gates, having been once the Residence of Kings. The great Square, which is the Model of that at Madrid, has 300 Arches, and 2000 Windows, being capable of containing 30000 Souls. The Inhabitants of the City are 4000 Families, in 16 Parishes, 46 Monasteries of Religious Men and Women, 13 Hospitals, and 12 Colleges and Chappels, being the next University to Salamanca in Dignity, founded in the Year 1346. The great Church, which was formerly Collegiate, ever since the Year 1118, but made a Cathedral by King Philip II. Ann. 1595; worth to the Bishop 15000 Ducats a Year, serv'd by 6 Dignify'd Clergy-men, 22 Canons, and 18 Petty-Canons, the Diocess containing 132 Parishes. Here is also an Eminent Palace of the Kings, and the Inhabitants are reckon'd as Polite and Well-bred, as any in all Spain. From Madrid it is 33 Leagues to the North-West: From Burgos 22 South-West: From Sevil 94 North, a little Easterly: And from Zaragoza 60 West.

Segovia. By Pliny call'd Urbs Arevacorum. by Strabo, Segubia; and by others, Segabia, is a City seated in a Valley at the foot of Mountains, encompass'd on the North by the River Eresma; on the South by the Brook Clamores, and the River call'd Frio, or cold, in the midst of it; over which is the Noble Bridge. or rather the Wonderful Aqueduct, built by the Emperor Trajan, of a vast length, and two rows of Arches, one above another, carrying Water to serve the City, which is Wall'd, has 8 Gates, 4000 Families, 27 Parishes, 13 Monasteries of Friars, 8 of Nuns, 5 Hospitals, 3 Chappels, 7 Squares, and 43 noted Streets, with 25 Corn-Mills, 14 Fulling-Mills, and 3 Places for washing of Wool on the River. The Principal Mint of Spain, is fix'd in this City, which, when it Works, can Coin 30000 Ducats Plate every Day. Good Printing-Paper is made here, there being 2 Mills for that use; but the Woollen Manufacture here, is the best in all Spain, and the Cloth inferior to none in the World, all made of rich Spanish Wool, whereof there is great Plenty in this Territory on the numerous Flocks of Sheep it feeds. The Castle call'd, El Alcazar de Segovia, is very strong by Nature, but has no addition by Modern Works, which would render it almost Impregnable. This is also an University and a Bishoprick, the latter erected Ann. 1088, containing, at present, 438 Parishes; the Bishop's Revenue 24000 Ducats, and the Cathedral serv'd by 8 dignify'd Clergy-men, 40 Canons, and 20 Petty-Canons. No Person is here to be seen idle, or Begging, except Disabled by Sicknes or Age; and thence the City has by some, the additional Title given it of Laboriosa. From Valladolid, it is distant 17 Leagues South, somewhat Easterly: From Toledo 25 North; from Avila, 10 East; from Bircelona, 110 West.

Avila, suppos'd to have been anciently call'd Abula, Albula, and Albucella; Famous for St. Teresa's being born in it, stands on a Hill on the Banks of the little River Adaja, in sight of the Mountains of Pico, very strong by Nature, the Walls 9073 Foot in Compass, with 86 Towers on them, and 10 Gates, within them 127 Streets, the Buildings generally good, some of them stately, 9 Squares, 2000 Houses, 9 Parishes, 9 Monasteries of Friars, and 7 of Nuns, 2 Colleges, 9 Hospitals, and 18 Chappels, and a Charitable Revenue given by the Inhabitants, of 10000 Ducats a Year for the maintenance of Orphans and other needy Persons, and is an University and a Bishoprick, under which are 577 Parishes; the Prelate's Revenue 15000 Ducats, the Cathedral serv'd by 8 Dignify'd Clergy-men, 20 Canons, and as many Petty-Canons. It is call'd Avila del Rey. or the King's, because the Inhabitants serv'd and defended the Infant King Alonso VIII. against his Father-in-Law Alonso VII. Distant from Salamanca 17 Leagues South-East, about the same from Madrid North-West.

Osma, formerly Uxama, Destroy'd by Pompey the Great, and again by the Moors, was Rebuilt in 950, at the Foot of a Hill, near the River Duero, and Water'd by those of Abion and Uxero, has not above 50 or 60 Houses on that side of the River, but about a Musket-shot from it, beyond the River, over which is a Bridge, there are 200 Houses, call'd Burgo de Osma, within a Wall, one Monastery, a Chappel, and its Parish Church is a Cathedral; for as low as it is brought, it is still an University, and a Bishoprick, worth to its Prelate 26000 Ducats a Year, and under him 405 Parishes; the Church serv'd by 10 Dignify'd Priests, 10 Canons, and 12 Petty-Canons. Distant 24 Leagues North from Madrid, 22 South-East from Burgos, and 25 East, a little Southerly, from Valladolid.

Signenza, formerly Secontia, or Segontia, or as Roderick Mendez Silva writes, Saguntia, from Saguntum, being Built, as he says, by some few Inhabitants of that Town, that escap'd when it was destroy'd by Hannibal. It stands on a Hill, near the Frontiers of Aragon, about 20 Leagues North-East from Madrid, on the Banks of the River Henares, whose Springs are not far off in certain Fields, where much Hay is made; has very handsome Buildings, good Streets, several Fountains, strong old Walls, 7 Gates, an ancient Castle, the Bishop's Palace, 1500 Houses, 3 Parishes, one Monastery of Friars, and another of Nuns, 3 Colleges, as being an University, 2 Hospitals and 7 Chappels. The Bishop is Lord of it, whose Revenue is 40000 Ducats a Year, and under him 516 Parishes, the Cathedral serv'd by 14 dignify'd Clergy-men, 40 Canons, and 20 Petty-Canons.

Calaborra, the Calagurris of the Ancients, is seated near the Borders of Aragon and Navarre, on a Hill over the River Cidazo, not far from the Ebro, Wall'd, has 4 Gates, 2000 Houses, 3 Parishes, 2 Monasteries of Friars, 1 of Nuns, 8 Chappels and 4 Squares. King Philip II. made it a Bishoprick, Ann. 1572. under which are 1013 Parishes, the Bishop's Revenue 18000 Ducats, the Cathedral serv'd by 8 dignify'd Clergy-men, 24 Canons, and 18 Petty-Canons. This Place is famous for the Siege laid to it by Afranius, Pompey's General, whom the Inhabitants withstood till they eat one another for Hunger; whence came the Latin Proverb of Fames Calagurritana, the Famine of Calaborra. Distant from Logronno 8 Leagues Leagues South East, from Tudela 10 North-West, from Madrid 45 North-East.

Santo Domingo de la Calzada, Built by King Alonso I. of Aragon, Ann. 1125. where a Church had been before erected by S. Dominick de la Calzada, from whom it had the Name. Its Situation is in a Plain, on the Banks of the River Laglera, over which it has a stately Bridge, is Wall'd, and has 6 Gates, 600 Houses, 1 Parish, which is Collegiate, 1 Monastery of Friars, 1 of Nuns, 5 Chappels and an Hospital. It belongs to the little Province call'd Rioja, is above 40 Leagues North East from Madrid, and a little less North-West from Zaragoza.

Soria, was the ancient and renown'd Numantia, whose Original is uncertain, but its Destruction by Scipio well known, after it had baff'd several Roman Armies, who at last utterly destroy'd and laid it level with the Ground, as it continu'd till the Year 1119. when rebuilt by King Alonso I. of Aragon. Others will have it, that Numantia stood a League from this Place, where now is Geray; be that as it will, Soria is seated among craggy Hills and intricate Woods, which render the Access difficult; its Walls Three Quarters of a League in Compass, besides a good Castle. The Inhabitants 1100 Families, in 13 Parishes, one of them Collegiate, 7 Monasteries of Friars, 4 of Nuns, 23 Chappels and 4 Hospitals. Distant from Madrid 35 Leagues to the North-East, and 25 West from Zaragoza.

Logrono, suppos'd to be Built by Augustus Caesar, or at least, rais'd from an inconsiderable Place to something of Note, and call'd Fuliebriga; stands upon the first Stream of the River Ebro, near the Confines of Navarre and the Province of Alaba, and in a most delightful Plain cover'd with Groves, Gardens and Orchards. The Situation naturally impregnable, as being free from Heights to command it, and the Ground so full of Springs, that there is no undermining of it. On the Land-side it has strong Walls, with Ramparts in some Places, 5 Gates, a strong Castle, a deep Ditch, which upon occasion can drown the Country. The rapid River runs thro' a magnificent Bridge, 716 Foot in Length, and consisting of 12 Arches. The Inhabitants fill 1500 Houses, in 4 Parishes, one of them Collegiate, besides 5 Monasteries of Friars, 2 of Nuns, 1 good Hospital, and Grammar, Rhetorick and Philosophy Schools. Distant from Madrid near 50 Leagues North-East, and from Zaragoza 33 North-West.

Nagera, which some will have the Romans to call Tiburicium, and others Tricum, is in the little Province of Rioja, at the foot of an Ascent, which defends that side of it with a Castle, on the River Nagerilla. The Inhabitants 1300 Families, in 3 Parishes, 2 Monasteries of Friars and 2 of Nuns. Some ancient Kings of Navarre kept their Court here, and it is distant from Madrid somewhat above 40 Leagues North, a little Easterly, and little less than 40 from Zaragoza North-West, and about 12 Leagues from both the Borders of Navarre and the Province of Alaba.

Besides these Cities, there are very many Wall'd Towns, and considerable enough to be taken notice of; as Penafiel, of 700 Houses, 4 Parishes, 3 Monasteries and 2 Hospitals. Agreda, of 1000 Houses, 6 Parishes, 3 Monasteries and 2 Hospitals, with many more. But we must not forget to mention the 4 Sea-ports of Old-Castile, which lie upon the Bay of Biscay, the First of which is Laredo, of 300 Houses, 1 Parish and 2 Monasteries, Wall'd, and 4 Gates. The Second Sansander, of 700 Houses, 2 Parishes, one of them Collegiate, and 4 Monasteries. The Third Castro de Urdiales, of 400 Houses, 1 Parish, 2 Monasteries and 2 Hospitals. Lastly, San Vicente de la Barquera, 300 Houses, 1 Parish, and 1 Monastery. They are all 4 Wall'd, and good Harbours for small Ships, all of them under the Government of a Corregidor, who is also Captain General, and is a Post of Honour and Profit.

C H A P. VIII.

The Kingdom of LEON

TAKES Name from its Metropolis, of which we shall speak in its Place, and here of that Country properly so call'd; for under the Crown of Leon were Asturias and Galicia already describ'd, as being distinct Provinces, tho' subject to the Kings of Leon. The Beginning of this Kingdom is generally plac'd in the Year 722. when Pelayo, or Pelagius I. who oppos'd the Moors after the Overthrow of King Roderick, took upon him the Title of King; but it must be observ'd, that Mariana, Garibay and other Spanish Authors all agree, that Pelayo and his Successors call'd themselves Kings of Oviedo only, for many Years, as appears by ancient Records, and yet later Writers have given them the Title of Kings of Leon; whereas the aforesaid Historians affirm, that King Ordonno, the 2d. of the Name, and 14th of the Race, was the first that assum'd this Title, about the Year 894. and Garibay rather believes it was Ramiro II. the 17th king of the Race who call'd himself so, Ann. 942. having upon search found no Records to prove that any before did take the Stile. But this is not worth our Controversing, they being the same Race of Kings, and the same Kingdom, only changing Names as it enlarg'd; for first those Princes were call'd Kings of Asturias, next of Leon, then of Castile, and now of Spain, as they extended their Conquests, or united other States to their Crowns, which Unions we have seen before.

The Kingdom of Leon properly so call'd, was formerly the Habitation of the Astures Cismontani, part of the Vaccei, and some of the Vettones. It is now bounded on the North by Asturias, and parted from it by the Mountains call'd of Asturias. On the East it has Old-Castile, from which divided by the Mountains of Pernia, and the Rivers Carrian and Pisuerga, as far as the Ebro, then by the Rivers Heban and Regannon, till it comes to the Mountains of Romilla.

Benilla de la Sierra; on the South the Mountains of Bannos and others run betwixt it and Estremadura; and on the West the Rivers of Agueda and Duero, and some Mountains separate it from Portugal, as doe the same Hills continu'd from Galicia. The Length of it is near 50 Leagues, the Breadth above 30. the River Duero running East and West cuts it in the middle, leaving one half on the North, and the other on the South.

The Air and Soil differ very little, or not at all from Old-Castile, as lying in the same Latitude, contiguous, and of the same Nature in Hills and Plains, which occasion the same Degrees of Heat and Cold, and a like Production, being much excellent Wheat, and other Grain, Pasture, Wine, Oyl, Honey, Game and Cattle. The Natives Brave, Hardy, Robust, Laborious and Temperate in their way of Living, as also much addicted to Learning, and the Nobility and Gentry Courteous and Affable. In the Mountains there are Quarries of curious Marble and Jasper Stone, and sometimes others of greater Value have been found, as Turkey Stones, Garnets, &c.

Under the Romans, who never thorowly conquer'd it, till Augustus Caesar, and held it about 400 Years, all that half which lies South of the River Duero, belong'd to the Province of Lusitania, as did the Northern half to the Tarraconensis. The Goths, who succeeded the Romans, were Masters 300 Years, after whom follow'd the Moors, who soon lost the Capital City Leon, and were by degrees expell'd all the rest. When it became subject to Kings of its own, as has been said, and those as they grew greater removing into Castile, it was put under a Governor call'd Adelantado, which is as much as a Lord Lieutenant; and that Title continues Hereditary to this Day in the Dukes of Nagera. In this Kingdom there are 8 Cities, no Archbishoprick, 6 Bishopricks, and 1 University. The Chief whereof are,

Leon.	}	Palencia.
Salamanca.		Toro.
Ciudad Rodrigo.		Medina de Rio Seco.
Zamora.		Tordesillas.
Astorga.		Medina del Campo.

LEON, the Capital City of the Kingdom of the same Name, corruptly so call'd, from Legio, a Roman Legion planted there, and in those Days a City of Hispania Tarraconensis; is seated at the Foot of the Mountains of Asturias, between the Rivers Ezla and Vernezga, in a temperate and healthy Air, 55 Leagues from Madrid North-West, 16 from Oviedo South-East, and 20 from Zamora North. The Walls of it were built by King Ordenno, Ann. 918. in which are 11 Gates, the Country about pleasant and fruitful, the Structures within good, after the ancient manner, consisting of 2000 Houses, 13 Parishes, 6 Monasteries of Friers, 5 of Nuns, 15 Chappels and 4 Hospitals. The Cathedral is one of the finest in Spain, as appears by the Spanish Proverb, Sevil for Greatness, Toledo for Riches, Compostela for Strength, and this for curious Workmanship; it is serv'd by 8 dignify'd Clergy-men, 84 Canons, 20 Petty-Canons, the Diocess which is under the Archbishop of Compostela, extending its Jurisdiction over 1020 Parishes, the Bishop's Revenue 13000 Ducats. The King of Spain is always one of the Canons of this Church, as is the Marquis of Astorga, as Lord of Villalobos. Nor to speak of fabulous Originals, the Emperor Trajan was the Founder of this City, who plac'd in it the 7th Legion, call'd Gemina. King Pelayo recover'd it from the Moors in 722. or 723. but it was retaken by those Infidels, and ran several Fortunes, till King Alonso V. the last time recover'd and fortify'd it.

Salamanca, call'd in Latin Salmantica, and Urbs Vettonum, and perhaps Elemanica by Polybius, is now the greatest University in Spain, and perhaps inferior to none in the World, about 37 Leagues from Madrid North-West, from Lisbon 78 North-East, from Valladolid 25 South-West, and from Zamora 12 South. The City is round, built on 3 Hills and 2 Valleys, the Walls 6366 Paces about, built in the Year 1147 by King Alonso VIII. in which there are 13 Gates, and within them 17 Squares, 162 Streets, 5000 Houses, many stately Buildings, 25 Parishes, 20 Monasteries of Friers, 11 of Nuns, 2 Houses for Maidens to live retir'd, 16 Chappels, 6 Hospitals, and 25 Colleges. The Celebrated River Tormes runs by it, along which there are delightful Gardens, pleasant Orchards, and fine shady Walks. The University was remov'd hither by King Ferdinand of Castile, in the Year 1240. afterwards enlarg'd and encourag'd by King Alonso XII. ever since which Time it has flourish'd, insomuch that there have been there, not many Years since between 7 and 8000 Scholars enroll'd, and above 15000 of all Sorts. It generally maintains 75 Professors, who have plentiful Salaries, and have produc'd many Men know in the World for their extraordinary Learning in all Sciences. The Colleges are most of them noble Structures, and the great publick Schools extraordinary Magnificent. This City is also a Bishoprick, under the Metropolitan of Compostela, and contains 240 Parish Churches, the Bishop's Revenue 24000 Ducats: To the Cathedral belong 10 dignify'd Clergy-men, 26 Canons, 30 Petty-Canons.

Ciudad Rodrigo, formerly Merobriga, next Augustobriga, being utterly ruin'd was rebuilt Ann. 1102. by D Rodrigo Gonzalez Giron, and from him call'd Ciudad Rodrigo, or Roderick's City. It was again destroy'd and rebuilt by King Ferdinand II. of Leon in 1160. for a Check upon Portugal, being about 4 Leagues from the Frontiers of that Kingdom, 43 West from Madrid, and 60 North East from Lisbon. It stands on the River Agueda, has good Walls, 9 Gates, 3 Squares, 54 Streets, 2000 Houses, 8 Parishes, 9 Monasteries of Friers and Nuns, 10 Chappels and 3 Hospitals. The Founder abovemention'd made it a Bishoprick, under the Metropolitan of Compostela, with only 63 Parishes subject to it, yet worth 10000 Ducats a Year to the Prelate, and the Cathedral serv'd by 7 dignify'd Clergy-men, 20 Canons and 7 Petty-Canons.

Zamora, some will have to be the ancient Sentica, which others deny, alledging that was the Name of Simancas, and therefore say this was call'd Sisapona, tho' there is another place of this Name in Andaluzia; so that it does not appear whether ever it had a Being till Built by King Alonso III. of Leon, Ann. 904. memorable for the Murder of King Sancho II. of Castile, Stabb'd before it by the Traitor Bellido Dolfos. It stands on an upright Rock, on the Banks of the River Duero, over which it has a noble Bridge of 17 Arches, with 2 Towers; in its Walls are 10 Gates, near them a stately Castle, within 3000 Houses, 24 Parishes, 6 Monasteries of Friers, 8 of Nuns, 6 Chappels and 4 Hospitals.

King

King Alonso VIII. of Castile made is a Bishoprick, Ann. 1119, or 1124, which extends over 256 Parishes, the Bishop's Revenue 20000 Ducats, to the Cathedral belong 9 Dignify'd Clergy-men, 24 Canons, and 12 Petty Canons. Distant from Madrid about 40 Leagues North West, 5 from Toro West, and from Leon 20 South.

Astorga seated in a pleasant Plain, on the Banks of the River Tuerto, is square, wall'd, has 500 Houses, 7 Gates, 8 Parishes, 4 Monasteries, 16 Chappels, and 9 Hospitals. The Romans call'd it Asturia Augusta, as being a noble City in those days. King Alonso recover'd it from the Moors, and built the Cathedral, which is one of the ancientest in Spain, but was again destroy'd, and afterwards rebuilt by King Ordono I. Ann. 851, it is serv'd by 14 Dignify'd Clergy-men, 50 Canons, and 10 Petty-Canons, the Diocess extending over 913 Parishes, the Bishop's Revenue 10000 Ducats a Year. King Henry IV. made it a Marquisate, conferr'd on Don Alvaro Peter Osorio, Earl of Traстамara and Villalobos, in whose Posterity it continues. Distant from Madrid about 45 Leagues North West, from Zamora 15 North, and 8 from Leon South, somewhat Westerly.

Palencia, formerly Palantia, famous among the Romans, for the overthrow of some of their Generals, afterwards destroy'd, remain'd so till the Year 1032, or 33, when rebuilt by King Sancho the Great, King of Navarre, upon his finding S. Antolin's Cave, as he was in Chace of a Wild-boar. He encompass'd it with strong Walls, in which there are 9 Gates, the Territory most delightful and fertile, as seated on the River Carrien, formerly call'd Nubis, in a spacious Plain. It contains 3000 Houses, 5 Parishes, 5 Monasteries of Friars, of which the Dominicans keep Schools of Philosophy, 6 of Nuns, 2 Hospitals, and 11 Chappels. It is a Bishoprick, under the Metropolitan of Compostela; the Cathedral serv'd by 14 Dignify'd Clergy-men, 42 Canons, 24 Petty Canons, and 40 Chaplains, the Diocess containing 881 Parishes, worth to the Bishop 24000 Ducats a Year. Distant from Madrid 40 Leagues North West, 18 West from Burgos, and 8 North West from Valladolid.

Toro, some say was formerly Ostodurum, others Sarabis, but being destroy'd and rebuilt by Prince afterwards King Garcia, Ann. 904, it had the present name of Toro, signifying a Bull, on account of a Stone Bull found in the Place, made by the Romans. It is seated on the Banks of the River Duero, which washes its lofty Walls, in which there are 7 Gates, and over the River a stately Bridge. Besides the other plentiful Products of the Country, it is famous for generous Wine much celebrated in Spain. The pleasant and wholesomeness of the Air, has invited many great Men to build themselves noble Palaces in the City. which are a great Ornament, besides which it contains 2500 Houses, 22 Parishes, 9 Monasteries of Friars, 5 of Nuns, 4 Hospitals, 6 Chappels, and a stately ancient Palace and Castle, besides a magnificent Collegiate Church. Here the Spaniards gave the Portugueses invading Spain a memorable overthrow in the Year 1476. It is about 35 Leagues from Madrid to the North-West, 5 East from Zamora, and 24 South West from Burgos.

Medina de Rio Seco, a rich and plentiful City, standing in a spacious Plain, hemm'd in with Mountains, and so fruitful in Pasture, that scarce any in Spain exceeds it, besides which it produces all necessaries for Food and Delight. The City contains 2000 Houses, 3 Parishes, 3 Monasteries of Friars, 2 of Nuns, 3 noble Hospitals, and 16 Chappels, and adjoining to it a lofty Castle. King Philip IV. made it a City, Ann. 1632, and it has 2 Fairs every Year, where vast numbers of Cattle are sold. The Romans call'd it Forum Egurorum, and the Moors, gave it the name of Medina, signifying a City, with the Addition of Rio Seco, to distinguish it from other Medinas, and is still a Dukedom in the Family of Enriquez, who are Admirals of Castile. Distant from Madrid 40 Leagues North East, from Burgos 18 Leagues West, and from Salamanca 22 North East.

Tordesillas, tho' but a Town may vye with many good Cities, as consisting of 1000 Houses, 6 Parishes, 2 Monasteries of Friars, 2 of Nuns, and a good Hospital, call'd by the Romans Turris Syllana, perhaps because founded by Caius Aneus Sylla's General, whom he sent against Sertorius. It is on the River Duero, 33 Leagues North West from Madrid, and 4 East from Toro.

Medina del Campo another Town, 8 Leagues from Valladolid to the South, and 27 from Madrid to the North West, has been the Court of some Kings, seated on the River Zapardiel, in a Morassy Ground and cloudy Air, yet has 1800 Houses, 14 Parishes, 9 Monasteries of Friars, 6 of Nuns, and 4 Hospitals, besides a Collegiate Church, with this peculiar Priviledge that neither the Pope can bestow any Benefice, nor the King any Employment in it. Medina, as was said above, is the name given by the Moors signifying, a City, and del Campo is the Distinction, importing in the Fields, because seated in a Plain. What ancient Roman name it had does not appear, the present is turn'd into Latin, Metonyma Campestris. Many other Towns of good note we must pass by for want of room.

CHAP. IX.

The Province of ESTREMADURA.

WAS the ancient Country of the Vettones, and principal Part of the Province call'd Lusitania, tho' now quite cut off from Portugal. On the North it joyns to the Kingdom of Leon, without any noted River or Mountain to part them; on the East the Mountains of Banos, Pico and Guadalupe divide it from the two Castiles; on the South a part of that call'd Sierra Morena separates it from An- daluzia; and on the West the Rivers Elia, Caya, and some others of less note make what distinction there is betwixt it and Portugal.

The Name of Estremadura is variously deriv'd, but the most receiv'd and probable Opinion is, that it comes from Estremo, that is the Borders, or extreme Parts, the Boundaries between the Kingdom of Leon, and the Moorish Dominions, having been a long

a long time in this Province. The Rivers Tagus and Guadiana running through it from East to West, divide it into three Parts, the most Northern beyond Tagus, the next betwixt Tagus and Guadiana, and the most Southern beyond Guadiana. The Length of it from North to South is 50 Leagues, and the Breadth from East to West 40.

The Natives Speak the better Spanish, the nearer they are to Castile, and somewhat more corrupt as they approach to Portugal; they are addicted to Tillage, somewhat Haughty and Conceited; good Friends, strong of Body, and Warlike. The Climate is Hot, being most Plain, remote from the Sea, and wanting the cooling Gales, which the Hills and the Ocean communicate to the adjacent Parts.

No part of Spain, or of the World, can exceed this in Fertility, for an Instance whereof we need only speak of that they call La Vera de Plasencia, which is, the Plain of Plasencia, of which it might suffice to say, that many of the Ancients plac'd the Elysian Fields in it, as knowing nothing more Beautiful or Delicious, and in it is the celebrated Monastery of S. Justa, to which the Emperor Charles the V. after resigning all his vast Dominions, retir'd and liv'd two Years, till he exchang'd this Life for a better. The Sweets of the Place draw abundance of Nobility and Gentry to spend the Summer in it. The Length of it is 12 Leagues, the Breadth 3, in which Space there are 13 small Towns or Villages, and 5000 Houses, all the rest either cover'd with the greatest variety of Fruit-Trees Europe affords, or distributed into Olive Groves, Vineyards, Meadows, delightful Gardens, Corn, and Flax Fields, the whole water'd by pleasant Springs and purling Streams, full of excellent Trouts. In fine, such is the Product of this Valley, that the Territory of only 4 inconsiderable Villages, of the 13 said to be in it, has been computed to yeild 150 Tun of Oyl, 550 of Wine, 60000 Bushels of Chestnuts, and an infinite Quantity of Wheat, other parts yielding much more in proportion, besides all other Fruit, Flax, &c. and abundance of Silk, Wax and Honey. There is another Valley call'd also of Plasencia, and reaching to the City, nothing inferior to this. Besides what has been said, all this Province does so abound in Pasture, that in Summer they drive innumerable Flocks of Cattle out of both Castiles, and even from Asturias and other Parts, to Graze in it. Nor is this all, for on the Banks of the two Rivers Tagus and Guadiana are very numerous Breeds of Spanish Horses, so much valu'd throughout all Europe.

This rich Province contains 7 Cities, 3 Bishopricks, many large and stately Towns, equal to Cities; and abundance of populous Villages, not inferior to good Towns. The chief are,

Merida.	}	Xeres de los Cavalleros.
Badajoz.		Llerena.
Plasencia.		Alcantara.
Coria.		Medellin.
Truxillo.

MERIDA, was anciently the Capital of all the Province of Lusitania, as it is still of Estremadura, being 10 Leagues East from Badajoz, and consequently little more from the Frontiers of Portugal, 16 North from Sevil, and near 55 South-West from Madrid, the noble River Guadiana washing its stately Walls, adorn'd with many Towers. The Situation is high, the Air wholesome, the Houses 1000, 1 Parishes, 3 Monasteries of Friers, 3 of Nuns, 1 Hospital, and 7 Chappels, and under its Jurisdiction are 15 Towns and 13 Villages. Augustus Caesar built it for his old Soldiers, call'd Emeriti, naming it Emerita Augusta, from himself and them, whence corruptly came Merida: It made the bravest Defence of any Town in Spain against the Moors, but was at last oblig'd to submit to the Fate of the Nation, yet Capitulating that all the Inhabitants should be conducted safe, with all their Goods, to Christian Dominions.

Badajoz, Founded by the Emperor Augustus, and from his own Name calling it Pax Augusta; when taken by the Moors, said to be by them nam'd Beled Aix, signifying Land of Holiness; or, according to others, Baxaugus, which is Land of Walnut-Trees and thence by Corruption Badajoz, seated on the South Side of the River Guadiana, half a League from the Caya, which is the Boundary of Portugal, 10 Leagues West from Merida, above 60 South-West from Madrid, and 27 North, a little West-ly from Sevil. It stands high, has a strong Castle, a stately Bridge over the River Guadiana, good Walls, repair'd and fortify'd in 1641. and 42. and 8 Gates, 2300 Houses 3 Parishes, 5 Monasteries of Friers, 7 of Nuns, 3 Hospitals and 10 Chappels. It is a Bishoprick, worth to its Prelate 18000 Ducats a Year, tho' there be but 53 Parishes in the Diocess; the Cathedral is serv'd by 2 Dignify'd Clergy-Men, 15 Canons, and 14 Petty-Canons. In the Year, 1289. this City was divided into two Factions, one of which declaring for the rightful Heir of the Crown, Don Alenso de la Cerda; the Usurper, King Sancho IV. with the assistance of the other Faction, enter'd the Place, and Butcher'd 4000 of the Loyallists, who were Bury'd without the Walls, in a Place, thence call'd Offario, or the Charnel, and thence corruptly Emsario. In this same Place Alonso I. who took upon him the Title of King of Portugal, was taken Prisoner by his Son-in-law King Ferdinand II. of Leon, An. 1179. and generously set at Liberty, An. 1658. the Portuguese having Revolted in 1640 laid Siege to this Place, but after 4 Months, upon the News of the Spanish Army coming to relieve it, broke up with precipitation and departed. They again sat down before it, in conjunction with the Confederate Forces in 1705. and went off upon the Spanish Forces appearing on the other side of the River.

Plasencia, seated on the Banks of the little River Xerte, with 3 Bridges over it, 72 Towers on the Walls, 7 Gates, as many Squares, the same number of Fountains, 22 great Streets, stately Buildings, 2000 Houses, 7 Parishes, 4 Monasteries of Friers, 5 of Nuns, 7 Chappels, 5 Hospitals and 2 Colleges. Alonso IX. of Castile, rais'd it in the Year, 1180. as is thought, out of the Ruins of the ancient Deobriga, tho' others say Ambrosia, and call'd it Plasencia, from the pleasantness of the Situation. Seventeen Years after he enclos'd it with double Walls on the solid Rock, which are the same now standing, and made it a Bishoprick, the Prelate's Revenue 40000 Ducats, Parishes subject to it 101; to the Cathedral belong 8 Dignify'd Clergy-Men, 16 Canons, and 5 Petty-Canons; distant from Madrid about 40 Leagues South-West, 13 from Coria East, somewhat Southerly, and 25 from Madrid North-East.

Coria, a City and Bishoprick, anciently call'd Caurium, or Coria, seated in a pleasant Valley on the River Alagon, Wall'd, has 5 Gates, 700 Houses, 2 Parishes, 1 Monastery of Friers, 1 of Nuns, 2 Hospitals and 3 Chappels. King Alonso VIII. recover'd it from the Moors in 1142. instituting it a Bishoprick, worth to its Prelate 26000 Ducats a Year, and under der it 371 Parishes, the Cathedral serv'd by 9 Dignify'd Clergy-Men, 9 Canons, and 6 Petty-Canons. It is a Marquisate belonging to the Dukes of Avon. Distant from Madrid about 40 Leagues West, somewhat Southerly, 6 East from the Borders of Portugal, and 24 North from Merida.

Truxillo, a City founded by Julius Caesar, and call'd Turris Julia, corruptly Truxillo, stands on the top of a Hill, with a Castle over it, built upon the Rock, contains 1200 Houses, 6 Parishes, 4 Monasteries of Friars, and 6 of Nuns, having Jurisdiction over 17 Villages. Here was Born Don Francisco Pizarro, the famous Conqueror of Peru. Distant from Madrid 42 Leagues S. W. from Merida 12 East Northerly, and 20 from Alcantara South-East.

Xeres de los Caballeros, the name Xeres, corruptly from Xara a Bramble, the Place on which it was Built by King Alonso X. of Leon, An. 1229. being full of them; the addition, de los Caballeros, or of the Knights, because King Ferdinand III. gave it to the Knights Templers in 1232. before which, the distinctive Appellation was de Badajoz, for its nearness to that City. It is seated in a spacious Plain, half a League from the River Ardilla, is Wall'd, and contains 1400 Houses, 4 Parishes, 3 Monasteries of Friars, 6 of Nuns, 16 Chappels, and 6 curious Conduits; 65 Leagues distant from Madrid South-West, and 8 from Badajoz South.

Llerena City, seated in a Valley, Wall'd, and contains 1600 Houses, 2 Parishes, 3 Monasteries of Friars, 4 of Nuns, and Founded by some great Master of the Military Order of Santiago, but not known which of them. Some call it Ellerena, and it stands near the Foot of the Mountain call'd Sierra Morena, 55 Leagues South-West from Madrid, and 18 North a little Easterly from Sevil.

Alcantara is the first Town, not a City, that deserves any mention, being seated on the River Ta- gus, over which it has a magnificent Bridge, built by the Emperor Trajan the Town being the Foundation of Julius, or Augustus Caesar, and call'd Nova Casarea, but the Moors gave it the Name of Alcantara, signifying a Bridge, from the excellency of that Structure. King Alonso X. of Leon, recovering it from the Moors in 1214. gave it to the Knights before call'd of S. Julian del Pereyro, and since from this Place, of Alcantara, whose principal Seat it has been ever since. It is Wall'd, and contains 1200 Houses, 2 Parishes, 2 Monasteries of Friars, and 2 of Nuns. In the Year 1706. April the 14th it was Taken by the Portuguese and Confederate Army, but the Spaniards re-took it the same Year, December the 15th, by Escalade. It is about 3 Leagues from the Frontiers of Portugal, 55 from Madrid South-West, and 15 North from Badajoz.

Medellin is a good Town on the River Guadiana, over which it has a stately Bridge, as also a Castle, 800 Houses, 4 Parishes, 1 Monastery of Friars, 2 of Nuns, 4 Chappels, an Hospital, and a House for Girls that are Orphans, formerly call'd Metallinum and Metallensis Colonia: Alburquerque, corruptly from the Latin, Alba Quercus, 3 Leagues from the Frontiers of Portugal, Wall'd, has a Castle, and 2000 Houses. Bejar, 10 Leagues from Plasencia, of 700 Houses. Caceres, 8 Leagues from Truxillo, 2000 Houses. Montijo, 4 Leagues from Merida, 700 Houses. Zalamea de la Serena, 9 Leagues from Llerena, 700 Houses. Fuente de Cantos, 600 Houses. Villa Nueva de la Serena, 800 Houses. Belalcazar, on the Borders next Andaluzia, 1000 Houses. Azuaga, 5 Leagues from Llerena, 850 Houses. Zafra, 1200 Houses. Almendralejo, 900 Houses. Villa-Franci, 6 Leagues from Merida, 700 Houses; and many more considerable Places, too tedious to give an Account of.

CHAP. X.

The Province of ANDALUZIA.

TAKEN in the largest Acceptation, contains the Moorish Kingdoms of Sevil, Cordova, Jaen and Granada; but this last is generally look'd upon as a separate Province, and as such we are to treat of them both; yet it must be observ'd, that together they made the Roman Province call'd Betica, only wanting as much of Estremadura and Castile, as lies between the River Guadiana, and the Mountains of Sierra Morena. This same was afterwards the Seat of the Vandals, that overrun Spain and Africa, and from them call'd Vandalitia, corruptly Andaluzia. It had also the Name of Turdetania, from the Turduli, its ancient Inhabitants.

To come to that now properly so call'd, the long Ridge of Mountains call'd Sierra Morena, divides it on the North from New Castile and Estremadura, as does the River Chanca on the East from Portugal, and the Guadiana from Algarve; on the South it has the Ocean, the Mouth of the Streights, and part of the Mediterranean; along the South-East lies the Kingdom of Granada, without any noted Boundaries for the most part, except the Mountains of Cazorla and Sierra Segura for some few Leagues of the Eastern Part, on which side it joyns to the Kingdom of Murcia, some of the Mountains last nam'd making a part of the Separation. Thus the whole Length from East to West will appear to be about 90 Leagues, and the greatest Breadth from North to South 46, which is only where it stretches out to form the Mouth of the Streights, from whence it narrows both ways, especially to the Eastward, where it runs into a Slip, less than 10 Leagues over, for at least 30 Leagues in Length.

The People of this Country Speak the Spanish more harsh and unpolish'd than the Castilians, which in a great measure proceeds from their having continu'd longer under the Moorish Subjection, and retaining much of their hard Pronunciation; besides that we see in all Countries, the farther from the Court, the more the Dialect alters, and that most upon the Coasts, as for instance in the West of England. The Andaluzians are sharp Witted, Discreet, well Bred, Resolute, Constant, extraordinary Loyal, ambitious of Honour, and Lovers of Learning; but withal Haughty and Conceited of themselves, apt to take Revenge for the least Wrong, and over nice in Points of Honour. The Castilians say of them, Al Andaluz, hazelle la Cruz, that is, make the Sign of the Cross, when you see an Andaluzian, or beware of him, and stand upon your Guard, because they are a sharp subtle People, and the Castilians Ingenuous and Sincere. The Fiction of these or any other Spaniards making their Wives serve them at Table is malicious and groundless, for no Na.

Nation honours Women more than they do, or pays more Respect to their Wives.

It is most certain, that no Country exceeds this in Wealth and Fertility; the quantities of Wheat, Wine and Oyl it produces are incredible, for one single Township has been known to make 70000 Pipes of Wine in a Year, and no less quantity of Oyl. Besides here are infinite Numbers of Cattel: We need not commend the so well known Sevil Oranges, the Lemmons, Raisons, Almonds and Figs, all the growth of this Province. Here is also plenty of curious white Salt, the best of Sugar, precious Scarlet Berries for Dyeing, and in fine, every thing that can make a Country delightful and wealthy. We will not say any thing of the Mines, since they have not been regarded since the discovery of America; but there is nothing more certain than that the Phenicians and Carthaginians Traded hither for Silver and Gold as we do to the West-Indies, and still we see it is a Place of vast Commerce, and resorted to by all Nations of Europe.

We must not forget the most celebrated Breed of Horses, so famous in all Nations and Ages, tho' something was said of them in Estremadura, for there, as was observ'd, they have them on the Guadiana and Tagus; but the Country of Andaluzia, and the River Guadalquivir, the renown'd Betis of the Ancients, have always exceeded all other Parts, and Cordova now keeps up the great Name, for these so much valu'd Creatures. All the Objection that can be made against this Country, is its violent Summer Heats, which however are not so lasting but they may be born with, in consideration of the other Advantages, and the many ways there are found to make them easy.

F. Pennatosa says this Province and Estremadura, are able together to raise 50000 Foot, and 20000 Horse to serve their King in his Wars. It is under the Direction of an Adelantado, or Lord Lieutenant, which Honour is hereditary in the Dukes of Medina Celi; and it contains 21 Cities, 1 Archbishoprick 3 Bishopricks, and abundance of stately Towns, and large wealthy Villages. The Chief are,

Sevil.	Medina Sidonia.
Cordova.	Port St. Mary.
Jaen.	Anduxar.
Cadiz.	Carmona.
Xerez de la Frontera.	Alcala la Real.

SEVIL, by the Spaniards call'd Sevilla, by the Ancients Hispalis, which is variously deriv'd, and the Founder as uncertain, for which reason we shall not enter upon those Controversies. But Julius Caesar is said to have Rebuilt and Wall'd it by the Name of Julia Remula, or Julius's little Rome. Several Gothish Kings kept their Court in it, as did the Moors, till afterwards it became the Head of a Kingdom, when the Infidels set up many in Spain, and so continu'd till King Ferdinand III. of Castile recover'd it from them, in the Year, 1248. after a Siege of 16 Months, when 400000 Moors are said to have been drove out of it, to make room for Christians to supply their Places, after they had been possess'd of it 534 Years. As it was a Capital City in those Ages, so it still continues the Metropolis of Andaluzia, seated in a spacious Plain.

on the River Guadalquivir, which is Navigable for great Ships 15 Leagues from the Sea, and over this River is a strong Bridge of 17 Boats, which joyns the City to Triana, a Suburb beyond the Water of 6000 Houses, including the which, and the others, the whole compass of Sevil is 14 Miles; the stately Wall is but 8 Miles about, with 15 Gates, and 166 Towers in it. The Inhabitants are 300000 in 14000 Houses, distributed into 29 Parishes, with 44 Monasteries of Friars 30 of Nuns, 24 Hospitals, the same number of Squares, or Market-Places, plentifully supply'd with all that can be wish'd, and very many stately Buildings. Here are 24 Secular and Ecclesiastical Courts, the supreme Magistrate is call'd Affistente, and generally is a Nobleman, with whom are 62 Ventiquatres, answerable to Aldermen, but Men of Birth and Quality, 60 Jurados, which may more properly be Aldermen, as being Citizens. The Alguazil, Mayor, or head Officer of Justice, is always the Duke of Alcala, as the Duke of Ormond is for Westminster; the Admiral of Castile is Standard Bearer. The Casa de Contratacion, or India House, was erected here in the Year 1513. for regulating all things relating to the Trade of the West-Indies. A Royal Court in 1556: consisting of a Regent and 8 Judges. The Exchange for the Merchants in 1583. cost a Million of Ducats. The Mint employs 180 Officers, and when it Works, can Coin 700 Marks, each being 8 Ounces, of Gold and Silver every Day. To the Custom-House belong 257 Officers, whose Salaries amount to 54000 Ducats. The King's Pallace, a most magnificent Structure, rebuilt by King Peter in 1360. but decay'd and put to other uses since the Kings have left that City. The Court of Inquisition, to which belong 4000 Officers. Some Colleges there are, this being also an University, Founded in the Year, 1405. A Charitable Foundation, call'd La Misericordia, or the House of Mercy, where upwards of 54000 Ducats are lay'd out every Year in charitable Uses. The great Heat of the Summer is recompens'd by the pleasantness of the Winter, and plenty of all Things for Sustenance and Delight; the neighbouring Wood call'd Ajorafe, signifying in Arabick, Farm of Olives, extending 9 Leagues in compass, and produces several Thousand Tun of Oyl, nor is there less plenty of Wine and Corn. In the City Silks and Silver Stuffs are Wove. In Triana, above-mention'd, over the River, there are 50 Work-houses of curious Earthen-ware, and fine Glaz'd Tiles, like those we call Dutch Tiles for Chimneys, and there is Yearly made 15000 Hundred Weight of Spanish Soap, transported thence to several Parts. Without the City there are Salt-Pits, and noble Quarries of the finest Jasper, Marble and other curious Stones. The greatest Trade is that of the West-Indies, which Roderick Caro cast up out of the Books of the India-House, taking the Return from thence as enter'd at Sevil, from the Year 1492. till 1592. being the first Century after the Discovery, and found it to amount to the value of Five thousand Millions in Gold, Silver, Pearls, and other Product of America, this being what was enter'd, what never was accounted for being much more. And should we see the Computation of the next Century to that, which is the last now past, it must infinitely exceed it. This has been an Archbishoprick of great Antiquity, and the Dignity restor'd, as soon as recover'd from the Moors, the Archbishop's Revenue at present being 120000 Ducats a Year, and 234 Parishes subject to the Diocesis.

cells. The Cathedral was a Mosque built by the Moors, in the Year 1000. and is one of the majestic Structures of Spain, in length 407 Feet, 271 in breadth, and 128 in height, with 9 Gates, 80 Windows, and 82 Altars on which 500 Masses are said every Day. The Tabernacle weighs 6 Hundred weight and a half of massive Silver, and the Workmanship of it cost 40000 Ducats. The stately Tower is 350 Foot high, containing 24 Bells, and on the Top the famous Statue of a Woman call'd Giralda, which turns to point out the Wind like a Weather Cock. This Cathedral is serv'd by 11 Dignify'd Clergy-men, 40 Canons, the same number of Petty-Canons, 20 Benefic'd Priests, and 30 Chaplains. All along the River there are curious Keys, along which Vessels of good Burden may lye, and near the said River stands a Tower, which is a noble Structure, and call'd the Golden Tower. Sevil is 15 Leagues from S. Lucar, which is at the Mouth of the River, from Madrid about 80 South-West, from Lisbon 63 South-East, and from Granada 36 West. The River overflowing here has made wonderful Havock, as in 1626. when 4000 Persons are said to have been Drown'd; and again this present Year 1708. there was so great an Inundation, that it overthrew some Hundreds of Houses. In 1463. there was such a dreadful Storm of Wind, that it carry'd away a Pair of Oxen, as they were Yoak'd at the Plow; and in the City threw one of the Bells of S. Augustin's Church, above a Bow Shot from the Steeple; but the dreadfulest Judgment was in the Year 1649. when 280000 People Dy'd of the Plague.

Cordova, the next noble City, and Capital of another Kingdom, anciently call'd Corduba, and Colonia Patricia, being a Roman Colony, and the Birth-Place of both the Senecas, Lucan, Averroes, the famous Arabian Philsician, and Hesius, who presided at the Council of Nice, besides many other Men fam'd for Learning. It is seated in a pleasant wholesome Air, in a delicious Plain, at the Foot of the Mountain Sierra Morena, and on the Banks of the mighty River Guadalquivir, over which it has a stately Bridge of 17 Arches, with several Towers, built by Hazzen, a Moorish Governour, An. 722. The Plain abounds in all Things for Suttenance and Delight, also great Quantities of Silk, whereof rich Stuffs are here made, as also very fine Cloth, and curious gilt Leather; but above all are the most celebrated Horses, so Fleet, Mertlesome, good Temper'd and Warlike, that scarce any in the World surpass them, towards which Breed the King always keeps 300 Mares in magnificent Stables. The City lying along the aforesaid River, which is Navigable, is handsomely Built, has many fine Fountains, the Streets spacious, the Walls of Stone, with 13 Gates in them, a stately old Palace Built by the Goths, An. 700. within a particular Wall on the West side, now belonging to the Inquisition. The Inhabitants are 14000 Families, in 13 Parishes, with 15 Monasteries of Friers, the same number of Nuns, 12 Hospitals, and some Colleges, as being an University. King Ferdinand III. recover'd it from the Moors, An. 1236. and Consecrated the great Mosque, built by King Abderramen, An. 787. which is one of the Wonders of the World, being 600 Foot long, and 500 in breadth, with 350 Pillars of Marble in 10 Rows, forming 11 Isles, 366 Altars, and 24 Gates; in short it is a prodigious Structure for Magnitude, serv'd by 8 Dignify'd Clergy-men, 20 Canons, 30 Petty-Canons, besides many other Priests.

The Diocess extends over 92 Parishes, the Bishop's Revenue 40000 Ducats. The Suburb call'd Axarquiza, on the River without the East Gate, is not inferior to a good City, has a Wall, and joyns to the main Body. This City is about the midway betwixt Sevil and Granada, 23 Leagues West from the latter, and somewhat more East from the former, and from Madrid 61 South, very little Westerly. Above 37000 Persons are reckned to have Dy'd in it of the Plague, in the fatal Year 1649.

Jaen may be reckned the third City, as having also given Name to another Moorish Kingdom, seated at the Foot of a Hill, on the Top whereof is a strong Castle, defended on the South by Mountains of difficult Access, in a healthful Air, and fruitful Territory, is Wall'd, with many Towers, and 6 Gates, inhabited by 5000 Families in 12 Parishes, 11 Monasteries of Friers, 8 of Nuns, 12 Hospitals, as many Chappels, and a Cathedral serv'd by 8 Dignify'd Clergy-men, 21 Canons, and 24 Petty-Canons, the Bishoprick extending over 84 Parishes, the Prelate's Revenue 40000 Ducats. King Ferdinand III. recover'd it from the Moors, An. 1466. suppos'd to have been call'd Giennium, or Gienna by the Romans. It stands a League from the River Guadalbullon, about 18 East from Cordova, and 55 South from Madrid.

CADIZ is the next to the Kingly Cities, Famous in all Ages, by the Names of Erythrea, Aphrodisia, Continusa, but most by that of Gades, whence the present Name came by Corruption; resorted to formerly by Phenicians, Greeks, Carthaginians and Romans, and now by all European Nations, for the Product of Spain and Wealth of the West-Indies, being a spacious Harbour, receiving all the Treasure of America. The Island it stands in lying betwixt the Mouths of the River Guadalquivir and of the Streights, on the Atlantick Ocean, was once reckned 10 Leagues in Length, at present scarce 3, and joyn'd to the Continent by a Bridge call'd Zuazo, and produces much Wine. The City is inhabited by 5000 Families, yet has but one Parish, which is also a Cathedral, being a Bishoprick, with 5 Monasteries of Friers, and 2 of Nuns. The Bay which forms the Harbour is very spacious, defended by several Forts, the chief of which are call'd Puntal and Matagorda, on two Points at the Entrance. The Cathedral is serv'd by 6 Dignify'd Clergy-Men, 10 Canons, and 12 Petty-Canons; only 14 Parishes being within the Diocess, which is nevertheless worth 20000 Ducats a Year to its Prelate. Lovers of Fabulous Antiquity will have it to be Built by Hercules; the most like Opinion is, that the Phenicians were the Founders. The Romans enlarg'd and beautify'd it, with the Title of a Municipal, or Free-City, and look'd upon as one of the best in the Empire, as having at one Time 500 Roman Knights in it, which no other had but Padua. The Moors utterly destroy'd it, and so it continu'd till recover'd by the Christians, who Re-built and Fortify'd it, as a most convenient Harbour. It was taken by the English Forces under the Earl of Essex in the Year 1596. who Plunder'd and quitted it a Fortnight after. Another Attempt was made upon it in the Year 1625. but without Success, as was that under the Duke of Ormond in 1704. since when it is well Fortify'd and secur'd by a strong Garrison. It is distant from Madrid near 100 Leagues to the South-West, 20 from Sevil, and 18 from Gibraltar North-West. Above 12000 Persons dy'd here of the Plague in the fatal Year 1649.

Xerez de la Frontera, a City famous for the fatal Battle fought in its Plains between the Goths and Moors, which made the latter Masters of all Spain. It is seated in the aforesaid Plain 2 Leagues from the Sea, 16 South from Sevil, on the little River Guadalete, in so fruitful a Territory, that besides vast quantities of Wheat, Fruit, Cattle, &c. it yields 60000 Pipes of that generous Wine we from it call Sherry, and us'd not many Years since to Breed 2000 noble Horses every Year. The City is adorn'd with a stately Castle, other handsome Structures, strong Walls 4 Gates, and Inhabited by 7000 Families, in 8 Parishes, 1 of them Collegiate, with 9 Monasteries of Friars, 5 of Nuns and an Hospital. King Alonso the Wise, recover'd it from the Moors, An. 1264.

Exija, a City stands in a delightful Plain, on the River Xenil, which falls into Guadalquivir, Wall'd, handsomely Built, and has 9 Gates, the Territory besides immense Quantities of Corn, Wine, Oyl, Silk, &c. producing a considerable quantity of Cotton and Breeding noble Horses. The Inhabitants amount to 8000 Families, in 6 Parishes, 10 Monasteries of Friars, 6 of Nuns, 5 Hospitals and 9 Chappels. To pass by fabulous Stories of Founders, the Romans gave it the Name of Augusta Firma, and the Moors that of Exija, signifying, little Frying Pan. Distant about 15 Leagues from Sevil to the East, 9 West from Cordova, and 65 from Madrid South, somewhat Westerly.

Gibraltar, the ancient Calpe, which is the Name of the Mountain, at the Foot whereof this little City stands, famous for being reckned the western Boundary of the Earth, or one of Hercules's Pillars, the other call'd Avila, being on the African Shore. The City is Wall'd, and so inclos'd with Hills, that it is almost inaccessible from the Land, having but 2 Gates on that side, and as many to the Sea, and us'd to be Inhabited by 1200 Families, in 1 Parish, with 3 Monasteries of Friars, 1 of Nuns and 2 Hospitals. When taken by the English in the Year 1704 all the Inhabitants quitted it, so that at present there are very few, besides the English Garrison, and such as depend on it. The present Name is deriv'd from the Arabick, Gebal, a Mountain, and Tarif, the Name of the Moorish General, who first pass'd over out of Africk to Conquer Spain. It is at the Mouth of the Streights, opposite to Ceuta in Africk, 18 Leagues South-East from Cadiz, 33 South from Sevil, and 100 South-West from Madrid.

Ubeda, said to be call'd by the Romans Ubea, or Uetula, is a City seated on a Hill, Wall'd, with a stately Castle, 1500 Families, 11 Parishes, 1 of them Collegiate, 7 Monasteries of Friars, 5 of Nuns, and 2 good Hospitals. It is 49 Leagues South from Madrid, 12 North from Granada, and 24 East from Cordova.

Baeza, a good City, 5 Leagues from Ubeda, last mention'd, to the South-West, anciently call'd Bia-tia or Beatia, seated on a high Hill, divided into 2 little ones by a small Valley, a League from the River Guadalquivir, has strong Walls, with lofty Towers, 4000 Families, 12 Parishes, 1 of them Collegiate, and another a Cathedral, but united to the Bishoprick of Jaen; 10 Monasteries of Friars, 6 of Nuns, and 7 Hospitals, and is Famous for Dyeing the finest Scarlet Cloth, and making rich Taffeties. It is also an University, Founded in the Year 1533, and was a Roman Colony, recover'd from the Moors by King Ferdinand III. An. 1227.

San Lucar de Barrameda, a City and Port well known throughout Europe, at the Mouth of the River Guadalquivir, 15 Leagues below Sevil, much more resorted to before the West-India Fleets were allow'd to set out from, and return, to Cadiz; defended by 3 Castles, and adorn'd with a Palace, inhabited by 6000 Families, most Trading People, yet but one Parish, 9 Monasteries of Friars, 2 of Nuns and an Hospital. The Ancient Name was Fanum Luciferi, the Temple of the Evening Star, from a Temple dedicated to the Goddess Venus, and thence by Corruption San Lucar.

Medina Sidonia, formerly Affindum, or Affidonia, a Roman Colony, the Moors adding the Title of Medina, signifying a City, produc'd the present Name. It stands on the Ridge of a Hill, strong by Nature, plentiful in all Things, inhabited by 1500 Families, in 2 Parishes, 4 Monasteries of Friars, and 1 of Nuns, and is an ancient Dukedom in the most noble Family of Guzman. Distant from the Ocean about 4 Leagues, 9 from Cadiz Eastward, and 20 South from Sevil.

Port St. Mary, in Spanish, Puerto de Santa Maria, rais'd by King Alonso the Wise, An. 1264. out of the ancient Ruins of Portus Menesthei, seated in a Plain, at the Mouth of the little River Guadalete, much resorted to, and inhabited by 1500 Families, 1 Parish, 3 Monasteries of Friars, 2 of Nuns and an Hospital. It is an open Place, and was Rich, till Plunder'd by the English in the Year 1704. and is an Earldom belonging to the mighty Dukes of Medina Celi.

Anduxar, by the Romans call'd Forum Julium, is a City containing 3000 Families, 5 Parishes, 6 Monasteries of Friars, 3 of Nuns and 2 Hospitals, and seated on the Banks of the River Guadalquivir, in a delightful Plain, with a magnificent Bridge, a strong Castle and stately Buildings. Distant from Sevil 37 Leagues to the East, and above 50 South from Madrid.

Carmona, formerly Carmon, a City in the middle of Andaluzia, seated on a craggy Eminence, with 118 Towers on its strong Walls, and a noble Castle, the Rivers Corbones and Guadanna, which fall into the Guadalquivir, watering its spacious Plains. It contains 3000 Inhabitants, 7 Parishes, 5 Monasteries of Friars, 5 of Nuns, good Hospitals and Chappels. Julius Caesar made it a Municipium, or Free City, and King Ferdinand III. recover'd it from the Moors. It is 11 Leagues East from Sevil, and 66 South from Madrid.

Alcala la Real, by the Moors call'd Alcala de Ben-zaide, 9 Leagues North-West from Granada, and 45 South from Madrid, stands on a Hill among Mountains, a Wall'd City, with several Towers Inhabited by 2000 Families, 2 Parishes, one of them Collegiate; 4 Monasteries of Friars, and 2 of Nuns. What Name it had formerly, or by whom built, does not appear; but King Alonso XII. recover'd it from the Moors, Ann. 1341.

Lucena, suppos'd to be call'd by the Romans, Luceria, is as delicious and fruitfully seated as any City in Europe, no spot of Ground producing greater Plenty of generous Wine, sweet Oil, and choice Meat, than its Territory does, being seated on the little River Guelves; Inhabited by 5000 Families, in 2 Parishes, with 4 Monasteries of Friars, 2 of Nuns, and 14 Chappels. Fifteen Leagues distant from Sevil to the South-West; about the same distant from Cadiz North-West.

Arcos,

Ates, distinguish'd by the Addition, de la Frontera, or of the Frontiers; a small City of 2000 Inhabitants, 2 Parishes, 3 Monasteries of Friars, and 2 of Nuns, seated on a very high upright Rock, only accessible on the East side, the other Parts being enclosed by the River Guada etc. Under the Romans, it had the Names of A subriga, and Arcensium Colonia; recover'd from the Moors by King Alonso the Wise, Ann. 1264. and seated 12 Leagues South from Sevil, and about the same distance North-East from Cadiz.

Sanlucar is Mayor, or Sanlucar the Greater, to distinguish it from the other above-mention'd of Barrameda, stands in a Plain on the River Guadigamar, 4 Leagues West from Sevil, is but a small City of 800 Families, in 3 Parishes; made a City by King Philip IV. Ann. 1639. The Roman name, some will have to be Menova, others Solucar.

Mazuer is still a smaller City, of 700 Families, one Parish, one Monastery of Friars, and one of Nuns; made a City as the last, by King Philip IV. Ann. 1642. and seated on the River Azige, or Tinto, the last name signifying Colour'd or Dy'd, because it rises in Sierra Morena, of a yellowish Colour, petrifying the Sands it runs over, parching up the Plants and Roots of Trees it washes, and breeding no Fish, nor any other living Creature; but is good to cure Cattle of the Worms.

Marchena, the last City of this Province, 9 Leagues distant from Sevil to the East, somewhat Southerly, pleasantly seated, with a strong Castle, handsomely Wall'd, and containing 3000 Families, one Parish, 4 Monasteries of Friars, 2 of Nuns, and an Hospital; said to be Founded by Claudius Marcellus, 50 Years before Christ, and from him call'd Marcia; by Corruption, Marchena: Yet others say, Lucius Marcius was the Founder, 208 Years before Christ.

Some Towns of Note under the degree of Cities are, Tarifa, on the Mouth of the Straights, of 800 Families. Lebriza 5 Leagues from Xeres, 1500 Families. Offuna, 5 Leagues from Ecija, of 3500 Families, and a noted Dukedom Arcudete, 6 Leagues from Jaen, of 1800 Families. Paima, 9 Leagues from Cordova, 2500 Families an Earldom first, and then a Dukedom in the Family of Potocariro, of which is the present famous Cardinal of the name, and Archbishop of Toledo. Martos, 3 Leagues from Jaen, 15000 Families; Ayamonte, on the Borders of Agarve, 1300 Families. Lora, 9 Leagues from Sevil, 2000 Families. Porcuna, between Cordova and Jaen, 1000 Families. Cazorla, 6 Leagues from Baeza, 3000 Families. Arjona, 2 Leagues from Anduxar, 1000 Families. Utrera, 5 Leagues from Sevil, 3000 Families. Alcala de Guadaira, 2 Leagues from Sevil, 1400 Families. Moron, 9 Leagues from Sevil, 2500 Families. Zahara, 14 Leagues from Ronda, 800 Families. Canete, 700 Families. Constantina, on the Mountain Sierra Morena, 1000 Families. Cazalla, 14 Leagues from Sevil, 1000 Families. Lepe, near Ayamonte, 700 Families. Certaya, a League from the last, 700 Families. Aracena, next the Frontiers of Portugal, 1000 Families. Cabra, 2500 Families. Priego, 3 Leagues from Cabra, 2000 Families, a great Place for Weaving of Taffaties. Archidena, on the Frontiers of Granada, 700 Families. Baena, 8 Leagues from Cordova, 1800 Families. Liruela, half a League from Cazorla, 800 Families. Espozo, 5 Leagues from Cordova, 800 Families. Fuente Ovejuna, 14 Leagues from Cordova, 1300 Fam. Villanueva del Arzobispo, near Cazorla, 800 Families. Villa Martin, 7 Leagues from Utrera, 700 Families. Veger, near the Mouth of the Straights, 1500 Families. Guadalcanal, 4 Leagues from Elerena, 1400 Families. Montoro, 7 Leagues from Cordova, 1000 Families. Fuentes, 4 Leagues from Ecija, 700 Families. Esteja, 5 Leagues from Ecija, 1500 Families. Most of these are also Wall'd, and many have Castles, as also Monasteries, and some Palaces of Great Men. Besides which there are very many more too numerous to name.

CH A P. XI.

The Kingdom of GRANADA.

AS was before observ'd, is one of the four that compose the Province of Andaluzia, taken in its largest extent, being almost all the Roman Province, call'd Betica, and the later Vandalitia, or Country of the Valdals. The name of Granada, the Country had from its Capital City, and is now generally reckoned apart from Andaluzia, because it was the last Kingdom of the Moors, that remain'd in Spain, holding out several Years after all the rest were subdu'd, and subsisting by its great Wealth and the Valour of its Natives, with the Supplies they receiv'd from Africa, till Ferdinand and Elizabeth, King and Queen of Spain, finally expell'd those Infidels, as we shall see in speaking of the Capital, and other Cities.

On the North, this Kingdom lies all along joyning to the Province of Andaluzia, the Mountains of Cazorla, Sierra Segura, and some others, making what separation there is: On the East another ridge of Hills divides it from Murcia; on the South it is wash'd by the Mediterranean; and on the West, it again joyns to Andalusia, without any noted Boundaries. The whole length of it from East to West, is about 70 Leagues; the greatest Breadth, 24; the Circumference above 180.

The People here differ little or nothing from the rest of Andaluzia, in Language, Customs, and natural Disposition. The Climate is also the same; nor can we find much alteration in the Soil; only this may be said, that the Moors descended from those who were expell'd it, still pray to be restor'd to that happy Country, looking upon it as a Paradise, scarce inferior to that their Prophet has promis'd them in the other World. Nor are they to be blam'd; to speak of the Country as it deserves, would amaze those who have not seen the Wonders of Nature in other Parts. Not to mention the infinite quantities of Corn, Wine, Oil, Fruit, Cattle, Game, and all Things already spoken of in other Provinces, as common to them all; in this the highest and most uncouth Mountains are cover'd with Vines and Fruit-Trees; and that which some will think incredible, here here are often Bunches of Grapes like that the Scripture mentions of the Land of Promise, which they may carry on a Pole between two Men; and there are Persons of known Truth and Sincerity, who have seen a Bunch that weigh'd 40 Pounds. Sugar grows here as well, and what there is, finer than in any other Part; and of Silk there is a prodigious Quantity made, which they Spin and Weave to serve the whole Kingdom, besides what is Exported. The Fields are as much cover'd with Time and other sorts of Sweet-herbs, as Grass, which makes the Flesh of Cattle feeding on it delicious; and Laurel, Myrtle, Sweet-Basil, and many odoriferous Plants, grow wild to such a height as to make Hedges of them.

The Mahometan Kingdom erected here subsisted 256 Years, and ended in 1492. when King Ferdinand and Queen Elizabeth, the Christian Monarchs of Spain, after ten Years War, put an end to the Dominion of the Infidels in Europe. Under those Moors the Kingdom was extraordinary populous, but the expelling such Multitudes of them, has of necessity much lessened the number of Inhabitants. In their Days it contain'd 33 Cities, whereof at present only 16 retain that Title, and among them one Archbishoprick, and 3 Bishopricks, besides many stately Towns. The Moorish Kings Revenue, at the Time the Kingdom was gain'd, was worth a Million of Ducats a Year, a vast Sum in those Days, before the Treasures of America, had been brought into Europe and produc'd that extraordinary plenty of Gold and Silver we see in our Days. The Kingdom is now Govern'd by an Adelantado, or Lord Lieutenant, which Honour is Hereditary in the Dukes of Mazqueda. The Places of Chiefest Note, are

GRANADA, the Illiberis of the Ancients, tho' some will have that City to have stood on the Neighbouring Mountain Elvira, because of the resemblance of the Names, is the Capital City of this Kingdom, a most noble City for its Situation, Largeness and Structures, Forts and Walls. It is seated at the foot of the Mountain call'd Sierra Nevada, or the Snowy Mountain, from the Snow continually lying on the top of it. This Mountain is on the South-side, and runs from it as far as the Mediterranean. On the East-side of it is the above-nam'd Mountain Elvira; on the West runs a delightful Plain, about 20 Leagues in Compass, and wonderful Fertile, being Water'd by 36 Springs, falling from the adjacent Mountains. The City itself is seated partly on the Plain, and partly on two Hills, between which glides the River Darro, which as soon as out of the City, mixes with and loses its Name in the Xenil, that Waters the whole length of the Plain. The whole City is enclos'd with strong Walls, on which there are 1030 Towers, at equal Distances, and in them 20 Gates, the Compass being betwixt 3 and 4 Leagues, in which there are 50000 Families, abundance of them of Quality, 24 Parishes, 22 Monasteries of Friars, 18 of Nuns, and 13 Hospitals. At the two opposite ends of it stand the two Castles call'd el Alhambra and el Albayzin. The first of them Alhambra, signifies Red, from the Red Earth about it, is on the South-East side, enclos'd with a Wall of its own, rising above all the other Buildings, and so large, that it looks like a City of itself; and in it is the King's Palace, and the Monastery of S. Francis. The other Castle, call'd Albayzin, is, as has been said on the opposite side, within its own Wall, and so great, that the People thought the Moorish King who built it, had found the Philosopher's Stone to defray such an immense Charge. Next the Alhambra, is the Suburb call'd Cherra, and the Street call'd De los Gomeles, and on the opposite side, the Street call'd Elvira, and the rising Zenete, most ill contriv'd, the Streets narrow and crooked, the Moors being nothing curious in their common Buildings. Without the City is the Royal Hospital, and the Monastery of St. Jerome, both of them Magnificent. The Armory is one of the best furnish'd in Spain, both for ancient and modern Arms, and great variety of Statues of all sorts. The Cathedral stands next the Plain, where the access is easiest: The Moorish Mosque which stood there, is a heavy Gothick Building; the New Church is very curious and regular; it is Serv'd by 7 dignify'd Clergymen, 12 Canons, 12 Petty-Canons. To the Diocels are subject 194 Parishes, the Archbishop's Revenue 40000 Ducats. Near this Church is the great Place or Square of Bivarambla, 200 Foot Broad, and 600 in Length; all the Buildings about it regular, and the Shops beautiful. Besides this, there are 5 other large Squares, and some spacious Streets, tho' not many. When it had been 778 Years possess'd by the Moors, King Ferdinand recover'd it, Ann. 1492, and erected it a Metropolitan See, as has been said. The Emperor Charles V. made it an University, in 1531; and it has now 5 good Colleges. It is 60 Leagues distant from Madrid to the South, 23 from Cordova East, 19 from Malaga North-East, and better than 40 from Murcia West.

Malaga, is a good Port, and one of the best Roads on the Coast of Spain, being Seated on the Coast of the Mediterranean into which runs a Mole, 530 common Paces long, and 20 in Breadth, with four Stairs to take water at, 24 Pillars of Jasper Stone, to make fast the Ships to, and a Chappel for Sea-faring People to hear Mass. The City is Round, double Wall'd, and has many Towers and 9 Gates, the Sea washes the Walls, and near it runs the River Guadalmedina, signifying in Arabick the River of the City; and another smaller, over both which it has two stately Bridges, the Situation being in a Plain among Hills, Mountains and broken Grounds, cover'd with Vines and all sorts of delicious Fruit, as we may perceive by the very rich Wine, Raisins, Almonds, Figs &c, brought from thence. There is a large old Fortress call'd the Alcazava, which in Arabick signifies a Castle, and another less to the Sea, nam'd Gibraltar, that is, the Mountain of the Light House. The exportation of Wine and other Commodities is so great here, that it has been said to yield the King in Duties 800000 Ducats Yearly. The Inhabitants amount to 12000 Families in 4 Parishes, with 10 Monasteries of Friars, 6 of Nuns and as many Hospitals. It is supposed to have been built by the Phenicians, and call'd Malago, from their Commander of that name, changing the o into a; but that looks like a Romance; for it is reported to have been call'd Menance by the Greeks, and some will have the Carthaginians to be the Founders; whosoever founded it, the Moors were in in Possession of it 77 Years, till King Ferdinand recover'd it, after a Siege of 3 Months, in 1487. He also erected it into a Bishoprick, to which are subject 105 Parishes, the Prelate's Revenue 50000 Ducats. The Cathedral, a magnificent Structure is serv'd by 8 dignity'd Clergy-men, 17 Canons and 10 Petty Canons. It is distant from Madrid 85 Leagues South somewhat Westerly; from Sevil 25 South-East and about the same distance from Granada South-West.

Almeria, suppos'd by some to have been formerly call'd Urci, but being ruin'd to be rebuilt by Amalarius King of the Goths, by the name of Amalaria, corruptly Almeria, which is a blind Guess, for there is no doubt but Almeria is an Arabick Name, as are all those beginning with the Article Al. The Sea washes its Walls, which are a League in Compass, with 2 Gates, standing on a Plain, and have a safe Harbour, the Climate so favourable, that the Trees and Fields are green all the Year, and about it are found many curious Stones, as Amethysts, Emeralds, Garnets and particularly Agates, from which the Neighbouring Cape took Name; tho' now corruptly call'd Cabo de Gata, instead of Agatas. This was once so great a City, that there is a Spanish Proverb importing, that when Almeria was Almeria, that is, in its Splendor, then Granada was its Farm. However at present it contains but 600 Houses, 4 Parishes, 3 Monasteries of Friars, one of Nuns, a noble Hospital and 10 Chappels. It has also a Castle which belongs to the Duke of Maqueda, and is a Bishoprick containing 70 Parishes, the Bishop's Revenue 6000 Ducats, the Cathedral serv'd by 6 Dignify'd Clergy-men, 6 Canons, and as many Petty Canons. King Ferdinand recover'd it from the Infidels Ann. 1490, and it is distant from Madrid 71 Leagues South-East, 21 from Granada East, and 25 from Murcia South-West.

Guadix, an ancient Roman Colony call'd Acci, the Moors gave it the name of Guadix, signifying River of Life. It stands in a deep Valley, enclosed with craggy Hills and Rocks, which render the Access very difficult, encompass'd with strong Walls, with Towers and a Fausse-Bray, water'd by the little River Fuente, besides many other Springs. The Inhabitants amount to 1500 Families, in 3 Parishes, with 4 Monasteries of Friars, and 2 of Nuns. King Ferdinand recover'd it from the Moors, Ann. 1459, and restor'd the ancient Episcopal See, which contains 37 Parishes, the Bishop's Revenue 8000 Ducats, and the Cathedral serv'd by 6 Dignify'd Clergy-men, 6 Canons, and as many Petty-Canons. Distant from Madrid 60 Leagues South, and 8 East from Granada.

Ronda, formerly Arunda, whence the present name with a little Corruption; but this stands 2 Leagues from the ancient, now call'd Ronda la Vieja, or old Ronda, and said to be built by the Moors and call'd Hiznarunda, signifying the Castle of the Laurel. It is the Capital of a small Mountain Province, call'd La Serrania de Ronda, seated on a high and inaccessible Ridge, near the River Gaudiara, with a stately Castle, on the Land Side, seated on a Rock, which looks as if Nature had form'd it for that Purpose. It has strong Walls and a deep Ditch, into which a Brook runs, besides two other small Rivers running near by, whose names are Gorza and Guadalquivirejo, which are low in Winter, and not fordable in Summer, occasion'd by the melting of the Snow with the Heat on the Mountains. Within this City is a deep Cave of 400 Steps, whence the Christian Slaves fetch'd up Water for the Moors in Skins. S. Frances's Square has three delightful Poplar Walks, and is water'd with several Fountains. The old Suburb is populous, Wall'd and Water'd by the Brook Culebras. The Inhabitants are 1600 Families, in 3 Parishes, with 4 Monasteries of Friars and 2 of Nuns. King Ferdinand recover'd it from the Moors Ann. 1485, the distance from Madrid 85 Leagues South, somewhat Westerly, from Sevil 24 South-East, and 10 from Gibraltar North-East.

Antequera some reckon in the Kingdom of Sevil, and others in that of Granada, seated partly on a Hill and partly in the Plain, with 6 Gates in its Walls, and a good Castle on the Banks of the River call'd de la Villa, or of the Town. It contains 7000 Families, 6 Parishes, one of them Collegiate, 11 Monasteries of Friars, 7 of Nuns, 11 Chappels, and 3 Free-Schools, beside a most noble Hospital, which maintains Foundlings. Near it is a Salt Pit, a League in Length, and a half in Breadth, which serves the Country about; and 3 Leagues from it is the Spring, whose Water cures the Stone, which has drawn such a Concourse of People, that a small Town is built about it. Another Rarity near this City is a great Parcel of high Rocks, call'd El Torcal, which represent Men, Beasts and Structures at a distance, being a wonderful Work of Nature. Here are besides, the subterraneous Caves they call of Merga, and of Camorra, being wonderful Mines carry'd on by the Romans to draw thence the Precious Metals the Country afforded. The City stands 72 Leagues South from Madrid, 25 from Sevil West-South West, and 24 from Granada South East.

Baza, once the Capital of the Bassetan, stands in a deep Valley, call'd Hoya de Baza, at the Foot of a Hill, a small River running by its Walls, in which there are 4 Gates, and by them an old Castle. The Inhabitants 1600 Families, in 3 Parishes, one of them Collegiate, with 5 Monasteries of Friars, one of Nuns, 5 Chappels and an Hospital. The ancient Name was Bassa, corruptly Baza. King Ferdinand took it from the Moors, Ann. 1489, after a Siege of 7 Months. It is near 60 Leagues from Madrid South East; 18 East from Granada, and 25 West from Cartagena.

Loja, a City seated in a deep Valley, betwixt two lofty Hills, full of Springs, some of them Medicinal, curiously built, with a strong Castle, on the highest Rocks, double Wall'd, and 11 Gates, the River Genil running through it, over which it has a strong Bridge of 5 Arches. Near the great Market Place is a large Pool, from which above 200 Pipes of Water are laid to several Parts. About 1400 Families inhabit the Place, in three Parishes, as many Monasteries of Men, 1 of Women, 4 Chappels and a good Hospital. The Romans are thought to be the Founders, and to have call'd it Lacivis; the Moors gave the present Name of Loja, from whom it was taken by King Ferdinand, Ann. 1486. It is 60 Leagues South from Madrid, 37 East from Sevil, and 7 West from Granada.

Santa Fe, tho' inconsiderable in itself as containing not above 300 Families, is yet a City and remarkable because founded by King Ferdinand, in 1491, when he lay'd Siege to Granada, for the Head Quarters of his Army, to shew he would not stir from thence till he had reduc'd Granada. It is wall'd and stands in the great Plain, two Leagues from that Capital City, near a Spring, call'd the Source of Guescar.

Marbella.

Marbella, another small City, of 480 Families, one Parith and 2 Monasteries, yet wall'd, seated on the Sea Coast, in the Western part of this Kingdom, 6 Leagues East from Ronda, and 10 South from Malaga; some think it was formerly call'd Barbesola, and that the present Name is a Composition of Mar Bella, a beautiful Sea.

Uti, anciently Belaria, or according to others Ugi, stands in a Plain, near the Sea and the River Guadalmazor, is wall'd and has 2 Gates, not above 300 Families, one Parith and a Monastery of Friars, yet is also a City, near 70 Leagues distant from Madrid South East, 30 East from Granada, and 13 South West from Cartagena.

Albama, a City of 800 Houses, one Parith, 2 Monasteries of Friars, one of Nuns, well built on the side of a Hill, upon a small River, and has good old Walls, and handsome market Places. Famous for its celebrated medicinal Baths, for the Cure of Distempers, especially proceeding from Cold, where many Cripples have their Limbs restor'd. It was formerly call'd Artigis, but the Moors gave it the Name of Al Rama, signifying Baths, recover'd from them by King Ferdinand, Ann. 1482. Distant from Madrid 63 Leagues South, 9 from Granada South West; and 15 from Cordova South East.

Velez Malaga, is also a City, not far from the Coast of the Mediterranean, with a strong Castle above it, and containing 1200 Families, 2 Parishes, 3 Monasteries of Friars, and 1 of Nuns, thought to be the Menova of the Ancients, by the Moors, call'd Velez, with the addition of Malaga, for its nearness to that City, which is about 5 Leagues from it to the South West.

Almunecar, is a good Sea-port, on the Mediterranean, shelter'd from the West Wind, has strong Walls, a good Castle, and but 280 Families, one Parith and a Monastery of Friars, yet is an ancient City.

Guescar, another City, seated in a Plain at the Foot of Mount Segra, which is always cover'd with Snow, betwixt the Rivers Guardadar and Bravate, falling down from it; has strong Walls with many Towers, an old Castle, 3 Gates, inhabited by 500 Families, in 2 Parishes, with 2 Monasteries of Friars, as many of Nuns, an Hospital and 5 Chappels. It is a famous Place for washing of Wooll, at which 3000 Men are frequently employ'd, and 400000 Hundred Weight of Wooll has been known to be wash'd there in a Year. Some will have it to be anciently call'd Ascua or Escua, and corruptly Guscar; but others say it was built by the Moors, expell'd Huesca in Aragon and so call'd by them. It is 57 Leagues from Madrid South East. 21 from Murcia West, and 18 from Almeria North.

Muxacra, the last City we find in this Kingdom, stands on the top of a high Mountain, is wall'd and has but one Gate, scarce 200 Families, and one Parith, so much it is decay'd since the expulsion of the Moors. Distant from Madrid 72 Leagues South-East, and 16 from Cartagena South West.

Motril, is no City, but contains 2000 Houses, 2 Parishes, 2 Monasteries of Friars, an Hospital and 4 Chappels. Seated on the Mediterranean Sea, 11 Leagues from the City Granada, by the Romans call'd Firmium Julium, and now famous for making abundance of Sugar, which grows round about it, and supplies a great part of Spain.

Las Alpujarras, is the name of a famous Ridge of Mountains, branching out from Sierra Nevada, or the Snowy Mountain, on the South, next the Mediterranean, having the City Almeria on the East, Motril on the West, and Granada on the North; being 17 Leagues long, and 7 in breadth. It is all generally very high, craggy and difficult of Access, but the bottoms delightful, and producing all sorts of Fruit and Grain, feeding abundance of Cattle, and yielding a very great quantity of Silk. This Ridge of Mountains is divided into 11 Taas, which in Arabick signifies, Heads of Districts, Govern'd under the Moors by Alcaydes, and then including a City call'd Cobda, and 120 Villages, some of them, since the banishing of those Infidels, almost deserted. The Taa of Origiva has but 250 Families, that of Puqueyra 140; that of Pitres 230; that of Jubiles 640; that of Uxixar 600; Andaxar 250; the Taa of Sebel, the Greater and the Less, 470; of Adra 100; of Verja 350; Lastly, that of Dalcas 530; with which we conclude this Kingdom.

C H A P. XII.

The Kingdom of MURCIA.

Takes its Name from the Capital City, so call'd, and is a Part of the Roman Province Tarracensis. The Moors after their Conquest dividing Spain into several Kingdoms, as we have seen before, erected this little Province into a Monarchy, since when it preserves the Title. King Ferdinand III. recover'd some Part from those Infidels in the Year 1241. and his Son, King Alonso the Wise, subdu'd the rest in 1266. annexing the whole to his Crown.

Northwards it Borders upon New Castile; on the West it is parted from Andaluzia and Granada, by the Mountains of Segura, and others running down to the Sea; on the South it has the Mediterranean; and on the East, part of the same Mediterranean, and of the Kingdom of Valencia. The greatest Length North-West and South-East is 33 Leagues, and the greatest Breadth North-East and South-West 23.

The Air is somewhat Hot, but the Soil, tho Mountainous, extraordinary Fruitful, never failing but through Drought, and generally yielding great Plenty of Wheat, Barley, Wine, Oyl, Fruit and Pasture; it also abounds in Honey, but above all affords vast quantities of Silk, which makes the principal Wealth of the Natives, who differ little from their Neighbours of Castile and Andaluzia.

The Government of the Country is in an Adelantado, or Lord-Lieutenant, which is Hereditary in the Marqueses de los Velez. It contains but 3 Cities, and 1 Bishoprick, besides some good Towns, and many Villages of note. The chief whereof are,

Y y and

Murcia.	} } Caravaca.
Cartagena.		} } Mula.
Lorca.

MURCIA City, the Metropolis of this Kingdom, is encompass'd with a good Wall, which has 12 Gates in it, rebuilt by King Henry IV. who added to the City several good Structures and handsome Squares. It is seated in the midst of a most delightful Plain, so Fertile, that it often yields an hundred for one in Corn, besides all other Things mention'd in the general Account of the Country, a vast compass about being cover'd with Gardens and Orchards, Water'd with the Chrystaline Streams of the River Segura, which rises in the Mountains of that Name, and furnishes the City with delicious Trouns. An infinite number of Mulberry-Trees, grow round about, which serve to feed as many Silk Worms, as generally make every Year 210000 Pounds of Silk. The City and Suburbs contain 6500 Families, in 11 Parishes, 10 Monasteries of Friers, 6 of Nuns, a general Hospital and 2 Colleges, a Court of the Inquisition, and a stately Palace Built by King Henry III. An. 1395. Some will have this to be the ancient Murgis, others Vergilia, not to quote fabulous Founders; the Moors took it in the Year 714. after a vigorous Resistance, and it was recover'd by King James of Aragon, An. 1265. when 30000 Infidels were expell'd; but the following Year it fell to the Lot of King Alonso the Wise, of Castile, who erected it a Bishoprick, containing 89 Parishes, the Prelate's Revenue 24000 Ducats. In the Year 1651. the River Segura swell'd to such a height that it threw down 1065 Houses, and 4 Monasteries, destroying abundance of People, and the Water flow'd as high as the top of the Altar in the Cathedral. It is distant from Madrid 65 Leagues South-East, 7 North from Cartagena, and 29 South and by West from Valencia. Mr. Willoughby's Character of this Place in 1664. is thus, Murcia is a pitiful desolate Town, and the Country near it very miserable.

Cartagena is seated on the Side of a Hill, Wall'd, and has a Castle built by King Henry III. An. 1395. on the Coast of the Mediterranean, being one of the noted Sea-Port Towns of Spain, defended from Storms by a small Island call'd Escambrada, which gave Occasion to Andrew D'Orta, that great Seaman, to say, There were three good Harbours in the Mediterranean, viz. June, July and Cartagena, meaning those two calm Months and that Port, which yet is not reckned so good a Harbour at present as some others in the Streights; but it has good Fresh Water upon the Shoar, and Ships off much Wooll for Italy. The Air is Temperate in Summer, and so mild in Winter, that there are Roses fresh at Christmas, and besides the plentiful Product of the Earth, there are Amethysts, Garnets, Agats, and other precious Stones, found in the Neighbourhood. The City contains 1200 Inhabitants, 1 Parish, 4 Monasteries of Friers, and 1 of Nuns. It was once a Bishop's See, which was remov'd thence to Murcia, An. 1291. Asdrubal, the Carthaginian, was the Founder, calling it New-Carthage. 225 Years before Christ. The Romans took it, under Scipio Africanus, under whom it continu'd till taken by the Vandals first, and then by the Goths, having been one of the principal Cities in Spain, under both Carthaginians and Romans. In 739: the Moors possess'd themselves of it, and kept it till recover'd by King Alonso the Wise, An. 1244. who built the Castle, and in 1266. enlarg'd and beautify'd the City. King Philip II. Fortify'd the Harbour and City in 1570. It is distant from Madrid 70 Leagues South East, 7 South from Murcia, and 42 East from Granada.

Lorca, the third and last City in this Kingdom, is seated on the River Guadalevin, along the Side of a Hill, Wall'd, has a good old Castle, about 2000 Families, 7 Parishes, 4 Monasteries of Friers, and 2 of Nuns. It was formerly a Town of the Bastetani, enlarg'd by the Carthaginians and Romans, and call'd first Heliocrata, and afterwards Ilorci. Under the Vandals it was in a flourishing Condition, and recover'd from the Moors under King Ferdinand III. An. 1244. and having been in former Ages an Episcopal See, translated to Cartagena, it still retains a Collegiate Church. From Madrid it is 60 Leagues to the South-South-East, 14 West from Murcia, 15 from Cartagena, and 10 from the Sea.

Caravaca, is a Town nothing inferior to some Cities, as containing 2000 Families, 1 Parish, 4 Monasteries of Friers, and 2 of Nuns. It stands 14 Leagues from Murcia City to the West-North-West, in the midst of a pleasant Plain; on the Walls are 17 Towers, and on the upper Ground stands a Castle. This Place is most remarkable for a Croix kept in it, said to have been brought by two Angels, in the Presence of a Moorish King, and several other Infidels, who were thereupon Converted.

Mula, is another good Town, 7 Leagues from Murcia, in a Plain, on a small River, Wall'd, with a good Castle, 1500 Families, 2 Parishes, and 1 Monastery of Friers. Totana, 4 Leagues from Lorca, contains 800 Families; Alcantarilla a League from Murcia 400; besides others we have not room to speak of. All which Places, if any Rain falls, which is the only Thing they sometimes want, enjoy the greatest Plenty of all Things imaginable, if not they preserve enough to subsist by ways they have of Watering.

The Islands of MAJORCA, MINORCA, &c.

Are said to have been first call'd Gymnesie, by the Greeks, because the Inhabitants went naked afterwards they had the Name of Baleares, from the Greek Ballein, to throw, because they were thought the expertest People in the World at throwing Stone with Slings, which were their principal Weapons. They first practis'd Piracy, yet were not allow'd to keep Gold, Silver, or precious Stones, lest their Wealth should invite others to subdue them. Being brought under by the Carthaginians, they assist'd them in their Wars against the Romans, till Q. Cecilius Metellus Conquer'd them, after the third Punic War, and was therefore call'd Balearicus. Next the Moors took possession of them, in the Year 721 some say sooner, and erected a little Kingdom of these two Toiza, and the other small ones, all of them under the Name of Majorca, by the Spaniards call'd Mayorca, and by some Mallorca, corruptly, the right Names being Mayorca and Minorca importing bigger or lesser. In the Year 1230. King James of Aragon, conquer'd Majorca, and in 123 of Minorca. King Peter IV. of Aragon, a next'd them to his Crown in 1344. for which reason the Kings of Spain among their Titles take that of Majorca.

The Island of Majorca lies in the Mediterranean, directly East from the City of Valencia, and 40 Leagues distant from it, but not above 20 South from Ba celona, being under the 39th and 40th Degrees of Latitude, and the 23th and 24th of Longitude. It is near 20 Leagues over, where longest, from East to West, and 17, where broadest, from North to South. The Figure is a sort of Square, the Coast difficult of Access in most Places, but has several good Ports; the 4 Points of the Square pointing to the 4 Parts of the World. The Cape and Port Palomera is on the West, and before it the Island Dragonera; Cape Sa'inas looks to the South, Cape Pietra, or Pera to the East, and Cape S. Vincent, or Formentera to the North. This Island and Majorca, are said to have been so overrun with Hares and Rabbits, under the Romans, that the Natives were oblig'd to crave Aid of the Emperor Augustus against those domestick Enemies, who destroyed all their Corn. The Land is very Fertile for producing of Wheat, Barley, Wine, Oyl, Fruit, Pasture, Saffron; besides it is famous for good Cheele, Wool and Horses. The Natives Speak the corrupt Lemusin, or old French, spoken of in Catalonia and Valencia, but they all use the Spanish besides. They are Bold and Daring, and make the best Privateers in the Mediterranean. In the Year 1624. this Island is said to have yielded 16000 Tun of Oyl. It contains but 1 City and Bishoprick, besides several indifferent Towns and good Villages.

Majorca City, the Capital of the Kingdom, and Residence of the Viceroy, Bishop, Court of Justice, and that of the Inquisition, is seated on the South-West Side of the Island, facing a large Bay the Sea makes before it, in a Plain, encompass'd with high Hills, the form of it Square, among many Springs and little Rivers, enclos'd with strong Walls, in which are 8 Gates, a deep Ditch, and 3 well Fortify'd Castles. The Buildings are handsome, the Inhabitants 15000 Families, divided into 6 Parishes, besides the Cathedral, a noble Structure, 14 Monasteries of Friars, 9 of Nuns 7 Hospitals, and a Seminary for Education of young Maidens. The Bishop's Revenue is 20000 Crowns, and to the Cathedral belong 6 Dignify'd Clergy Men, 2 Canons, 4 Pabordes, being a sort of Petty-Canons, and 250 Benefices.

MINORCA Island lies 10 Leagues to the East of Majorca, in 40 Degrees Latitude, and between 24 and 25 of Longitude; its greatest Length North West and South-East 15 Leagues, and the greatest Breadth 6, the whole Compass about 33. It produces all Sorts of Grain and Fruit, but abounds most in Cattle. On the South-East part of it is the famous Harbour call'd Port Maon, one of the finest in the World, both for Capaciousness and Security, either from Winds or Enemies, which has occasion'd it to be attempted since the present War by the Confederates, but without Success, some new Forts having been lately Built for its Defence. The Capital City is call'd Ciudadela, and stands on the West Side of the Island, Fortify'd with Walls and Bastions, inhabited by 1000 Families, and the Residence of the Governour, who has his Court, from which there lies an Appeal to that of Majorca. There is a good Harbour to it for small Ships, and it is suppos'd to be the Janua of the Ancients.

IBIZA, formerly Pityusa, whence this and Formentera adjacent to it, were call'd Pityusæ in the plural Number, from the abundance of Pine-Trees found in them by the Greeks who first gave them the Name. The Carthaginians coming after them, found this Island to stand conveniently for their Designs upon Spain, and therefore Built a City on it, which they call'd Ebusus, which Name from that Time was given to the whole Island, and by corruption at last came to Ibiza. It lies between the Island of Majorca, and the Kingdom of Valencia, almost equi-distant from them both, being but 11 Leagues from the nearest Part of the former, and about 12 from Cape Martin in the latter, but 16 from the City Majorca, and 29 from that of Valencia; in 39 Degrees Latitude, and between 21 and 22 of Longitude. The greatest length of it from East to West is 12 Leagues, the greatest breadth North and South 7, the whole Circumference about 30. It produces Corn, Wine, Fruit and Oyl, but its principal Commodity is Salt, whereof it has vast Quantities. One Thing remarkable is, that no venomous Creature will live in it, tho' brought from Abroad. The only Place of Note in the Island is Ibiza, the ancient Ebusus, as was said above, seated on the South-side, with a good Harbour, and a Fort, and containing 1000 Families, being the Residence of a Governor, and Deputy-Governor, subordinate to the Vice-Roy of Majorca, and in Spirituals to the Archbishop of Tarragona; tho' under the Goths it had a Bishop of its own. King James of Aragon recover'd it from the Moors An. 1234. and annex'd it to the Crown.

FORMENTERA, the other of the Pityusæ, lies 2 Leagues South from Ibiza, opposite to the City of that Name, being about a League over one way, and something more the other, but not Inhabited. Some will have this to be the Colubraria of the Ancients, tho' others affirm that Name belongs to a very little Island near the West Point of Majorca, now call'd Dragonera, the resemblance of the Names making for the latter Opinion. Some Geographers pretend this Formentera is not Inhabited by reason of the many Snakes and venomous Creatures it abounds with, for which I have not found any Authority among Spanish Authors, no more than for the Fable of the Inhabitants of the other Islands having formerly carry'd all their noxious Animals into this, not daring to Kill them, as believing the Transmigration of Souls, and believing those of their Forefathers might be in some of those Creatures. That this is a meer Dream or Chimera plainly appears, besides the Folly of the Invention, in that, as has been said, none of those mischievous Animals will live in the other Islands, and therefore they could have none to carry out.

There are many more inconsiderable Islands scatter'd up and down about these great ones here nam'd, too inconsiderable to deserve any Description, nor indeed do we find any thing but the bare Names of them, which are, about Ibiza, on the East, Isleta Negra, or the Black Isle, and Isleta de los ahorcados, the Isle of the Men that were Hang'd; then nearer the Coast, where Salt is Shipp'd, La Isla de la Esponja, the Island of the Spung, near Fort S. George, La Isla de los Ratones, the Island of Mice; farther from the Shore two call'd, de los Puerros, of Leeks; near Ibiza, La Isla del Escolla Negro, the Island of the Black Rock, and that del Bitofe; farther off the two de los Dados, or the Dice, and El Escolla Dorado, the gilt Rock; then follow Botafuego, Spitfire, Conjera. Rabbit Island, La Isla de Cabo lebre, la Isla de la Punta de Arabe, Tago Maga, on the Eastermost Point and South of it Las Dos Hormigas, Balagat, La Isla Murada, and 4 very small call'd Las Baidas. Monte Calibre and 3 or 4 very small Islands between Valencia, Catalonia and Majorca, opposite to the Mouth of the River Ebro, and about 10 Leagues from it to the South-East. Just without the Mouth of the said River, is a long slip of an Island, call'd Alfacha. Off from the Westernmost Port of Majorca, lies the Dragonera, which some suppose to be the Culabraria of the Ancients; near the South Point, is Cabrera, and besides these, several others of no Note, and not worth naming.

BESIDE S this Continent, and the Islands here named; the Crown of Spain possesses, as we have said, the large Continent of America, the Philippine Islands on the East-Coast of Asia, whereof we shall speak in its Place; and the CANARY ISLANDS on the North-West of Africa; whereof the Reader will find an Account among the African Islands, after the Description of that Continent. But in regard that our Merchants Trade much thither, and the high P E A K or Mountain of T E N E R I F, is the Subject of common Discourse, we will detain the Reader a little, to speak of the height and Nature of that Mountain, from the Relation of some considerable Merchants and Gentlemen of Credit who actually Travell'd to the Top of it, as we find it communicated to the Royal Society, viz.

Setting forth from Oratava, a Port Town on the North-side of the Island; they travell'd Eight Hours in getting up the first Mountain towards the Pico. From thence proceeding through much Sandy way, and over many lofty Mountains, they arriv'd at the Foot of the Great Mountain. Here they found many huge Stones, which seem'd to have been fallen down from the upper Part. They began to ascend it about Six in the Evening, but after having Travell'd a Mile, the Way being not passable for Horses, they were forc'd to quit them. In this Mile's ascent, some of the Company grew faint and sick: and when they began to taste their Wine, they found it so wonderfully cold, that they could not drink it without warming. The Air was moderate, and the Wind was calm, till the Sun was Set, but then the Wind blew with great Violence, and the Air became excessive cold: They rested some Hours in the Night among the great Stones, keeping great Fires against the intense Cold; and at Four in the Morning set forward again. When they had Travell'd another Mile, they came to the Black Rocks; passing over which, they came to that part of the Mountain call'd the Sugar-Loaf, where the Soil was a White-Sand. Climbing up still, they arriv'd at last with great Pains, at the Summit. In the Passage they found no considerable alteration of the Air, and very little Wind, but being at Top, it was so impetuous, that they could hardly stand against it. The Top is a narrow brink of not above a Yard wide; round the Pit, call'd the Caldera, which is about 2 Musket shot over. There appears below a continual Smoak, which is not seen at top, unless by stirring the loose Earth and Stones in the Caldera you raise it. The depth of the Caldera is in shape conical, descending 80 Yards, and is cover'd all the way with loose Stones mix'd with Sulphur and Sand, from among which issue many Spiracles of Smoak and Heat, and when stirr'd, puffs out with Noise, emitting a stinging Vapour; the Stones are also hot, so as not to be handled. But notwithstanding this Vapour, they tell us they descended into it four or five Yards, and say, that some People have gone down quite to the bottom. From this Pico, they could see the Grand Canaria, which is 14 Leagues distant; the Island Palma, which is 18 Leagues off; and the Gomera, 7 Leagues; and even Hierro or Ferro, which is above 20 Leagues distant. The Sea between Teneriff and Gomera, although 7 Leagues, seem'd to them not broader than the Thames at London. When the Sun was risen some time, the Clouds arose so fast, that their Prospect was intercepted, and they could see only the tops of the neighbouring Mountains. It is worth Observation, that when they tasted their strong Water on the top of the Pico, they found it had lost its Strength, and was almost insipid, whereas their Wine was rather Insipid. They observ'd, that many excellent and very exuberant Springs issued from the other Mountains, gushing out in great Spouts; and that in the Pico, there is a perpetual trickling of Water in the crannies of the Rocks. They speak of a Cave or Pit, which they saw in their Passage down; but there is nothing remarkable in it, but that it is 10 Yards deep, 15 broad, and partly fill'd with Snow. They perform'd the Journey up and down in two Days, and found no Trees, Herbs, or Shrubs in all the Passage, except Pine-Trees, and among the White-Sand, a kind of Broom, and in some Places a sort of Cordon bearing Berries, which contained a poisonous Milk. The whole perpendicular height of the Pico (says he) is vulgarly esteem'd two Miles and an half. Varenus indeed calls it 4 Miles, 3 Furlongs; but he is much mistaken; for besides what this Author says of it, I have the Testimony of another Learned Gentleman now in London, who made an Observation upon the Barometer, and found the Quicksilver to have sunk eleven Inches, at the top of the Pico, that is to say, from 29 Inches, to 18 Inches, which by the Tables drawn from Experiment and sound Reason, by the Accurate and Judicious Edm. Halley, will be found to answer to about 2 Miles and a quarter.

I know not whether our Reader will Thank us for spending Time in talking of the manner of the Old Inhabitants; but since such things are Entertaining and Instructive with some Persons, we shall for this Time, a little enlarge upon that Subject, and the rather because there is something Singular in it, and withal, 'tis part of the same Relation sent to the Royal Society.

The Guanchia's or ancient Inhabitants of Teneriff, live in the Mid-land mountainous Parts, and had formerly little or no Converse with the Spaniards, whom looking upon as their Enemies, they would not Inter-marry with. They are of Stature Tall and Lean; of Temper Active, and full of Courage. Their Food is chiefly a mixture of Barley-Flower, made after the Corn has been Roasted, with Milk and Honey. They drink no Wine, nor eat but little Flesh. They are surprizingly Active in leaping from Rock to Rock, jumping from Stage to Stage sometimes 10 Fathom at a Leap. Their manner is thus; They poise their Lance firm in their Hands, point it at the piece of Rock they intend to light on, and at their going off, clap their Feet close to the Lance, and carry their Bodies so even in the Air that the point of the Lance shall come first to the Ground.

Ground, which breaks the Fall, and gives them opportunity to alight with Ease. They have a Faculty of Whistling beyond what can be imagin'd, for the Spaniards affirm, that to hear it in a close Room, it is so loud and shrill as to endanger the Ear; and they say they ordinarily hear 'em at 4 or 5 Miles distance. But the greatest Curiosity among them, is their Mummies (as we call 'em) or dead Corps preserv'd in Caves, where they have lain many Ages without Decay. These Bodies are preserv'd in Goat-Skins, fitted very close, and sewed very tight; and therein, by the Arts that had been used, the Corps are preserv'd inure: The Faces appear only shrivel'd and discolour'd, but the Features and all the parts of the Body perfect, with the Hair on, and the Sexes distinguishable. This Gentleman who saw them (which is a great Favour) was a Physician, and therefore was curious to find out the Art they us'd, but found it is now Lost, and the Oldest among them could only tell him, that of Old there was a Tribe of Men that had this Art among themselves, which they kept as Sacred, and never communicated; but at the Conquest by the Spaniards, they were mostly Destroy'd, and the Art lost. Our Author saw three or four Hundred of these Corps in several Caves, some of them standing, others lying on Beds of Wood, which were so far hardned by an Art they had, that no Iron can pierce it. The Bodies are very light, but the Parts are so intirely preserv'd, that in some broken Limbs, he observ'd the Nerves and Tendons, and also some Strings of the Veins and Arteries.

TH O' generally it is call'd by the Latin Name, of Lusitania; it contains more to the North, and less to the East, than that Roman Province did, which was then bounded on the North by the River Durius, or Duero, on the West and South, by the Ocean, and on the East the River Guadiana divided it from Betica, as did a Line drawn from Old Calatrava, on the same River, to the Bridge of Simancas on the Duero, from Turamensis. Thus we see that ancient Province waer'd all the Province now call'd Entre Douro e Minho, on the North, of what Portugal now comprehends, and on the South-East, that slip of Land on which Mina Scopa, and Olivenza stand; whereas it included all the Province of Esfremadura, with some part of New and Old Castile, and half the Kingdom of Leon, the best part of the Province being now quire cut off from it. In the Territory betwixt the River Guadiana and Cape S. Vincent, then Promontorium Sacrum, liv'd the Turdetani: Next to them Northward, towards the River Tagus, were the Celte; along the Sea coast, Westward from the Celte, were the Sanni, a wild, rude, and savage People. On the North side of Tagus, as far as the Duero, were the Tuduli. The Pesures liv'd along the Mountain call'd Serra da Estrella, and the Bracori, and Garii, betwixt the Rivers Duero and Minho.

The present Kingdom of Portugal, borders Northward on Galicia, from which it is divided by the River Minho next the Sea, and by some small Rivers and Hills farther up the Land; the West and South-sides are all water'd by the Western, or Atlantic Ocean, including the little Kingdom of Algarve on the South; and on the West, the River Guadiana parts the said little Kingdom from Andalusia; from whence Northward, Portugal borders on Andaluzia, Esfremadura, and the Kingdom of Leon. The whole extent of it from North to South, is 100 Leagues; the Breadth in the widest part, which is in the Middle, 40 Leagues, and in the narrowest place next Algarve, 20. As to Latitude, it has between 36 Deg. 50 Min. and 42 Deg. 10 Min. and in Longitude between 9 Deg. 10 Min. and near 12 Deg.

The Etymologies of the Names given to this and other Countries, are for the most part meer uncertain and even improbable Guesses, being generally contriv'd to gain the Reputation of Antiquity, altogether Fabulous. Such is the notion of deriving Lusitania from Lusus, an imaginary King of Spain, or from Lyfius, the Son of Bacchus, or such others. That Portugal was once call'd Suevia, is certain, and that it was from the Suevians, who settled in it, when Spain was overrun by those People, the Alans, Silingians, Vandis, and others. The first of whom settled this Province, and erecting it into a Kingdom, Govern'd for some Years. The present name of Portugal is of no less obscure an Original than the first, some deducing it from Portus Cale, an ancient Town opposite to Porto; others from Portus Graus, a Town thought to be built by the Greeks, and now call'd Gaya; and others from Portus Galilus, because of the French resorting to the City Porto.

Of the remotest Antiquities of this Nation, as much as is requisite has been said in the general Account of Spain, for it never was a Kingdom, till, as was hinted above, the Suevians erected themselves a Monarchy in it. But they being Subdu'd by the Goths, all Spain was again united under one Head. So it continu'd till the fatal Conquest by the Moors; after which every Commander among the Infidels seiz'd what he could, and became a Sovereign; and in Portugal we shall find there were several Petty-Kings of them. In process of Time, the Christians gaining Ground upon them; and having recover'd Galicia and Leon, spread by degrees into Portugal, where the Kings of Leon made themselves Masters of a considerable part of the Country. Many noble Adventurers at this time resorting to Spain, to signalize themselves against the Infidels, among them came Henry, Grand-son to Robert the First Duke of Burgandy, tho' others say of the House of Lorraine. He having done notable Service with some Forces he brought along with him King Alonso VI. of Leon, and First of Castile, who then Reign'd, as a Reward for his Merit, in the Year 1095, gave him in Marriage his Bastard-Daughter Teresa, with the Title of Earl, of as much as was then Conquer'd in Portugal, which was no more than General, or Governour. His Son Alonso, having obtain'd a great Victory over the Moors at Ourique, was declar'd King by his Army, and took upon him that Title; but having no Right to usurp what was committed to him in Trust, He pretended that Christ had appear'd to him and given him the Kingdom of Portugal; a notable Forgery to impose upon the Ignorant, but very Ridiculous to all others. Yet not satisfy'd with this Grant from Heaven, he is said to have obtain'd another from Pope Alexander III. both of them of much equal Authority. However the Kingdom was got, he and his Successors defended it by the Sword; and therefore we will here give a Chronological Table of them.

The Succession of the Kings of PORTUGAL.

1. Alonso I. above spoken of, was very successful against the Infidels; and having Reign'd 46 Years, died in 1185. His Son
2. Sancho succeeded him, and was call'd Peopler, from the many Towns he brought Inhabitants to, after expelling the Moors. He Reign'd 26 Years, and died in 1212.
3. Alonso II. succeeded his Father, and Reign'd 12 Years; died in 1223.
4. Sancho II. Surnam'd Capelo, and Son to Alonso, after many Turmoils, was by his Rebellious Subjects expell'd the Kingdom, and forc'd to fly to Teledo, where he died in Exile, in the Year, 1246, when he had Reign'd 22.
5. Alonso III. Brother to Sancho, from whom he usurp'd the Royal Power, under the Title of Governor, upon his Death without Issue, ascended the Throne, and put away his Lawful Wife Maud, Countess of Flanders, to Marry Beatrix, Bastard-Daughter to King Alonso the Wise, of Castile, by that means to serve his Interest against his wrong'd Brother. He Reign'd 32 Years, and died in 1279.
6. Denis, Surnam'd the Builder, for his many Structures, and Son to Alonso, reign'd next with great Reputation of Magnanimity and Generosity. He was Husband to the famous S. Elizabeth, Queen of Portugal, Daughter to King Peter III of Aragon. He sat on the Throne 46 Years, and died in 1325.
7. Alonso IV. Surnam'd the Fierce, Son to Denis, had some Troubles at Home, rais'd by his Brother, call'd also Alonso, whom at last he drove out of the Kingdom; and afterwards was in Person at the Great Battle, call'd del Salado, in which the Christian Princes of Spain, overthrew the Infidels, with the Slaughter of 200000 of them. His Reign was of 30 Years. He died in 1357.

8. Peter, Son to the last, by some call'd the Cruel, but by others more properly, the Fulfiller of Justice, as soon as possessor of the Crown put to death all those who had any Hand in the Murder of the Lady Agnes de Castro, to whom he was privately Marry'd whilst Prince; then proving his Marriage with her, he executed rigid Justice on all Offenders, during the rest of his Reign, which lasted 10 Years, and died in 1367.
9. Ferdinand, Son to Peter, succeeded his Father, and had some Troubles with his own Subjects, on account of his Marrying the Lady Eleanor Telex, a private Gentlewoman, which was also the occasion of Wars with Castile, because he rejected that King's Daughter, to whom he was before Contracted. He Reign'd 16 Years, and died in 1383, being the last of the Lawful Line of Portugal; for his Successor was,
10. John, Bastard-Son to King Peter, set up by the Multitude, in Opposition to King John I. of Castile, who had Marry'd the Daughter and Heiress of the late King Ferdinand. This Usurper made good his Title by the Sword, and gave the Castilian a great Overthrow at Aljubarrota, which fix'd him on the Throne. He was also supported by the famous John of Gant, Duke of Lancaster, whose Daughter Philippa he Marry'd, and Reign'd 48 Years, his Death happening in 1433.
11. Edward, Son to John, had but a short Reign of 5 Years, dying in 1438.
12. Alonso V. Son to the last, came to the Crown at 6 Years of Age; he afterwards took Arzila and Tangier, on the Coast of Africk and espous'd the Quarrel of the Princess Joanna rightful Heiress to the Crown of Castile, but was Routed at Toro, by the Forces of Ferdinand and Isabel, who had usurp'd that Crown; and having Reign'd 43 Years, died in 1481.
13. John II. Son to Alonso, in whose Days the Discoveries (began before along the Coast of Africk) were carry'd on beyond the Cape of Good Hope. He put to Death the Dukes of Braganza and Viseo, with others of the greatest Men, for Conspiring against him; and having Reign'd 14 Years; died in 1495.
14. Emanuel, Son to Ferdinand, Duke of Viseo, and Grandson to King Edward, in whose Reign, Vasco de Gama first sail'd to the East-Indies, round the Cape of Good Hope, by whose means the Portugueses engros'd all the Trade of those Parts, as they had done before of the Coasts of Africk, and accidentally discover'd Brazil. He also took the Towns of Safin, Azamora, and Almidina in Africk: By which Discoveries and Conquests, he so much Enrich'd his Kingdom, that his was call'd the Golden Age. He Reign'd 26 Years, and died in 1521.
15. John III. Son to Emanuel, carry'd on the Discovery and Conquest of the East-Indies very successfully, altho' other European Nations began already to interfere with him in those Parts. But there being a Dispute betwixt the Crowns of Spain and Portugal, concerning the Title to the Molucco Islands, he purchas'd the Title of the Spaniards to them for 300000 Ducats of the Emperor Charles V. and died in 1557. after Reigning 35 Years.
16. Sebastian, Son to John, who was left an Infant at 3 Years of Age; as soon as he came of Age, undertook a fatal Expedition into Africk, under colour colour of assisting Muley Mahomet, King of Morocco, against his Uncle Muley Moluc, who had expell'd him the Throne, rais'd a powerful Army, fill'd up with all the Flower of the Portuguese Nobility and Gentry, with which he Sail'd over into Africk, where he was Overthrown and Kill'd, and most of his Troops either cut in pieces or Taken. Being so Young and never Marry'd, he left no Issue, and was succeeded by

17. Henry the Cardinal, his Uncle, and Son to King Emanuel, then almost 66 Years of Age, the rest of the Male Line being now extinct, was set up. He Reign'd but a Year and an half, and died in 1580.

18. Philip II. of Spain, being descended by his Mother, of the Royal Blood of Portugal, had before set up his Claim to that Crown, and upon the Death of King Henry, sent the Duke of Alva with a small Army, to make it good, who presently overrun the Country, and brought it to Obedience. Antony the Bastard, assisted by the French and English, set up his Pretensions to the Crown, relying on the Example of King John the Bastard, but prov'd not so successful, being twice Routed, and forc'd to depart the Kingdom. King Philip took Possession in the Year 1580, and died in 1598. having reign'd in Spain 41 Years, and over Portugal, 18.

19. Philip III. of Spain, and II. of Portugal, Son to the last above-nam'd, reign'd peaceably over Portugal, 22 Years, and died in 1621.

20. Philip IV. of Spain, and III. of Portugal, Son to the former, Reign'd over Portugal 19 Years; after which the Portuguese in 1648, Revolted, and Proclaim'd

21. John, Duke of Braganza, King, being the 4th of that Name, who prov'd very Successful, defeating the Spanish Armies, by which he secur'd the Crown to himself, with the Assistance of the French and English; and having Reign'd 8 Years, died in 1656.

22. Alphonso VI. Son to John, was no less successful against the Spaniards, than his Father had been; by which means, through the Mediation of King Charles II. of England, who had Marry'd his Sister Catharine, and supported him with Forces. He concluded a Peace with Spain, and was own'd King of Portugal. But all his good Fortune against Enemies abroad, could not protect him against his own Brother and Subjects at Home, who Dethron'd and Imprison'd him, under colour of his being unfit to Govern, tho' it is certain the Kingdom never Prosper'd better than under him. This Revolution hapned in the Year, 1668, when Alphonso had Reign'd but 12 Years; after which he liv'd 16 more in miserable Confinement, which are yet reckoned in his Reign; his Brother all that while calling himself Prince Regent, tho' he had taken not only his Brother's Kingdom, but his Wife. So that reckoning in this Time, that unfortunate Prince's Reign was of 28 Years; and he died in 1683.

23. Peter, Brother to Alphonso, and second of the Name, who, as is said above, had Imprison'd his Brother, and Govern'd 16 Years, now upon his Death, took the Title of King, Reign'd 13 Years, and died in 1706.

24. John V. Son to Peter, succeeded his Father, and now Reigns.

The KINGS of Portugal; are Absolute at Home, and own no Superior Abroad; and the Titles they assume, run thus; John, by the Grace of God, King of Portugal, and of the Algarves, on this Side, and beyond the Sea in Africk, Lord of Guinea, of the Navigation, Conquests and Commerce, in Ethiopia, Arabia, Persia, India, &c. As to his Revenue, I find nothing certain, tho' some by Guess have rais'd it to near a Million Sterling; which to such as are acquainted with the Country, seems much to exceed the Truth, tho' most Duties there run very high: But since we cannot ascertain, we will not dispute it.

The Portuguese DOMINIONS Abroad, were once very Great and Rich, but of late, much diminish'd by the Dutch; however, they still possess in America, the Province of Brazil, being a Tract of Land extending very far in length along the Sea, but extremely narrow towards the Inland, yet very Profitable, as yielding abundance of Sugar, Tobacco, Ginger, Cotton, Indigo, Hides, and Woad for Dyers. They have the Islands Azores, or Terceras, and that of Madera, Westward from their own Coast. In Africk, the Islands of Cabo Verde, the Fort of Marzagao, on the Coast of Barbary; Mina and Arquin, On that of Guinea; several on that of Congo and Angola. Mozambique, on that of Zanguebar; and in Asia, Goa, Diu, Damam, and Chaul. And on the Coast of China, the Town of Macao; but that tho' Inhabited by *Portuguese*s, is entirely Subject to the *Chinese*s.

The Dutch have not only work'd the *Portuguese*s out of the Trade of Africk and India, but taken from them the best of their Possessions in the latter; as the rich Island of Ceylon, those of the Moluccas, the the Town of Malaca, and many other Places, too long to enumerate. Not so satisfy'd, they never desisted till they Expell'd them, and with them Christianity, out of the great Island of Japan, where the Jesuits were said to have Converted 400000 Souls; but the Hollanders, as may be seen in Puffendorf and others, perswaded the Emperor, that the Portuguese had a design to bring his Dominions into Subjection to the Pope and King of Spain; which so incens'd that Monarch, that he rais'd a most dreadful Persecution against the Christians, so that in the end, there was not one left in Japan, and the Portuguese were forbid ever to return, upon Pain of Death: The Dutch, who afterwards Traded to Japan, were forbid by their own Superiors, to shew the least Token of Christianity; and if the Japoneses ask'd Whether they were Christians? They answer'd, They were Hollanders.

The Religion of PORTUGAL is altogether Roman-Catholick, no other being so much as known among the Natives, except the Jewish, of which there are great numbers, but all Private; being in all outward appearance like Christians, and endeavouring to out-do them the better to conceal themselves. These, if discover'd, are Punish'd by the Inquisition, where upon abjuring, they are only expos'd to publick Shame, and then instructed in Christianity. If upon Conviction they remain Obstinate, they are Burnt, as are those who have relaps'd after being Pardon'd before. Neither Jews, nor Herericks who were never Roman-Catholicks, are punishable by the Inquisition, unless they commit some Crime, as the Jews, in living like Christians, which is a Profanation of Religion. Therefore all Foreigners of what Religion soever, live undisturb'd in their own way, provided they Affront not the Government, or establish'd Church. Besides Jews and Hereticks, the Inquisition punishes Sorcerers, Witches, Hypocrites, Solomites, Blasphemers, perjur'd Persons, and all Crimes that immediately regard Religion.

The most noted MOUNTAINS in Portugal, are, 1. Serra da Estrella, formerly Herminius Mons, betwixt the Provinces of Beira and Tralos Montes, running North and South, on the top whereof are two Lakes of a vast extent, and such depth, that one of them could never be fathom'd; and pieces of Wrecks are said to have been found in them; besides that, they are calm when the Sea is so, and rough when that is rough; whence it is judg'd, they have some subterraneous communication with it. 2. Serra de Marvão, or Herminius Minor, in the Province of Alentejo, stretching out to the Town of Marvão. 3. The Rock of Sintra; or according to our Seamen, the Rock of Lisbon, formerly Promuntorium Lunæ about 5 Leagues West from Lisbon, on which are 2 Monasteries, entirely cut out of the solid Rock. 4. Serra da Arrabida, or Promuntorium Barbaricum, on the South-side of the Tagus, famous for another Monastery of Friars like the former. 5. Monte Junto, Mons Tagrus, joyning to the Rock of Lisbon. 6. Serra do Algarve, formerly Ci us, which divides the little Kingdom of Algarve from Portugal. 7. Mount Gerve, which in part divides Portugal from Galicia. Besides which there are many more of less Note, as Montemuro, Alcoba, Anciao, Offa, Portel, S. Isidoro, S. Lewis, Monte Corvo, Saço, Marão, Montoso, Caldeirão, Obr, Dala Bazo, Bobera Coura, Rebordãos, and others.

The greatest RIVERS, as Minho, Duero, Tagus, and Gadiana, have been spoken of in the General Description of Spain; the others are, 1. Mondego, formerly Munda, or Munda, rising in the Mountain Serra da Estrella, and running Westward by the City Cimbra, falls into the Ocean at Buarcos. 2. Lima, the ancient Lethe, is swallow'd by the Sea, not far from Viana. 3. Sadão, the Old Calipus, makes a great Bay at Setúbal, in Alentejo. 4. Vouga, once Vacua, mixes with the Ocean near Aveiro, in Beira. 5. Leça, formerly Celandes, is lost in the Ocean, near the Town of its own Name. 6. Ave, cuts the Province betwixt Duero and Minho, and glides into the Ocean, scarce Navigable. 7. Cavado, runs by Braga to the Sea. 8. Zêzere rises in Serra da Estrella, and falls into the Tagus. 9. Aba Springs in the aforesaid Mountain, and joins the Mondego. 10. Coa rises towards the Frontiers of Castile, and runs to the Duero. 11. Laura; and 12. Cambaz, in the Province of Alentejo, meet, and are both lost in the Tagus. 13. Caya in the same Province, gushes out near Portalegre, and falls into Gadiana, between Badajoz and Elvas. So many may suffice, for to mention all, would be too tedious.

There are also hot Waters, famous for the cure of many Diseases, of which the most frequented, are those call'd Caldas, 15 Leagues North from Lisbon, where there is an Hospital for the Poor, well Endow'd, with a Physician, an Apothecary, and other Servants, but very wretched Accommodation for other Persons out of it. There are other hot Baths, call'd of S. Peter, or of Alvor, in Algarve.

As for the SOIL, it is certainly the worst Part of Spain yet not contemptible, but like all Countries has better and worse: It never produces Corn enough to maintain the People, but has always been supply'd out of Spain, and now during the War, from the Northern Countries; and it has been always known that it will not yield a sufficient quantity of Wheat. Pasture is no less scarce, except in some of the most Northern Parts, where is the greatest breed of Cattle, which at Lisbon, and all Southward, is always very lean, but the Flesh good. To make amends, here are vast quantities of Wine, which is the best Commodity of the Kingdom, and at present all sorts of it so well known in England, that no more need be said of it. Oyl is also plentiful, but very rarely good, being strong, and such as none who are acquainted with the Spanish and Italian, will eat. Immense Store of Salt is every Year Exported from Setúbal, to most Northern Nations. Oranges and Lemons are another considerable Commodity, tho' their Sower Oranges are not to compare to those of Sevil; nor is any of their Fruits, their Almonds, Chestnuts, Raisins, &c. being much smaller than those of Spain, and not so well Tasted. Common Herbs and Flowers, are plentiful and good, and they make abundance of Sweet Waters. The Woollen Manufactures of the Country, are only worn by the meanest sort of People, being fit for no others.

To give CHARACTERS of Nations, is one of the boldest Undertakings a Man can venture upon, and indeed the most unlikely to succeed, for either Malice, finds nothing but Vice, or Affection, can speak nothing but Virtue, and no Country is without some mixture of both. To avoid all blame on either Hand, tho' I have liv'd in Portugal, and am well acquainted with the People, I will chuse to transcribe a few Words out of Emanuel de Faria y Sousa, a Portuguese Author, who says thus of his Countrymen. The Nobility think themselves Gods, and require a sort of Adoration: The Gentry aspire to be equal to them; and the Commonality disdain to be thought inferior to either. If this be so with the Subjects, what is then the Prince, who is Head of so many Petty-Gods? These are the Portuguese Author's Words. As an Instance of this Haughtiness, of my Knowledge, most Women of Quality are serv'd up on the Knee by their Maids and Slaves, which is become so Habitual to those poor Creatures, that they offer it to all sorts, Men or Women, and few refuse it. Nay, the Women of High Rank, will scarce be spoke to by mean People, but on the Knee. However, I must do the Fair Sex so much Right, as to clear them of the Scandal they generally lie under, of bearing few Children, Conceiving too soon, and giving over too early; which is a meer Notion; for they are certainly as Fruitful as any others, and bear their Children at the same Age. For Beauty they have as great a share as any Nation, did not they spoil their Faces with filthy Paint and Washes. In Wit I am confident they yield to none, but rather seem to exceed the Northern Parts, and do so also in Charity and Generosity; and for Modesty and Preciseness, in all that relates to their Honour, none can compare with them. The much inculcated Story of Men and Women in Spain wearing Spectacles for Gravity and Pride, is a meer Chimera, grounded on their being us'd by some Young People, whose Eyes are frequently much impair'd by excessive Bleeding.

As for their HABIT, the Men generally wear short black Cloaks, little Doublets, wide Breeches and long Swords; the Garments either of Bays or Silk, according to the Season and their Ability.

All Women going Abroad on Foot, use Veils, but their Faces bare; those of Quality in their Coaches or Litters, wear Fardingales, short Doublers, Periwigs, and some of them Daggers by their sides. In the House, they generally have short Doublers with the Smock appearing round the Waist and open before; the Maidens in their Hair, and others with a fine sort of Muzlin on their Heads. Of later Years, both Sexes begin to follow the French Mode.

Of the Ancient LANGUAGE of Spain, which which was doubtless the same spoken in Portugal, as a part of the whole, something has been said in its Place: That now in use in this Country, has some resemblance with the Spanish, yet is nothing near so Polite, but uncouth, rude and ungrateful to the Ear, being a Composition of Old Spanish, barbarous Latin, obsolete French, much Arabick, and some Greek, and remains of the Gothick, and other Northern Nations which Conquer'd Spain.

The general way of reckoning Sums of MONY in Portugal, is either by Reis, or Cruzadoes; the first, the smallest Brass, and the other the biggest Silver Coin of the Country but one; of Brass there are Single Reis, Pieces of a Rei and a half, of 5 Reis, and of 10 Reis. Of Silver, the first piece is a Vin-tein, of 20 Reis; the half, Testao, of 50 Reis; the Testao of 100 Reis; the Piece of 250 Reis; the Cruzado, of 400 Reis, and the Piece of 500 Reis: Besides which, they stamp the number 600 on the Spanish Pieces of Eight, to denote it shall pass for so many Reis. In Gold, they use Moeda's of 4000 Reis; and half Moeda's. For the understanding of the Value of all which, it is to be observ'd, that the general Proportion betwixt our Coin and theirs, not to speak of Exchange, which rises and falls, according to the course of Trade, is 3000 Reis to one Pound Sterling, or 100 to Eight pence English; by which any one may see what all their Pieces are worth.

The whole Kingdom of Portugal is divided into 5 Provinces; and adding the little Kingdom of Algarve, they will be in all six, which we will next speak of in Order, beginning in the North, and so descending Southward; the Names of them are these.

1. ENTRE DOURO E MINHO.
2. TRASOS MONTES.
3. BEIRA.
4. ESTREMADURA.
5. ALEMTEJO.
6. ALGARVE.

CHAP. I.

The Province call'd ENTRE DOURO E MINHO.

THAT is, betwixt the Rivers Douro and Minho, and in Latin, Interamnenfis, has the latter of these Rivers on the North, to divide it from Galizia: and the first on the South, to part it from the Province of Beira: On the West of it is the Ocean, and on the East, a ridge of Mountains separates it from the other Province of Trasos Montes. It is almost Square, none of its sides being much above or under 18 Leagues, and tho' so small, in Fertility exceeds the rest of Portugal; yet is for the most part Mountainous, but those Mountains are the best Grazing Land in the Kingdom, and yet indifferent, compar'd with other Countries. The Plains are full of Vines and Trees of several sorts, and generally pretty well Water'd. In this Province is the Archbishoprick of Braga, the Bishoprick of Porto, the Collegiate Churches of Guimaraens, Barcelos, and Cedofeita; the Dukedoms of Barcelos and Caminha; the Earldoms of Celorico de Basto, and Villa Nova da Cerveira; the Viscountship of Lima, 130 Monasteries and Abbies, and 1500 Parish-Churches, Chappels, and Oratories, 6 Seaport Towns, Caminha, Viana, Espofende, Villa de Conde, Leza and Porto. The most remarkable Places, are BRAGA, a City and Archbishoprick, is seated on the Southside of the River Cavado, in about 41 Degrees and a half of North Latitude. The Buildings are ancient, but handsom in that way, and strong, being made of a very durable sort of Stone found hereabouts; the Walls Re-built by King Ferdinand in the Year 1375. on the Foundation laid by King Dennis. The Cathedral is large and strong, and the Archbishop's Palace an old Pile of Building; the number of the Inhabitants may be about 3000 Families, in 5 Parishes, with 3 Monasteries of Religious Men, 3 of Nuns, a noble Hospital, a College, and a House of Misericordia, which is a Charitable Foundation, therefore call'd the House of Mercy, for relieving of Persons well Born, but fallen into Want, which is done with wonderful Privacy, Marrying of young Maidens, and putting out Boys to Employments, which is here declar'd once for all. About the Founder of the City Authors vary and run into Fables; all we know is, that the Romans enlarg'd what they found and made it a Court of Judicature, and Augustus Caesar, a Roman Colony, by the name of Augusta Bracara. Under the Suevians it was the Court of their Kings. The Moors took it in 716. King Alonso III. new Peopl'd it in 904. To pass by Conjectures and Follies; the first Archbishop we find there, was in the Year 1067. whose Revenue is now 40000 Cruzado's, amounting to about 6000 Pounds Sterling, and under him 13 dignify'd Clergy-men, a considerable number of Canons and Petty-Canons, and 1800 Parishes. Distant 60 Leagues from Lisbon to the North.

Porto,

Porto, a City, Bishoprick and Seaport, well known and much frequented, on the North-side of the River Duero, about a League from the Sea, pleasantly seated on uneven rocky Ground, the River washing the Walls, which were built by Don Gonzalo Pereira, Archbishop of Braga; the Streets are generally narrow, but well pav'd; the natural Rock in some Places, making up part of the Pavement, and even of the Walls of Houses; the Buildings Ancient, but Graceful, all of Stone, and the Churches rich and magnificent. The Inhabitants amount to about 4000 Families, in 5 Parishes, with 9 Monasteries of Friars, 4 of Nuns, 8 Chappels, 4 Hospitals, and a House of Mercy. King Alonso III. of Castile recover'd it from the *Moor*s, in the Year 905, after which it was again raz'd by them, continuing so, till rebuilt 982, by a Fleet of Gascons. The Bishop's Revenue is 15000 Crusado's, about 2000 Pounds Sterling, and under him are 8 dignify'd Clergymen, 12 Canons, and 600 Parishes. It stands in 41 Deg. 10 Min. Lat. 40 Leagues North from Lisbon. The Harbour is safe against all Winds, but when the Floods come down, no Anchors will hold the Ships, but they are forc'd to make them fast all along the Walls, one by another, to avoid the Fury of the Water. At the Entrance to it is a dangerous Bar, and on the Shoar a Castle call'd S. John's. Opposite to the City over the River, is a little Town call'd Gaya.

Guimaraens, is a Town 3 Leagues from Braga, seated on a Hill, Wall'd by King Denis, has a good old Castle, an ancient Palace, where some of the first Kings of Portugal Resided, and other handsom Structures, about 1000 Inhabitants, 4 Parishes, one of them Collegiate, 2 Monasteries of Friars, one of Nuns, a House of Mercy, and an Hospital, and a considerable Trade of Linnen Cloth and fine Thread.

Viana de Foç de Lima, so call'd, because it is at the Mouth of the River Lima, six Leagues from Braga, with strong Walls, a Castle, the Buildings handsom, 1500 Inhabitants, one (Collegiate) Parish, 3 Monasteries of Friars, one of Nuns, a House of Mercy, an Hospital, and is become a Place of good Trade, since the great consumption of Portuguese Wines in England, this Country producing a small sort, more like the French than others to the Southward. It is one of the pleasantest Towns in Portugal, (says a late Traveller) seated along the Sea-side, so that from the Key you may see any Ships along the Coasts: It is well Pav'd, the Streets upon a level, with very good Buildings. The Castle stands on the Sea-side, and commands the Harbour, and this War-time has always a very good Garison in it. The King has newly built a Magazine, wherein are said to be kept Arms for 20000 Men.

Caminha, another small Town. of 500 Inhabitants, one Parish, one Monastery, a House of Mercy, and an Hospital, standing at the mouth of the River Minho, which runs by its Walls.

Valenza de Minho, is 4 Leagues above the last, on the same River, and Wall'd, yet has not above 250 Inhabitants, one Collegiate Parish, one Monastery of Nuns, and one of Friars, near it.

Monção, two Leagues above the last on the same River, double Wall'd with a Castle, 400 Inhabitants, one Parish one Monastery of Jesuits, and 2 of Nuns.

Ponte de Lima, about 60 Leagues North from Lisbon, on the River Lima, over which it has a Bridge, and thence takes the Name, is Wall'd, and contains 500 Inhabitants, one Parish, one Monastery of Friars an Hospital, and a House of Mercy.

Barcelos, a Town of 400 Inhabitants, one Collegiate Parish, a House of Mercy, and an Hospital, is Wall'd, and stands on the River Cavado, in the Territory of Viana, the first Earldom in Portugal, now lost in the House of Braganza.

Villa de Conde, stands on the Sea-coast, at the Mouth of the River Ave, with an old Castle, 500 Inhabitants, one Parish, one Monastery of Friars, and one of Nuns.

Amarante, 55 Leagues from Lisbon, on the River Tamaga, the Rivulet Locia running through the middle of it, with about 500 Inhabitants, one Parish, one Monastery of Friars, and an Hospital, and has a Linnen Manufacture.

C H A P. II.

The Province call'd T R A S - O S - M O N T E S.

OR beyond the Mountains, in Latin, Transmontana, is enclos'd like the last, by the same River Duero, on the South, to part it from Beira; by the aforesaid Mountains on the West, dividing it from Entre Minho e Douro; on the North it borders on Galicia, and Eastward, on the Kingdom of Leon. Very few Rivers water this Province, which are the Tuelo, falling into the Tage, the Pinhao, Sabor, and Carcedo, all three losing their Names in the Duero. The Land is dry, uncouth Mountains, and Barren, yielding little or no Wheat at all, some Rye, but plenty of Wine. In length it is 26 Leagues, in Breadth 17. There are some few Gentry, but all the People are Rude and Clownish, and speak a barbarous sorry Language. As for Churches, there are not many, but the few well enough Endow'd. There is one Bishoprick of Miranda, the Great Dukedom of Braganza, now in the Crown; the Marquisate of Villa-Real, and the Earldoms of Vimioso, and Villa-Flor. The remarkable Places, are

The Towns of	}	Villa-Flor.
Chaves.		Freixo.

B R A G A N Z A, the first City in this Province, is Seated in the 42d Deg. of Lat. near 70 Leagues from Lisbon, North-East, standing on the farthest Angle of Portugal, but 2 Leagues from the Borders of Leon, and as near those of Galicia, on the Banks of the River Fervenza, in a large Plain, is Wall'd, and has an old Castle. The Inhabitants no above 600 Families, 2 Parishes, 2 Monasteries of Friars, 2 of Nuns, one College, a House of Mercy and and an Hospital. This, or some other Town near it, was standing in the Days of the Romans, and was call'd Cetabriga, and Tuntabriga, as also Bragantia. It was the greatest Dukedom in Portugal, which is now in the Crown, since that Family possess'd it of the Throne.

Miranda de Douro, a City and Bishoprick, Seated in 41 Deg. 45 Min. Latitude, above 60 Leagues from Lisbon to the North-East, and 7 South of Braganza on the North-side of the River Duero, on a Rocky Mountain; its Walls are wash'd by a large Brook, and the City is defended by a Castle. It contains but 400 Families, one Parish, a House of Mercy, and an Hospital. King Denis of Portugal was the Founder, and built the Walls and Castle; and King John III. erected it a Bishoprick, in the Year 1555. To the Cathedral belong 7 Dignities, 7 Canons, and 6 Petty Canons, and the Prelate's Revenue is 10000 Cruzadoes, or about 1400 Pounds.

Chaves, a small Town, 2 Leagues from the Borders of Galicja, Wall'd, yet has but 300 Inhabitants, one Parish, a Monastery near it, a House of Mercy, and an Hospital. The Founder was the Emperor Flavius Vespasian, Ann. 78. and from him call'd Aque Flavie, corruptly Chaves.

Villa-Real, a Town above 50 Leagues North from Lisbon, and 4 from Lamego, in 41 Deg. and a half Latitude, betwixt the Rivers Corgo and Ribeira, Wall'd, and has 3 Towers, call'd Villa-Vela, the old Town. The Inhabitants about 800, 2 Parishes, 2 Monasteries of Friars, one of Nuns, an House of Mercy, and an Hospital. The Founder King Denis, Ann. 1289. It has been an Earldom, a Marquisate, and a Dukedom, all now Extinct.

Murça, has but 200 Inhabitants, one Parish, and one Monastery of Nuns, and is seated in a Plain, near a small Rivulet, 5 Leagues from Villa-Real.

Monforte, or Namam, 50 Leagues North East from Lisbon, once a Wall'd Town, now quite Ruin'd, only a Suburb, subsisting of 120 Families in one Parish.

Villa-Flor, is Wall'd and contains 400 Families, one Parish, 5 Chappels, a House of Mercy, and an Hospital; seated in a Plain, at the foot of a Mountain. The Founder King Denis, Ann. 1286.

Freixo de Espadacinta, seated near the River Duero, where it parts Spain and Portugal, on a Hill, at the Foot of a Mountain, contains 400 Inhabitants, whose chief Trade is in fine Webs for Sieves. Founded by King Denis, Ann. 1310, who built the Castle.

C H A P. III.

The Province of B E I R A.

Extends above 30 Leagues every way, being almost Square, excepting some Points of it, which run into the Portuguese Estremadura, and Alentejo. On the North, the River Duero parts it from the Province Entre Minho e Douro; on the West, it has the Ocean, and part of the Portuguese Estremadura; on the South, another part of the same Country and the River Tagus; and on the East, it borders on the Spanish Province of Estremadura, and the Kingdom of Leon. The People here, says Faria, for the most part are Poor, the Gentry inconsiderable, the Garb and Conversation mean, and the Language scarce intelligible. That Parsimony so much celebrated by the Ancients, to be found among the Lusitanians, as having no other Bed at Night, than the Cloaths they wear in the Day, is to be seen in this Province; yet this proceeds not from their Moderation, but from Want, or Laziness, tho' the Land produces all sorts of Grain, yet the Natives are so addicted to Begging, that those who are worth something, ask Alms as much as those that are worth nothing. At certain Times of the Year Spain swarms with these People, who having Plow'd and Sow'd their Corn, go abroad a Begging till Harvest-Time; then they, who the Day before with heavy Countenances and doleful Voices ask'd a Charity, return and view their Crops with Pleasure. These are the words of the aforesaid Portuguese Author. Here are 4 Cities and Bishopricks, one Dukedom, 3 Marquisates, and 9 Earldoms. For Rivers, those of Lomba, Arda, Paiva, Tavora, Tourens and Coa, fall into the Duero; those of Zezeze, Penful, Arauil and Elia, into the Tagus; the Mon- dego and Vonga, after taking in other smaller Streams, run into the Ocean. The most noted Places are,

The Cities of Coimbra.

Lamego.
Viseo.
Guarda, and Idanha.

The Towns of Aveiro.

Castel-Rodrigo.
Pinhel.
Almeida.
Covillam.
Montemor o Velho.

COIMBRA, a famous City, Bishoprick and University, is seated on the North-side of the River Mondego, over which it has a stately Stone-Bridge of 29 Arches; on the Walls are many Towers and Turrets, with 4 Gates to them, the Buildings within Ancient, and among them a Palace, built by King Emanuel. The City contains about 5000 Families, 7 Parishes, 5 Monasteries of Religious Men, 4 of Nuns, 16 Colleges, a House of Mercy, and a great Hospital. The University was settled there by King John III. in the Year, 1553. and maintains 50 Professors, under whom are sometimes 3000 Students; and their Allowance is 30000 Cruzado's, or 4000 Pounds Sterling. To pass by Fables, this Place was built by Attaces, King of the Alans, Ann. 417, as a Fortress, in his Wars against Hermenericus, the Suebian King of Galicja. The Moors took it in 716. And King Ferdinand I. of Castile, recover'd it after a Siege of 7 Months, Ann. 1040. The Bishop of it, is always Earl of Arganil, an Honour granted to him by King Alonso V. Ann.

1472. And his Revenue, 40000 Crusado's, or 6000 Pounds Sterling. To the Cathedral belong 7 dignify'd Clergy-men, 24 Canons, 6 Petty-Canons, and 14 Chaplains. The chief Convent is that of St. Cruz, being all Noble-men, of the Order of St. Austin. The Church of it, is a large Structure, richly adorn'd with Gildings and Plate. And in the Repository they shew many Relicks. This City lies in 40 Degrees and a half of Latitude, and about 30 Leagues from Lisbon to the North.

Lamego, City and Bishoprick, in 41 Degrees Lat. about 40 Leagues from Lisbon to the North-East, seated on the River Balsamao, not far from the Duro, contains about 2000 Inhabitants, 2 Parishes, 2 Monasteries of Friars, one of Nuns, and a House of Mercy, and a great Hospital. Earl Henry, Father to the first King of Portugal, recover'd this City from the Mahometans, and made it a Bishoprick worth 15000 Crusado's, or 2500 Pounds to its Prelate, under whom are 7 dignify'd Clergy-men, 10 Canons, and 6 Petty-canons. Here King Alonso I. of Portugal, held the Cortes, or Parliament, in which the first Laws of the Kingdom were Enacted.

Viseo, City, is seated in a pleasant Plain, in 40 Deg. 45 Min. Lat. 40 Leagues from Lisbon, and contains about 1000 Inhabitants, 3 Parishes, one Monastery of Friars, one of Nuns, a House of Mercy, and an Hospital. The Romans call'd this Vicus Aquarius; and King Ferdinand I. of Castile, recover'd it from the Moors, Ann. 1038. It is a Bishoprick. The Prelate's Revenue 16000 Crusado's, or 2500 Pounds; the Cathedral serv'd by 7 Dignitaries, 18 Canons, and 11 Petty-Canons.

Guarda, another City and Bishoprick, in 41 Degrees and a half of Latitude, about 40 Leagues North-East from Lisbon, seated on a Rocky Hill difficult of Access, has a Castle, Walls, with several Towers on them, 6 Gates, and good old Buildings. The Inhabitants about 1000 Families, 5 Parishes, one Monastery of Friars, one of Nuns, a House of Mercy, and an Hospital. King Sancho I. of Portugal, was the Founder, Ann. 1199, calling it Guarda, as being a Guard, or Frontier against Lecm, and Translated to it the Episcopal See of Idanha, and yet the Bishops are call'd Egitanenses; their Revenue, 22000 Crusado's, near 3000 Pounds. The Cathedral serv'd by 5 Dignitaries, and 25 Canons and Petty-Canons.

Idanha a Velha, a ruin'd Place, tho' ancient City, so far Decay'd, that it retains not above 60 Inhabitants, 40 Leagues North-East from Lisbon, formerly call'd Igeditania, and is still an Earldom.

Aveiro, is a Market-Town in 40 Deg. 40 Min.

Lat. 39 Leagues North from Lisbon, and 9 from Coimbra, seated in a Plain upon a Bay, at the Mouth of a Creek, which divides it into two Parts, join'd by a stately Bridge, forming a Haven, and making great quantities of Salt which serves great part of the Kingdom, and is much of it Exported. The Town is Wall'd, has 9 Gates, 2000 Inhabitants, 4 Parishes, 3 Monasteries of Friars, one of Nuns, an Hospital, and a House of Mercy. It is the first Dukedom of Portugal, since that of Braganza has been in the Crown, and the Dukes of it call themselves de Alencastre, as being descended by a Female, from the House of Lancaster.

Castel-Rodrigo, a Town next the Frontiers of the Kingdom of Leon, seated on a high Hill, adorn'd with a Noble Palace of its Marquesses, whose Family continuing in Spain when Portugal Revolted, lost it. The River Agueda runs by the Town, which contains not above 250 Inhabitants, one Parish, and one Monastery.

Pinhel, 2 Leagues from Castel-Rodrigo, and 3 from A'mayda, seated on a Hill, wall'd, with 7 Towers, 6 Gates, a Castle, and 500 Inhabitants, 6 Parishes, a Monastery of Nuns, an Hospital, and a House of Mercy.

Almeyda, 2 Leagues from the Frontiers of Lecm, opposite to Ciudad-Rodrigo, standing on an Eminence, near the River Cca, from which the Territory is call'd Riba de Coa, has a good Castle 300 Inhabitants, one Parish, one Monastery, a House of Mercy, and an Hospital, and is Wall'd. The Moors Founded it by the name of Talmaida, signifying 2 Table, from the flatness of the Ground it stood on; but King Denis remov'd it to the present Place.

Covilhao, a good Town, about 35 Leagues from Lisbon, North East, and 6 from Guarda, South-West; seated near the River Zezere, and containing 1200 Inhabitants, 13 Parishes, 2 Monasteries of Friars, a House of Mercy, and an Hospital. The Founder, King Sancho I. 1186.

Monte-mor o Velho, 27 Leagues from Lisbon to the North, and 5 from Coimbra South-West; seated on a rising Ground, near the River Mondego, has a strong Castle, about 1000 Inhabitants, 5 Parishes, 1 Monastery of Friars, 1 of Nuns, a House of Mercy, and a great Hospital.

Besides these, Penamacor, 9 Leagues from Guarda, has 800 Inhabitants.

Idanha a Nova, 35 Leagues East from Lisbon; about the same number of Families; and all the rest smaller, and so inconsiderable, as not to deserve particular Mention.

C H A P. IV.

The Province of ESTRE MADURA, in Portugal.

IS a long narrow slip of Land reaching from the Mouth of the River Mondego in the North, below the Town of Setuval in the South, about 35 Leagues in length, and scarce 16 in breadth where largest. On the North it is bounded by the aforesaid River Mondego, which parts it from Beira; on the West it has the Ocean, on the South the Province of Alentejo, and the same Province and Beira on the East. The Land is most of it the best in Portugal, the People above Want, the Gentry considerable, the Commonality live well, and the meanest Sort are not Beggarly, so that all subsist of themselves. In this Province there are 2 Cities, 1 Archbishoprick, 1 Bishoprick, 1 Dukedom, 1 Marquisate late, 7 Earldoms, and the Grand Priory of Crato of the Knights of Malta. Places of most Note are,

The Cities of	{	Alenquer.
Lisbon and	{	Torres Vedras.
Leiria.	{	Palmela.
The Towns of	{	Benavente.
Setubal.	{	Ourem.
Santarem.	{	Lezimbra.

LISBON, the Capital City of Portugal, has employ'd the Portuguese Authors to find its fabulous Founders, and do fix for the most part upon Ulysses for the Man, from the resemblance of his Name with Olyssippo, Olyssippo and Ulyssippo, for so variously it is written. Yet it does not appear to have been a Place of any Note, till many Years after the erecting of the Portuguese Monarchy; for during the Roman Government, Emerita, now Merida, in Spain, was the Metropolis of Lusitania, and besides that Pax Julia, or Beja; Scalabis, or Santarem; Liberalitas Julia, or Evora; Augusta Bracara, or Braga; and several others were more noted than Lisbon. The Suevian Kings kept their Court at Porto; the Gothish Monarchs never resided in Portugal, and under the Moors this Place was inferior to many others. Whatsoever it was formerly, it is now the Residence of the Kings, the great Seat of all Courts of Justice, an Archbishoprick, an University, and the best Sea-Port in the Kingdom. Seated in a Hot Climate, viz. in 38 Degrees and a half Latitude, but refresh'd by the Breezes from the Sea, and standing on the River Tagus, which conveys up to it the Wealth of the East and West-Indies, and the Commodities of all European Nations, the Harbour lying most conveniently for Trade upon the Western Ocean, and being it self of such wonderful Capaciousness as might contain 10000 Ships, all riding in Safety without encumbering one another; having Water for the greatest Vessels often to Anchor before the Windows of the King's Palace. To defend this Haven there are 2 Forts at the Mouth of the River, the first call'd S. Julian's on the Shore, large, regular and beautiful; and opposite to it in the midst of the Water, on a Shelf, is another round Fort, all of Wood, call'd Torre do Bougio. Nature has provided another Defence, which is the Bar, very Dangerous to pass without Pilots of the Place; within these is a vast Bay, till drawing nearer the City, the River contracts it self, and on the straightest part of it is another Fort, call'd Torre de Belen, or the Tower of Bethlehem, standing far in the Water, at the Flood, but to be approach'd on the Sand at the Ebb. The Name is given it from a good Village opposite to it on the North Shoar, which first receiv'd it from a magnificent Monastery of S. Jerome, with a most stately Church, Dedicated to the Infant Jesus. Besides which there is here an Hospital for the maintenance of decay'd Gentlemen, who have serv'd their Prince, and have no Fortune to support them. Under the afore-said Fort runs the Channel of the River, which again opens till it is a League over, with Water enough every where for the greatest Ships. The City it self stands upon seven Hills, very steep in many Places, and the Streets generally narrow, which makes Horse-Litters more in use than Coaches. Those Streets which have a Descent are wash'd clean by the violent Rains, the others which lye level, are intolerably full of Filth, of all sorts, thrown out of the Houses, and seldom carry'd away. In bigness it is nothing to compare to London or Paris, but exceeds any other City in either Country. The Form is irregular, lying in Length along the River, and no where so broad as long, but the greatest Breadth is about the middle, whence it falls off narrowing towards both Ends. The Houses are for the most part old, nothing beautiful, and using Lattice Windows, except some few of Glass of later Years. But the Houses of the Nobility and other Persons of Quality are fair Structures, all of Stone, and standing on much Ground. The Monasteries and Churches are a great Ornament, tho' the latter of Modern Structure, come not near the Ancient for Beauty, but are richly adorn'd within. The Cathedral is a vast Pile, but heavy and Gothick, and stands on one of the seven Hill above mention'd. It would require a particular Treatise to describe all the Monasteries and Churches, for here are no less than 40 Parishes, 25 Monasteries of Friars, 18 of Nuns, and several Hospitals. The Noble House of Mercy constantly breeds up 60 Boys, and gives Portions to 114 Maidens, besides other incredible Sums of Money, Charitably expended in relieving Prisoners, and decay'd Persons, who cannot beg. The great Hospital receives all Persons, of what Degree, Nation, or Religion soever, without exception, and can refuse none upon any Pretence; nor is it only the Sick it entertains, but Naturals, Lunatics and foundling Children. The King's Palace by the River side, yields a good Prospect, for as much as there is of it, being only one Side of a Square, intended to be built by King Philip II. of Spain, and before it is a large open Square, where the Merchants use to meet. But the best Square in the City is before the great Hospital above mention'd, and is call'd Roxio. Near to the Square of the Palace is the great Market of the City, being the only one that can deserve the Name of a Market, and not far from it the Shambels, the Slaughtering Place being at the End of the City, where all Butchers Meat is very slovenly kill'd and dress'd. Besides the Palace abovesaid, there is near the River a large Square House, built by the famous Marquess de Castel Rodrigo, and upon that Family's adhering to the Crown of Spain, it was confiscated to the King. The Castle of Lisbon stands upon one of the Highest Hills, and is an ancient Moorish Fabrick, in which is nothing worth taking notice of. The Archbishop's Revenue is 40000 Cruzadoes, about 6000 Pounds, and under him 8 Dignify'd Clergy-Men, 20 Canons and 4 Petty-Canons.

Leiria, is a City and Bishoprick, about 20 Leagues from Lisbon to the North, in 39 Degrees 43 Minutes Latitude, on the Banks of the River Lis, which falls into the Lena. The City is Wall'd, and on the Walls are strong Towers, the Inhabitants about 2000, 3 Parishes, 2 Monasteries of Friars, one of Nuns and a House of Mercy. King John III. made it a City and Bishoprick, which is worth to the Prelate 18000 Cruzado's, or 2400 Pounds a Year, and to the Cathedral belong 5 Dignify'd Clergy-Men, 10 Canons, 10 Petty-Canons, 5 Quarter Canons, and 8 benefic'd Priests.

Setubal, is 6 Leagues South from Lisbon, beyond the Tagus, but in the same Province, and 38 De-

groes 20 Minutes Latitude, seated on a Bay close to the Ocean, where the River Zadon disburdens itself, and is sort of to by most Northern Nations, for the vast quantity of Salt made there every Year. The Town is Wall'd, with many Towers, 13 Gates and some Out-works, which make it strong to the East. Two Forts or Castles defend it, the one Ancient, the other Modern; this last built by King Philip II. of Spain, strong and beautiful. The Inhabitants about 3000, 2 Parishes, 3 Monasteries of Friars, 2 of Nuns, 5 Chappels, a House of Mercy, 2 Hospitals, 2 Markets and 2 Conduits, to which the Water is brought by an ancient noble Aqueduct, from a great distance, on Arches. Our Seamen barbarously call this Place Saintubes, the ancient Name was Cecobriga.

Santarem is in 39 Degrees 20 Minutes Latitude, 14 Leagues from Lisbon to the North-East, seated on a high Hill, close to the River Tagus. The Mosses for its great Height call'd it Albasa, that is, Dreadful, and it was with them a common Precipice for Malefactors. On the South Side of it is a deep Valley, with a steep winding Ascent to the Town, call'd Alanse, that is, Snake. On the North Side are inaccessible high Rocks; on the West, pleasant Gardens and fruitful Fields producing Corn and Oyl. The Walls of it were built by the Romans, who call'd it Scalabis and Julium Prædium. The Buildings are old, the Inhabitants about 3000, 13 Parishes, one of them Collegiate, 7 Monasteries of Friars, 2 of Nuns, several Chappels, a House of Mercy, and 2 Hospitals. The name of Santarem, is a corruption of Santa Irene, a Saint honour'd there.

Sintra stands 5 Leagues West from Lisbon, near the Sea, at the Foot of the Mountains, and by the Cape of the same Name, being the most delightful Spot in Portugal, and the Territory fruitful in Corn and Wine, with a Quarry of Curious black and white Stone. The Inhabitants of the Town are about 1000, 6 Parishes, 3 Monasteries of Friars, one of them of Jeronimites, all entirely, with its Church, hew'd out of the Rock, and Earth brought from other places to make the Garden, the whole the work of King Emanuel, who also built the Royal Palace in the same Place, where the Kings of Portugal us'd to pass the Heat of the Summer, and of latter Years the unfortunate King Alphonso liv'd and dy'd in miserable Confinement. Formerly there was a Temple of the Moon, on the Rock then call'd Premontorium Lune, now Roca de Sintra, and by our Seamen, the Rock of Lisbon, and because the Moon was call'd Cynthia, thence we may suppose by Corruption, came the Name of Sintra, or Cintra.

Alcazar do Sal, is beyond the River Tagus, about 10 Leagues from Lisbon to the South-East, on the River Zadon, so call'd from much Salt made about it. The barren Territory affords little but Rushes, whereof at Lisbon they make those fine Mats, we see frequently in England. The Town is Wall'd and has an old Castle on a steep Rock, about 400 Inhabitants, 2 Parishes, 2 Monasteries of Friars, one of Nuns, a House of Mercy and an Hospital. The Romans built and call'd it Salacia, from the Abundance of Salt.

Tomar is 7 Leagues from Santarem, and 21 from Lisbon to the North East, pleasantly seated, in a Plain, on the River Nivas, being the chief Seat of the Military Order of Christ, the Inhabitants about 800, 2 Parishes, both Collegiate, 3 Monasteries of Friars, one of Nuns, a House of Mercy and an Hospital. The name is a Corruption of Thomas taken from S. Thomas of Canterbury.

Abrantes, is 20 Leagues from Lisbon North East, seated on an Eminency by the River Tagus, and over it an old Castle, strong by Situation. The Inhabitants about 2000, 4 Parishes, 4 Monasteries of Friars and Nuns, some Chappels, a House of Mercy and an Hospital. The Name in the Days of the Emperor Augustus is supposed to have been Tubili. King Philip II. of Spain made it a Dukedom, and gave the Title to the eldest Son of the Duke of Aveyro.

Torres Novas, is 19 Leagues North-East from Lisbon, and 5 from Santarem, seated in a Plain, through which the River Almonda runs, about a League from the Tagus, is Wall'd, has a Castle with 9 Towers, whence call'd Torres Novas, that is, new Towers, instead of Torres Nove, nine Towers, says Silva; but I rather believe it is call'd Torres Novas, new Towers, to distinguish it from Torres Vedas, or old Towers, another Town so call'd. It contains 1000 Inhabitants, 4 Parishes, 2 Monasteries of Friars, 1 of Nuns, a House of Retirement for Penitent Women, a House of Mercy, and an Hospital.

Palmela contains 800 Inhabitants, 2 Parishes, 2 Monasteries, 6 Chappels, a House of Mercy, and an Hospital, and is betwixt Lisbon and Setuval, on a Hill, the Top whereof is taken up by a Rock; the Town Wall'd, with many Towers about it. The Name Palmela or little Palm-Tree, taken from those Trees, with the Diminutive, to distinguish it from Palma in Andaluzia.

Benavente, 9 Leagues from Lisbon to the North-East, but on the South Side of Tagus, has 400 Inhabitants, and but one Parish, which is a Priory, belonging to the Knights of Avis.

Ourem, has as many Inhabitants as the last, in one Collegiate Parish, and stands 20 Leagues from Lisbon to the Northward.

Rezimbra is above 5 Leagues from Lisbon, upon the Shoar of the Ocean, beyond Tagus, and has 900 Inhabitants, in 2 Parishes.

Villa Franca, 4 or 5 Leagues from Lisbon, up the River, seated in a large Plain, with 400 Inhabitants, in one Parish, said to be founded by the English, who came to assist King Alonso the first in his Wars, and to have been by them call'd Cornwal, afterwards chang'd to Villa Franca, on Account of its many Franchises.

Allandra, 5 Leagues from Lisbon up the River, and on its Banks, with 600 Families, and one Parish and one Monastery.

Pedrogao, 20 Leagues North-East from Lisbon, on the flat Top of a Hill, encompass'd by the Rivers Zeze and Pera, with 400 Inhabitants and one Parish.

Seure, 26 Leagues from Lisbon to the North, and 6 from Leiria, seated on a Brook, not far from the Ocean, with an old Castle and Palace; about 800 Inhabitants, 1 Parish, 1 Monastery of Friars, and 1 of Nuns.

C H A P. V.

The Province of ALEMTEJO.

SO call'd, because in regard to Lisbon, it lies beyond Tagus, as also sometimes Entre Tejo e Guadiana, as lying for the most part betwixt those two Rivers, Borders Northward on a Piece of the Portuguese Estremadura, and the River Tagus; Eastward on the Spanish Provinces of Estremadura and Andaluzia; to the South it has the little Kingdom of Algarve, and on the West the Ocean and Part of the Portuguese Province of Estremadura. The greatest Length of it is above 40 Leagues, and the greatest Breadth, upwards of 30, but much less in other Places. The People, says Faria, are the richest and best Bred in Portugal, as Inhabiting the best Part of that Country: They are generally Farmers; and as they gather a little Wealth, send their Sons to the University, where they improve themselves so as to fill all the Courts in the Kingdom; thus of Farmers, by their Education, becoming Ministers of State. The principal Rivers in this Province, are the Guadiana, Enxarama, which loses itself in the Adao, and this pays Tribute to the Sea at Setuval, the Disor, and the Teva, which fall into the Tagus. Here are 4 Cities, 1 Archbishoprick, 2 Bishopricks, 1 Marquisate, 4 Earldoms and 1 Barony. The Places of most Note are,

The Cities of	{	Olivenza.
Ebora.	{	Moura.
Portalegre.	{	Serpa.
Elvas and	{	Campo Mayor.
Beja.	{	Viana.
The Towns of	{	Monte Mor o Novo.
Villa Vixosa.	{	Portel.
Estremoz.	{	Monforte.
Avis.	{	Castelo de Vide.

Ebora City is seated in the midst of this Province, as Head of it, on a Hill, encompass'd with Mountains, and has a strong Wall, adorn'd with many Towers, the Work of King Ferdinand, who threw down the old one, Built by Sertorius. It has 10 Gates, and is a League in Compass, containing 4000 Inhabitants, divided into 5 Parishes, in which are 9 Monasteries of Religious Men, 7 of Nuns, a House of Mercy, and a good Hospital. Prince Henry made it an University in the Year 1559 but does not flourish much as such, Coimbra carrying all from it. The Portuguese Faria says, it was once memorable for many stately Structures, and being the Seat of the Portuguese Kings; now little remains but the Ruins of what it was. The first Founder is uncertain, but Sertorius resided in, and Wall'd it; Julius Caesar gave it the Name of Liberalitas Julia, and made it a Municipium, or Free-Town. It was made a Bishoprick by King John III. and afterwards an Archbishoprick; the Prelates Revenue 6000 Cruzados, or 8000 Pounds, and under him 7 Dignify'd Clergy-Men, and a considerable number of Canons and Petty Canons. It is 20 Leagues South-East from Lisbon, and was Fortify'd by Monsieur Mallet, a French Ingenier, with the addition of 2 detach'd Forts to defend the Eminence.

Portalegre, is 30 Leagues East from Lisbon, and 3 from Albuquerque, the Frontier Town of the Spanish Estremadura, seated on the side of a high Mountain. The City is Wall'd, with 8 strong Towers and a good Castle, 8 Gates, 10 noble Fountains, one of which continually empties itself at 9 Months, about 3000 Inhabitants, dealing in the Woollen Manufacture, settled there, but very mean; 5 Parishes, 3 Monasteries of Religious Men, 2 of Nuns, 9 Chappels, a House of Mercy and an Hospital. King Alonso III. of Portugal built it in the Year 1259. and King John III. made it a Bishoprick, worth about 500 Pounds a Year to the Prelate, under whom are 5 Dignify'd Clergy-Men, 6 Canons, and 6 Petty-Canons. It is also an Earldom belonging to the Marquess of Gouvea.

Elvas is 30 Leagues from Lisbon to the Eastward, standing on an Eminency, strong by Nature, 2 Leagues from the Borders of the Spanish Estremadura, where the River Coa divides it from Portugal. It has a double Wall, with many Towers on it, a strong Castle, a pleasant Plain without, the Houses within well Built, about 2500 Inhabitants Trading in the Woollen Manufacture, 4 Parishes, 3 Monasteries of Friers, 2 of Nuns, 13 Chappels, a House of Mercy and 2 Hospitals. The ancient Name was Helva. King Emanuel, in 1513. made it a City, and King Sebastian, An. 1570. a Bishoprick, worth to its Prelate 10000 Cruzados, or 1400 Pounds, and serv'd by 5 Dignitaries, 10 Canons, 2 Petty-Canons, and 12 Benefic'd Clergy-men. In 1658. it was in vain Besieg'd by Don Lewis de Haro, the great Favourite of King Philip IV. of Spain, and in 1667. Fortify'd by Monsieur Mallet, a French Ingenier, so that it has 7 whole Bastions, besides several Demi-Bastions, most of them with Counterguards before them, because the Situation being on a Rock, the Ditch is not above 4 or 5 Foot deep. On one side of it is the Fort call'd S. Lucy, which serves instead of a Citadel, seated on the highest Ground, being the old Fort, included within 4 handsome Bastions. On another little Eminence, at a small Distance, is another Counterguard, or small Redoubt, so that this City is the strongest Place in Portugal. See it in Mallet's Travaux de Mars. Near it is a noble Aqueduct 3 Leagues and half long, and of a vast height in some Places where the Ground is low, having, says a late Traveller, for a great way together, no less than 4 Arches Built upon one another.

Beja, stands on the flat Top of an Eminence, 20 Leagues South-East from Lisbon, and 2 from the River Guadiana; in Figure round, has strong Walls, with many Towers on them, an ancient Castle Built by King Denis; the Inhabitants about 3000, 4 Parishes, 3 Monasteries of Friers, 3 of Nuns, 7 Chappels, a House of Mercy and an Hospital. King Emanuel made it a City, and Julius Caesar had formerly honour'd it with the Title of Pax Julia, making it a Roman Colony.

Villa Vixosa is a good Town, about 30 Leagues from Lisbon Eastward, 8 from Ebora, and 5 from Elvas, Elvas, and has a Noble Palace, built by King Denis of Portugal, afterwards the Great Seat of the House of Braganza, of which the Kings of Portugal come. Adjoining to the Palace is a Park three Leagues round. The Inhabitants of the Town are about 2000, 2 Parishes, 5 Monasteries of Friars, 3 of Nuns, a House of Mercy, an Hospital, and 4 magnificent Conduits. King John IV. of Portugal, caus'd it to be Fortify'd by Monsieur Mallet, a French Ingenier, who because the Ground was large, Fortify'd only the upper part of the Town, which commands the rest, and may hold out long after the lower Part is lost.

Estremoz, 28 Leagues from Lisbon, and 2 from Villa Vizosa, seated on a high Hill, on the Top whereof is the Castle, the Town along the Side, encompass'd with double Walls, strengthened and adorn'd with many Towers; and when Portugal Revolted from the Spaniards, Fortify'd by Monsieur Mallet, a French Engenier, with 5 regular Bastions, and the old Castle on the top of the Hill, strengthened, after the Modern manner. Here is made a curious sort of Earthen-Ware, much us'd in Portugal for drinking Water, it has a pretty Scent, and they are Ingenious Workmen; but if the Water stands long in any Vessel, it soaks thro'; it is Red, and was once of some Eueem in England. to stand among Coina, now quite out of Fashion. Near the Town is a Spring, gushing out so much Water in Summer, as drives several Mills, and, contrary to all others, dries up in Winter, and also turns Wood into Stone, or rather breeds a Stone Case over the Wood. The Town contains 2000 Inhabitants, 3 Parishes, 3 Monasteries of Friars, 1 of Nuns, a House of Mercy, and an Hospital. There are about the Place, 5 good Bastions, and 3 Demi-Bastions, besides the Fort above mention'd.

Avis, 20 Leagues East from Lisbon, seated on an Eminence, Wall'd, with an old Castle, 400 Inhabitants, and 1 Parish, is only Remarkable for being the Head Seat of the Knights of the Military Order of the same Name.

Odivenja, is 30 Leagues East, somewhat Southerly from Lisbon, seated in a Plain, on the East-side of the River Guadiana, next the Spanish Estremadura. King John IV. upon the Revolt of Portugal from Spain, caus'd it to be Fortify'd after the Modern manner, by Monsieur Mallet, a French Ingenier, who shut up the old Wall within its Works, adding 9 regular Bastions, a Ditch, and Covert-way. The Inhabitants are about 1800, 2 Parishes, one Monastery of Friars, one of Nuns, 9 Chappels, a House of Mercy, and an Hospital.

Moua is 30 Leagues South-East from Lisbon, seated in a Plain, half a League beyond the Guadiana, betwixt two Brooks, which fall into the River Ardita; the Inhabitants about 2000, 2 Parishes, 2 Monasteries of Friars, 2 of Nuns, an House of Mercy, an Hospital, and a good Fort. It was Taken by the Spaniards, in 1707, and Demolish'd by them this present Year, 1708.

Serpa, is about 25 Leagues from Lisbon, South-East, beyond the River Guadiana, towards Andalusia, is Wall'd, and has a strong Castle, 1800 Inhabitants, 2 Parishes, 1 Monastery of Friars, a House of Mercy, and an Hospital. Taken as well as the last, by the Spaniards, in 1707, and Demolish'd this Year, 1708.

Campo Mayor, 30 Leagues East from Lisbon, on the Borders of the Spanish Estremadura, seated on the flat top of a Hill, is Wall'd, and has a Castle, 1200 Inhabitants, 1 Parish, 1 Monastery of Friars, 6 Chappels, a House of Mercy, and an Hospital.

Viana, 20 Leagues from Lisbon South-East, and 4 South from Ebora, has 600 Inhabitants, one Parish, one Monastery of Friars, and one of Nuns.

Monte Mor o Novo, 15 Leagues from Lisbon, towards Elvas, seated on a rising Ground, with a Castle on the top of it, and the River Canha below. Here are made curious Cups and Pitchers for drinking Water, adorn'd with bright white Stones. The Inhabitants near 2000, 4 Parishes, 1 Monastery of Friars, a House of Mercy, and an Hospital.

Portel, about 20 Leagues from Lisbon, South-East, Seated on an Eminency, with a Castle on the top, is Wall'd, and contains 700 Inhabitants, 2 Parishes, and 2 Monasteries of Friars.

Monforte, is 25 Leagues from Lisbon, South-East, and 4 from Villa Vizosa, is Wall'd, has 4 Gates, a Castle on the Hill, 700 Inhabitants, 3 Parishes, 1 Monastery of Nuns, 6 Chappels, a House of Mercy, and an Hospital.

Castello de Vide, is near 30 Leagues East from Lisbon, and 2 from Portalegre, seated in a bottom betwixt 2 Mountains, and containing 800 Inhabitants; the Parishes I do not find, but 1 Monastery of Friars. Other Places are inconsiderable.

The Little Kingdom of A L G A R V E.

BEING the Southermost part of Portugal, has the Ocean on the West and South, is parted from Andalusia by the River Guadiana, on the East, and from the Kingdom of Portugal, or Province of Alemtejo, by the Mountains, call'd Serra do Algarve, or Caldeao, and Monchique on the North; being 27 Leagues in Length where largest, and but 8 in Breadth. It is a Mountainous Country, but abounds in Wine, Figs, Raisins, Oyl and Almonds, which are much inferior to those of Spain: It has also plenty of Dates, and the People make many Curiosities of the Palm-Tree Leaves. In it are 3 Cities, such as they are, 1 Bishoprick, and 3 Earldoms. The principal Places, SILVES, keeps the Name of a City, tho' it has not now above 40 Houses, and is 30 Leagues South from Lisbon, on a small River not far from the Ocean.

Tavira, about 37 Leagues from Lisbon, to the South East, 5 from Faro, Eastward, and as much Westward, from the Mouth of the River Guadiana. seated on the Coast of the Ocean, a small River running through the midst of it, over which is a stately Bridge, and at the Foot of it a Castle, the City is Wall'd, and contains 2000 Inhabitants, 2 Parishes, 4 Monasteries of Friars, one of Nuns, a House of Mercy, and an Hospital.

Lagos, is also about 37 Leagues South from Lisbon, and 5 East from Cape St. Vincent, seated on a large Bay, to the Ocean, where several Fleets have Anchor'd since the late Wars. It is Wall'd, has 8 Gates, an old Castle, call'd Penhas, about 2000 Inhabitants, 2 Parishes 2 Monasteries of Friars, one of Nuns, several Chappels, a House of Mercy, and an Hospital.

Faro, about the same distance as the last from Lisbon, South East, in the mid-way betwixt Cape S. Vincent, and the Mouth of Guadiana, seated on the Ocean, which there makes a Bay, and has a strong old Castle, 2000 Inhabitants, 2 Parishes, 3 Monasteries of Friars, 1 of Nuns, a House of Mercy, and an Hospital. The Episcopal See was remov'd hither from Silves, Ann. 1590. which is worth to the Bishop 5000 Cruzado's, or 700 Pounds a Year; and to the Cathedral belong 7 Dignitaries, 12 Canons, and 6 Petty-Canons.

The other Places here are all very inconsiderable, as Alburey a on the South-Coast, half way betwixt Lagos and Faro; Albor, in the Territory of Lagos, of 350 Inhabitants; Laule, the best of them, Wall'd, and of 800 Inhabitants; Sagres, Castromarin, Estombar, Alejur, Cacela, and Villa Nova de Portimao. Of all whch, there is nothing worth observing, nor any more of this little Kingdom of Algarve, or of the whole Kingdom of Portugal.

The King of Portugal, as we have told you, possesses also the large Tract of Brazil in America, the City of Goa, &c. in the East-Indies; the Islands of Cabo Verde, and the Island of Madera, on the Coasts of Africa; with several Forts and Towns on the Continent of Africa, on every side. All which are described in their proper Places, and therefore need no further mention here.

But the Azores, or Tercera Islands are seated too far to the North-West to be referr'd to Africa; and tho' nearer to America than they are to any other Continent, are never reckon'd into that part of the World; and therefore must be esteem'd part of Europe, and cannot be spoken of any where more properly than here, as being part of the Dominions of the King of Portugal, and seated in the same Latitude with his own Kingdom, although distanc'd from it no less than 16 Degrees, which in that Latitude, is 250 Leagues.

Of the AZORES, or TERCERA Islands.

These Islands are Seven in number, besides the two small ones of Flores and Corvo. Viz.

St. Michael.	}	St. George.
St. Mary.		Pico.
Tercera.		Fayal.
Graciosa.

These lie in a Cluster, between the 37th and 40th Deg. Lat. and between 21 and 26 Deg. Long. West from the Lizard. It is reported, that the first Discovery of them was made by a Merchant of Bruges, who in a Voyage to Lisbon, in the Year 1449, was driven, by stress of Weather, very far to the Westward, and at last arriv'd at these Islands, where he found no Inhabitants. He gave them the Name of the Flemish Islands, and return'd to Lisbon, where he talk'd of his Discovery, and gave the Portuguese such hints of the Situation, that they immediately went and took Possession of them. Anthony Gonvallo's Book of the Discoverers of the World, tells us that Don Henry who was that Ingenious Prince of Portugal, that was so industrious in Discoveries, went himself to the Azores in 1449.

Tradition tells us also, that upon the Information this Merchant gave his Countrymen at his return to Bruges, they set upon an Expedition thither, and planted a Colony, whose Posterity 'tis said, do still remain in Fayal, which was the Island they Occupied.

The Accounts given us by Travellers of these Islands, are thus.

St. Michael, is the most East, and St. Mary the most South in Situation. The former of 20 Leagues in Circumference, and yields much Wheat. The latter very small, and yields Provisions of most kinds, and Potter's Earth.

Tercera, which lies 28 Leagues more to the West, has its Name, as being the third (which Tercera signifies) of these Islands, in Situation, altho' the first in Dignity, and therefore communicates its Name in common Dialect, to the whole. It is reckon'd the largest of them, and yet not above 15 Leagues over, but is of Fertile Soil, the very Rocks, which seem bare, producing Vines, whence a good Wine is made, but not comparable to that of Madera, or the Canaries: The Land yields plenty of Wheat, Oranges, Limons, and most sorts of Fruits; the Pastures feed very large Oxen, and the Country wants nothing necessary for Life, but Oyl and Salt. But the Island is subject to Earthquakes. The Metropolis is Angra, where the King's Governor resides; it is seated on the South-Coast, well Built, and hath a strong Castle for its Defence, wherein King Alphonso was confin'd Prisoner by his Brother Peter, in the Year, 1668. This City is the See of a Bishop, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Lisbon. Here is a capacious Harbour for Shipping, whence the Town has its Name, Angra, signifying a Station of Ships; and withal it is the only safe Port in all these Islands: It is enclos'd like a Crescent, by two Mountains, which are seen at 14 or 15 Leagues distance at Sea; however it is not safe with all Winds. 'Tis chiefly for the sake of this Port that the Portuguese have been always careful of these Islands, and are shy of letting Strangers approach it; for its Situation is very convenient to refresh their Ships in the Brazil, and other long Voyages.

Graciosa lies the most Northward, had its Name from its pleasantness, and yields much Fruit.

St. George is Mountainous, and yields much Cedar-Wood.

Il Pico is so nam'd from the very high Mountain on it, thought by some to be equal to that of Teneriff, the Soil of this Island is said to be more Fertile than the rest.

Fayal, more Westward, is nam'd from the quantity of Beech-Trees growing on it; it yields Provisions and Fish. The Posterity of the Flemmings, as we have said, Inhabit here.

Flores, so nam'd from it's plenty of Flowers; and Corta, from the multitude of Crows found on it, are small Islands, which the Portuguese took Possession of also, to prevent an Enemy's Planting there. They lie 70 Leagues West from the rest of the Azores, and therefore are by some excluded that Class.

The Air of these Islands is in general Clear and Wholsom, but so sharp, as to corrode Iron, and consume Stone; which makes the People build with the finest Flints.

It was of Old, an Opinion of the Seamen, that as soon as you have passed the Azores in Sailing from Europe, all the Fleas, Lice, and other noisom Vermin, die instantly.

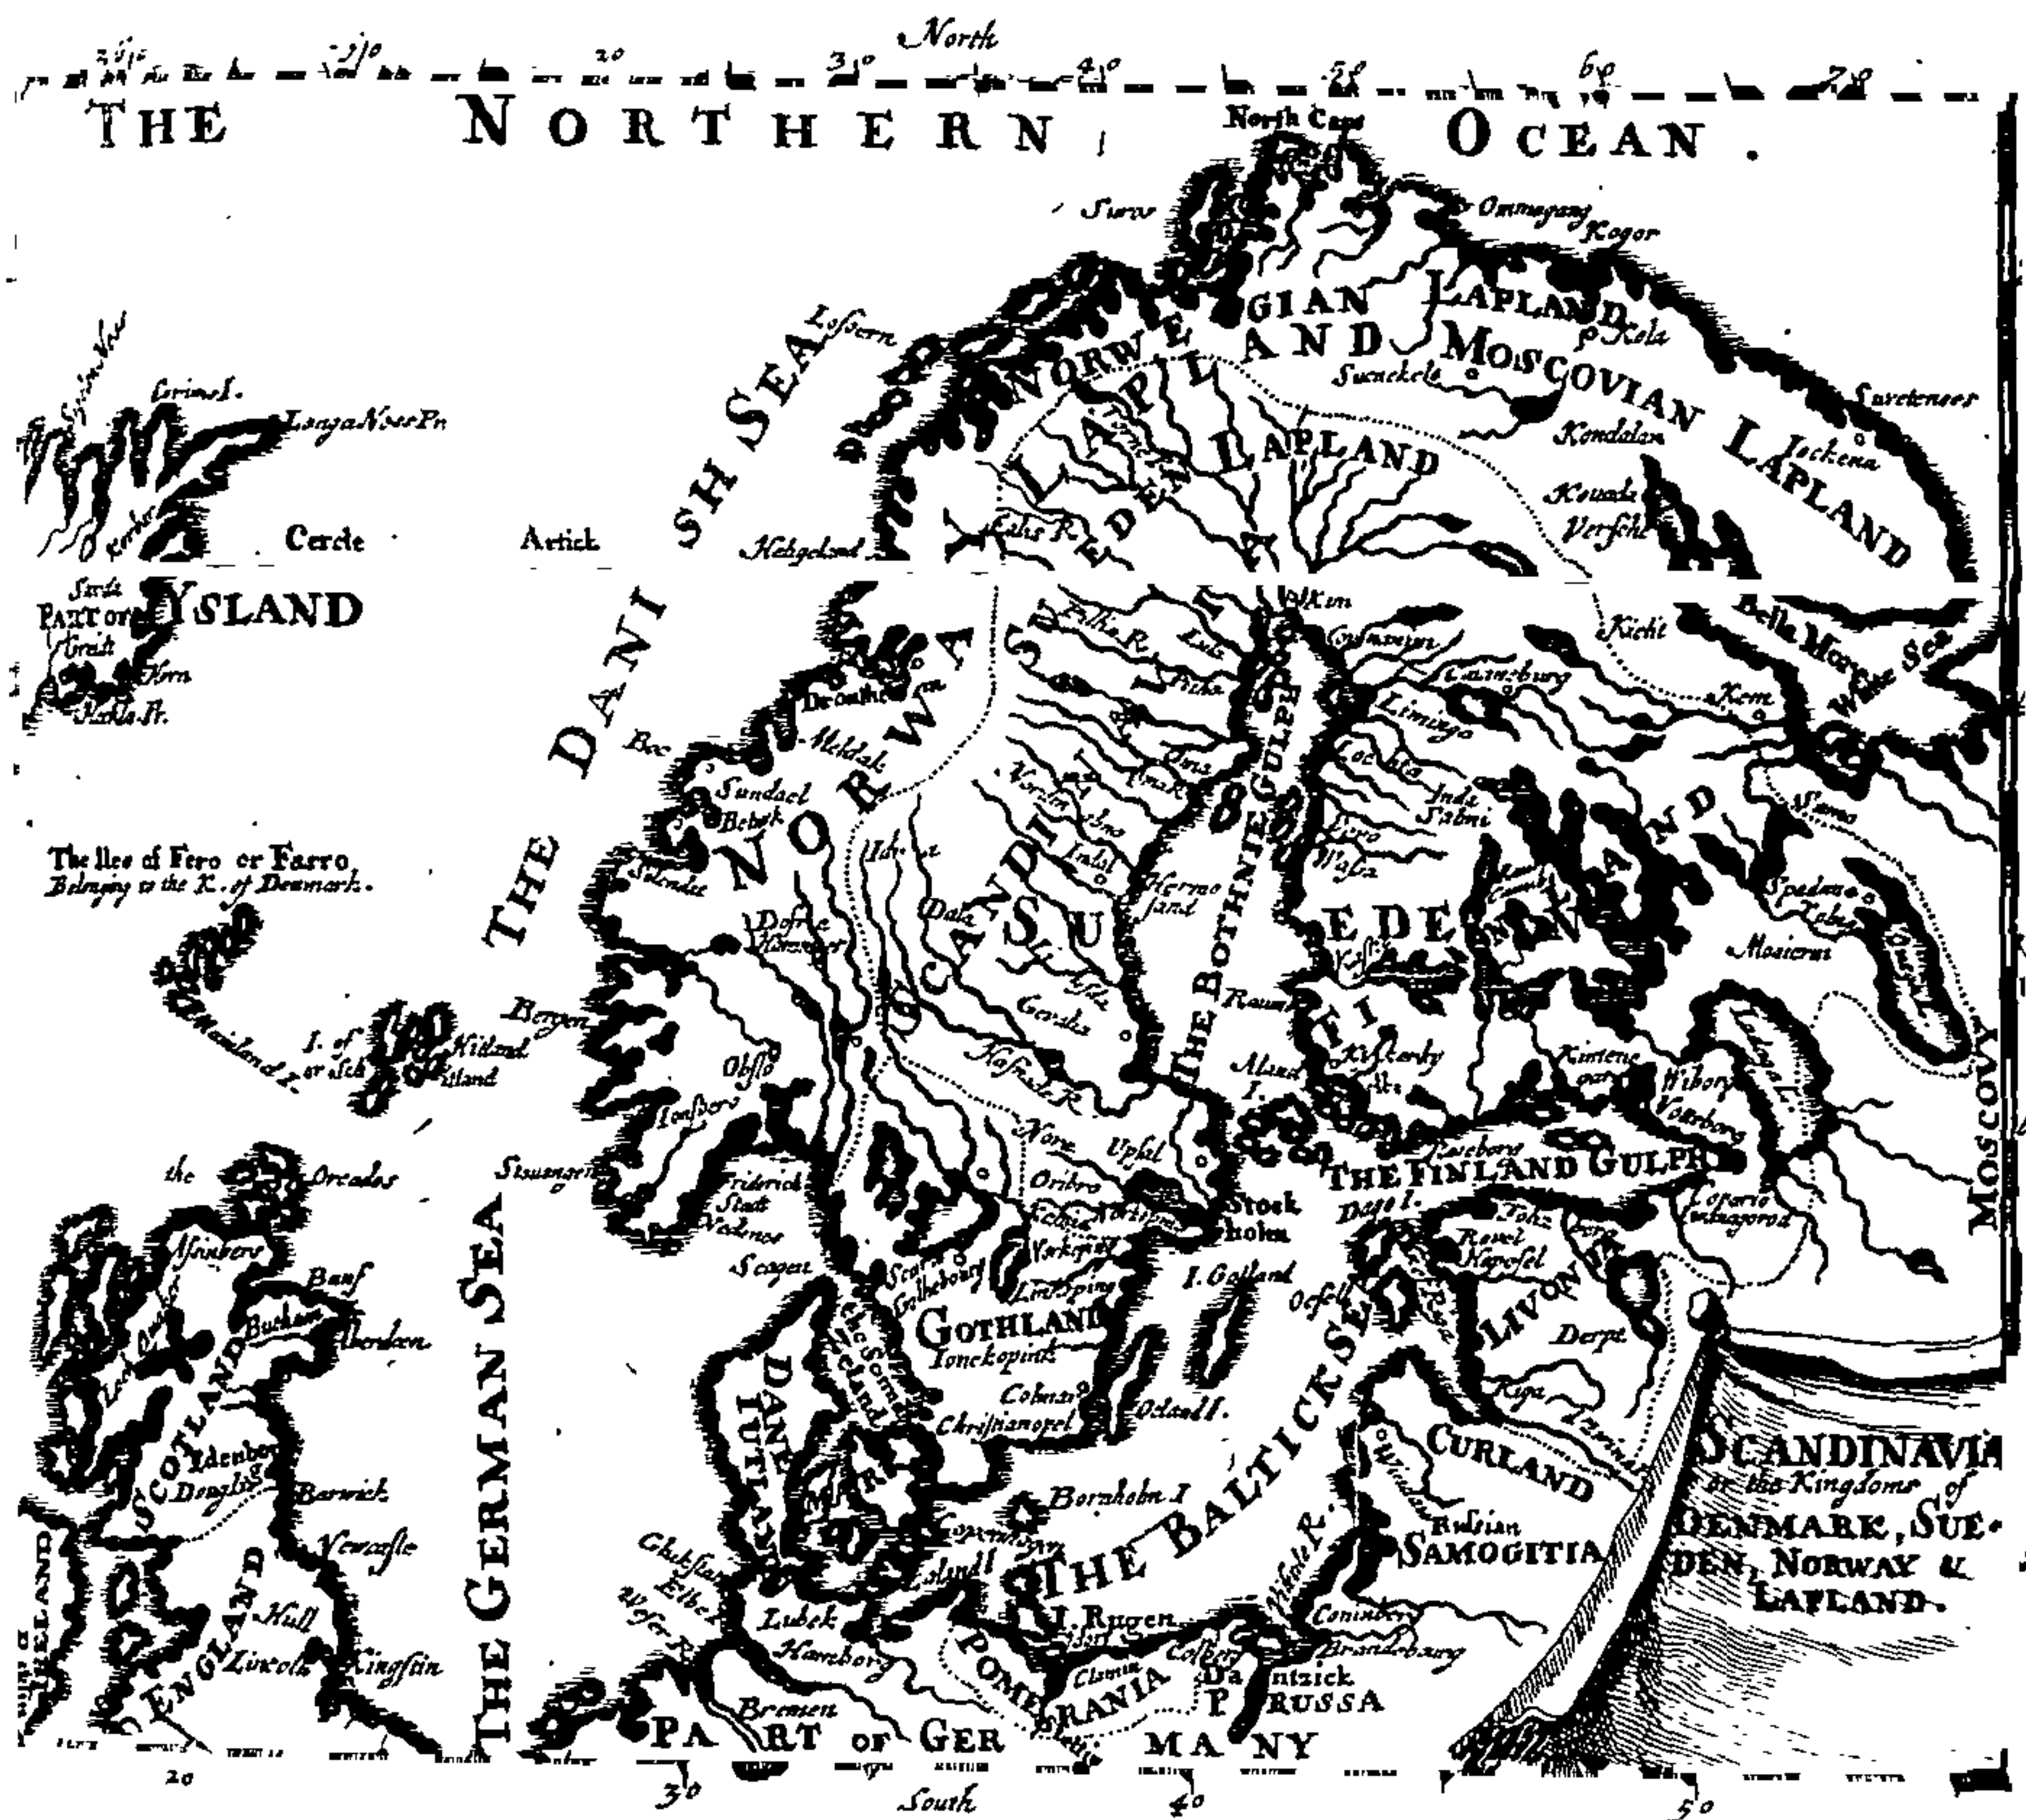

Having thus shewn our Reader all the WEST Part of EUROPE, and led him through every Region in a Natural Travelling Method, We shall in the same Method, proceed to the EAST Parts. And beginning with that nearest to BRITAIN, which is DENMARK, we shall Survey all that Kingdom and NORWAY, then proceed to SWEDEN, and thro' POLAND to MUSCOVY; and having view'd all those Countries, turn down into HUNGARY, and so through TURKEY in Europe, pass on to CONSTANTINOPLE. After which, by taking a Turn into the LESSER TARTARY, we shall have given you a Compleat View of all EUROPE.

SCANDINAVIA,

COMPREHENDING

Normy, Sweden, and part of Denmark.

SCANDINAVIA, which Pliny fallsy calls Insula incomperæ Magnitudinis an Island, whose Bounds were unknown; and which according to Diodorus and Ptolemy, was anciently call'd Balebea and Pasilea, (the latter perhaps being but a corruption of the former) comprehended all that vast Tract of Land, in form almost of a Peninsula, which is now call'd Sweden and Norway. It is the utmost Bounds of Europe, towards the North, and is Bounded with Denmark and Germany on the South, with the Ocean on the North and West, and Russia on the East, and lies between the 56th and 72d Degree of Latitude, and 25th and 60th of Longitude.

Its Soil according to Andrew Bureus, and others, in the South Parts of it, where the elevation of the Pole is not above 60 Degrees, is abundantly Fruitful, and the Air pretty Temperate: But about the middle between the 60th Degree, and the Arctick Circle, the Soil is much encumbred with Woods and Rocks, and otherwise but indifferent, and the Air very Cold. But the most Northern Parts which lie beyond the Arctick Circle, have very little of the Blessings of either the Heavens or the Earth: Only Nature has kindly provided the Inhabitants with plenty of Fish and Venison to supply the wants of Fruit and Corn.

How it came to be called Scandinavia or Scandia, and what the Etymologies of these and such like Words are, is hardly worth the Enquiry; and whether the Scannij gave name to the Place, or the Place to the People. That being neither instructing nor delightful, we shall rather proceed to give a brief Account of the ancient Inhabitants of that Country, and how they were seated in respect to one another. The Scannij or Scandij possess'd that part now called Sebenen. The Hilleviones, whom Tacitus calls Hellufij, and Amianus Marcellinus, Heilij, inhabited Haland; the Sitones, whom some have called Ganipotes, Norway; which was anciently called Nerigon. Beyond these lived the Marchio-Finni, commonly call'd Marchfennen, and the Scrito-Finni. To the East of whom were the Lappones or Lappij. To the South lay the Suiones, commonly called Suedi or Sweeds; and next to them the Guts or Guti, whose Country is now called Gutland or Gothland.

Scandinavia seems to have been much more populous of old than it is now, as appears by the frequent Expeditions that have been made from thence into other Parts of the World, which may be attributed partly to the fruitfulness of the People, partly to the barrenness of the Soil and scarcity of Provisions which forced them to seek better, as well as to the war-like disposition of the People. The great heaps of Stones, which formerly have been gathered together for clearing their Grounds, and now found in the middle of large Woods, are a probable Argument that those Places were once well cultivated.

Some Writers have attempted to give account of the Religion, Policy, Government, and way of Living of these People, but we will neither trouble the Reader with our own Guesses, nor repeat those of others. Only thus much we think, that 'tis more than probable, these People lived more like Brutes than Men, that they were absolute Strangers to all manner of Commerce, without Laws, Government, or Religion, and buried in profound Ignorance. And so we leave them and return to the Country, which, as we have said, comprehended Norway and Sweden, and a great part of Denmark. But Norway being subject to the King of Denmark, and Denmark being the noblest and better part of that Prince's Dominions, we shall give it the first Place, and afterwards Travel thro' Norway and Sweden.

DENMARK, Dania.

DENMARK is one of the most ancient Kingdoms of Europe, and is divided into two Parts by the Baltick Sea, viz. Jutland, and the Islands. The former is that which was Anciently call'd Chersonesus Cimbrica, and is now Divided into North and South Jutland. It is bounded on the North and West with the German Ocean, on the East with the Middlefart Sund, commonly call'd the Lesser Belt, and the Baltick; and on the South with the River Eyder, which divides it from Holstein. The length of it (according to Buno) from Cape Scagen to Holstein, is 212 Miles; the breadth is not alike in all parts of it, but at most does not much exceed 80 Miles. The Islands, which make up the other part of this Kingdom, are Seeland, Falster, Langeland, Funen, Laland, Bornholm, and many others of lofs Note; as Mona, Femmeren, Alsen, Arroe, Anous, Lesloe, Samsoe, &c. of all which hereafter more particularly. The King of Denmark hath also other Territories, as the Isles of Ferro and Island, &c. The Countries of Oldenburg and Delmenhorst in Germany; Christianburg, on the Coast of Guinea; a Fort call'd Tranquebar, in the East-Indies, and St. Thomas's Island in the West-Indies: But we must refer the Reader for a Description of these to the Kingdoms and Countries where they lye.

The Dutchy of HOLSTEIN, tho' in strictness it be reckon'd part of Germany, yet having been several times subject to the King of Denmark, we have chosen to place the Description of it here, preceeding to Sleswick, to which it is contiguous, as the Reader der will find after we have done with the general account of Denmark.

The AIR, tho' very cold in Denmark, is not so sharp as in some places of Germany, that are situate much more South; which may be attributed to the Sea's flowing about it, which (as in England) keeps the Air warm in Winter, and by gentle Breezes, makes it cooler in Summer. The SOIL tho' in most Places Barren and cover'd with Mountains and Woods, hath been of late much improv'd by the Inhabitants and yields the Husbandman Corn, Hay, and Pasture, wherein vast Herds of Kine are fed, and an excellent Race of Horses bred. The Rivers of Denmark cannot be brag'd of; for according to Mr. Metzworth, there is not one Navigable; the Elbe is the best, the Elbe being to be reckon'd only a Boundary, and not in this Country. There are indeed some Lakes that afford good quantities of Fish. The Forests are abundantly stock'd with Venison of all Kinds, as Stags, Elks, Wild Boars, Hares, Conies, &c. and Wild-Fowl in great plenty.

The extent of Denmark cannot be exactly set down, because of the disjunction of its Parts, and intervention of the Sea. It was much larger before Schonen, Bleeking and Holand, were taken from it by the King of Sweden, to whom these were granted for ever, at the Treaty of Ryswick, in 1697, which was again confirm'd in 1720. We have already spoken of the extent of Jutland, and the Islands will be particularly describ'd hereafter.

The Commodities of Denmark for Exportation, are very few; Cattle is the chief, which they vend to the Netherlands: But Manufacturies they have none.

The first INHABITANTS of Denmark, were the Cimbri and Teutones, who were also call'd Dani and Codani from whom (as Cluverius says) the Country derives its Name. This Kingdom is thought to have been establish'd long before the Birth of Christ, but for want of good Histories, it cannot be precisely determin'd when it began, how long each of its ancient Kings Reign'd, or what great Acts they did. According to Mr. Dauisfred, the Cimbri Inhabited Jutland, and the Teutones the Isles. It is uncertain from whence they came into that Country: But finding it at last (says he) too little for them, resolv'd to seek themselves a more convenient Seat: And about 110 Years before Christ, joyning all in one Body, they march'd into Germany, and having travers'd all that Country, divided themselves into two Bodies, and took different courses. The Teutones and Ambrones, march'd into Gaul, and committed great Ravage there. The Cimbri march'd against the Roman Army commanded by M. Junius Cyllanus, and both in that and several other Engagements, worsted the Romans, till Marius happily put a stop to the Career of their Victory, by routing the Teutones and Ambrones at Aix in Provence, as he did the Cimbri afterwards at Vercell.

After the Cimbri and Teutones had left the North, (as this Author continues) the Fure, a People originally of Germany, took possession of their Country, and chose for their King, Danus, the Son of Humblus, King of Gerbia, who Reign'd about the Year of the World, 3009. And after his Family was extinct, Hater, the Son of Attila, King of Sweden, Reign'd, whose Posterity fail'd in the Person of Haldan III. But the History of those Times being very Imperfect and Fabulous, we shall trouble the Reader no more with them.

It is evident, (as Puffendorf observes) the Danes are not so Warlike now as they were formerly. The Nobility is turn'd Lazy, and the Common have follow'd their Example.

The Danish LANGUAGE is no other than a corrupted High Dutch, being manifestly a Dialect of the old Teutonic; and High-Dutch itself is much affected by the Gentry, and ordinarily spoken in Copenhagen, and other Trading Cities.

The Popish Religion had been predominant here till the time of Federick I. Who introduc'd the Lutheran Confession into all the Churches of his Dominions, and made a League with the Protestant Princes of Germany; whose Son, Christian III. continu'd the Work, and establish'd the LUTHERAN, which has ever since been the only RELIGION profess'd here, except one French Calvinist Church at Copenhagen, and one Popish Chappel at Gluckstadt.

The form of GOVERNMENT in Denmark, mightily alter'd from what it was; formerly the State had all the solid and substantial Part of Government and management of Affairs, and left the King nothing but the appearance of Royalty. He could neither make Peace nor War without them, nor lay any Taxes on the Subject, but by their consent. They oblig'd him to Swear at his Coronation, that he would consent to his own Degrading, if without their allowance or consent, he but touch'd the Publick Treasure, which was kept in Cronenburg, and reserv'd for the extraordinary Necessities of State: And beside this, they had the disposal of all Offices and vacant Fiefs, which created them many Dependants and Creatures. But the Case is now quite otherwise, for in the Year 1660, the Crown was made Hereditary, and the King Absolute. This remarkable Revolution is particularly related by Mr. Metzworth, who tells us, that upon the finishing the War betwixt Sweden and Denmark, a large Debt remain'd on the Nation, wherefore the States were Assembled to consider of the Ways and Means of paying that, and re-establishing the Publick Affairs: But a difference happening between the Nobility and the Commons, the former pretending themselves Privileged from Taxes, and the latter having fought well during the War, and been much exhausted by it; and withal the Nobility having always exercised a sort of despotic Power over their Tenants, and now in this Assembly express'd great Contempt of the Commons, they were so far provok'd, that breaking up from the Assembly, the Commons, together with the Clergy (which compos'd the other Estate) assembled themselves in another Place, and in few Hours resolv'd to make the King a Present of an Absolute Power, and his Family the Succession to the Crown, (that was before this Elective) which they accordingly the next Day put in execution; and tho' at first the Nobility hesitated on the Matter, they also were finally comply'd, and in three Days time the Alteration was compleated: And since that, the King Governs in such manner as he thinks fit, without the contradiction of the Nobility or Senate.

For the administration of Justice, there are 4 Tribunals in Denmark. 1. The Byfoght's Court, in Cities and Towns. 2. Heredsfoght's Court, of the same nature in the Country; from both which lies an Appeal to the 3d Landstag, or general Head Court of the Province; but the 4th and Supreme Court, is the Høj-Recht, which is held at Copenhagen, and compos'd of the Principal Nobility of the Kingdom, and even the King himself sometimes sits in it. There are also a Chancery Court; a Rent-Chamber, &c.

our Exchequer, for judging the Causes relating to the Revenue; and an Admiralty Court for Maritime Affairs. But it is very remarkable, that Law-causes are the soonest decided here of any place whatsoever, none being permitted to lie above a Year and a Month, altho' it pass through all the Courts. The whole Body of the Law is compriz'd in one Volume in Quinto, and written so plainly, that every Man understands it, and may plead his own Cause. The Judges are appointed by the King, and their Salaries paid out of the Exchequer, no Fees being paid them by the Clients: And upon unjust proceeding, they forfeit half their Estate, whereof one Moiety to the Injur'd Person. Altho' the word Nobility be used, it is not to be understood as in England, for there are not above half a dozen that bear the Title of Counts or Barons; the rest, tho' without that Title, having the same Honours and Privileges. The greatest distinction seems to be the Order of Knighthood of the Elephant, which is conferr'd by the King on Persons of eminent Honour and Merit; it is a very ancient Order, but when commenc'd is uncertain; the Knights wear a white Elephant, adorn'd with 5 large Diamonds, in a blue Ribbond cross their Shoulder. They have also another Order call'd the Dane-broge, Founded by K. Waldemar I. and reviv'd by the late King, in the Year 1672. The Knights wear a White-Cross edg'd with Red, in a Red Ribbond.

The Revenues of the King of Denmark, are reckon'd by Mr. Moldsworth, to amount to 2 Millions, and 200000 Rix Dollars, each Rix Dollar being somewhat less than an English Crown. They arise by Excises, Customs, Tolls, Poll-Tax, or Fortification-Tax, the Revenues of Norway, Crown-Lands, and the Toll, or Ships passing through the Ore Sundt and Belt. This Duty for Custom on Ships is very considerable; for the Straight of the Sound, being the most frequented of any in Europe, except that of Gibraltar, and all Nations except Swedes, paying for every Ship that passes, (the Sum uncertain, because it has been often alter'd, but as near as I can gather, about 100 Rix Dollars per Ship, says Mr. Moldsworth.) Great Controversies have at several times arisen between the Danes and the Hollanders, as also the Hanse-Towns, about the exorbitant encrease of this Toll, from time to time, which produc'd several Treaties and Agreements about it: And since the Swedes have had the opposite Shoar of Schonen, the Danes have always been more moderate in their Demands.

At this time, there is a Tarrif, or Rate-Book, whereby the Duty upon each particular Goods are ascertain'd; and the Master of the Ship produces a Certificate of his Lading from the Ports he came from.

The ancient History of Denmark is so confus'd, that 'tis not possible to draw out an exact Chronology of the Succession of their Kings; wherefore omitting the earlier times, we will give a List of those since Christianity began to be preach'd here, which is as follows

A Chronological Table of the KINGS of Denmark.

of HOLSTEIN.

HOLSTEIN, Holsatia, lies on the South of the Cimbrica Chersnesus, or Peninsula of Jutland. Bounded on the East by the Duchy of Lawenburg and the Baltick Sea; on the South by the River Elbe; on the West by the German Ocean; and on the North by the Duchy of Sleswick. Its Extent from North to South, is about 50 Miles, and from East to West, about 100 Miles. The whole Country, including Ditmarsh, Wagerland, and Stormar, was formerly known by the name of Nordabblingia, or the Country Northward of the Elb: The modern Name of Holstein, being derived, (as Adam Brenensis says) from Holts-Geseten, i. e. seated in a Wood or Forest. It was at first, only a Province of the Great Duchy of Saxony, but was bestowed by the Duke, (afterwards Emperor) Lotharius, upon Adolph, Earl of Schaumburg about the Year 1114. and at last chang'd into a Dukedom by the Emperor Frederick III. Anno Dom. 1474. in favour of Christi- an, the twelfth Earl, who succeeding in the Throne of Denmark, convey'd Holstein to the Crown, and the Danish Kings are on that account reckon'd among the Princes of the Empire, tho' not obliged to repair to the Dyets. Afterwards it became an Appenage, and, with the Title of Duke, was conferr'd on Adolph, Brother to Christian III. Upon the Decease of this Duke without Issue, the Title was given to Ulrick, Brother to King Christian IV. From him have in time sprung up divers Families or Houses of Holstein, as Sunderburg, Norburg, Ansbeck, Gottorp, Ploen, and Oettingen; of these Christian Albert, Duke of Holstein Gottorp, is the chief; and claims the same Authority and Privileges as were given to Duke Adolph above-mention'd. But the Grandeur of this Prince giving Jealousie to the late King of Denmark, or rather being provok'd by his siding against him, during his War with the Swede, in 1675. he seiz'd on his Person and Country, obliging him him to renounce and resign his Right; but the Duke afterwards protesting against these Violences, and the Neighbouring Princes at length intermediating in his favour, especially his Majesty King William III. of Great Britain, the greater part of his Countries were restored in 1689: But in the Year 1700, a new War was Commenced here, by the King of Denmark, by reason of some Forts the Duke of Holstein had Built, which the King of Denmark would have demolish'd, the success of which War is in every Bodys Memory.

The Country is very Fertile, and being Seated conveniently for Trade, Holstein is reckon'd the Richest part of Denmark. The Inhabitants are of a strong Constitution and undaunted Courage, and so Sincere and Just, that Holstein Glaube, or the Fidelity of a Holsteiner has even pass'd into a Proverb.

The Towns in HOLSTEIN properly so call'd, that chiefly deserve to be taken Notice of are these, viz.

Kiel, Chilonum, a well frequented Mart-Town on the Ba'tick-Sea, so call'd (as some are of Opinion) from its situation in a Neck of Land, between the Mouths of two Rivers, the German word Kiel signifying a Wedge. It stands in the Latitude of 54 deg. 15 min. and the Longitude of 30, at the distance of 50 Miles from Hamburg to the North, and about 40 from Lubeck to the North-West. It has a large commodious Haven, well frequented by Ships from Germany, Sweden, &c. and a Castle on the Top of a Hill which secures the Town and Haven. The Industry and Traffick of its Inhabitants makes the Town Populous and Wealthy, which together with its being the Place where the Annual Assembly of the States of Holstein are held, renders this the Capital of all Holstein. It is adorn'd with a Stately Palace and other fair Buildings, particularly a Franciscan Monastery Founded by Adolph of Schaumburgh; but since the Reformation, chang'd into an Hospital: Here is also a College, and an University Established in the Year 1669. This Town suffer'd much during the War between Sweden and Denmark.

Rensburg, or Reinolsburg, stands on the River Eyder (by which it is almost encompass'd) on the Borders of Sleswick, near 20 Miles W. from Kiel. It is reckon'd the strongest Town in Holstein, having besides its convenient Situation, a strong Castle, and good Fortifications for its Defence. The Castle was Built by Gerhard II. Earl of Holstein, but the Town owes its Foundation to one Reinold, of whom there is no certain Account, except that he was a Prince of the Blood, or at least a very considerable Nobleman. Its Fortifications are lately much improv'd and render'd a la Moderne, very considerable.

Wilster, is a neat well Built Town, seated on a River of the same Name, which falls into the Stoor; about 30 Miles South-West from Rensburg.

Itzehoe, stands a few Miles East from Wilster, on the Navigable River Stoor, which furnishes it with Fish, and Traffick from abroad.

Nieumunster, about 20 Miles more Eastward, not far from the Head of the River Stoor.

DITMARSCH, lyes between Holstein Proper, and the German Ocean, having the River Elbe for its Southern, and the River Eyder for its Northern Bounds. Some write the word Deuteschmarsh, or Teutschmarch, i. e. Dutchmarsh, because the Inhabitants of this Province, are the Offspring of the ancient German Saxons, and retain'd so much of their ancient Valour as not to be made submit to the Earls of Holstein, as their Neighbours the Stor-mar-ians and Wagrians had done, until the force of all Denmark threatned them, when the Earldom was United to the Crown; nay, even then, they soon threw off the Yoke, and refused to do Homage to Christian Earl of Oldenburg and Holstein, to whom the Emperor Frederick III. had given their Country: But at last they were by Frederick II. King of Denmark, Anno 1559. assisted by the Duke of Holstein, entirely subdued, and the Country shar'd between the King and the Duke. The chief Towns in it are.

Meldorp, seated on the German Ocean. 30 Miles South-West from Rensburg, and 20 Miles North from Gluckstadt, the chief Town of the Province, and a Place of good Trade.

Heyde, a large but poor City, seated on the Border of the great Barren Sand of the same Name, which over-spreads the middle of the Country.

Lunden, near the Mouth of the Eyder, 15 Miles North from Meldorp.

Brunsbüttel, a Sea Town on the Elbe Stream, about 12 Miles South from Meldorp. And Weslingburn, near the Sea-Shoar, about the midway between Meldorp and Lunden.

STORMAR or STORMARSH, according to the signification of its Name is a Morass or Marshy Ground lying along the Banks of the River Stoor; it lyes on the South of Holstein Proper, and from it is divided by the River Stoor; and on the North of the River Elbe and Lunenburgh. The Soil here, as also in Ditmarsh is rich, and in most Places resembles that of Holland, not only in its Fertility and manner of improvement, but also in the Dikes and Banks rais'd by the Inhabitants, to keep out the swelling Ocean, which however often overflows the lower Grounds. The People here make good Advantage by the Traffick they are able to carry on by means of their Neighbourhood to the Elbe and the City of Hamburg, which stands in the Limits of this Province, but is one of the Hanse-Towns, and Governed by its own Magistrates. Having already given a Description of that City, in our Account of Germany, we refer the Reader thither, and shall now proceed to speak of the other Places of note in this Province.

Altena, a small City, remarkable for the Treaty held there between the King of Denmark, and the Duke of Holstein; stands within a Mile or two of Hamburg.

Gluckstadt, is a little City seated on the Bank of the Elbe, 30 Miles below Hamburg, and 35 Miles South of Rensburg. It was first Fortified by Cristian IV. King of Denmark, about the Year 1620. and afterwards much improv'd by his Successors, altho' its Strength soon after the Building was so considerable as to resist the Siege the Emperor Ferdinand II. laid to it, for two Years together. It is at present, a Strong-hold, and of considerable Importance to the Dane, for it Commands the Passage of the Elbe, and thereby keeps the Hamburger's in Awe.

Krempe or Crempen seated on a small River of the same Name, which a little below falls into the Stoor, about 5 or 6 Mile from Gluckstadt, is also a Place of great Strength, and reckon'd one of the Keys of Denmark. Christian IV. likewise Fortify'd this, and in the Years 1627. and 1628. it was famous for gallantly resisting a Siege and furious Attacks of Count Wallenstein for thirteen Months; and tho' at last it was forced to submit to that fortunate General, yet obtain'd very honourable Terms.

Pinnenberg stands about 20 miles South-East from Gluckstadt, and 10 from Hamburg; it is not very considerable, and only mention'd because it gives Name to a County.

Bredenberg is one of the fairest little Towns in all Denmark, and the ancient Seat of the Noble Family of the Rantzows. It was remarkable for the stout opposition it made to Count Wallenstein, who at last took it, and put all the Garrison to the Sword.

WAGEREN or WAGERLAND. Wagria, lies on the East of Holstein, is almost encompassed by the Baltick Sea, and the two Rivers, Trave on the South, and Suenin on the West. Its extent is about 50 miles from North to South, and about 30 from East to West. The Country had its Name from the Wagii, a People of Slavonia, who Conquered these Parts, and is a Fertile Land well Peopled. In the Limits of this Province stands the Hans-Town Lubeck, which being like Hamburg, an Independent State, and part of the Empire, we have already described it also in our Account of Germany. And therefore pass on to the other Places of Note here.

Segeberg, stands on the River Trave, about 12 miles from Lubeck Westward, and 40 from Gluckstadt to the East. According to Pontanus, it was anciently call'd Helberg, and took its present Name from the Castle Built by the Emperor Lotharius about the Year 1134. upon a high Hill, to Check the Slavonians.

Oldelsloh, or Odelfo, is a fair Town seated also on the Trave, about 10 miles West from Lubeck, and not above 7 South from Segeberg. It was purchased in the Year 1338. by John Earl of Wagria, for 10000 Marks of Silver, and continued for a long time in a flourishing Condition: But having suffered much in the Wars between Eric of Pomerania, and the Dukes of Sleswick and Holstein, it could never yet recover its Beauty and Grandeur.

Plezen is a Town of good Antiquity, and has been always valued for its Strength. It stands on a Lake (to which it gives Name,) that almost surrounds it, and has a strong Castle built not long since by Joachim Ernestus Duke of Holstein. This Place has the Honour to give a Title to one of the Houses of Holstein; the Valiant Prince that bears it at present, signaliz'd himself on several Occasions in the late War.

Oldenburg, a Place considerable for its ancient State, stands in the North-East Corner of Wagerland, upon the River Bockaw, about 25 Miles from Plezen to the North-East. It gives Name to a small Country, and was anciently the Metropolis of the Wagri and Venedi, two Warlike Nations, to whom the greatest part of Mecklenburg was subject. Otto the Great founded a Bishoprick here, which was afterwards Translated to Lubeck. It had a great Trade, and was exceeding Populous, but the Port being stop't up by Command of Queen Margaret, and a great Fire having destroy'd its Buildings, the Place is now not very considerable.

C H A P. III.

Of South-Jutland, or SLESWICK.

THE Dutchy of SLESWICK is an ancient Dependence on the Kingdom of Denmark, which King Nicolas I. in the Year 1128. gave to his Nephew Canute, Son of Eric, surnamed Ejegod. Margaret, Queen of Denmark, confirm'd it to the Earl of Holstein and his Successors in the Year 1338. which Earl the Emperor Lewis of Bavaria, Created Duke of Sleswick, whose Posterity failing in the Person of Adolphus in the Year 1459. Christian I. United it to the Kingdom of Denmark, and now it is partly under the Jurisdiction of Denmark, and partly Subjected to the Duke of Holstein Gottorp; but their Dominions and the Divisions of the Country are so intermix'd, that it is hard to give a distinct Account of them. The Bayliages of Hadersleben, Ripen, Flensburg, the Territory of Christianspris, the Isles of Roen, Mandoe, and the West Side of the Isle of Foer, are under the King of Denmark. The Bayliages of Gottorp, Tondern, Appenrade, Husum, Ejderstede, and Lohm Closter, the Isles of Femeren, Northstrand, Sylt, and the East Side of Foer, are under the Duke of Holstein. And Aroe and Alsen are under the Duke of Sunderburg. The Chief Towns in Sleswick are these,

Sleswick or Sleswick, Slesvicum, the Metropolis of the whole Province, is seated on a River, or rather a small Arm of the Sea Nam'd de Siye, at the distance of about 20 Miles from Kiel to the North-West. Christianity was Established here in the ninth Century, and the great Church was then Founded by King Erick Barn assisted by St. Anschar Bishop of Hamburg; and in 930 King Harald Blatand Established an Episcopal See in it; afterwards in 1064. the Slavonians invaded these Parts, ruin'd the Church, and Re-established the Heathenish Superstitions; but soon after these Foreigners were entirely expelled, Christianity Restored, and the Cathedral Re-edified. In the next Century it was a Place of very great Trade, and much frequented by Merchants from Britain, France, Spain, Flanders, &c. And even so considerable was this City that Adam Bremenfis, who flourish'd about the Year 1100. calls it Civitatem Opulentissimam ac Populosissimam. The Angles, who were great Traders here, Built the Church Dedicated to the Holy Ghost, and the Hospital adjoining. In the last Age, viz. 1556. King Frederick II. took this City and annexed it to his Dominions. Near the Walls of it are to be seen the Ruins of a Temple, which the Slavonians Built in Honour of the Deity which they worshipped.

Within a few Miles from Sleswick to the South are yet to be seen in many Places the Ruins of the famous Wall and Trench, which was Built in ancient ent times by the Danish Kings against the Incursions of the Saxons. It is thought to have been begun by Gotheric, or Gothofred, King of Denmark, to exclude the Armies of the Emperor Charlemagne, about the Year 808. afterwards improved by Queen Thyra and other Danish Monarchs, and made so strong as to be esteemed impregnable by the Councillors of Henry the Lion, Duke of Saxony, who dissuaded that Victorious Prince from attempting so hazardous an Undertaking. This Rampart was called Danewerk, and like Hadrian's Wall in England, is reported to have reached from Sea to Sea, quite across this Neck of Land.

Gottorp, the ancient Palace of the Earls and Dukes of Holslein, stands about 15 Miles West from Sleswick, on a Lake made by the River Sleye, which almost Encompasses it; the Waters whereof are clear and full of Fish; and carries Vessels of small burden to and from the Baltick Sea: This is reckoned one of the finest Seats in all these Northern Parts, having very large Gardens, beautified with curious Fountains, Walks, &c. besides a noble and spacious Park, or, rather Forest adjoining, well stock'd with Deer, wild Boar, and other sorts of Game. The Palace is a noble Building, and is especially adorn'd with a very choice Library containing a large Collection of Printed Books and Manuscripts, and among other Rarities one of singular Ingenuity, viz. a Globe of Copper Ten Foot and half in Diameter, with a Sphere, wherein the Sun moves on the Ecliptick, and all the Heavenly Bodies are carried round in exact order by the means of certain Wheels which are turned about by Water convey'd from the adjacent Mountain. Gottorp is well Fortify'd, and has a Toll-Booth, or Custom House, where Toll is paid every Year, for 50000 Head of Cattel, which pass out of Gotland into Germany.

Eckrenford or Eckelford, stands on the bottom of a Bay of the Baltick Sea, which makes a very Commodious Haven, about 10 Miles South from Sleswick, and near 20 North from Kiel. Its said to have its Name from the abundance of Squirrels found in the Neighbouring Woods, tho' with more probability, it is called so from an old Castle, out of whose Ruins it arose. It is a Town of good Trade, and one of the safest Ports on the Baltick Shoar.

Christianpris is a Sea-Town about 15 Miles South-East from Eckrenford, Seated on the neck of the Haven of Kiel, and seems to have been built to command that Passage.

Frederickstadt, is a little Town on the Bank of the River Eyder, at the distance of 30 Miles from Eckrenford to the West. It owes its Foundation to Frederick Duke of Holslein, and Sleswick, who endeavour'd to settle a Silk Trade there, and to that purpose sent a famous Embassy to Miscovy and Persia, which gave occasion to Adam Olearius, Secretary of it, to Publish an excellent Book of Travels in an account thereof.

Tonningen Seated also on the River Eyder, about 5 Miles below Frederickstadt, and about 4 Leagues from the German Ocean, is a place of Traffick, and very well Fortify'd.

Husum stands upon the Gulf of Hever, 10 Miles South from Frederickstadt, and has a good Harbour, which opens to the German Ocean; it is defended by a Citadel built by Adolph Duke of Holslein in 1581. after his Victory over the Ditmarshians: It was fortified during the late Wars, but the King of Denmark has since Demolished them.

Over against the Gulf of Husum lyes the Island of Nortstrand.

Flensburg, so called from the Bay of Fiens on which it stands, and by it receives Ships of Burden from the Baltick Sea; is about 20 Miles distant from Husum to the North-East. It is a fair City of one large Streer near two Miles in length, and the Haven so commodious that the Burghers can Load and Unload the Ships at their very Doors; the Suburbs are Guarded by a Castle that stands on the top of a Hill, and Commands both the Town and Harbour. The Situation of this Place is extream Pleasant, being a Fruitful Valley encompass'd with Hills. The Country lying between this Place and Sleswick was formerly Inhabited by the ancient Angles, that Invaded Britain, and gave it the Name of England as Ethelwetrud an ancient English Saxon Historian affirms.

Apenrade is Seated on another Bay of the Baltick Sea, about 15 Miles North from Flensburg, and is much frequented by Danish Fishermen Luxburg or Glucksburg, a little Town and Castle 4 Miles East from Flensburg, has the Honour to give Title to the Dukes of Holslein Glucksburg.

Hadersleben, a noted Sea-Port, on a River, or rather narrow Bay, that about 3 Leagues below falls into the Baltick Sea, about 30 Miles distant from Flensburg, and 15 from Apenrade to the North, is a fair well built Town, the Streets large, and the Buildings uniform. It had formerly a strong Castle on the top of a Hill near the Town, for its defence, but that was demolished by John Earl of Holslein, Son to King Christian I. who began to build a new one called from his Name Hansburg (or John's Building) which was afterwards finished by King Frederick II. This Town and Castle were twice taken by the Swedes, during their Wars with the Danes, and restored by the Peace concluded in 1658. It is also remarkable for giving Birth to Frederick III. in 1609.

Tunderen, two Port Towns, the greater and less, stand on the Western Shoar, or Coast of the German Ocean, about 25 Miles West from Apenrade, and the same distance North from Husum.

Lohm Closter stands about 10 Miles North from Tunderen.

The Islands adjacent to Sleswick, are these.

ALSEN, Situated in the Baltick Sea, over-against the Country that lyes between Flensburg and Apenrade; on it are two Towns, besides several Villages, viz.

Sunderburg, which stands on the South part of the Island, and is the ordinary Residence of the Dukes of Holslein Sunderburg: It is a good Town, and adorn'd with a stately Castle built by Christopher I. King of Denmark. This is a very strong Hold, and was able to sustain the Attack of General Wrangel, and even make him quit the whole Island.

Nordburg, Seated on the North Part of the Island, and the Residence of another Duke of the Family of Holslein, who has his Title from it. Was Built by King Sueno, called Grottenbode, about the middle of the Twelfth Century.

And on the Western Coast in the Ocean, are these Islands.

NORTSTRANT which lyes over-against Husum, with several smaller Isles about it.

FORA a little North of it, and Amrom behind it.

SYLT over-against Tunder. ROM a little North of it, with Lordsand, Minde, &c. but on these are no very considerable Towns, and therefore we shall pass them by, and proceed to the Third and last Division of Holstein.

C H A P. IV. Of NORTH-JUTLAND.

JUTLAND, which takes up all the Northern part of this Continent, was the Country of the ancient Jutes, who assisted their Neighbours, the Angles in the Conquest of Britain; and according to the Opinion of divers Learned Men, was very anciently Inhabited by Men of a Gigantick Stature, who being in this Country Language call'd Kempers, gave occasion to the Romans, who wanted the Letter K to call them and the whole Nation from them Cimbri, whence the whole Country, together with Sleswick and Holstein, Cimbrica Chersonesus, q. d. The Peninsula of the Cimbri or Kempers. The whole Country is subject to the K. of Denmark, and is divided into divers great Lordships; but according to other Geographers, we shall consider it as divided into 4 Dioceses, and note the most considerable Towns therein.

The Diocese of RIPEN takes up all the South-West part of Jutland, and has within the Districts of it (according to Baudrand) 30 Prefectures, 282 Parishes, 10 Royal Ports, and these 7 Cities, viz.

Ripen, Seated on the River Nipsick, which parting its self into 3 Streams, divides the City into so many parts, and falling into the German Ocean, makes a commodious Haven; about 50 Miles South West from Flenzburg, and 30 West from Hadersleben. It is a Place of considerable Traffic, and good Structure; the Cathedral especially is magnificent, being Built of hewn Stone, and has a Steeple of great height, which serves as a Land-mark, to the Sailers on these Coasts. This Church was Founded by King Eric Barn, about the Year 848. but the Episcopal See not establish'd till 150 Years after, when the Pagan Idolatry having again prevail'd here, was expell'd, Christianity re-establish'd, and the Church re-edify'd. It is also adorn'd with a sort of University, and Guarded by a Castle of reasonable Strength. In the Swedish War A. D. 1645. this City was taken by them, but recover'd by the Danes soon after.

Kolding, Seated on a River that falls into a Bay of the Baltick Sea, over-against the Island of Finland, near 30 Miles East from Ripen, and 70 North from Sleswick, is a City of good Trade and Strength; being the Seat of the King's Custom-house, where the Oxen and Horses, and other Cattle, and Merchandise, that pass from North-Jutland to Holstein and other Parts, are oblig'd to pay considerable Imposts; and is Fortify'd by a strong Citadel or Castle nam'd Arnsburg. The City was Founded about the Year 1268. by King Eric Glipping, in the place of an old ruinous Castle, and strengthened with good Walls, and deep Ditches, to serve as a Frontier to the Danish Dominions which at that time extended no farther. King Christian III. was so pleas'd with the Situation and Pleasantness of the Neighbouring Country, that he not only Repair'd the Castle of Arnsburg, but remov'd his Court thither, and Died in it. The Buying and Selling of Cattle by the Drovers that come from all Parts every Year, is a great part of the Trade of this Town.

Fredericksodde, is a small Port, on the Banks of the lesser Belt, 20 Miles East from Kolding; not remarkable, except on account of Gustavus's Passage over the Ice, from it to Funen, and the other Islands, in the Year 1657.

Weil, Seated like Kolding, on a little River that falls into the Baltick, and makes a large Harbour, is a compact, neat and well Built City, but not very large; about 15 Miles distant from Kolding to the North Over-against it about 30 Miles directly West, stands Warde, on a River that falls into the German Ocean, and makes it a Place convenient for Trade.

Ringkoping, stands about 30 Miles North from Warde, on a Bay of the German Sea, made by a Neck of Land, that stands near 30 Miles from North to South, between it and the Ocean, and thereby makes an excellent Haven.

Lemwick stands on the Banks of the Bay of Limford, whence it has its Name, on the utmost Northern Bounds of the Diocese of Ripen; about 30 Miles North from Ringkoping.

Hodselbro, or Holstebro, stands about 20 Miles South-East from Lemwick, and about the same distance North-East from Ringkoping. It is an Inland Town, but stands on a River which falls into a Lake, that opens to the German Ocean.

The Diocese of ARHUSEN is the South-East part of Jutland, extending about 60 Miles along the Coasts of the Baltick Sea, and contains 304 Parishes, 5 Castles or Forts, and these 7 Cities and Wall'd Towns.

Aarhus, or Arhusen, stands on the Catgar, at the Mouth of the Gude, which falls into the Baltick, 110 Miles directly North from Sleswick, 60 Miles East from Ringkoping, and Hodselbro, and about 90 Miles South from the Scager-Riff or utmost North-Land of Jutland, and 30 Miles North from the Island Funen. It is a neat and pleasant Town, Seated in the heart of Jutland, and furnish'd with all manner of Necessaries, which the Country affords them plentifully; and Foreign Commodities of all sorts are daily brought them by Shipping. It is adorn'd with a Cathedral Church of curious Architecture, and Beautified with many stately Monuments of Prelates, Noblemen, &c. But the Bishop's Palace, which was formerly a magnificent Structure, is fallen to decay. The Episcopal See was establish'd here about the latter end of the Tenth, or beginning of the Eleventh Century. This City was taken, and almost destroy'd by the Swedes, in 1644.

Horsens stands about 15 Miles South from Aarhus, on a River that falls into a Bay of the Baltick.

Randers stands about the same distance North from Aarhus, and has the same convenience for Navigation, being Seated on the River Gudden, that a few Leagues below falls into the Baltick, and is a Place of good Trade, and famous for the best Salmon in Jutland.

Helstede 15 Miles, and Gribsaa 20 Miles North-East from Aalburg, are both Towns of Trade on the Baltick; and also, Møllegaard, about 12 Miles North from Rande.

Holst stands on the same River a few Miles above it.

The Diocese of HIBURG, lies in the middle of Jutland, having Aalburg on the North, Arhusen on the East, and Ripen on the West and South. It is of smaller extent than the other Dioceses, being no above 40 Miles over, and of form near round. Although an Inland Country, it wants not the convenience of Navigation, for here are large Lakes which branch out into several Parts of this Land, and from whence by the means of the Lymford that passes out of them, and falls at last into the Baltick Sea, they receive Vessels of great Burden: Among these Bays and Lakes, there is one, nam'd, Othefundt, from the Emperor Otho, surnam'd the Great, who about 980 made an inn at this way, and penetrated even as far as this Land, and casting his Javelin into the Water, gave it the name it still retains; the best Horses in Denmark, are bred in that part of this Diocese, nam'd Salling. In this Territory are comprehended 16 Bailywicks, 218 Parishes, and 3 Castles, the Towns of chiefest note are these,

Willing, which stands in the very middle of Jutland is an exact Line, between Hedsebro to the East, and Randers to the West, 130 Miles North from Sleswick, 35 North-West from Arhus, and 35 South from Aalburg. It is a Place of great Resort, being the Seat of a High Court of Judicature, which receives the Appeals from Inferiour Courts, but none can be made from it, save to the King: It has been the See of a Bishop for above 600 Years, but the exact time cannot be fix'd, for it is a matter still disputed whether this or Aalburg be the most ancient.

This Place was anciently call'd, Cimmersburg, as being the Chief City of the Cimbri, and whence it had its present Name, is not very certain; but by a reasonable Conjecture, a late Author supposes it to be call'd so from its being the Habitation of the Pyrates, that anciently were very powerful in these Parts, and were call'd Wigs or Wikenger.

Hakker, 25 Miles North from Wiburg, and Nibe, about 10 Miles North-East from it, are both noted Horse-markers.

The Diocese of AALBURG, otherwise call'd Buglaw, is the extreme North Part of Jutland, and surrounded by the Sea, on all Parts but the South, where it is divided from Wiburg and Ripen, by the Bay, call'd the Lymford, which runs from the Baltick Sea above 100 Miles an end, and is shut out of the German Ocean, by a narrow Isthmus, made by the Sand hills on the West Shoar of Jutland; over-against the great Shoar, call'd the Jutsche Riff. It is a fruitful Country, and pretty well enrich'd by Trade. Its Length from North-East to South-West, is 130 Miles, but the Breadth is not proportionable. It is divided into 13 Bailywicks or Herriots, which contain 165 Parishes, 100 Castles, and 6 Principal Towns.

Aalburg stands on the narrow Branch of the Lymford, about 15 Miles from the Sea, 50 Miles from Arhus, and 35 from Wiburg to the North. The Bishoprick was founded about the Year 1060, but the Bishops Resided at Borlum, a Neighbouring Village till the Reformation; since when the Lutheran Bishops have had their Place here. The City was anciently call'd Burgle, and is said to have taken its present Name from the multitude of the Eels taken near it in the Lymford, and by the Inhabitants Sold to other Parts.

Tysted stands near 50 Miles from Aalburg, in the middle of a Peninsula, made by the Lymford, and the German Ocean which is reckon'd the most Fertile Part of this Diocese. The Place is noted for a kind of University in it, which was at first a Free-School only, Founded by King Christian III.

Nikeping, about 15 Miles South-East from Tysted, stands in an Island made by the Lymford, call'd Mors Insula.

Northward of Aalburg lies the Country call'd Wensyssel, whose Inhabitants are reckon'd the lustiest and hardiest of the King of Denmark's Subjects; the chief Town bearing the same Name, stands about 20 Miles West of Aalburg.

Seebj, a Port-Town on the Eastern Shoar, 20 miles North from Aalburg, stands in this Territory; as does also, Seagen, Seated on the Promontory, the most Northern Land of Jutland, which it gives Name to; and is a Place of considerable Trade, being much frequented by Merchants from all parts of Europe.

On the Eastern Coast of these Countries lie several Islands, whereof Samsoe, over-against Arhus, and Lessow, over-against Aalburg, are only worth mentioning.

Of the BALTICK SEA, and the rest of the Principal ISLANDS of DENMARK.

The BALTICK SEA, (call'd also the East Sea) wherein these Islands that make so considerable a part of the Kingdom of Denmark, do lie, was anciently call'd Sinus Codanus, q. d. the Danish Bay, and 'tis thought took its modern Name from the Word Belt, as the Streights between Seeland and Funen, and that between Funen and Jutland, are at this Day call'd. It is a very large Bay, extending from the 54th Degree of Latitude to the 66th, and washes the Shoars of Denmark, Sweden, and some part of Poland and Muscovy; by the means whereof the Inhabitants of those Countries enjoy the great convenience of Navigation, and cheap communication, with all the Maritime parts of Europe. The Passage into it is by the narrow Streights of the Belt, and the Sund, the former, as we have said, lying between the two Islands, &c. the latter is on the East Side of Seeland, between that and Sweden, which is the most frequented, and by the power the King of Denmark has over it, he raises a vast Income, by the Toll which Ships that pass in and out, pay him at his Castle of Cronenburg.

C H A P. V.

Of S E E L A N D.

S E E L A N D, or Z E L A N D, the largest and most fruitful Island in the Baltick Sea, lies in the Latit. between 55. 31. and 56. 32. and in Longit. between 31. 0. and 33. 0. being in Length about 60. and in Breadth about 40 Miles. It is divided from Schonen, a part of Sweden on the East by the Scand, and from Fumen on the West, by the greater Belt, and has Falster and Laland on the South. It is a Country in most places, very pleasant, being beset with little Hills, Woods of Beech-Trees, Rivulers and Lakes; the Soil also is very fertile, producing Rye. Oats and Barley in abundance, and the Pastures have very good Grass. Some pretend its modern Name came from the plenty of Corn, that is, See'land q. Seedland. The Lakes and Rivers are stor'd with Fish, and the Forests with Game, such as Stags, Roe-Bucks, Wild-Boars, &c. According to Cluverius, this and the Neighbouring Islands, were Inhabited by the ancient Teutones, who by a variety of Dialect, were call'd Godani, Codani, and Dani, whence the Island was anciently nam'd Codanania. In it are 340 Parishes, and these Principal Cities and Towns.

COPENHAGEN, Hafnia, ant Haunia, the Chief City of the Island, and the Metropolis of the whole Kingdom, stands in a Plain on the Banks of the Sunde, about 5 Leagues West from the Coasts of Schonen, call'd by the Inhabitants Kiobenbaum, and by the Germans Copenhaven, corruptly for Kiobsmannbaum : q. d. Portus Mercatorum, or the Merchants Haven. It is a place of no great Antiquity, having grown up from a Castle, Built about the Year 1168. by Axil Wide, the Archbishop, which being a Protection from the Pyrates, the Neighbouring Inhabitants resorted thither, and Building themselves Houses, laid the Foundations of a Town, which being improv'd by all the Danish Kings, especially Christian IV. it is become a City of the first Rank, and for the Beauty, Strength and Bulk, not exceeded by very many. It was also at several times endow'd with Immunities, especially in the Year 1443. by Christopher of Bavaria, King of Denmark; which were afterwards Ratified by King Christian III. and Frederick II. The Situation of this City is exceedingly advantageous, having on the Land side, a very pleasant Country, and on the Sea side one of the finest Havens in the World, capacious enough to hold 500 Sail of Ships, the Road without is very safe, and fenc'd from the violence of the Waves by a large Bank of Sand, and the entrance of the Port so narrow, that but one Ship can pass at a time; this is shut up every Night with a Boom, and the Passage Guarded by the Citadel on one side, and a Block House on the other. The whole City is environ'd with deep Ditches and high Ramparts of Earth, according to the modern Fortification, and on the East side it is joyn'd by a Bridge to the Island Amak. The Streets are broad, clean and neat; and tho' formerly Citizens Houses were but poorly Built, at present they are fair enough. The chief Churches are those dedicated to the Holy Ghost, S. Nicholas and the Cathedral of S. Mary, wherein the Kings are usually Crown'd: It is adorn'd with a stately Copper Spire, Built at the Cost of King Christian IV. This is a Bishop's See, and the Seat of an University, Founded by Christian I. in 1478. And not many Years ago an Academy was establish'd here for teaching all sorts of Martial Exercises, Foreign Languages, and the Mathematicks: The late King much improv'd this College, and endow'd it with considerable Revenues and Privileges. Among the other publick Buildings, the chief are the Citadel, the Observatory, call'd the Round Tower, the Royal Palace, with the adjoining Gardens, and Banqueting-House of Rosenburg, the Exchange, and the Arsenal, which is reckon'd one of the best in Europe, and much celebrated for that wonderful Celestial Globe, of 6 Foot Diameter, made by Tychobrace: The Market-Place is very spacious, and a great Ornament to the Town. The City is Govern'd by 4 Burgo Masters, one of whom is for Life. In the Swedish War Copenhagen was Besieg'd by Charles Gustavus, Ann 1659. but the City held out, and the Swedes were forc'd to leave it.

Over-against Copenhagen, on the other side the Haven to the Eastward, lies the Island of Amak, about 6 Miles in Length, which is wonderfully stock'd with all sorts of Fowl and Venison, has plenty of Corn and Milch-kine, and furnishes the Markets at Copenhagen, with Weekly Supplies. In this Island are 2 Towns, call'd Hillander Doep, and Sundbye. The Swedish Forces made a Descent here on the 9th Octob. 1658. and the next Day burnt down the Villages, but on the 10th Decemb. following, they were so warmly attack'd by the Danes, that King Charles Gustavus, and General Wrangle were forc'd to leave their Army Engag'd, and make their escape in a Fisher-Boat.

Roschild, stands at the bottom of a narrow but deep Bay, call'd the Bay of Isere, 20 Miles West from Copenhagen. It was formerly the Metropolis of the whole Kingdom, having had in it (as Lysander informs us) no less than 27 fair Churches; but the encrease of Copenhagen so near it, has drawn off its Trade and Inhabitants, and the Place is at present not very considerable. About the Year 1012. King Sueno establish'd an Episcopal See here, which is now remov'd to Copenhagen. Afterward Sueno Graatenbede Fortify'd the Town with a Wall, Ditch, and Ramparts. The Cathedral is a large old Church and famous for the Tombs of many Danish Kings, some whereof are very Magnificent: Among them stands a Marble Pillar, on which Margaret Queen of Denmark hung the Whetstone that Albert King of Sweden scornfully sent her to sharpen her Needles; but the Jest cost him dear, for this Heroine defeated and took and detain'd him Prisoner seven Years and made him renounce his Right to the Kingdom of Sweden. It is still a Town of some Trade, and is notable for a Treaty of Peace concluded in it between the Swedes and Danes in 1658.

Elfsenur, Elfsenre, Helchenoor, Helsingor or Helsingor, (as it is variously Written) is so nam'd q. d. Haen Oor, i. e. an Ear in the Neck, as being at first only a Watch Tower, Built on the Neck, or Straight of the Sea, call'd the Sund, or Ore Sundt; It is so probable that the Castle of Helsingburg, on the oposite Shoar derives its Name from the same Origin: Between these 2 Forts pass all Vessels that Trade in the Baltick, so that this Street next that of Gibraltar, may be esteem'd the most frequented of any in Europe. Elfenore stands about 15 Miles North from Copenhagen, and is defended by the Neighbouring impregnable Castle of Cronenburg, which commands this side of the Sound, as Helsingburg does the other. It was Built by Frederick II. of Free-stone brought from Gothland. Every Ship that passes this Straight must strike Sail at Cronenburg, and come to the Town to Compound for the Custom, under a Penalty of Confiscating his Vessel and Cargo. Charles Gustavus King of Sweden, took it in the Year 1658. and restor'd it at the Treaty of Copenhagen, in 1660.

Fredericksburg, about 12 Miles W. from Elfenore, and 20 N. from Copenhagen, is a stately Castle and Royal Palace seated in a pleasant Wood. It was a Monastery, and turn'd into a Castle by Frederick II. whose Son Christian IV. not only compleated the Building, but adorn'd it with Painting, Statues, and the richest Furniture; to which his Successor Frederick III. still added, so that it has the character of one of the finest Palaces in Europe, and is the King's Place of Retirement for Pleasure.

Helboek stands about 18 Miles West from Roskild, at the bottom of a Bay, whereby it has the advantage of a small Traffick.

Kallenburg stands on the Western Coast of the Island, just over-against Copenhagen, at 50 Miles distance from it, and 35 from Roskild, to the West. It is a Place of considerable Traffick, and has a very safe and commodious Harbour; formerly, being a small Village Inhabited by Fishermen, it was call'd Hermig, till Esbern, Brother to Axel or Absalom Huid, Archbishop of Lunden, about the middle of the 12th Century, rais'd it to the dignity of a City, and beautified it with a Church, Castle and other publick Edifices:

Ringstede, Seated near the middle of Seeland, about 15 Miles from Roskil to the South, and 15 from Koge to the West, is a Place of the greatest Antiquity in Seeland, except Roskild, and has been honour'd with the Interment of many Danish Kings, particularly Waldemar I. and Eric the Pious; But it being a Place of no Trade, is not at present very considerable.

Sor, Scor or Sora, is seated in a pleasant Woody Country, 7 Miles from Ringstede. About the middle of the 12th Century, Absalom Huid, Archbishop of Roschild, and Bishop of Lunden, Founded a fair Monastery here, and endow'd it with large Revenues for the maintenance of Learned Men, by the encouragement whereof, Saxo Grammaticus collected Materials, and compos'd his excellent History of the Danish Kings. Esbern the Archbishop's Brother enlarg'd it, and augmented the Revenues by the addition of 14 Villages. Afterwards King Frederick II. remov'd the School he had establish'd at Fredericksburg, for the Education of young Noblemen to this Place, and from a rich Popish Monastery, it was converted into one of the noblest Free-Schools in the Reform'd part of Christendom; to which Christian IV. added Professors with proper Salaries, to teach Academical Learning: And also constituted an Academy; with Masters to instruct young Gentlemen in all sorts of martial Exercises. So that Sora became a considerable University, and well Endow'd, the Lands of the Demolish'd Nunnery of Mariebo in Laland, having been given to it in 1621. But at present all its Revenues are possess'd by the King; and tho' he sometimes talks of restoring them, the Professors of Copenhagen will use their interest against it, and Sor is still likely to remain only a pleasant Country Town.

Koge, is a small but very Populous Town, Seated on a small Bay of the Sound, 20 Miles South from Copenhagen. It is enrich'd by Traffick, which consists chiefly in Corn and Fish, and the Country about it is remarkably Pleasant.

Prestoe, a Trading Town, stands on the Bay of the Sound, on the South side of Seeland, over-against the Island Mona, 30 Miles South from Koga.

Warienburg stands about 10 Miles South-West from Prestoe, on another small Bay, over-against the Island Falster, and is a Place of some Trade.

Nestued stands 20 Miles North from Warienburg, on a small River that falls into the Belt.

Skelskor stands on the West side of Seeland, on the Coast of the Belt, 30 Miles North-West from Warienburg, and 35 West from Koge.

Korfor, about 8 or 9 Miles North-West from Skelskor, stands on a Promontory or small Cape, that jers out over-against Funen, and makes a good Haven on the North side of it. This was the Place that Carolus Gustavus, King of Sweden, first arriv'd at with his Fleet in 1658. when he Invaded this Island.

C H A P. VI.

Of F U N E N.

F U N E N, or F I O N I A, the next considerable Island of Denmark, lies on the West of Seeland between that and Jutland, being separated from the former by the Straight, call'd the greater Belt on the East, and from the latter by the Streight, call'd by the Inhabitants the Medilsafund, or the lesser Belt: It is about 50 Miles long, and 40 Miles broad, and produces plenty of Corn, even enough to export abroad, and has Pasture for a vast number of Cattle that are bred here; whereof the Horses are much esteem'd. This Island is an Appenage of the eldest Son of the King of Denmark; and the Government of it is one of the most considerable in the Kingdom. Here are 264 Villages, 4 Garrisons, and these 4 considerable Towns.

Odenfee or Ottenfee, the chief City, stands in the middle of the Island, about 80 Miles West from Copenhagen, 70 North from Sleswick, and about 20 Miles South from the beginning of the Straight of the Belt. The annual Sessions of the Nobility and Ma-

Magistrates are held here, as were formerly the general Conventions of the Realm, till the Crown was made Hereditary in the Year 1660. It is a handsome Town, the Buildings being fair, and the Streets broad and uniform; the Town-House is a stately Structure, and stands on a very spacious Market-place. Among other publick Buildings are 2 fair Churches, dedicated to St. Francis, and St. Crute, a Danish King, who was Martyr'd in this City. An. Dom. 1086. and whole Body was found in this Church, as the Workmen were Repairing the Quire, in the Year 1582. the Coffin that contain'd it was of Copper Gilt, adorn'd with precious Stones, and bore an Inscription, declaring who it was. This is an Episcopal See, Erected in the Year, 950. and in the Town-Hall the ancient League between the Crown of Denmark, and the Dukes of Helflein, and Sleswick was renew'd by Frederick II in the Year 1575.

Nuburg, or Nyburg, Seated on the Eastern side of the Island, over-against Korsør in Seeland, 15 Miles East from Odense, is one of the Principal Towns in Funen, and the usual Passage from thence to Seeland;

And has a capacious and safe Haven, wherein Ships of the largest Burden may ride at Anchor. It is also well Fortify'd, and has been anciently honour'd with the Residence of the Danish Kings, and the Session of their Parliaments.

Schwinburg stands on the South-East corner of the Island, 30 Miles South from Nuburg, and has a large and commodious Harbour; it is famous for the Passage of the Swedish Forces over the Ice (in the Year 1658.) from hence to Seeland.

Foberg stands also on the South Coast, 10 Miles Westward from Schwinburg.

Affen stands on the western Coast over-against Hadersleben in Sleswick, and 30 Miles South-West from Nuburg.

Middlefar lies also on the Western Shore, 25 Miles North from Affens, and is the common Passage from this Island to Kolding in Jutland. Charles Gustavus, King of Sweden, led his Army from Jutland, over the Ice to this Place, on the 13th of Jan. 1658. and overrun all the Island.

Sophiaodde stands about 10 Miles North from Middlefar, just over-against Frederickodde in Jutland.

C H A P. VII.

Of Langeland, Laland, and the rest of the smaller Islands of D E N M A R K.

LANGELAND, so call'd from its long narrow Form, lies on the South-East of Funen, in length about 30 Miles, but in breadth hardly 8. It is a fruitful Soil, and adorn'd with many Noblemens Seats; on it are 16 Parish Churches, and a strong Fort, call'd Frænker. The chief Town is Ruskoeping, Seated on the Western Coast, over against Schwinborg in Funen; between which lies the small Island Tassing. And a little to the West and on the South of Funen, over-against Foberg, lies ARROE, another small Island.

LALAND, or LAWLAND, lies on the South of Seeland, from which it is separated by the narrow Streight of Gronsfond, or Golderfond, as it is written in the Maps, and takes its Name from its low Situation. Its extent is about 30 Miles from East to West, and 20 from North to South, having a Rich Soil that produces Corn and Pasture in abundance. In it are 4 Herriots or Lordships, and 4 good Towns, among which Naxkow that stands on a Bay that opens to the Belt, is the Principal, and is well Fortify'd. Newstadt, was once famous for a noble Monastery, Founded there Ann. 1268. And the Nunnery of Mariebo, mention'd in the description of Sor, was sometime as remarkable as any Place in the Island.

FALSTER adjoyns to Laland, being divided by only a narrow Bay, and lies on the South of Seeland (whence it is separated by the Gronsfundt) just over against Warienburg. Its length from North to South, is about 20 Miles. but the lower part of it is but very narrow; on the North part it is about 16 Miles broad. Its Soil is very fruitful, and much Corn is sent from hence to Mecklenburg, and other parts of Germany. It is divided into 2 Bailiwicks, viz. Narre-Herriot and Synder-Herriot; and has several Towns, among which the Principal are, Nykoping, Seated on the West side of the Island, one of the most pleasant and best Built Towns in the whole Kingdom, and stiled by Dr. Heylin, the Naples of Denmark. Stubkoping, Seated on the North Coast, and a Place of Trade, and the usual Passage from Seeland.

MON, MEVN, MONEN, or Mona, lyes on the North-East of Falster, and South of Seeland, 15 Miles in length, and about 5 or 6 in breadth. It is a Landmark to the German Vessels, that frequent these Coasts. And because of its Situation was formerly given to the Admiral of Denmark, being a convenient Place for his Residence. Its chief Town is Stekoe or Stege, which was remarkable for the gallant defence it made against the Lubeckers in 1510. And the Valour of the Inhabitants of the whole Island was signalized in 1659. when they defended themselves better against the Swedes, than the other larger Islands had done.

FEMEREN, Seated on the Coast of Wagerland, from whence it is parted by a very small Channel; tho' it be but a small Plot of Ground, has always been esteemed of great importance, being one of the Keys of Denmark on the side of Germany. And on that account King Christian IV. in the Year 1628. caused the chief Places on it, especially Borg, to be strongly Fortify'd.

SAMSOE, lyes on the North of Funen, and a few Leagues East from the Coast of Jutland over-against Aarbusen. It is an Island of small extent, ye:

yet has been lately Erected into a County by the late King Christian V. in favour of Madam Mofe, a Citizen's Daughter of Copenhagen, on whom that Prince begot two Natural Sons, and Created the Mother Countess of Samsøe.

HUEN, or, as others Write it Ween, is a small Island Situate in the Streight of the Sound between Seeland and Schonen, to the North-West of Copenhagen, and was formerly famous for the Castle or Tower of Uraniburg, wherein that noble Danish Baron Tycho Brahe made his Astronomical Observations; but it is now demolished: He had also here a deep Dungeon called Stelliburg, from whence he could view the Stars in the Day time.

The Island of BORNHOLM lyes very remote from Denmark, viz. 25 Leagues from Seeland to the East, and not above 6 Leagues from the Coast of Schonen to the South-East. It is about 20 Miles in extent, from North to South, and about 12 from East to West, and of an Oval Form. It was anciently call'd Boringia, Borunda, and Holma, and is said to have been discovered by Thielorans, the Son of a Futland Prince. It is a Place of great Importance for its Situation and Fruitfulness; and once belonged to the Archbishop of Lunden, but Christian II. took Possession of it in 1524. being absolutely necessary for the Fleet which he designed against the Swedes. Which Usurpation George Sesteberg, who was then Archbishop, opposed with all his Power, but in vain, for he was at last forced to fly into Germany, to avoid the effects of the King's displeasure. During the late War this Island was often wasted by the Swedes, to whom it was surrendered by the Treaty of Roschild, but the Danes have since redeemed it by the Exchange of several Lands in Schonen. Sandmyck on the Northern Coast, and Rottum on the South-western, are the chief Towns, besides which, there is the Town of Nexoa, and the Castle of Hammerhusen, and several Villages.

There are many other small Islands on the Coasts of Futland and Zeeland, but they are not considerable enough to deserve a particular Description.

Besides the Continent and Islands above-mentioned the King of Denmark is possessed of the two Counties of OLDENBURG and DELMENHORST in Germany, which lye separated from Holstein by the Dutchy of Bremen.

OLDENBURG is a flat Moorish Country lying in the Circle of Westphalia, between the Dutchy of Bremen on the North-East, East-Friesland, or the County of Embsen on the West, part of the Bishoprick of Munster to the South, and the German Ocean on the North: It is about 50 Miles in length, and 25 in breadth. The chief Town which gives Name to the County, is seated on the River Hunte, at the distance of 50 Miles from Embsen to the East, and 30 from Bremen to the West. It is well Fortify'd with Walls and Ditches, and a strong well built Castle. The Houses are very mean, but the Place hath a pretty good Trade by means of the River, which falling into the Wefer, Ships of small Burden can come up to the Town. This Country is noted for an Excellent Breed of Horses, introduced some Years ago, by Anthony Hunter, the last Count, descended from Wittikind the first Duke of Saxony, whose Line intirely failing in the Year 1676. this County fell to the King of Denmark, who is descended from that Family.

The small County of DELMENHORST adjoyns to Oldenburg on the South-East, the chief Town of the same Name, stands on the River Dilma, 16 Miles East from Oldenburg, and 14 West from Bremen: It is strongly Fortify'd, but otherwise not very considerable.

NORWAY, Norwegia.

Consult the Map of Sweden.

NORWAY has its Name from its Situation towards the North Pole; for Nordweg in the Language of that Country, signifies the Way of the North. It was anciently according to Pliny, call'd Nerigon, and by others, Nordmania. As the Story commonly goes, Norus, the Son of Humbius, King of Sweden, was the first King, who by his prudent Management and good Example, reclaim'd and Civiliz'd the Barbarous Sitones, the first Inhabitants of this Country. After his Death, they fell to parting the Kingdom among themselves, and so were engaged in Civil Wars; and at last being either weary of shedding their own Blood, or forc'd for want of Provisions, they left their own Country, and betaking themselves to Piracy on the Seas, became formidable Conquerors. They Ravag'd the Coast of Friesland and Britain, and after many Engagements, wherein they always came off Victorious, France at last became the Object of their Ambition; and having enter'd the Mouth of the Loire, after the Death of Charlemaign, they Sack'd the Cities of Nantes, Tours, and Angers; but from thence Marching into Gascogne, were repuls'd, and entirely defeated. A Party of them went into Italy, expecting the Fortune of the Goths, but proceeded no further than the Surprising some Places in Liguria, and return'd to France, where they joyn'd a new Herd of their Countrymen, and under the name of Normans, became considerable; insomuch, that in the time of Charles the Simple, they settled themselves in Neustrie, from them since call'd Normandy; which that Prince was obliged to surrender to them. Some Historians are of Opinion, that Charles encourag'd them, in order to have their assistance against Eudo, his Rival for the Crown, for he Married his Daughter Giselle, to Rollo, their General, who became Duke of Normandy, and was succeeded by his Posterity. The Posterity of Norus being extinct, Sudlager, Son-in-Law to Gram, King of Denmark, came to be King of Norway. Harald, Surnamed Herslegir, Reigned about the Year 978, and after the Death of Olaus, the last of his Race, the Crown of Norway was convey'd to Denmark, by the Marriage of Haquin their King, to Margaret, Daughter of Waldemar III. King of Denmark. A. D. 1357. Since which time, Norway has been Governed by a Vice-Roy of the King of Denmark. The Norwegians have made several attempts to set up Kings of their own Nation, particular Hermelaus Huldphat, but to no purpose, and those Conspiracies have only tended to the encreasing of their Chains. The best account we can give the Reader of the Succession of these Kings, the History of this Country being very obscure, is here set down.

NORWAY is a long, but narrow (in comparison of its length) Tract of Land, on the West-side of Scandinavia, between Sweden and the Ocean; having on the Eastside a long Ridge of Mountains, call'd at different Parts by different Names, as Fillefield, Dofre-Field, Rund-Field, Daar-Field, &c. But they are commonly by Historians stiled the Defrine Mountains: These divide Norway from Sweden, and the Ocean washes all the Western Coast, as also the Southern, and Northern. It lies between 58 and 72 Deg. of Lat. and 24 and 52 Deg. of Long. Its length is about 800 Miles, reckoning from the North Cape in Finmark, to the Naze, in the mouth of the Baltick, but its breadth is not above 100 Miles, and in some parts not near so much. The Southern Part is reasonably Temperate, but the AIR is very Cold, and the Land produces very little Corn or Fruits; its Wealth consisting chiefly in the vast Forests of mighty Fir-Trees, whose usefulness in Building makes the Merchants of England, Holland, and other Nations flock thither to Buy 'em: The Earth hath Mines of Iron, Copper, and some Silver; which with Pitch and Tar, and Fish, (whereof great quantities are taken on the Coasts) are the COMMODITIES of this Country.

The INHABITANTS are generally Strong and Courageous: And (as Puffendorf observes) undergo all sorts of Hardship, with more Vigour than the Danes, being inured to Severity by their Soil and Climate: But the Danes keep them under, and give 'em no opportunities of shewing their Strength, and have gradually removed all their ancient Nobles, to prevent any potent Faction to arise. The King being being careful to keep this Country to himself, especially on account of the good Revenue he receives from it, which is reckon'd by Mr. Moldsworth, at seven hundred Thousand Rix Dollars per Annum. The Norwegians are good Seamen, and are therefore Cherish'd by the Hollanders.

The Christian RELIGION is said to have been planted here about the middle of the Tenth Century, and the Reformation was introduced by the Danes, so that Lutherism is the profess'd Religion.

Norway is divided into five Dioceses or Prefectures, viz. Those of Aggerhusen or Obflo, Bergben, Drontheim, Wardbus, and Babus, and several Islands.

The Map of Norway is joyn'd to that of Sweden, and contained in the same Plate.

The Province of AGGARHUSE is the South-East part of Norway, being seated between the Province of Bergben on the West, the Confines of Sweden on the East, the Mouth of the Baltick Sea on the South, and the Government of Drontheim on the North; its extent from North to South, is about 250 Miles; and from East to West, in the South part, about 180, but grows narrower Northwards, till it ends in a Point, being in form of a Cone. The Land is Mountainous and Woody, but the Vallies are reasonably Fruitful, water'd by many Rivers and Lakes, that pass through the Country and fall into the Baltick. It is divided into six smaller Governments, viz. Agdesinden, Hallingdal, Hammer, Hennemark, Romericket, and Tellemark, which Ortelius takes to be the ancient Thyle. The chief Cities and Towns are,

Anflo, or Obflo, call'd also Christiana, seated at the bottom of a narrow Bay, at the distance of about 14 Leagues from the Baltick Sea, and 50 Leagues from the Scagen Cape in Futland to the North, in the Latitude of 60 Deg. 30 Min. and Longitude 28. 30. is the Seat of the chief Court of Judicature for the whole Kingdom, as also an Episcopal See. The City owes its Foundation to King Harold, Contemporary with Sueno Estbrith, King of Denmark, who about the middle of the eleventh Century, kept his Court here: But the Old Town being destroy'd by Fire, Christian IV. King of Denmark and Norway, Re-built it, about the Year, 1614. and gave it the Name of Christiana by which it is at this Day generally called, and is a Place of good Trade for Fir-Timber, Pitch, &c. The Cathedral is Dedicated to St. Alward, and in it is shewn the Sword of Hugin, one of their ancient Kings, the Hilt whereof is of Crystal, and is a notable curiosity for Art, as well as Antiquity. In this City the Nuptial Rites between King James VI. of Scotland, afterwards King of England, and Ann the Daughter of Frederick II. King of Denmark, were Solemniz'd on the 23d of November, 1589. that Prince having taken a Voyage hither, upon the Lady's being driven back by contrary Winds when she first set out for Scotland, Aggarhusen, or Aggerhuslot, from which the whole Province takes its Name, is a strong Castle seated on the other side of the Bay, over-against Anflo, from which it is distant but a few Leagues to the West. It was remarkable for the brave resistance it made against the Swedish Army, in the Year, 1567, which Besieged it hotly for 18 Weeks together, but was at last beat off, and forced shamefully to Retire, Frederickstadt stands on another Bay of the Baltick, called the Catgate, and the Mouth of the River Glammen, that rises in Drontheim, and having passed through the Province of Aggerhusen, here falls into the Sea, and by the convenience thereof affords the Town a good Trade. It is seated about 60 Miles from Christiana to the South-East, and about the same Distance from Futland to the North. It had its Name from Frederick III.

Saltzberg stands on the River Drammen, about 20 Miles North-West from Christiana; it is a good City, having a considerable Trade from the Neighbouring Copper and Iron Mines.

Tonsberg, seated on the Bay of Obflo, and Scheen but a few Miles from it, about 40 Miles South from Saltzburg, are both Places of good Trade, by means of the same Mines, and a Silver one that was discovered in the Reign of Christian IV.

Hollen, seated on the Lake Nordsee, 15 Miles North-West from Tonsberg, is remarkable for its Church, which is cut out of the Rock called Vear, and has a Burying place on the Top of it; it is very ancient, and supposed by Olaus Wormius to be Originally a Heathenish Temple.

Hamon, formerly a Bishop's See, which is now united to that of Ahus, stands on the River Glamman, 30 Miles North from Ahus or Christiana. Near this City in a little Island call'd Moos (as Olaus Magnus reports), a monstrous Serpent always appears before any notable Revolution in the State of Norway.

The Northern part of this Province is very Mountainous and not very Populous, so that there are few Towns of Note that way.

The Province or Government of BERGHE N, takes up all the West-side of Norway, lying between the Government of Aggerhus, and the Coasts of the Ocean, from the Cape call'd the Naze in the South, up to the Latitude of 63. 0. where the Government of Drontheim begins. It is divided into the Governments of Bergben and Staffenger: Which are again subdivided into smaller Prefectures. Those under Bergben are, Nord Holand, Sud Holand, Hardanger, Isfjordal, Lerdal, Soghne, Sund-fiord, Nord-Seid, and Sundmarland.

Bergben, an ancient and famous Sea-port, mentioned by Pomponius Mela and Pliny, stands on a Bay of the Ocean, which makes a commodious Harbour, in the Latitude of 61. 0. at the distance of 140 Miles from the Naze to the North, and as many from Christiana to the West; it is almost surrounded with Hills, from whence it has its Name. It is reckon'd the largest, most beautiful, and most populous City of Norway, as also the principal Mart and Magazine for Merchandize; divers sorts of Furrs, vast quantities of Hides, Tallow, Fir-Timber, &c. being brought hither by the Neighbouring Provinces and Shipt off to Foreign Parts. The Inhabitants likewise, drive a great Trade in Stock-Fish, which are taken on these Coasts. The Buildings were formerly very mean, but through the flocking of Strangers hither, on account of Trade from Hamburg, Lubeck, Holland, England, &c. The Place is so Enriched, that the Houses are not only new Built, but it is also Beautified with a fair Exchange. The Haven is surrounded with Hills, which render it secure from the Weather, is very Capacious, and deep enough to receive Ships of above 200 Tuns, and is defended by a strong Castle. The City is endow'd with many Privileges, and honour'd with the Presence of the Vice-Roy. All which render this the Metropolis of the Kingdom of Norway.

Ejde, about 15 Miles East from Bergben, and Bischofsware, 10 Miles from Ejde, are reckon'd the other Principal Towns in this Government.

Staffenger or Stavanger, is seated in a Peninsula, upon a spacious Bay of the Ocean, full of small Islands, at the distance of 90 Miles from Bergben to the South, and 150 from Christiana to the West. The Harbour is very large and safe; and tho' the City be but a small one, it is the See of a Bishop, and the chief of a Government, which has under it the Prefectures of Carmen, Ryfoll, Feren, and Dalerne: And is Guarded by the strong Fortrefs of Dofwick, which stands to the Sea-ward, about 2 Miles from the Town.

The Government of DRONTHEIM is the largest part of Norway, being near 500 Miles in length, and in some parts, 120, tho' generally about 80 Miles in breadth. It lies along the Coasts of the North-Sea, from the 63d to the 69th Degree of Latitude, having some Provinces of Sweden and the Swedish Lapland on the East, the Ocean on the West, Bergben on the South, and Wardhuys on the North. The Country is mountainous, Woody, Cold and Barren; so that tho' it be large, the Towns are not very considerable. For Civil Government, it is divided into the Prefectures or Districts of Nordmer, Succendal, Fosserlen, Stadt-burghen, Nordbiegden, Nomandal, Faderogen, Maffen, Sorduel, Strinden, Seber, Lenstrand, Bynes, Schoenien, Guldael, Mesdael, Oorekedael, Singefegan, Rendebone, Obdael and Salten. The Provinces of Jemmland and Hardendal, were also part of this Government before they were united to the Crown of Sweden by the Treaty of Bratow; and indeed the whole Country was given to the Swedes by the Treaty of Roschild, in 1651. but was restored by the Treaty of Copenhagen, in 1660.

Drontheim or Truntheim, is seated on the Coasts of the Northern Ocean, at the Mouth of the River Nider, from which it was anciently named Nidrosia, in the Latitude of 65. 20. about 300 Miles North-East from Bergben. It is an Archiepiscopal See, and was heretofore the Royal Seat of the ancient Kings of Norway, being then a large City, but is at present not considerable, having suffer'd thro' many Conflagrations, particularly in 1522. when the stately Cathedral, dedicated to St. Olaus, which surpassed in Beauty all the Churches in the Northern Countries, was almost destroy'd. The Palace also is fallen to decay, and the Walls, Bulwarks, and Trenches in Rubbish; so that the City is rather now a Village, the Port is incommodious, the Entrance being obstructed by Rocks, and in general the Place not at all considerable, except for the Seat of the Governor, who usually Resides in the Castle.

The country round about is very Barren, and even Wood is so scarce, that a little beyond the City, the People are fain to use Fish-bones for Fuel and divets Utensils.

Leestrand stands about 10 Miles South from Drontheim.

Stronden stands 40 Miles South-East from Drontheim, on the River Nider.

Sceerdale stands on the other side of the same Bay, about 7 Leagues North-West from Drontheim.

Opdael and Sunpael, both seated at the bottom of a narrow Bay, about 10 Leagues from the Ocean, and 100 Miles South from Drontheim.

Romsdalen stands at the bottom of another Bay, 70 Miles South-East from Opdael, 170 from Drontheim.

Solendael, about 30 Miles South-West from Romsdalen, stands on another Bay. They are all Places of some Trade, but we find nothing remarkable of 'em in Authors.

Northward, on the extream Point of this Province, near the Confines of Wardhuys, and the Latitude of 69. 20. stands Melanzar, upon the Bay of the Ocean, and about 80 Miles from it stands Scoett, which are the two chief Towns of the Northern Division of Drontheim, called the Government of Salten.

The Province of WARDHUYS, or the Norwegian Lapland, and Finmark, or as it is called by the Natives Tsakemark, is the most Northern Part of Norway, and bounded on the North and West by the the Ocean, on the East by the Muscovite Lapland, and on the South, by the Sweedish Lapland. Its extent is near 300 Miles from East to West, and 200 from North to South. From the Northern Situation we cannot expect much produce from the Earth, or plenty of People, and consequently no Cities, or considerable Towns that make any Figure in History. It was anciently Inhabited by the Finni, of whom Tacitus says, They are a People extraordinary Savage, and miserably Poor, have neither Horses, Arms, Houses, nor Home, but feed upon Roots, and such Provisions as their Bows and Arrows can procure, and are clothed with the Skins of Wild-Beasts. And to this day they live very Rudely, but their Manners being much the same with the Sweedish Laplanders, we shall refer the Reader thither, intending to speak more particularly of those People who are so different from other Nations.

Wardhus, the Seat of the Governor, is a Castle, with a Street, or small Town of Cottages, Inhabited by Fishermen on the Island Warda, which lies on the North-East point of Norway, near the Confines of the Muscovite Lapland; the Castle is old, and not very well Fortify'd, and the Island is but small, being only 14 or 15 Miles in Circumference, and separated about 2 Leagues from the Continent. The Inhabitants of this and the Neighbouring Islands, live upon dry'd Stock-Fish, and have neither Bread, nor Beer, but what is brought them from other Parts, by the English and Dutch Ships, that come this way to trade.

On the Island Maggero, (the Land whereof makes the North Cape, or Promontorium Rutube) as also on Saroy and Trommes, 2 other Islands more Southward, are Churches for Christian Worship, but on the Continent the People are stupid Idolaters.

We have said above, that the Government of Wardhus comprehends Finmark, and the Norwegi-an Lapland, 'tis necessary to subjoin that the Maritime part of it is Finmark, and the upland and Southern Part is Lapland.

There are a great number of Islands lie along on the Coasts of all this Kingdom, but they are not considerable enough to deserve naming. Only Iseland must not be omitted.

ISELAND, so call'd from its extreame Coldness, is an Island seated in the Northern Ocean, about 150 Leagues Eastward from the Coast of Norway, and 120 Leagues North from Scotland. The Arctick Circle, and the First Meridian, both pass over this Island, so its Latitude and Longitude is easily guess'd at. Its extent from East to West, is near 300 Miles, and from North to South, about 150. The Soil (tho' the most South part of the Island, lies in near the same Latitude with Drenthaim, where the Land is barren) is reasonably Fertile, and affords Pasture for Horses, Cows, Oxen, and other Cattle: The Air is extreame Cold but very Healthy, and the Inhabitants are strong, and remarkable for their Long Lives, without knowing the use of Physick. In the Woods are White Bears, Foxes, Hares, and other Game, of whose Skins the Inhabitants make their Cloaths. On the Coasts they catch Whales, and so great a quantity of other Fish, that when they want Hay, they dry 'em to give their Cattle. The Mountains are always cover'd with Snow; three of them are Vulcano's, and continually cast out Fire, the most remarkable whereof is Mount Hekla, which cannot be approach'd nearer than 2 Leagues without Danger; at the Foot of it are several Mines of Brimstone. Such shoals of Ice with melted Snow, come down from the Mountains, that frequently Trees and Cattle are carry'd away. The People are honest, and reckon'd the best and faithfullest Servants in the World; and in the Towns the Christian Religion, according to the Lutheran Perswasion is profess'd, but in the ruder Parts Idolatry is still follow'd. The chief Town is Skalholt, which stands in the Latitude of 66. 0. to the North-East of Mount Hekla, the other chief Towns are Hola on the North Coast. Beredt on the South-East, Hamer on the South-West, &c. In the Castle of Bested the King's Vice-Roy Resides. The Houses are Built of Wood, and cover'd with the Bark or Trees, Skins of Turfs; the Villagers upon the Sea-Coasts, and along the Rivers remove their Houses, as their occasions or inclinations lead them. The Havens of Hanfroid and Keplaurch, are much frequented by Ships from Hamburg, Denmark, England, and other Parts, who bring the Inhabitants the Necessaries they want, and receive in Exchange Tallow, Hides, Butter, Whale-Oil, dry'd Fish, and Sea-Horse-Teeth, which is as good as Ivory.

The Islands of Sebetland and Fero, which lie between Iseland and Scotland, in the same Latitude with the Government of Berghen in Norway, are also Subjects of the King of Denmark.

The King of Denmark also reckons Groenland and Greenland, part of his Dominions; but of it we shall speak hereafter, when we come to treat of the Countries lying about the North and South Poles.

And now having pass'd from the Naze to the North-Cape, and taken a sufficient View of Norway, we might pass on to Sweden, but that the little Province Bahus, tho' belonging to the Swede, was formerly part of Norway, must be mention'd here.

The Province or Government of BAHUS, is the most South part of Norway, a narrow Tract of Land lying on the Coast of the Baltick Sea, about 90 Miles in length from North to South, between the Baltick on the West, Sweden on the East, Aggarhusen on the North, and Gothland on the South; its Breadth is not proportionate to the Length, being in some parts 10. in none above 25 Miles Broad. The Country is Fruitful enough, but a great part of it is taken up by the large Lakes of Water. It formerly belong'd to the King of Denmark, till by the Treaty of Roschild, in 1658, it was given to the Swede, to whom it is now Subject; and is divided into two Parts, Inlande and Wyehsiden.

Bahus, which gives name to the Province, is a strong Castle built on a small Island, made by the River Trolbeta, 150 Miles South-East from Aggarhusen, 9 Miles from Gotteberg, and 20 Leagues East from the Cape Scagen in Jutland. It was Founded by Harquin II. King of Norway, in the Year 1309. and stands on a steep Rock near the Banks of the River, and was reckon'd a sufficient Bulwark against the Swedes and Ostrogoths. It was Surrender'd with the Province to the Swedes, in 1658. but afterwards in 1678, when the Danes assembled to retake it, it withstood their Assaults.

Maeistrand, or Maeisterland, is the only remarkable Town in the Province of Wyehsiden, and is seated on a Rocky Peninsula, about 10 Miles below Bahus; it is a place of great Trade for Herrings, and other Sea-Fish; and is guarded by a strong Castle, Built at the Mouth of the River Wener, which not far from thence falls into the Catgat. It was taken by the Danes, in 1676. but restor'd by the Treaty at Fountainbleau, in 1679.

SWEDEN;

SWEDEN, Suecia.

SWEDEN, which takes up the greatest part of Scandinavia, is Bounded with Norwegian Lapland, and the North Sea on the North, the Baltic Sea on the South, Muscovy on the East, and Denmark and Norway on the West. The extent of the whole Kingdom is about 800 Miles from North to South, and much about the same from East to West. It lies between the 56th Degree and the 68th Degree of North Latitude, and from the 30th Degree to the 60th Degree of Longitude, in form resembling a Vine-Leaf, whereof the Gulf of Bothnia, is the Stem, round which the several parts of Sweden are seated; Gothland and Sweden Proper on the West-side, Finland and Livonia on the East, and Lapland on the North. The Country is very much cover'd with Lakes and Forests, and some parts with craggy Mountains; however, the other parts of the Land afford Corn sufficient for the Inhabitants, Pasture, and Breeds of Horses and Cattle: Westmania and Dalecarlia, have rich Copper-Mines, and even one Silver one. Finland produces Pitch, Tar, and Fir-Timber, and Vermelandia good good store of Masts for Shipping. So that the Native COMMODITIES of Sweden, are Copper, Iron, Tar, Pitch, Hemp, Masts, Deal-Boards, &c. which are so useful Commodities, that all the Nations of Europe resort hither, and bring the Inhabitants every thing they want in Exchange. But the Commodities whereof they make the greatest account, are Copper and Iron, which they Manufacture, and send abroad in great Quantities.

The Seas which wash the Coasts of Sweden, are the Ole Sund, vulgarly call'd the Sound: The Baltick or East-Sea: The Gulf of Bothnia, or as the Natives call it the B. d. m. Zee, and the Gulf of Finland. The Sund divides Gothia and Scania from Denmark; the Baltick flows between Schonen and Germany, and also between Gothia and Poland. The Bothnic-Bay, lies between Sweden and Finland, and the Gulf of Finland, divides Finland from Livonia; and has also communication with the Lake Ladoga, by means of the River Nieva, which passes out of that Lake into the Gulf. The Lakes within the Land are almost innumerable, but those of greatest extent, are the Wener Watter, and Meller in Gothia, the Ula Treft in Bothnia, the Jende or Pejende in Finland, the Onega and the Ladoga on the Confines of Finland and Muscovy, and the Peibus in Livonia. Into these and the other Lakes, run a vast number of Rivers, which not only afford the Inhabitants abundance of Fish, but also a conveyance of their Copper and Iron, as the Forests do Fuel, by means whereof their Mines are wrought with great facility; and do in effect produce more of these Metals, than any other Country in the World.

The INHABITANTS are undoubtedly the Progeny of the ancient Goths, (of whom more hereafter) with great mixture of Germans, and other Neighbours. They are in their Temper Honest, Frank and Plain-Dealers, of a large Stature, and handsom Proportion; the Gentry Travel much, and usually speak several Languages. The Women are also Handsom, Modest and Neat, and the Common People Laborious and Frugal.

The ancient Bards that sung the Stories of their Heroes, and the Runic Character in which they Wrote them, are curious Speculations to Learned Critics; but otherwise Learning was anciently in no great Vogue in Sweden; but since Christianity has been Establish'd, many Universities have been Erected, and several Persons of eminent Learning, have flourish'd here.

The LANGUAGE of Sweden is a Dialect of the ancient Teutonic, and not exceedingly different from the German and Danish; it is the harsher of the three; and therefore in Writing, the Dutch is rather used by the Gentry.

The ancient Inhabitants of Sweden, were gross Idolaters in Religion, till about the Year 800, at the Request of Bjorno then King of Sweden, the Emperor Charles the Great, sent able Ministers to Preach Christianity here, which was continu'd with application, but the Establishment of it not Effect'd, till 1017, at which time Ethelred King of England, sent Sigrid, Archbishop of York, on this Pious Work, who Baptiz'd the King Olaus, and caus'd Churches to be built in every Province, and Christianity continu'd to be exercis'd, but with the intermixture of Popish Superstition, till about the Year 1530. King Gustavus I. establish'd the LUTHERAN REFORMED RELIGION, which has ever since been profess'd here.

The various and different Accounts of Authors, about the Primitive State of Sweden, is so distracting, that it is almost impossible to draw a coherent Story out of them, and therefore we chuse rather to give the Reader a Summary of what is related on this Subject, by the Judicious Historian Samuel Puffendorf, who was a Native of this Country, and an able Statesman, and may be suppos'd to know the Affairs of his own Country. The Swedish Historians, says he, have out of their ancient Monuments, shewn the World that this Kingdom is the most ancient in Europe, and that this Country was after the Deluge, sooner stored with Inhabitants than the other parts of Europe: Nevertheless, it is very uncertain who were the first Inhabitants, and at what time they first settled here, as likewise whether they were immediately Govern'd by Kings, or whether the Fathers of Families had the chief sway among them, till the Regal was grafted on the Paternal Power. The Names and Deeds of their Kings, and the times of their Reigns are also not easie to be determin'd, for the List of these Kings which have been Published, is not so Authentick, but that it may be call'd in question. And as to the Transactions of those Times, they are most of them taken out of ancient Songs, and fabulous Legends, and some of them out of the Allegorical Traditions of their ancient Poets, or Scalders, which perhaps have been wrongfully Interpreted by some Authors. And Johannes Messenius in his Scandinavia Illustrata, does not stick to say, That the old Swedish Historiographer Johannes Magnus, did strive to outdo in his History, the Danish Historian, Saxo Grammaticus. Joh. Magnus, makes Magog the Son of Japhet, and Grandson of Noah, the first Founder of the Scythick and Gothick Nations, and says, that from his two Sons, Sveno and Gether, or Gog, they had their Names. He Relates, that after this Family was extinguish'd, Sweden was for the space of 400 Years, under the Government of certain Judges; and that about 800 Years after the Deluge, both the Kingdom of Swedes and Goths, were united under Beiricus, who in Person planted a Colony of the Goths beyond the Seas, after having Conquer'd the Ulmiruges, who then Inhabited Prussia; from whence he extended his Conquests over the Vandals. A considerable time after, these Nations settled themselves not far from the Mouth of the Danube, near the Black-Sea; from whence having undertaken several Expeditions both into Asia and Europe, at last in the Third and Fourth Centuries after the Birth of Christ, they enter'd the Roman Provinces on this side the Danube, and carried their Conquering Arms into Italy and Spain, where they Erected two Kingdoms. But the former part of this Relation is contradicted by Messenius, who also rejects the the List which Joh. Magnus has given us of the Kings before our Saviour's Birth, alledging that the times before Christ's Nativity, are all invol'd in fabulous Narrations, as to those Northern Parts: And that most of these Kings liv'd after the Birth of our Saviour. But the Chronology even of the first Centuries after our Saviour, and the Genealogies of those Kings being uncertain, we shall only give the Reader a List of the Names and Succession of those that Reign'd Since Christianity began to be Preach'd here; which according to Puffendorf is as follows.

Eric XIV. his Son.	1559.

He introduc'd the Titles of Earls and Barons, and made them Hereditary.

On account of Disorders between him and the Family of the Stures, a Rebellion was fomented, and he at last Depos'd.

John III. his Brother, Succeeded. 1568.

He made his offers at restoring Popery, but was oppos'd in it by his Brother Charles, Duke of Sudermania.

Sigismund his Son, King of Poland, Succeeded. 1592.

But Charles his Uncle, Administer'd the Govern-ment. Sigismund endeavouring to introduce Po-pery, caused a Defection in Sweden, and was in the end Depos'd, and his Son also Excluded.

Wherefore his Uncle,

Charles IX. Son of King Gustavus, Succeeded 1604.
Gustavus Adolphus, his Son. 1611.

An Heroick Valiant Prince, whose Actions are sufficiently known. He was Kill'd in the Battle of Lutzen in Germany, Nov. 6. 1633.

Christiana his Daughter succeeded. 1633.

She resign'd the Crown to her Nephew,
Charles Gustavus, Duke of Deux Ponts, who was accordingly the same Day Crown'd King of Sweden, June 6. 1654.

Charles XI. his Son, succeeded. 1666.

Charles XII. his Son, now Reigning. 1697.

Tho' the Swedish and Gothick Nations have been anciently famous for Warlike Atchievements. and the Men are very fit to endure the fatigues of War, yet were their Military Affairs in former Times but very indifferently order'd, their chief Force consisting in the Boors, till Gustavus, and his Successors, with the assistance of some German and Scotch Officers and Soldiers, have introduc'd such Discipline as that now they do not stand in need of Foreigners, except upon an emergency to make up the number of Men, where- with they are not overstock'd, especially since the late great Wars under Gustavus Adolphus. The late King has put their Forces both Horse and Foot into a bet- ter condition than ever they were before, and they are maintain'd with very small Charge to the Crown, the Foot being maintain'd by the Boors, and the Horse have for the most part small Farms of the King's assign'd them, the Rents whereof are their Pay; so that only the King's Guards are paid out of the Treas- ury. For the Naval Security, the Kingdom of Sweden has a considerable Fleet of Ships of War, the Station whereof was formerly at Stockholm, but of late Years a new Harbour has been made at Bleking, whence the Ships may put to Sea with more expedition and convenience. And on the Land-side Sweden is Guard- ed with inaccessible Rocks towards Norway, and strong Forts towards Muscovy and Poland.

Of the Government of S W E D E N.

The Crown of Sweden was anciently bestow'd by Election of the Great Men and Estates of the Realm, on such Person of Merit as they thought fit, till the Kings of Denmark by their Interest. having got into the Throne, and used the Swedes with too much se- verity, especially Christiern II. who committed great Cruelties on them, Gustavus Ericus a Nobleman of great Courage and Honour, and Nephew to Steno Sture, the preceeding King, appearing at the Head of the remainder of the Swedish Nobility that had escap'd the Massacre, drove out the Danes, and in Reward had the Crown conferr'd on him, and made made Hereditary to his Posterity; this happen'd in the Year 1544. And tho' the Estates at that time reserv'd to themselves the Power of chusing again, if the Race of that Prince should happen to fail, yet when Queen Christina, the only Issue of Gustavus Adolphus, resign'd the Crown, and nominated Charles Gustavus, Duke of Denx Ponts, her Nephew, to succeed her, it was not oppos'd: And furthermore in the Year 1680. in the Assembly of the Nobility held at Stockholm, it was agreed, That in case of the King's dangerous Sickness he might nominate his Successor without the Advice of the Five Great Officers, which was confirm'd by the Estates. And in 1682. it was further Enacted, That Daughters should succeed in case of failure of Male Issue.

The Estates of the Realm (whose Authority was much greater before the Form of Government was chang'd) consists of Four Orders, viz. The Nobility, the Deputies of the Clergy, Burgesses and Peasants. The Nobility have for their President the Marshal of the Dyet, appointed by the King; the Clergy the Archbishop of Upsal, as Primate of the Kingdom: The Burgesses usually the Burgomaster of Stockholm; and the Peasants chuse a President or Speaker of their own.

Next to the States General, the Senate is the most considerable Body in the Nation. The Number of Senators is not fix'd; they are sometimes more, and sometimes fewer, as the King sees fit. In Queen Christina's time they were Forty, in Charles Gustavus's time Twenty Four, and now they are but Twelve. They were formerly call'd Senators of the Kingdom, but now the King's Senators. Formerly they were Judges of the King's Actions, but now they are no more than Witnesses. And altho' he takes their Advice in Matters of State, they are not permitted to prescribe. The King alone has the Power of establishing Imposts, of regulating the Magazines for the Soldiers in the Provinces, of Coining Money, and Digging Salt-peter Mines. He names all Magistrates and Officers, and has Power, in case of necessity, to take the tenth Man in the Nation for the Wars; tho' oftentimes he takes Money for them, and hires Foreigners, which is the Reason there are so many Strangers, especially Germans, in the Swedish Armies.

The Five Officers of the Crown are, 1. The Drotset, or Chief Justice. 2. The Lord High Constable. 3. The High Admiral. 4. The High Chancellor. And 5. The Treasurer. The Drotset is the Chief Officer in the Nation, and was formerly a kind of Vice Roy; he has the Honour of putting on the King's Crown at the Coronation: He presides in the Supreme Court of Justice, to which there is Appeal from all other Courts. The Constable presides in the Council of War, and has the Inspection of the Discipline and managing the Army, and has many great and honourable Privileges. The Admiral's Power is also very great; he has the ordering of the Fleet, and the naming all the Officers in it, with many other Privileges. The Chancellor is the Chief Officer in the State for administering Justice under the King, for rectifying Abuses, and giving necessary Rules for the good of the Publick; he keeps the great Seal, and dispatches all Affairs of State. The Lord High Treasurer has the Administration of the King's Revenues, pays all the Officers of the Kingdom, and presides in the Chamber of Accounts: He has also many Privileges.

The REVENUES of the KING of Sweden were anciently so small, that they were hardly enough to maintain him, consisting only of Duties on Exported and Imported Goods, and the Discovery of Mines. But the Riches and Revenues of the Church, that have been Seculariz'd since the Reformation, have contributed much to the Increase of them: And the Resumption of Lands granted away from the Crown by preceding Kings, to the Nobility and Gentry, have rais'd them to the highest Degree. This was done by the late King, in the Year 1680. and tho' it was much oppos'd by the Assembly of the Estates, yet the lower Orders consenting, the Nobility were fain to comply. Besides these Branches the King has a third part of all Fines, when they do not exceed 40 Marks of Silver; and if they do, he takes it all. He has also all Forfeitures upon account of High-Treason; and the Estates of Strangers, if their Heirs do not appear within a Year after their Death.

The Administration of JUSTICE in Sweden is perform'd in Five several Courts. 1. The King's Chamber, wherein all superior Causes, as between Noblemen, Senators and Publick Officers are heard, and Appeals receiv'd from inferior Courts: The Drotset sits as Judge here. 2. The Court Marshal, wherein all Matters relating to War are determin'd: The Grand Marshal of the Army is President of it, and has two Assessors that are Senators or Officers of State to assist him. 3. The Court of Chancery, where all Mandates, Edicts, Commissions, &c. in the King's Name are made: The Chancellor of the Kingdom presides in it, and is assisted by Four Senators, Assessors, and the two Secretaries of State. 4. The Court of Admiralty, which transacts all Business Marine: Here the High Admiral presides, attended with Four Vice-Admirals, as many Senators, and several Captains Assessors. 5. The Court of Exchequer for deciding Controversies relating to the King's Revenue: The Grand Treasurer presides here, and has four Assessors, two Senators, and two Noblemen to assist him.

There are other Courts that judge all common Causes, both Civil and Criminal, without Appeal; they were Establish'd by King Gustavus Adolphus, and planted in convenient places all over the Kingdom. Each consists of a President, who is a Senator, and a certain number of Lawyers and Gentlemen for Assessors. These Parliaments are held at these Cities, viz. 1. Stockholm. 2. Jenekoping in Gothia. 3. Abo, in Finland. 4. Derpt, in Livonia. And 5. at Wismar, in Germany.

The Dominions of the King of Sweden, consist of these Eight Parts.

I. SWEDEN properly so call'd, lying between Norway on the West, and the Bothnick-Bay on the East.

II. GOTHLAND, on the South of Sweden.

III. FINLAND, on the East-side of the Bothnick-Gulf.

IV. LIVONIA, on the South-side of the Finnic Bay.

V. INGRIA, on the East of Livonia.

VI. Swedish LAPLAND.

VII. Several ISLANDS in the Baltick Sea.

The particular Description of the Kingdom of S W E D E N.

Of S W E D E N properly so call'd.

SWEDEN properly so call'd, is bounded on the North with Lapland, on the South with Gothland and Schonen, on the East with the Bothnick Bay, and the West with the Dofrine Mountains; extending 300 Miles from North to South, and 200 from East to West; a Fruitful, but in some Parts, Mountainous Country, abounding with rich Mines of Copper, and affording Conveniencies of Water and Fuel for working them, It is divided into Eleven Parts, viz.

1. Uplandia, a small Province, but the most Fruitful; it is surrounded by the Baltick Sea on the North-East and South-West, having Sudermania on the South, Nericia and Westmania on the West, and Gestrucia on the North.

2. Sudermania, divided from Upland, on the North, by the Lake Meller, hath East-Gothland on the South, Nericia on the West, and the Baltick on the East. This is the place of Building Ships.

3. Westmania, lies on the West of Uplandia, having Nericia on the South, and Dalecarlia on the North. The Soil is Fruitful, and the Mines afford Steel, Iron, Copper, Lead and Sulphur.

4. Nericia, lies between the three above-mention'd. It abounds with Mines.

5. Gestrucia, is North of Upland, along the Coast of the Bothnick Gulf. It has some Iron Mines, and good Corn.

6. Helsingia, North of Gestrucia, having the Bothnick Gulf on the East, and Dalecarlia on the West. The Soil produces Corn and Pasture; and the Inhabitants are chiefly employ'd in Breeding Cattle.

7. Dalecarlia, an inland Province on the West of these Two, and bounded on the West by Norma; it is a large Tract of Land from North to South, but is a Woody, Barren, and somewhat Mountainous Country; however 'tis considerable on account of the Mines of Copper, Allum and Vitriol, with which it abounds.

8. Medelpadia, on the North of Helsingia, and formerly part of it, is a smaller Country of the like Soil, only more Woody and Mountainous.

9. Angermania. And 10 Jemptia, lie on the North of Medelpadia and Dalecarlia; the former is a very Fruitful and Pleasant Country, the Soil Rich, and producing plenty of Corn, but withal somewhat Mountainous; it has the Bothnick Gulf on the East, and Bothnia on the North. Jemptia is more Mountainous, and lies on the West of Angermania.

11. Bothnia, call'd West-Bothnia, the opposite Land in Finland being the East-Bothnia, is a narrow Tract of Land lying along the Shoar of the Bothnick Bay, and on the other Parts surrounded by Lapland. It is a Sandy Barren Soil, but has store of Fish.

Stockholm, Holmia aut Stocholmia, the Metropolis of the whole Kingdom, being the Seat of the King: Is situated on the side of the Lake Meller, on several small Islands like Venice, in the Latitude of 59. 0. and Longitude of 35. 0. but few Leagues from the Baltick Sea, near 300 Miles from Copenhagen to the North-East, and as many from Christina to the East. It is encompass'd, especially toward the Sea, with steep craggy Rocks, as also with high Mountains and Lakes, which render its Prospect somewhat uncouth. It was heretofore a Place of little Note, Founded by King Birgerus in 1291. and took its Name from the great quantity of Timber us'd in Building it, Stock signifying Wood, and Holm an Island. In 1407. it was consum'd by Lightning, and some Thousands of People perish'd in the Conflagration. By the Tyrannical Oppression of Christian II. King of Den- mark, the Inhabitants fled away, but were call'd home again by Gustavus I. in 1529. In 1552. a Fire happen'd, which by reason of the Wooden Houses, consum'd the greatest part of the Town. But it was soon Re-built upon Piles, partly with Stone and partly with Brick; so that it is at present a Beautiful City, and has for these two Ages been the Seat of the Swedish Monarchs. Its Haven which opens into the Baltick, is of dangerous accels, by reason of the Rocks; but within is one of the most Commodious in Europe; for the Ships of the largest size lie close to the Kays, and so secure from the Wind, that they need no Anchors or Cables to hold 'em: Its Entrance is defended by two Forts, and the City is guarded by a strong Castle. It is the most considerable place for Trade in the whole Nation, and one of the chief Emporia of Europe: Corn, Honey, Wax, Fir-Timber, Copper, Iron, Steel, Lead, Pitch, Tar, Hides and Tallow, are the Commodities they Export. The City consists of six small Islands, and two Suburbs; the Islands are Stockholm, Riddersholm, Konungsholm, Heglandsholm, Schipsholm and Ladduggarland, which are joyn'd together by Bridges. In the first, which is properly call'd the City, stands the Palace of Kiddarichuset, where are held the Assembly of the States, the Grand Market-place, the Citadel and Castle, which is the King's Palace, the King's Chappel, and the Magnificent Church of St. Nicholas, Founded by King John, on Marble Pillars, and cover'd with Copper. In the Castle, besides the stately Apartments of the King and Queen, are the Senate House, the Court of Chancery, the Criminal College, and a famous Library. In Riddersholm, or the Knight's Island, are many pleasant Gardens, and the Cloister Church, wherein the two late Kings Gustavus Adolphus, and Carolus Gustavus, lie Interr'd. Heglandsholm is inhabited chiefly by Mechanicks. In Schipsholm are the Courts of Admiralty, the Arsenal, and other Magazines of Naval Stores. Ladduggarland is fill'd with Houses of Pleasure, Gardens, and the King's Warren, Aviaries, &c. And in the Southern Suburbs live the wealthy and industrious Merchants, who have a stately Exchange, and drive a great Trade to all the Neighbouring Nations.

Upsal stands on the River Sall, (which falls into the Lake Ekolen) 40 Miles from Stockholm to the North. It was heretofore the Capital City of the Kingdom, and Seat of the King, and is at present the only Metropolitan See, and an University. The See was Establish'd in 1148. and the Archbishop is esteem'd the first Person in the Kingdom, next the Royal Family: There are seven Suffragan Bishops, and many Superintendents that exercise Episcopal Jurisdiction under him. At the Reformation, the Learned Johannes Magnus, who was then Archbishop, not submitting to the Lutheran Confession, was forc'd to retire to Rome. The University begun at first in the Year 1306, by a College of four Professors; but in 1476. being honour'd with large Privileges by Pope Sixtus IV. and endow'd with large Revenues and Immunities by King Charles IX. and Gustavus Adolphus, it became as considerable as any, and is styl'd by Authors, Academia Insignis & Illustris. The Cathedral Church is cover'd with Copper, adorn'd with a Clock of admirable Workmanship, and honour'd with the Tombs of divers Princes. Here is also a Royal Palace, wherein the late Queen Christina Abdicated the Crown; and a Castle of Modern Fortification seated on a Neighbouring Hill, which commands the Town.

Engköping stands on the Lake Meller, at the Confines of Westmania, near 40 Miles Westward from Stockholm, and 20 South from Upsal.

Nyköping, the chief City of Sudermania, and the Seat of its ancient Dukes, stands on the Baltick, 70 Miles South-West from Stockholm; it has a good Haven, and is a Place of Trade. As are also Trosa and Teiga, both standing on the same Coast, in the way to Stockholm.

Stregnes, a Bishop's See, stands near the Lake Meller, 30 Miles North from Nyköping, and as many South from Engköping.

Torsåsa stands on the same Lake, 18 Miles North-West from Stregnes.

Orebro, the Chief Town of Nericia, stands on the Hielmer Lake, or Telmer Sea, at the Mouth of the River Trosa, 40 Miles East from Torsåsa.

Oresjö or Westeras, the chief City of Westmania, stands on the North-side of the Lake Meller, 35 Miles West from Upsal. It is a Bishop's See, and in the Cathedral are found several ancient Gothick Inscriptions. In this City the Agreement was made by the Estates of the Kingdom, in 1544, whereby the Crown of Sweden was given to Gustavus I. who had rescued the People from the Tyranny of the Danes, and made it Hereditary to his Family; whereas before the Kings were always Elected.

Cöping or Köping, and Arbøgia, stand to the West of Oresjö, the former 20, and the other 25 Miles distant.

Gevalia, the chief City of Gestrícia, is seated on the Gulf of Botnia, at the Mouth of a River of the same Name, 50 Miles North from Upsal, and is a Place of good Trade.

Asperberg stands 50 Miles West from Gevalia.

Hundswickwald, the chief Town of Helsingia, stands on the Gulf of Botnia, 80 Miles North from Gevalia; a Place of great Trade for Fir-Timber, Pitch, Rosin, Corn, Hides, &c.

Dilsbo stands 25 Miles West from Hundswickwald; and Alta near 40 Miles South from Dilsbo.

Tuna, the chief Town of Medelpadia, stands on the River Nieurand, near the Botnick Gulf, 25 Miles North-West from Hundswickwald, and is said to have been the Seat of the ancient Kings of Helsingia.

Indal stands on a River of the same Name, 20 Miles North from Tuna, and as many West from the Botnick Bay.

Hernofand is the chief Town of Angermania, and stands on the Botnick Bay, 50 Miles from Hundswickwald, and like that, is a Place of good Trade.

Natra stands 30 Miles to the North of Hernofand.

Uma in West-Botnia, stands on the Botnick Gulf, at the Mouth of a River of the same Name 80 Miles North of Hernofand.

Pila and Lula likewise stand at the Mouths of two Rivers, to which they give Name, 80 Miles North from Uma.

Torne, the chief Town of West-Botnia, stand at the Bottom of the Gulf of Botnia, near the Confines of Lapland, 60 Miles North-East from Pitba. It has a good Haven, and is a Place of Trade.

Reffundt, a Fortrefs in Jemptia, stands 50 Miles West from Hernofand.

Lidb or Lida, reckon'd the chief Town of Jemptia, stands about 20 Miles North from Reffundt.

Tho' Dalecarlia be a very large Province, yet being an Inland Mountainous Country, it hath but few Towns of Note.

Idra, which stands on the River Elfiwan, 17 Miles West from Hundswickwald.

Lima, 50 Miles South from Idra, and Hedemora, on the River Dalecarlen, near the Confines of Westmania, 60 Miles North-West from Upsal; are reckon'd the chief Towns.

of G O T H L A N D, or Gothia.

G O T H I A or Gothland, a large Fruitful Country, lies on the South of Sweden, properly so call'd, and surrounded on the East, West and South, with the Baltick Sea. Its Extent from the Confines of Dalecarlia in the North, to the Coasts of Schonen in the South, is about 270 Miles; and from Gotteberg in the West, to Stegeberg in the East about 160 Miles. It is divided into three great Parts East-Gothland, West-Gothland, and South-Gothland which are again sub-divided into Provinces, thus

EAST-GOTHLAND, contains,

East-Gothland, properly so call'd, lies between Sudermania on the North, Smaland on the South, the Baltick Sea on the East, and the Lake Wetter on the West; it is a Champaign Country, and produces plenty of Corn and Cattle; as also Fish, Fowl and Venison.

Smaland has East-Gothland on the North, Bleking on the South, the Baltick on the East, and Halland on the West; it is a large Province, abounds much in Wood, and has great store of Cattle, which are exported abroad; here are also Mines of Copper, Lead and Iron.

Oeselndia is a pleasant and fruitful Island, lying off the Coast of Smaland, formerly belonging to the Dane, but yielded to Gustavus Adolphus, An. 1613.

West-Gothland, properly so call'd, is also a large Province, lying North from Smaland, between the Lake Wetter on the East, and Halland and the Baltick on the West; it affords abundance of excellent Pasturage, whereby great quantities of Cattle are bred, and the Country made wealthy by the Vent of them.

Wermeland is parted from Westro-Gothland, on the South by the large Lake of Wenner, hath Dalecarlia on the North, Westmania and Nericia on the East, and Dalia on the West. It is a Mountainous and Woody Country, having some Mines of Iron, and one of Copper; many Lakes, and some Rivers.

Dalia, a smaller Province than any of the former, lies on the West of the Lake Wenner and Wermeland, hath the Government of Babuys (already mention'd in our Account of Norway) and the Province of Aggerbuys on the East and South: It is a mountainous and barren Country; but being water'd with many Rivers and Lakes, it affords pretty good Pasturage for the Cattle, which are of a larger size than ordinary.

Schonen or Scania, is a Peninsula, surrounded by the Baltick Sea, except on the North, where it is join'd to Smaland. Luyts calls it Provincia Nobis.

liffima Gothia; it abounds with Corn, Cattle, Fowl, and all Conveniencies of Life, and hath also Mines of Silver, Lead and Iron: It is in Form near square, and about 50 or 60 Miles over either way. This Province formerly belong'd to the Dane, and was yielded to the Swedes in 1660. as was also at the same time

Bleking, a narrow Tract of Land, lying along the Coast of the Baltick, on the South of Smaland, and East of Schonen: It is a mountainous and woody Country, and not to compare for Fruitfulness with Schonen.

Hallandia is another Tract of Land, lying along the Coast of the Sinus Codanus, or Mouth of the Baltick, having Westro-Gothia on the East and North, and Schonen on the South: It is a pleasant and fruitful Country. This also was formerly a part of Denmark, but was in 1645. put into the Hands of Queen Christina, as a Security for the Swedes free passing the Sound; and since by the Treaty at Reschild, in 1658. it was granted to 'em for ever.

The Cities and Towns of chief Note in Gothland.

Lunden, the Metropolis of Schonen, stands in the Latitude of 56 Deg. at the distance of 30 Miles East from Copenhagen, 250 South-East from Stockholm, and about 10 Miles West from the Streight of the Sound. It was formerly the Seat of an Archbishop; but in 1658. when the Swedes took the City, that Dignity was remov'd to Copenhagen; and it is now only an Episcopal See, and adorn'd with an University, Erected by the Swedes in 1668. It has been a very considerable City, having in it 22 Churches; whereof the Cathedral of St. Laurence is a magnificent Structure, having a very high Spire that is a Landmark for Sailers; and a Clock of most ingenious Contrivance, said to be the Work of Caspar Bartholinus; which not only shews the Hour, Day, Month and Year, together with all the Festivals, but also the Movements are so artificially contriv'd, that at the Hours two Horsemen come forth and encounter each other, giving so many Blows as the Hammer is to strike upon the Bell; then a Door opens, discovering the Virgin Mary sitting on a Throne with Christ in her Arms, and the Magi doing Reverence, and two Trumpeters sounding the while. The Altar also of this Church is of beautiful Structure, and the Vault under the Quire very spacious. At present, the City is not in so flourishing a State as it has been. Near it is a Hill, where (according to Joan. Meursius) in ancient Times the Kings were Elected.

Malmogen, a Port-Town of good Trade, stands on the Sound, over against Copenhagen, and 10 Miles South-East from Lund; it is sometimes nam'd Ellebogen.

Landskroon stands also on the Sound, 16 Miles West from Lund; it is a strong, well-fortify'd Town, Built by Ericus VIII. in 1413. having a very good Haven, a fair Market place, and is much resorted to by Merchants, especially at its Annual Fair at Midsummer. Christian III. King of Denmark, built the Castle and improv'd the Fortifications; and it is at present a Place of great Importance and Strength.

Helsingborg, a mean Town but fortified with an impregnable Castle, stands on the Shoar of the Sound, 20 Miles North-West from Lund, over against Ejlenburg, and is the other Key to the Passage of the Sound; in the Castle there is a very high square Tower, which is a Direction to Sailers; and in the Town are held two Annual Fairs, wherein great quantities of Merchandize are vended. It was granted to the Swedes by the Treaty of Roschild in 1559. Re taken by the Danes in 1676. but restor'd the next Year.

Alings in Bleking, stands on the Baltick, on the Coast of Schonen.

Christiansstad stands a few Miles to the Northward; it is a strong Place being built in a Marsh, which renders it inaccessible; but it was taken by the Danes in 1676. and re-taken by the Swedes two Years after.

Ekim or Eickholm, are both Port-Towns on the Baltick, as is also Christianople, the chief Town in Bleking, situated on the extreme East part of it, 100 Miles North-East from Lund, and near 300 South from Calmar. It was very well fortify'd by Christian IV. against the Irruptions of the Swedes.

Calma, the Capital of Smaland, is a considerable City, situate on the Baltick, over against the Island Oeland, 160 Miles South-West from Stockholm, and about 100 North-East from Lund. It has a very convenient Harbour much frequented by Merchants from divers Nations and gives name to the Channel between it and Oeland, call'd Calmar Sund. The City is regularly fortify'd, and the Citadel much esteem'd for its Strength. This was formerly a Bishop's See, and the Cathedral dignify'd with the Privileges of an Ecclesiastical College; at present a Superintendent for the Government of the Clergy resides here, who is honour'd with a Place in the publick Consistory of the Kingdom. In 1647. so dreadful a Fire happen'd here, that the whole City, except about 60 Houses, were burnt down; but it was soon Re-built, and is a Place of very good Trade, and the Passage from Sweden to Germany. In the Wars between Sweden and Denmark, this City was several times taken and re-taken, particularly in 1611. Christian IV. King of Denmark gaining it by Storm, put all the Inhabitants to the Sword.

Wexio, a Bishop's See, where some of the first Planters of Christianity lie Buried, stands on the Bank of a Lake, near 60 Miles West from Calmar.

Westerwick, a Port-Town of good Trade on the Baltick Sea, stands 50 Miles North from Calmar.

Eksio stands 50 Miles West from Westerwick. And, Jenecoping 20 from it, 75 from Calmar to the North-West, and 35 directly North from Wexio, and stands on the Lake Wetter. It is a City naked of Walls, but of great Antiquity; and some Trade by means of the Lake.

Halmstadt, the Capital of Halland, stands on the Sinus Codanus, or Mouth of the Baltick 130 Miles West from Calmar, and 60 North from Lund; it is a good Port, and a Place of Trade.

Falkenberg stands on a River of the same Name not 20 Miles from Helmstadt.

Labholm, a fortified Town, on the South-side of Helmstadt, on the River Laga: And, Warberg, about 20 Miles North from Falkenberg are all Port-Towns and Places of Trade.

Gottenburg or Gothburg, the chief Town of Westro-Gothia, stands on the Sinus Codanus at the Mouth of the River Tollhetta, in the Latitude of 58 c. about 110 Miles North from Lund, 170 West from Calmar, and 260 South-West from Stockholm. It is a considerable Mart-Town, with a very commodious Harbour, and endow'd with many Privileges, which makes it frequented by Merchant Ships from all Nations. The Town is strongly fortified, and was able to resist the Danish Fleet, who attack'd it in 1644.

Scara or Scaren, the ancient Seat of the Gothish Kings, and at present a Bishop's See, stands 7 Miles to the North-East of Gottenburg. It is now a fenceless City, tho' heretofore the Metropolis of West-Gothia.

Lidkoping stands 15 Miles North from Scaren, and on the Banks of the Lake Wenner; and Mariestadt on the same Lake, 30 Miles East from Lidkoping, are both Cities, but at present not very Eminent.

Daleborg, the chief Town of Dalia, stands on the Lake Wenner, 45 Miles North from Gottenburg.

Tweta stands also on the same Lake, 30 Miles more to the North.

Carostadt, the Capital of Wermelandia, is seated on the North-East-side of the same Lake Wenner 150 Miles West from Stockholm. It was Built by Charles IX. King of Sweden in the place of the ancient City Tingvalla.

Philipstadt stands about 20 Miles East from Carostadt: And, Rusecg, about the same distance South from Philipstadt.

Linkoping, the Capital of Ostro-Gothia, stands in the middle of that Province, 80 Miles North from Calmar, and near 100 South-East from Carostadt. It is a pleasant, but small City, the See of a Bishop and has a stately Church, Built by one Herebertus one of the first Planters of Christianity here.

Suderkoping, a handsome, but fenceless City, stands about 20 Miles East from Linkoping.

Stegeborg stands on the Baltick, a few Miles East from Suderkoping.

Norkoping stands on the Banks of a Lake, between Linkoping and Suderkoping.

Schening was anciently a famous City, where a Council was held in 1284. but is now a ruin and inconsiderable Town.

Wedstena stands on the Lake Wetter, 25 Miles West from Linkoping.

AND now having surveyed Sweden and Gotthland, we shall pass to Lapland, the Inhabitants whereof being far different in their Manners and Customs from other Europeans, we shall detain the Reader with a short Account of them.

SWEDISH LAPLAND is a large Country lying North of Sweden properly so called, extending from East to West above 400 Miles, and from the 65th to the 68th Degree of Latitude; being bounded on the North by the Province of Wardhug, or the Norwegian Lapland; on the East by the Muscovian Lapland; on the West by the Mountains of Daarfeild, which divide it from Norway; and on the South by the Provinces of Fempria, Angemnia, West Bothnia, the Gulf or Sea of Bothnia, and East Bothnia. The Air is extreme Cold, and the Soil barren, except in the southern Parts, where some Pot-herbs and Roots, as Parsnips, Coleworts, &c. are produc'd, but no sort of Grain will grow there. The Country is Water'd with many Rivers and Lakes, and vast Woods are seen here, which shelter abundance of wild Beasts; such as Bears, Elks, Rain-Deer, Stags, Wolves, Foxes, Sables, Martins, Ermines, Otters, Beavers, &c. the Skins whereof afford the Inhabitants Cloathing, and their Flesh Food. Horses, Oxen and Sheep they have none, but make use of Rain-Deer to draw the Sledges on which they Travel and carry Burdens, and slide along on the Snow with great Celerity. The Inhabitants are of short Stature, but strong and nimble, and employ themselves in Hunting the wild Beasts: They are in their Temper Superstitious, Timorous, and mean Spirited, exceedingly addicted to Magick, and very Revengeful; but withal, they are Charitable; and tho' notoriously Deceitful in Bargaining, are never guilty of Theft. Their Houses are but Tents, made of Posts cover'd with Canvas, or by the poorer sort, only with Boughs of Trees; and are removed as their Occasions for Hunting or Fishing require, or as the Season invites 'em Northward, or drives 'em Southward. Their Garments are made of the Skins of wild Beasts, or else of our courtliest Woollen Cloath, which the better Sort wear on Holy-days; on their Heads they wear Caps made of the Skin of some Fowl, with the Feathers outwards, and Wings on. Their Diet is either Fish, or the Flesh of Rain Deer, which they sometimes Eat raw, or the better sort boil it, but most commonly it is dryed in the Sun; and for Bread, they make use of dryed Fish ground small: Their Drink is fair Water, and sometimes when they can get it, Brandy, which they much esteem, as also Tobacco: Their Children they use to great Hardness, dipping 'em as soon as born in cold Water, afterwards in hot Water; and then covering 'em in Moss, carry 'em many Miles to be Baptiz'd; as they grow up, they use them betimes to the Bow and Arrow, and place their Victuals on a Post which they must shoot down before they eat it. Marriage is held sacred among them, and Adultery rarely committed, or if known, constantly Punished; Polygamy is never allowed, nor clandestine Marriages ever contracted. Their Wealth consists in the numbers of Rain-Deer; and the Tribute they Pay the King, consists in dryed Fish, Furrs, and sometimes Rain-Deer, or in lieu of it Mony, which every Man pays annually, according to his Circumstances, to the King's Commissioners: They have Markets and Fairs among them, to which Merchants resort out of Sweden, Muscovy, and Norway, to buy Furrs and sell Cloaths and other Necessaries: Some Mony the richer sort have, but not much; and the generality live without it upon the Beasts and Fish they catch themselves.

The Laplanders are supposed by some, to have been descended from the Finlanders and Samoieds, who were driven from their own Country, first by the Tartars, and afterwards fled from the Swedes, when about the middle of the Thirteenth Century King Ericus subdued the Finlanders, and planted Christianity among them. The word Laplander implies a banish'd Man or Runagade, wherefore the better sort of 'em will not to this Day be call'd so: They lived for some Ages in a stragling condition, without Laws or Government, practising their stupid Idolatry and diabolical Magick, till in the end they were intirely subdued by the Swedes about the Year 1600. and Christianity planted among them. King Gustavus Adolphus built publick Schools and many Churches, which by the pious Care of succeeding Princes being encreased, and Ministers maintain'd by the King out of the Tributes paid by the People, Christianity has made considerable Advances; not but that there are still a great many Idolaters and Magicians in Lapland. In their Idolatry they worship the Sun, and several Deities which they represent in Wood, every Family having one. The chief God to whom they make publick Sacrifice, they call Thor; he is represented by the Stump of a Tree, and the usual Sacrifice is a Rain-Deer; another of their Gods they call Storjunkaer, whom they suppose to be Thor's Lieutenant. The Temples of the God Thor are usually in the Woods, consisting in Trees laid in round form one on another without any covering; Storjunkaer they worship in Mountains and Rocks. Their Magick is exceeding wonderful, at least if the Relations of Travellers be true; for they tell us, that the Mariners for a Sum of Mony, can procure of them such Winds as their Voyage requires, receiving a String with several Knots, which being untied, cause the Wind to encrease. In their Divinations they use a Drum, which having struck violently on, they lye down as in a Trance for a short space, and then answer the Question. They have also magical Darts, whereby they do what Injuries they please; and even so powerful are their Charms, that they will split Rocks and level Mountains. But these devilish Practices are suppress'd by the Swedes, and being discovered are severely punished, which makes 'em much less frequent than formerly.

The Swedish Lapland is divided into five Provinces, viz.

Torne-Lapmark the most Northern Part, in which stands the Town Tingwara, in the Latitude of 68. 20. Segevárö about 30 Miles to the South of it; Peldjerfui 100 East from Tingwara; Kittilabsy on the Confines of Kimi-Lapmark, 70 Miles South from Peldjerfui; and Torne a Port-Town at the bottom of the Bothnick Gulf,

Kimi-Lapmark on the East of Torne, and on the North of Cajania; in it are Somby, Kimibi, Kolajersfui, all within 20 Miles of one another, at the Foot of the Mountains, which part this from the Norwegian and Muscovite Lapland. Solden-Kyle and Kitijersfui more to the Southward, and Kimi on the Bothnick Gulf near Torne.

Lula-Lapmark lies on the South of Torne from the Confines of West Bothnia to the Dofrine Mountains, and has these Towns, Torpajour in the North Part, Sirkesflucht 30 Miles more South, and Jokemuka to the Westward.

Pitha-Lapmark the next southern Province, hath Sitionia in the North near the Dofrine Mountains, and Lochtari near the Confines of Bothnia.

Uma-Lapmark the last and most southern Province, adjoining to Angermania with Bothnia on the East, and the Dofrine Mountains on the West, hath Loisby or Laisby in the middle, and Semisjerfe on the Confines of Pitha.

In the Province of Torne-Lapmark is a Mine of Iron, and in Pitha-Lapmark is a Mine of Silver.

CHAPTER V.

F I N L A N D.

FINLAND, a large Country, extending from the Arctic Circle, or the Confines of Kimi-Lapmark in the North, to that Branch of the Baltick-Sea, to which it gives Name in the South; the Onega-Lake and Muscovy being its Boundary on the East, and the Bothnick Bay on the West, being 400 Miles in length, and as many in breadth. It was formerly a barbarous Nation, govern'd by Kings of their own, but conquer'd about the middle of the Thirteenth Century by Ericus IX. King of Sweden; and since that hath been sometimes the Inheritance of the Brothers of the Kings of Sweden, but is now united to the Crown. It is divided into these seven Parts, viz.

C A J A N I A, otherwise call'd East-Bothnia, the most northern Province extending from Kimi-Lapmark along the Gulf or Sea, to which this and the other Bothnia give Name, near 300 Miles in length: It abounds with Rivers which empty themselves in the Bothnick-Bay, and hath a large Lake call'd Ula-Tresk; Mountains also fill up the northern and eastern Parts, and the rest of the Country is reasonably Fertile.

S A V O L A X I A, which hath Cajania on the North, Carelia on the South, Kexholm on the East, and Tavasthus on the West. This Province, as also Kexholm, abounds with Lakes and Rivers which discharge themselves into the great Lake Ladoga, and afford the Inhabitants abundance of Fish.

K E X H O L M lies between Savolaxia on the West, and Muscovy on the East, Muscovian-Lapland on the North, and the Lake Ladoga on the South. It is a large Tract of Land, but on the North and East very mountainous, and the other part almost cover'd with Lakes. It formerly belong'd to the Russians, but conquer'd by Gustavus Adolphus, was granted to him at the Treaty in 1616. This Province, by some Geographers, is included under the general Name of Carelia.

C A R E L I A lies on the South of Savolaxia to the Banks of the Gulf of Finland and Lake of Ladoga. It is a flourishing Country, extending from East to West near 200 Miles, but its breadth is not proportionable. Formerly subject to the Muscovites.

NYLANDIA is a small Province on the Gulf of Finland, between Carelia on the East, Finland on the West, and Tavastbia on the North, so call'd, q. d. New Land, because its ancient Inhabitants the Finlanders being driven out, new Colonies of Swedes were sent to possess it.

TAVASTIA is an inland Province between Finland on the West, Savolaxia on the East, Cajania on the North, and Nylandia on the South; it hath several Lakes, especially the great one of Jende.

FINLAND, properly so call'd, hath Nylandia and Tavasthus on the East, the Finnic-Bay on the South, Cajania on the North, and the Bothnick-Bay on the West. It is in some parts Mountainous, but otherwise a rich Soil; and being half encompass'd by the Sea, hath the advantage of much Traffick. The Country is so Pleasant that some have fancied it to be call'd Finland, q. d. Fine-Land. This Province, Nylandia and Carelia afford good Pasturage and large Breeds of Oxen, Horses, and other Cattle.

The Cities and chief Towns in the respective Provinces are these, Cajaneburg, is a Fort seated on the North-East side of the Lake Ula, about 30 or 40 Miles from the Confines of Lapland, and 120 from the Coast of the Bothnick Gulf, in the Latitude of 65. 0.

Ulelung, another Fortress stands on the Coast of the Bothnick Bay, in the same Latitude with Cajaneburg.

Ula is a Sea-Town near it, at the Mouth of the River, to which it gives Name.

Loelta and Wassa are both Sea-Towns on the same Coast; the former 60, and the latter 150 Miles to the South of Ula.

Keskinpa, the chief Town of Savolaxia, stands on a Lake in the Latitude of 62. 0. about 180 Miles from the Bothnick Coast.

Nyssa, is a strong Fort, seated on a Lake about 50 Miles East from Kespinge. It was built in the Year 1475. by Eric Axelsson, Governor of Abo, and is of use against the Invasion of the Muscovite.

Rumal, is Named by Lutz as one of the chief Towns of this Province, but by the Maps Saminge, which stands on the Banks of the same Lake, a few Miles South from Nyssa, as Rumal does about 30 Miles more to the West, seems rather to deserve the Character.

Lexa, in the North part of the Province of Kexholm, stands on the Banks of a Lake in the Latitude of 63. 40. Longitude 55. 0.

Kexholm, which gives Name to the Province, but call'd by the Russians, Carelogorod, stands on the West-side of the Lake Ladoga, in the Latitude of 61. 10. It is a strong Town, and with the Province, formerly was subject to the Muscovite, 'till about the beginning of the last Century, when the Czar promised Charles IX. King of Sweden to surrender this Town and Country to him if he would assist him against the Poles, by whom he was then hardly beset; but being freed from the Danger, refused to perform, which made the Swedes invade his Countries, and oblige the Russes to yield up by Treaty, in the Year 1616. not only this, but also the most considerable Places of Ingria.

Wiborg, the chief City of the Swedish Carelia, stands at the bottom of a Bay of the Finnick Gulf, about 40 miles South-West from Kexholm: It is a Place of great Trade, and the See of a Bishop; has a convenient Haven, and is fortify'd with Trenches, Forts, and a strong Castle, by the means whereof it has often resisted the furious Attacks of the Muscovites.

Mala stands about 30 miles South from Wiborg, on a small Bay that reaches to Kexholm, and falls into the Lake Oneza.

Wekelax is a Sea-Port on the Finnick Bay, about 60 miles West from Wiborg.

Helsingfors the chief City of Nylandia, stands near the Mouth of the River Winda, which falls into the Finnick Gulf, 150 miles West from Wiborg, and about 90 East from Abo.

Borgo, another Port-Town, stands at the Mouth of a small River, about 20 miles East from Helsingfors.

Tavasthus, called also Croneburg, the Capital of Tavasthia, is a strong Fortress built by Berjerus Felt, the Swedish General in 1250. when he had conquer'd this Country and establish'd Christianity there. It stands 70 miles North from Helsingfors, and about 90 North-West from Abo.

Haubo stands on a Branch of the Lake Jende, which extends almost the length of this Province; about 20 miles North from Tavasthus.

Padafoski stands on the Lake Jende, about 30 miles North-East from Haubo.

Abo, the Capital of South Finland, stands on the River Avioriki, near the Baltick-Sea, and about 50 miles from the Gulf of Finland, in the Latitude of 61. 0. Longitude 44. 0. and 160 miles North-East from Stockholm. It is the See of a Bishop, and adorn'd with a University; and is also a City of good Trade.

Biorneburg, the chief Town of North Finland, stands on the Coast of the Bothnick Gulf, 90 miles North from Abo.

Raumo and Nykirky stand both on the same Coast, the former 30, and the latter 60 miles South from Biorneburg.

Masko stands about 10 miles West from Abo.

Raseborg stands on the Gulf of Finland, 50 miles East from Abo. It is by some Geographers reckon'd to stand within the Limits of Nylandia; and has sometime had a Territory belonging to it which constituted a Principality.

CHAP. VI.

LIVONIA or Liefland.

LIVONIA, or as it is called in the Language of the Country, LIEFLAND, is a Fertile Country, lying on the South side of the Gulf of Finland, having a part of the Baltick Sea, denominated the Gulf of Riga, on the West, Muscovy and Ingria on the East, the Dutchy of Courland, and some part of Lithuania on the South, and as we have said, the Finnick Gulf on the North. So that it is surrounded on the West and North with the Sea, on the East hath the great Lake of Peibus, and on the South the commodious River Dwina; which rising in Muscovy, passes by the Confines of Livonia, dividing it from Courland, and thereby the convenience of Navigation is afforded to every part of this Province: In the middle of it are three other Lakes, and many small Rivers, which Water the Country; and tho' in some Parts it is marshy, yet in the general 'tis very fruitful, yielding especially cially Corn, Pasture, and Honey in abundance. Its Extent from North to South is about 160 miles, and from East to West 120 miles. The many Conquests this Country has suffered render its Inhabitants a mixture of Muscovites, Swedes, Polanders and Germans, the latter whereof being the most numerous makes their Language generally spoken. In its ancient State the Duchy of Courland and Samigallia were reckon'd part of Livonia; but the Swedes having this, and the Poles those, it has, for some time stood thus divided. From the first Conversion of this Country, the Archbishop of Riga and the Teutonic Order seem to have had the Government of it, 'till about 1557. upon a Difference between the Archbishop and the Grand Master, the Czar of Muscovy invaded Livonia; but the Swedes being call'd in to assist the Lieflanders, drove out the Muscovites; and the Poles having Pretensions to this Country, for sometime a Contest was carried on between them, 'till by the Muscovites gaining Ground, they perceiv'd their Mistake and agreed; and finally, in the Year 1660. this Province was resign'd to Sweden by John Casimir King of Poland. It is to be noted, that the most southern Part of Liefland is still subject to Poland. It is divided into three Parts, 1. Esten or Esibonia, which takes up all the northern Part. 2. Odepsa, the middle; And, 3. Letten or Letitia, the Southern Part. Esibonia is again divided into five Parts, viz. Alentakia, Wiria, Harria, Wicia, and Fervia. When the Czar began the War against the King of Sweden in 1700. this Country was for some time the Seat of it, and miserably ravag'd. The chief Towns in this Province are these,

Narva is seated on a River of the same name (which separates Livonia from Ingria, and here falls into the Finnick Bay) in the Latitude of 59°. Longitude 50. 0. at the distance of 170 Miles from Riga to the North East, and 100 from Revel to the East, and is called the German Narva, to distinguish it from the Russian Narva. It is a Place of great Strength and Consideration, and well Garrison'd by the Swedish Soldiers; it is also defended by a strong Castle, named Juanogorod, which stands on the other side of the River in Ingria, and was taken by Gustavus Adolphus in 1617. In general it is reckon'd one of the best Fortresses in this Country. The Town was built by Waldemar II. King of Denmark in 1223. was taken by the Muscovites in 1558. recover'd by the Swedes in 1581. and granted to them by Treaty in 1599. The Muscovites having Besieged this City in the Year 1700. after ten Weeks lying before it, were set upon by the King of Sweden on the 10th of November, and entirely Defeated. The Victory was so entire, that not only the Baggage and Canon were taken, but also the Duke de Croy (the Muscovite General) with the rest of the Generals and Principal Officers surrender'd themselves Prisoners of War, and the common Soldiers were made to lay down their Arms and pass Bare-headed thro' the Swedish Camp, being too numerous to be detain'd Prisoners. But the Czar however four Years after set down before this City, and after no long Siege took it Sword in Hand on the 10th of Nov. 1704. and still possesses it. It has a convenient Port to the Gulf of Finland, and is a Place of Trade.

Nieslot or Neuschlos is a strong Fort on the River Narva, near the Lake Peibus.

Borcholm stands about 60 Miles West from Narva. Wesenburg, 20 Miles North-West from Borcholm, near the River Weisenna, is a Place of Strength, and was taken from the Muscovites by the Swedes in 1581.

Tolsburg, a Port-Town on the Finnick Gulf, is about 12 Miles distant from Wesenburg to the North.

Revel or Revalia, anciently the Metropolis of Liefland, is a small but handsome and well Fortified City, seated on the Finnick Gulf, about 60 Miles from Tolsburg, and about 100 from Narva to the West. It is one of the most considerable Mart-Towns in these Parts, and is adorn'd with a Gymnasium, or small University, wherein Professors and Tutors are maintain'd to teach the Liberal Arts. It was formerly an Episcopal See, but since Lutheranism has been establish'd here, a Superintendent governs the Ecclesiastical Affairs. The City was founded by Waldemar II. King of Denmark in 1230. was sold to the great Master; and in 1561. being in danger of falling into the Muscovites Hands, it subjected its self to the Swede, who has ever since had the Protection of it, but it still enjoys large Immunities, and is very considerable on account of its Trade and commodious Haven.

Badis or Padis, is a Fort seated on the River Alta, about 20 Miles West from Revel.

Habsel, Seated on a small Gulf of the Baltick, to which it gives Name, over-against the Island Dagö, 30 miles South-West from Padis, and about 20 South-West from Revel, was formerly subject to the Danes, but in 1572. being taken by the Muscovite, was gained by the Swede, in 1581. and was sometime the See of a Bishop.

Lehal stands also on the Baltick, 15 Miles South from Habsel, it is a Place of Strength, and has a Castle of good Force.

Wyckel or Wyke, is another Fort in the same Neighbourhood.

Wittenstein, 70 Miles East from Lehal, and 25 South-East from Revel: As also Oderpalen and Lanate, all Places of Moment for Strength.

Parnow, Parnavia, seated on a River of the same Name, which here falls into a small Bay of the Baltick, Baltick at the distance of about 50 Miles from Revel to the South, 90 from Riga to the North. It is a small City, but a Place of good Trade, great quantity of Corn especially being Ship'd hence for the Netherlands. It is pretty well Fortify'd, but owes it's Strength chiefly to its Citadel. The Poles made this the Capital of one of their Palatinates, when it was under their Jurisdiction; but since the Year 1617. it has been subject to the Swede, after having been taken and re-taken many times in the last Age.

Derpt or Derpt, Torpatum; a large and ancient City on the River Embeck, 15 Miles from the Lake Peibus, and somewhat more from the Werczer zee another Lake, 100 Miles from Parnow to the East, and 120 from Riga to the North East. It was formerly the See of a Bishop, and is at present adorn'd with an University founded by Gustavus Adolphus in 1632. on account of its being a pleasant healthy Place, and abounding with Provisions and all Necessaries: The Buildings are of Stone and Brick, but not so well maintained and inhabited as they have been. It has a strong Castle for its Defence, seated on a Hill, but has however been subjected to many Matters, for the Teutonic Knights took it from the Muscovites in 1280. the Poles took it in 1552. afterwards the Swedes drove them out, but in 1603. they recover'd and kept it till 1625. when the Swedes finally took it again.

Nienhaus 20 Miles South from Derpt, on the Borders of Muscovy. And Muenburg, about 20 Miles South-West from Nienhaus, are all three Forts of good Strength.

Odenopol, 12 Miles South from Derpt, is a small Town, and only considerable for giving Name to this Division of Livonia.

Fellin stands on a small River that passes from the Werczer-zee to Pernaw, 50 Miles from that City to the East, and as many from Derpt to the West.

Ringen is a Fort 35 Miles distant from Fellin to the South.

Tarnest is another Fort formerly very strong, when in the Hands of the Muscovites, but so demolished when the Poles took it, that tho' the Swedes have spent much in repairing it, is not yet arriv'd to what it was.

Riga, call'd Riig by the Inhabitants, and Rigen by the Germans, is the Metropolis of Livonia, the See of an Arch bishop, and a great Emporium. It is seated on the River Duina, near its Mouth, which makes a commodious Haven. from the Gulf of the Baltick Sea that takes its Name from this City, in the Latitude of 57. 0. Longitude 46. 0. and at the distance of 90 Miles from Pernaw, and 120 from Revel to the South, 25 from Mittaw in Courland to the North, not above 4 Leagues from the Gulf of Riga to the East, and about 80 Leagues from Stockholm to the South East. It is a very considerable City, being well Built, full of Inhabitants, and a Place of vast Traffick for Corn, Hemp, Flax, Pitch, Tar, Planks, Skins and Furs of all Sorts; all which, with many other necessary Commodities, are brought hither on Sledges over the Ice and Snow in the Winter, and Stor'd up for the English, Dutch and German Merchants, who send large Fleets of Ships in the Summer-time to fetch these, and carry the Inhabitants the other Goods of Southern Countries. The City was first Founded about the latter end of the Twelfth Century, and in 1215. was made a Metropolitan See by Pope Innocent III. It was sometime the Seat of the Great Master of the Teutonic Order, and afterwards entred into the Hameatick League, and was for some Years a Free-Town, under the Protection of the Emperor: In 1581. it was taken by the Poles, and soon after endowed with large Immunities: The Swedish King Charles IX. twice attempted it, and his Son Gustavus Adolphus finally took it, since when it has always been subject to the Swede. It was in the present War Besieg'd ineffectually by King Augustus.

It is a large City, but however well Fortified, having strong Walls, Bulwarks, and a very large Trench on the Land-side, and a strong Castle on the River, wherein resides the general Governor of Livonia. The Haven is furthermore securely guarded by the Dunamund-Fort, or as it is called, the Dunamunder Schans, seated about 2 Leagues below the City, near the Mouth of the River Dwina, as its name declares, and is a Fortress of great Importance, having the command of the Passage to Riga; so that without leave from the Governor no Ship can Sail thither. It was always esteem'd a Place of great Strength, but could not however resist the Courage of the King of Poland's Saxon Army, who by general Assault took it in the Year 1699.

Kakenhusen or Kockebaus, is a strong Fort seated on the River Dwina, 60 miles East from Riga: It was anciently the Residence of the Archbishop.

Sewold or Segenwold, stands 30 miles, and Wenden 45 miles, North-East from Riga, both on the South-side of the River Teyder: And, Wolmer stands on the North-Bank of the same River, 60 miles North-East from Riga.

Many lesser Towns and Forts are found in this Country, particularly Dumenburg, seated on the Dwina, 60 miles above Kakenhusen; but this being subject to Poland, may be more properly spoken of there.

I N G R I A.

INGRIA or INGERMANNLAND is a fruitful and pleasant Province, lying on the North-East of Livonia, having on the North the Lake Ladoga, the River Nieva (which divides it from Carelia in Finland) and the Gulf of Finland.

On the South and East Muscovy, and on the West Livonia. Its Extent from East to West, is near 150 miles, and from North to South about 80 miles. It is a good Country, free from Lakes, but Water'd with Rivers, and produces the Necessaries for Life.

It abounds with Cattle and Beasts ; and has especially a great number of Elks, who in the Summer Season change their Quarters and swim over the River Nieva into Carelia ; but at the approach of Winter return the same way. This Country was formerly subject to the Muscovite, but added to Sweden by Gustavus Adolphus, to whom it was entirely resign'd by the Czar Michael Fedorowicz, in the Treaty of Stockholm, A. D. 1618. which was afterwards confirm'd in 1661. Its Situation renders it very considerable, being a Communication between Finland and Livonia, and a Frontier against Muscovy. It is by some Geographers divided into three Parts, 1. Ingria, 2. Ingermania, and 3. Soluska. The chief Towns in this Province are,

Nottelburg, or Oreska. } Ivanagorod.
Coporio. } Jamagorod.

Nottelburg, called by the Russians, Oreska or Nut, from its compactness and Strength, is seated on a small Island, in the Mouth of the River Nieva, near the Lake Ladoga, in the Latitude of 60. 0. Longitude 54. 0. 300 miles from Riga, and 120 from Narva to the North-East. It is the chief Town of this Province both for Trade and Strength, being very well fortified, and besides well secured by the breadth of the River. When Gustavus Adolphus besieged it, in the Year 1614 it made so vigorous a Resistance, that till an unhappy Distemper seized the Inhabitants, he was by no means able to take it.

Ivanagorod, call'd also the Russian Narva is seated overagainst Narva, and built on a Rock in an Isthmus, made by the Confluence of two Rivers, and is a Place of very great Strength. Since his present Czarish Majesty has taken Narva he has encreas'd the Fortifications of this Place, and chang'd it's Name to Petersburg.

Coporio, a strong Fort, stands on the Finnick Gulf, 30 miles North from Ivanagorod.

Jamagorod, another Fortreis, is seated on the River Laga, about 15 miles from Ivanagorod to the South East.

These and several other Towns and Forts, together with the whole Country, were delivered up to the Swedes by the Muscovites, at the Treaty above mentioned.

C H A P. VIII.

The ISLANDS belonging to Sweden are these.

GOTHLAND Isle, situate in the Baltick, 20 Leagues from the Coast of Gotland to the East, about 60 Leagues from Livonia to the West, and in the Latitude of 56. It is a narrow Tract of Land, stretch'd out in length from North to South about 70 miles, and not above 20 in breadth. It is fruitful, and affords good Pasture for Cattle, especially Horses and Oxen. This Island was formerly subject to Denmark, but granted to the King of Sweden in 1645. in 1677. re-taken by the Danes, and in 1679. restored by Treaty to the Swedes.

Wishy or Fishung, the chief Town of this Island, and the Seat of its Governor, was heretofore a large and famous Mart, containing 10 Churches, and 4 Monasteries, but is now much decayed. It is reported, that Hydrographical Tables and Sea-Charts, and the Rules for Navigation were first Printed here.

OELAND, a narrow slip of Land over-against the Continent of Gotland, from which it is distant not above 5 or 6 Leagues, is in length about 70 miles from North to South, but hardly 10 miles broad. The Soil affords good Pasture, and many Herds of Oxen, Horses, and Fallow Deer. The chief Place upon the Island is Bornholm or Barkholm, a strong Fortreis seated in the middle of the Isle, just over-against Calmar. There are many other Forts and Castles to defend this Island, which have been often attack'd. In 1536. Frederick III. King of Denmark took it ; soon after it was regain'd by the Swedes, but being lost again, Gustavus Adolphus finally recover'd it in 1613. since when it has been constantly possess'd by the King of Sweden.

OESEL and DAGHO two Islands lying off the Coast of Livonia, make the Gulf of Riga ; the former is much the larger of the two, being about 40 miles long, and 20 broad ; whereas the other is hardly 20 miles either way. Oesel lies about 15 Leagues West from Pernaw, and has on it the City of Arnsburg, fortified with a Castle, and another Fortreis called Sonneburg.

Dagho lies to the North of Oesel, about 7 Leagues West from Leba ; it is of a Triangular Form, and has on it two Castles called Padem and Dagheroart.

ALAND, an Island in the Mouth of the Gulf of Bothnia, surrounded with a great number of smaller Islands, lies between Uplandia to the West, and Finland to the East, in near the same Latitude with Upsal, and in the mid-way between Stockholm and Abo. It abounds with Fish, and has some Cattle ; on it stands the Fort of Castleholm.

HUENA, a very small Island in the Ore Sund, just over-against Landskroon, Lat. 56. 20. On it stands Uraniburg, a small City and Castle, built at the Cost of the King of Denmark, for the use of the famous Mathematician Tycho Brahe. It was surrendred to the Swede by the Treaty in 1660.

RUGEN, an Island on the Coast of Pomerania in Germany, is also subject to the King of Sweden ; but of that, as also of USEDOM and WOLLIN, having already spoken in our Account of Germany, need not here be repeated.

To the King of Sweden are also subject some parts of Germany, as the Upper Pomerania, and the Duchies of Bremen and Ferden ; which have likewise been spoken of in their proper Places.

As also the Province of Babuy, whereof we have spoken already in our Account of Norway.

P O L A N D.

POLAND.

CHAP. I.

Of POLAND in General.

THE Kingdom of POLAND, which is now of vast Extent, was at first (according to Cluverius) not above 320 Miles long, and 240 broad, consisting at that time only of that part, which for distinction, is usually Nam'd, Poland, properly so call'd, but it hath since received great Additions; Lithuania, The lesser or Red-Russia, Podolia, Volhinia, Polesia, Massovia, Prussia, Samogitia, and part of Livonia, having been annexed to it. The Sarmatæ, as the same Author shews, were the first

Inhabiters of it, and the Country anciently Nam'd Sarmatia. It owes its present Name, as Reiskius particularly says, to some Colonies of the Sclav, who came into that Country, and either drove out, or mingled themselves with the ancient Sarmatæ, and called the Land Pole, which signified in their Language a Plain. Tho' some are of Opinion, that the word Polacki, is as much as to say, the Posterity of Lechus. This Nation, as Puffendorf says, did formerly Inhabit nearer to Tartary; but after vast numbers

bers out of Germany, enter'd the Roman Provinces, their Places were supplied by the Nations behind them; and it seems that Poland being in the same manner left by its Inhabitants, which were the Venedi, or Wends, they made room for the next that took their Place. These then, as it is said, having taken Possession of this Country, about the Year, 550. did under the Conduct of Lechus, lay the Foundation of a new State.

Poland, as it is now extended, is bounded on the North with Livonia, Muscovy, and the Baltick; on the South with upper Hungary, Transilvania, and Wallachia; on the East with Muscovy and the Little Tartary, and on the West with Germany. Its Extent is from the Frontiers of Pomerania in the West, to the Frontiers of Tartary in the South East, about 700 Miles; and from the Frontiers of Livonia, to the Carpatas, or Krempach Mountains, which are the Limits of Hungary, above 600 Miles. And its Situation is between the 48th and 57th Degree of Latitude, commencing in Longitude at the 34th Degree from Teneriff, and extending to the 50th Degree: And some part of Volynia, even 2 Degrees more.

By the Situation it may be guessed, that the CLIMATE is Temperate, and the Air not excessive Cold, as in effect it is, except in the Northern part of Lithuania. The SOIL also is generally Fertile, fit for Tillage and Pasture, and produces a vast quantity of Corn and Cattle; even enough to Feed the Populous Nation of Holland, who Yearly send vast Fleets to Dantzick to buy the Corn and Oxen, sent down thither from the several parts of Poland. Lithuania produces Honey, Wax, Hemp, Flax, Leather, Pot-Ashes, Salt, Woad, Salt-petre, Vitriol and Quick-silver. With these Staple Commodities they purchase those of other Nations, viz. Wines, Cloath, Stuffs, Wrought Silks, &c.

It is a plain flat Country, rather enclining to Marsh than Mountain Lands, so that no considerable Mountains are found here, except those that make the Frontier to Hungary, which is a craggy Ridge of 300 Miles in Length, and called the Carpatas, or Krempach Mountains. But RIVERS it abounds with, the most considerable whereof are the Vistula, the Niemen or Cronus, the Nieper or Boristhenes, the Niefter or Tyras, the Bog or Vegus, whose Springs and Courses, are more distinctly perceiv'd by Viewing the Map, than by giving account of them.

As to the GENIUS of the People, they are, as Puffendorf observes, commonly Downright and Honest, very seldom guilty of Dissimulation, of a Generous Spirit, and expect a great deal of Respect, to which they make you suitable returns. They are also Fierce and Extravagant, much inclin'd to an uncontrolled Liberty, or rather Licentiousness and Pernancy, which produces frequent Factions and Conspiracies. They do not want Courage, but are more fit for sudden Action than the long Fatigue of a War. This is spoken of the Gentry. But the meaner sort are Poor Spirited, and therefore the Polish Infantry are not valuable, but Cossacks, or Foreigners are made use of on all occasions of War. This abject Spirit of the Peasantry proceeds from the Servile Vassalage they pay to their Lords, who exercise it with all the Haughtiness imaginable; and not only does the poor Labourer never acquire Wealth, but he is even hardly permitted to gain himself Bread, being oblig'd to Work for his Lord four or five days in the Week, without Pay or Food.

As to the Military Force, their chief Strength consists in the Nobility. It has been given out, that the Poles could raise 150000 or 200000 Horse, but unless one should reckon their Attendants and Servants, the number is too great to be Credited. I must be acknowledg'd there is no Kingdom in Europe can pretend to so great a number of Nobility as they can do; and therefore considering that they are Brave, 'tis Morally impossible to Conquer their Country, so long as they are Unanimous. And the surprizing Progress that the Army of Charles Gustavus made here, was owing to the Differences at Home; which was made appear by the precipitant Flight of the Swedes, as soon as the Poles return'd to their Duty. The Cossacks can furnish them a considerable Infantry, and their Neighbours readily serve in their Armies, if the Nobility will permit the King to Levy Taxes to Pay 'em; but tho' they are Rich enough, they are not over ready in giving Supplies, or paying them when Assess'd.

The Inhabitants of Poland were converted from Paganism to Christianity, by Aldebert, Archbishop of Gnesna, about the Year 964. and ever since the RELIGION of the Church of Rome hath been Predominant here, except in Red-Russia, where the People adhere to the Greek Church; and in Prussia there are whole Cities of Lutherans, as Dantzick, Elbing, Thorn and Marienbourg, and some Calvinists, especially in the Ducal Prussia. Faustus Socinus, the Reviver of the Arian Heresy, was of this Nation. And his Followers from him, call'd Socinians, grew numerous in the last Century, but King John Casimir Expell'd them in the Year 1658.

Concerning the Form of GOVERNMENT in Poland, it is to be observ'd, that the Poles live under one Head, who bears the Title, and lives in the Splendor becoming a King; but if you consider his Power, as it is circumscrib'd within very narrow Bounds, he is in effect no more than the Prime or Chief Regent in a Free Common-wealth; since he can do nothing without the bounds of that Authority, which the Laws of the Land have given him, and the Nobles take care to maintain. This King is always Chosen by a Free Election, where every Nobleman present has his Vote; and tho' the Poles may have some inclination to the Royal Race, yet have they never consented to declare a Successor during the Life of the present King, but have always expected the Vacancy of the Throne, that they might at that time regulate Abuses, and by the Padri Conventi, which the King solemnly Assents to, secure to themselves their Liberties. During an Interregnum, the Archbishop of Gnesna is ex Officio, Regent of the Kingdom: Or if there be no Archbishop of Gnesna, the Office devolves to the Bishop of Cujavia; and if that See be Vacant, to the Bishop of Pesunia. The Poles have had an ancient Maxim, That their King ought rather to be Elect'd out of a Foreign Princely Family, than out of their own Nobility; being of Opinion, that thereby the equality among the Nobility, may be the better preserv'd. In the two Elections preceeding that of Augustus, they swerved from this Maxim, and Chose out of their own Nobility; and whether it had not been better to have done so then too, Time will shew, if they are not sensible of it already.

'Tis the Nobility or Gentry only, that have any share in the Government, the other Subjects being by the Laws deem'd Boors; for the Traders being mostly Foreigners, and the Husbandmen meer Vassals, the Gentry totally exclude them both from any share in the Legislation or Administration. The Senate, Senate or Diet of Poland, is made up of the Bishops, Great Officers of State, viz. The Great Marshal of the Kingdom, the Great Marshal of the Duchy, the High-Chancellor of the Kingdom, the Chancellor of Lithuania, the Vice-Chancellor of the Kingdom, the Vice-Chancellor of Lithuania, the Treasurer of the Kingdom, the Treasurer of Lithuania, the Marshal of the Court of the Kingdom, and the Marshal of the Court of the Duchy, and the Palatines: To which are added the Lesser Senators, which are the Castellans or Lieutenants of the Palatinates, and the Deputies of the Nobility. This Court, which in the whole consists of One Hundred and Fifty Persons, is look'd upon as the Bulwark of the Commonwealth, against the attempts of the King, and therefore four of them are always about his Person, on pretence of giving him Counsel, but in Truth to be Spies upon him. However, the King having the disposal of the Great Offices and the Bishopricks, he can in Time, make a sufficient Party in the Senate, and the rather because the Palatines are commonly divided among themselves. This is the Legislative Power of the Nation, like as our Parliament in England, but with this difference, that the Deputies of the Nobility are like the Tribunes of the People in Old Rome, and have Power by the dissent of but one Voice, to hinder the Passing any Decree. And the Time of the Diet's Sitting being confined to six Weeks, it has often happen'd that the Labour of a whole Session has been lost, by the Caprice of one Member.

But the Great Diet, or General Assembly of the Nation, is the whole Body of the Nobility or Gentry, (for they are not distinguish'd by Titles in these Countries) which is exceeding Powerful, both by reason of their Number and Wealth. These meet on Horseback in the Plains near Warsaw, and are seldom Assembled but for the Election of a King. and 'tis they that prescribe the Rules by which he must Govern, call'd the Paſſa Conventa: The Heads of the Principal Parts whereof, it will not be amiss to set down, viz. The King must not call in, or admit Foreign Forces, without the Consent of the Estates. He must not encrease the number of the Militia, raise Forces privately, or send Aid to any other Prince, without the Consent of the Estates. He must not commit the Trust of Forts and Castles, to Strangers or Boors. He must not make an Offensive War, without the General Assembly. He must not make Peace, without the Approbation of the Estates: Only ancient Alliances may be Renewed by the King, with consent of the Senators residing at Court. And because the King has the disposal of all Civil and Ecclesiastical Dignities, it is usually stipulated in the Paſſa Conventa, that he shall not encrease or diminish the number of the Officers. Many other Conditions are prescribed in the Paſſa Conventa, which the King solemnly Swears to maintain.

For the Administration of Justice Civil and Criminal, several Courts, as usual, are held in Poland, but the most considerable are the Parliaments. Composed of a certain Number of Gentlemen, Clergy and Laity, who are Chosen in each Palatinate, the Lay Members once in four Years, and the Ecclesiastical once in two Years. Of these Parliaments there are two for the Kingdom, and one for the Duchy. Those for the Kingdom, Sit at Lublin in Upper, and Petricow in Lower Poland. And that for the Duchy, is held one Year at Vilna, and the other Year at Minski or Novogrodeck by turns. These Courts receive Appeals from Inferior Courts, and from them lies no Appeal, except to the King and Senate.

The Revenues of the King of Poland arise out of the Salt-Pits, the half of the Customs of Dantzick, and the Royal Oeconomies, all which may amount to above 100000 l. per Annum, but then it is a' clear to himself, for he pays no Troops, not even his own Guards. And all the Officers of the Household are Gentlemen of Poland, who Serve without Salary, in expectation of some Office. And all the Charges of the Army, and other publick Expences being provided by the Senate, he has no manner of Charge but that of his own Family. Moreover the Estates provide a suitable Maintenance for the Queen, after the King's Death; but then he cannot Marry or Divorce, without their Consent, nor can the Queen be Crown'd without being of the Romish Religion.

The Succession of the Kings and Princes of POLAND, as well as it can be Collected from History, is as follows.

18. Boleslaus II. Sirnamed the Bold , a Valiant Prince, before he degenerated into a barbarous Murderer, and fell in Love with a Mare; for which detestable Crimes, both he and his Posterity were depriv'd of the Royal Dignity.	1059
19. Uladislaus I. Sirnam'd Hermannus ,	1082
20. Boleslaus III. Sirnam'd Crivouſtus .	1103
21. Uladislaus II. who was Expell'd the Kingdom.	1139
22. Boleslaus IV. Sirnam'd Crispus .	1146
23. Miecislaus III. Sirnam'd the Aged , who was Depos'd for Oppression and exorbitant Impositions.	1174
24. Casimir II. who redress'd all the Grievances of his Brother's Reign.	1178
25. Leschus ,

25. Leschus V. Surnam'd the White, who was Murder'd by his Uncle Miecislus the Aged. 1195
26. Boleslaus V. Surnam'd the Chaste. 1226
27. Leschus VI. Surnam'd the Black. 1279
28. Premislaus II. who reassum'd the Regal Title by advice of the Nobility, but was Kill'd in his Camp, in the first Year of his Reign. 1295
29. Wenceslaus, King of Bohemia, obtain'd the Crown of Poland. 1296
30. Vladislaus III. Surnam'd Lothicus. 1305
31. Casimir III. Surnam'd the Great, a Just and Peaceful Prince. 1333
32. Lewis, King of Hungary, was chosen King of Poland. 1370
33. Vladislaus IV. call'd Jagello, who United the Dutchy of Lithuania (whereof he had been Duke) to the Crown of Poland. 1386
34. Vladislaus V. who was Kill'd in a Battle against the Turks. 1434
35. Casimir IV. Surnam'd the Great. 1447
36. John Albert. 1492
37. Alexander, successful against the Muscovites and Tartars. 1501
38. Sigismund I. who subdued Prussia. 1507
39. Sigismund II. Surnam'd Augustus. 1548
40. Henry of Valois. 1574
41. Stephen Bathori, Prince of Transylvania. 1576
42. Sigismund III. Son of John, King of Sweden, renounc'd the Protestant Religion, and was chosen King of Poland. 1587
43. Vladislaus VI. Son and Successor of Sigismund. 1632
44. John Casimer, formerly a Jesuit and Cardinal. 1648
45. Michael Coribut Wisnowiecki, descended of the Family of the Dukes of Lithuania. 1669
46. John Sbieski, descended of a very Noble Family in the Palatinate of Lublin, was chosen May 10. 1674
47. Frederick Augustus, Duke of Saxony, after a Year's Interregnum, was chosen King of Poland: But as he was oppos'd by the Primate and his Party, who declar'd the Prince of Conti Chosen, so he had a very troublesom Reign. To keep down the Factions against him, he brought in a Body of Troops from Saxony, which offending the People, he employ'd them in the Conquest of Livonia, which was formerly possess'd by the Poles, This brought the King of Sweden upon him, whose prevailing Arms enabl'd him to cause a new Election, wherein Stanislaus, a Polish Nobleman, was declar'd King in the Year 1704. And finally, by Invading Saxony, the King of Sweden oblig'd King Augustus to quit his Royalty, in the Year 1707. And Stanislaus is now King.

an admirable Prospect; the Cathedral of St. Stanislaus, the Church of St. Mary in the Grand Place, surrounded with four Rows of very fine Buildings, with 50 other Churches, are the most considerable. This City was made the See of an Archbishop, at the first planting of Christianity here, in the Year 964: but about 100 Years after, upon some Difference with the Pope, it was reduc'd to an Episcopal, and made Suffragan to Gnesna: It is also adorn'd with an University, honour'd with the Session of the Supreme Court of Judicature, the keeping of the Royal Ensigns or Regalia, and is the Place of the King's Coronation. Cracow in general comprehends the three Parts of 1. Cracow, 2. Stradomira, and 3. Cazamira. The first is encompass'd with a Ditch and Wall, flank'd with round Brick Towers, and in it stands the Castle, a Mile in Compass, founded on a Rock, with noble Buildings of Stone, round a square Court, and Galleries supported by Marble Pillars, the King's Apartments are adorn'd with very curious Paintings and Statues; and the North Gallery Built by King Sigismund affords a Prospect over all the fine Country in the Neighbourhood.

Novoguiria, 25 miles West from Cracow. Siberia 30 miles N. from it. Lelow the same distance North-East from Siberia, with some other Towns in their Neighbourhood, are noted for their Silver and Lead Mines. Czenterow, on the River Warta, near the Confines of this Palatinate, 60 miles North-West from Cracow, is famous for its well endow'd Monastery of Hermits and religious Votaries: Ozwiecin and Zator on the South-side of the Vistula, over against Novoguiria, are honour'd with the Title of Dukedoms. Wielicz on the same side of the Vistula, a few miles from Cracow, and Bochna famous for Rock Salt, as hard as Stones dug out of Mines.

Sandecz, 40 miles South from Cracow, hath Mines of Gold and Copper; as Byecz, 20 miles East from it, hath of Vitriol. Lubowla 20 miles South from Sandecz, is a strong Fortrefs, formerly in the hands of the Hungarians, but now possess'd by the Poles.

Sandomir, the Capital of the Palatinate, stands on a Rock near the Banks of the Vistula, where it receives the Sanus, about 100 miles East from Cracow, and 120 South from Warsaw. It is a pleasant City and fortified with Walls, a strong Castle, and some regular Out-works, rais'd by Casimer the Great. Among the publick Buildings, the Monastery of Dominican Friars, is chiefly remarkable. This Town was sack'd by the Tartars in 1240. and was taken by the Swedes in 1655. but restor'd the Year following.

Zawichost stands on the East-side of the Vistula, near 20 miles below Sandomir. Kunow, 40 miles North from Sandomir, hath Quarries of Marble. Schedlowitz, 30 miles West from Kunow, and 50 North-West from Sandomir, abounds with Iron and Steel.

Radom stands on the North-East of Schedlowitz about 20 miles, and Zarnaw is about 40 miles from it to the West. Malogocz stands 70 miles East from

Sandec

Cracow, Cracovia; the Metropolis of the Kingdom of Poland, is seated on a Rocky Bank of the River Vistula, about the middle of the Palatinate, 50 miles North from the Confines of Hungary, 40 East from Germany, 250 South from the Baltick Sea, and in the Latitude of 49. 40. Longitude 40. 20. It had its Name, as is suppos'd from one Cracus, a Person of great Reputation, and as the Bohemians brag, one of their Princes, whom the Polanders entreated to take upon him the Government, after they were weary of the Twelve Waywodes, that succeeded King Lechus I. but others make it the Carodunum of Ptolomy. It is the largest and best built of any Town in Poland, the Houses being of Free-Stone, and very high, the Streets large, and the publick Buildings Magnificent: Among which the King's Palace seated on a Hill, which affords it

Sendmir, and Pikzow 25 South from it. Vislicza stands in the midway between that and Corezin, which stands on the Vistula, as doth Polaniez, about 25 Miles below it. Pilsno stands on the South, about 20 Miles from the Vistula, and near 60 from Sendmir.

Lublin, the chief Town of the other Palatinate, stands at the Foot of a Hill near the River Ustricza, 50 Miles from Sendmir, and 90 from Cracow to the North-East, and 80 from Warsaw to the South-West. It is not a very large, but well-built Town, and much frequented by Merchants from Muscovy, Germany, and other Parts, at the three great Fairs kept Annually here. The great Church Dedicated to St. Michael, and several Monasteries here are magnificent Structures; and the Town is honour'd with being the Seat of one of the two Supreme Courts of Judicature in Poland. It is wall'd round, and environ'd with Marthes; and is, besides, defended by an adjacent Castle, that was at first Built by the Russians, all which render this a Place of Strength.

Kazimiers and Piotrowin, stand on the Vistula, about 15 Miles asunder, and 25 from Lublin. Urzendow is about 12 Miles South East from Piotrowin. Opal stands 25 Miles North from Lublin and Scodlock as far beyond it, near the Confines of Warsavia.

The LOWER or larger POLAND, so call'd, because Lechus the first King of the Poles chose this Country for his Seat, lies on the North of the Upper Poland, between Warsavia on the East, Germany on the West, Prussia on the North, and the Lesser Poland and Silesia on the South. It extends from the 51st to the 53d Degree of Latitude, and from the 37th to the 42d Degree of Longitude, being from North to South about 100 Miles, and from East to West above 200 Miles. It is generally a level Champaign Country, abounding with pleasant Rivers, Lakes and Ponds, among which the River Warta is most considerable, and passes thro' a great part. The Land produces plenty of Corn, and the Inhabitants are plentifully furnish'd with Cattle, Fish and Fowl. This Province comprehends 10 Palatines, wherein these Cities and Towns are of chiefest Note, viz.

In the Palatinate of Pofnania, the most Western part of Poland, Pofnan.

Rogofno.
Krofcian.
Cieblow.

The Palatinate of Kalish lies on the East of Pofnania, Kalish.

Gnesna.
Kamin.
Laudick.
Nakel.

CUTAVIA lies on the North-East of Kalish, and comprehends the three Palatinates of

I. Brzestye.
II. Wladislaw.
III. Inowlocz.

Brzestye.
Cowale.
Kruswick.

The Palatinate of Dorbzin, lies on the East of Cujavia, Dorbzin.

Libna.
Rippina.

The Palatinate of Plocsko, lies on the South-East of Dorbzin, Plocsko.

Rafuntz.
Plonsko.

The Palatinate of Rava, lies on the South of Dorbzin and Cujavia, Rava.

Lowicz.
Gostym.
Gabin.

The Palatinate of Lencicia, is on the West of Rava, Lencicia.

Bressini.
Inowlocz.

The Palatinate of Sirad is the most Southern part of the Lower Poland, Siradia.

Widlin.
Pietrikow.

Pofna, Pofnania, call'd Poznan by the Inhabitants and Pofen by the Germans, is situated on a Plain in the midst of Hills, and on the Banks of the River Warta, 170 Miles North-West from Cracow, 150 West from Warsaw, and 100 Miles South from Dantzick. It is a City of small Compass, but well built and strong, being surrounded with double Walls and a deep Ditch, and adorn'd with a stately Castle: The Suburbs are encompass'd by a Moats and deep Lake. It is also the See of a Bishop and a Place of good Trade. The Mayor or chief Magistrate, who is chosen Annually, is dignify'd with the Title of General of Great Poland. Joh. Lubranski, sometime Bishop here, founded a small University, in the Suburbs of Pofna; which Structure was afterwards very much Beautified by Adam Canar, one of his Successors, and it is in a flourishing State. The other most considerable Buildings are the Jesuits College and Monastery. The Inhabitants of this City are very Wealthy and Civil, and appear finer in their Apparel and Houses than ordinary.

Rogofno stands about 20 Miles North from Pofna, Krofcian in the very middle of the Palatinate, 30 West from Pofna. Cieblow 20 Miles West from Krofcian, stands on a small River that a little below falls into the Oder.

Kalish stands in a marshy Land near the Banks of the River Drofna, 40 Miles South East from Pofna. It is fortified with a strong Brick-Wall, and adorn'd with a stately College of Jesuits.

Gnesna, call'd Gnisen by the Germans, the chief City of the Lower Poland, and formerly the Metropolis of the whole Kingdom, and Seat of the King stands in the middle of the Palatinate, 30 Miles from Kalish to the North, and as far from Pofna to the West. It was Built, as is generally reported, by King Lechus I. Founder of this Monarchy, and call'd Gnesna, from an Eagle's Nest found there, which in the Polish Language is call'd Gnesiad. A dreadful Fire which happen'd in 1613. miserably laid it waste, and it has ever since declin'd. This is the See of the Archbishop, a Person of great Dignity and Power, being Primate of all Poland, Legate of the Holy See; and in case of the King's Death, is Regent till a new King be chosen, whom also he claims the right of Declaring and Crowning. The Cathedral is a venerable Building, and exceeding Rich, having Gates of Corinthian Brass, and a Treasury of inestimable Value.

Kamin and Laudick, both stand on the River Warta, 20 or 30 Miles East and South-East from Gnesna. Nakel stands on a River to which it gives Name, 35 Miles North from Gnesna.

Brzestye.

Brziesze stands upon a Causeway among Marshes, 60 Miles East from Gnesna, and is only considerable on account of its being the Seat of a Palatine: Crowle stands upon the Vistula, 20 Miles East from Brziesze. Kruswick stands upon the Lake Gropi, about 30 miles West from Brziesze, and is remarkable for the Death of Popiel II. Duke of Poland, who was devour'd by Rats, a just Punishment from Heaven, for having poison'd a great number of his Friends and Relations at a Feast, as Staravolscius relates. Bidger, in this Palatinate, has been mention'd in History, on account of the Treaty of Peace concluded there, Nov. 6. 1657. between the King of Poland and the Duke of Brandenburg.

Wladislaw, Uladislavia stands upon the Vistula in the midway between Ploczko and Thorn, about 20 miles from Brziesze to the North, in a marshy Soil, but surrounded with a plentiful Country. It is the Seat of the Bishop of Cujavia, whose stately Palace is the chief Ornament of the City. The Cathedral is an old Building, but very rich in Plate and Furniture. This is the chief Palatinate and Capital of Cujavia.

Inowlocz about 30 or 40 miles West from Uladislaw, is the Seat of the third Palatine of Cujavia, but otherwise not very considerable. Bydgosz, a wall'd Town, stands on the River Barde, which falls into the Vistula, and is a Place of good Trade, especially for Salmon.

Dorbzin is a little Town, built upon a Rock near the Banks of the Vistula, about 15 miles East from Uladislaw, and only notable for being a Palatinate; and about 25 miles North from it stands Libna and Rippina, a Fortress.

Ploczko the chief City of the Palatinate, and the See of a Bishop, is seated on a high Bank on the Vistula, whence is a fair Prospect of a pleasant and fruitful Country: It is distant 15 miles from Dorbzin to the South, near 30 from Brziesze to the East, and about 50 from Warsaw to the North-West; and is a populous Place, having several religious Houses and Churches, besides a Cathedral, very well endow'd. Rassuntz and Plonsko stand about 30 miles to the North-East from it.

Rava, a populous City, the Head of the Palatinate, stands on a River of the same Name, 50 miles South from Ploczko, and about as far South-West from Warsaw. It is built of Wood, and guarded by a Castle, which is the Prison of such Persons of Quality as are committed, and also the Repository of part of the Crown Revenues. Here is also a wealthy College of Jesuits. About 25 miles North from hence stands Lowicz, the Residence of the Archbishop of Gnesna, whose Palace is a magnificent Fabrick: The Town is very populous, and much resorted to by Merchants at its Annual Fair. Goslyrim stands about 10 miles North from Lowicz, on the River Bsura, as does Gabin 10 miles East from it.

Lowicz is seated among Marshes, 20 Miles from Rava, guarded by a Castle, and adorn'd with a stately Church, and the Palace of the Archbishop of Gnesna, who usually resides here.

Lancicia or Lanschet, which gives Denomination to a Palatinate, stands on the River Bsura, about 40 or 50 miles from Rava to the North West, and 80 from Warsaw to the West. It stands among Marshes, and hath a good Castle for its Defence, built on Rock. Bressini and Inowlocz stand in the extreme South-West part of this Palatinate, near the Confines of Upper Poland, about 60 miles from Lancicia.

Sirad stands in a Plain, on the Banks of the River Warta, 60 miles West from Rava, and near 70 South from Pozna: 'Tis a mean-built Town, the Houses being of Wood, but is surrounded with a strong Brick-Wall. It is the Head of a Palatinate, and was formerly a Dukedom, usually given to the second Son of the King. Petrikow, about 30 or 40 miles from Sirad to the East, is a neat and well-built Town, but stands among Marshes, and was almost quite burnt down in the Year 1640. Here was formerly a Royal Palace, but it is now ruinous. The other Parliament, or Supreme Court of Judicature in Poland, is held yearly in this Town, for deciding Differences between the Nobility, and determining Causes by Appeal from Inferior Courts. Widlim, a neat Town built of Brick, stands about 25 miles South from Sirad.

Of P R U S S I A.

P R U S S I A is a large Country, lying on the North of Poland Proper, between that and the Baltick Sea, with Lithuania and Samogitia on the East, and Pomerania on the West. Poland Proper, as we have said, with Warsovia, being the Southern, as the Baltick Sea and Samogitia, is the Northern Bounds. It lies between the 53d and 55th Degree of Latitude, and in Longitude from the 38th to the 44th Degree. Its Length is about 200 miles; the Breadth in the Eastern Part, is at most but 80 miles; but in the Western Part it runs up to near twice as much. The Soil is reasonably Fruitful, but somewhat overrun with Weeds, and abounds with Rivers, whereof the Wesel or Vistula is the most considerable; that River rises in the Mountains, on the Borders of Hungary, passes cross Poland, and falls into the Baltick at Dantzick, having first divided itself into several Branches, and made the three Islands called the Werder: The larger Branch passes by Marienburg, and at Elbing falls into the Bay Frisch-Haft, which is a safe Harbour from the Baltick. Here are also many small Lakes, which afford the Inhabitants plenty of Fish, as the Woods do with Venison, and the Lands with Cattle and Corn; one Commodity especially, Prussia hath pecularly, which is Amber found on the Sea-coasts in great plenty. Prussia was formerly a rude Country, inhabited by Barbarian Idolaters, long after Poland had received Christianity; for though many Endeavours were used to Convert 'em, nothing could be effected, till the Knights of the Teutonic Order attempted it; who in the middle of the Thirteenth Century, Conquer'd the Country, planted Christianity, and succeeded in the Sovereignty of the Eastern part of it; and Albert, Marquess of Brandenburg and first Duke of Prussia, becoming Master of the Order, conveyed the Dominion of that part, since called the Ducal Prussia, to his Successors the Marquises of Brandenburg, who still enjoy it: But the Eastern part was Conquer'd by the Poles, and is still part of their Country. At the Reformation the Lutheran Religion prevail'd here, and is still generally profess'd in the Regal Prussia; but the late Marquise of Brandenburg introduc'd Calvinism into Koningsberg, and other Parts of the Ducal Prussia.

Prussia is divided into two large Parts, viz. Royal and Ducal. The former subject to the King of Poland, is the Western part, bounded on the North by the Baltick, on the South by Poland, on the East by the Ducal Prussia, and on the West by Pomerania. It is divided by the River Vistula, that part lying on the East of the River, being call'd Pomerelia. The chief Cities and Towns are these, viz.

In Pomerelia.

Dantzick, Dantiscum, ant Gedanum, the Capital City of Pomerania, is seated on a Bay of the Baltick Sea, near the Mouth of the River Vistula, 140 miles North West from Warsaw, near 120 East from Sterin in Pomerania, and about 30 West from Elbing, in the Latitude of 54, and Longitude of 40. It is a large, well-built, rich, and populous City, the greatest Emporium of the Baltick-Sea, and perhaps one of the greatest Granaries in Europe. It is one of the chief of the Hanse-Towns, and a famous Mart Town for Corn and other Commodities of Poland; vast Fleets of Holland Ships come Yearly hither, from whence they fetch almost all the Corn used in Holland and Zealand. It was erected into a City in 1295. by King Primislaus. and in 1343, Wall'd round by the Knights of the Teutonic Order, whose Master. Conrad Wallenrodt, built that part of the City call'd De rechte Stadt, in 1390. Besides which. Dantzick consists of two other Parts, which are Govern'd by three distinct Senates, and so might be called three Towns; but is however, but one City, under the Government of its own Magistracy, and Protection of the King of Poland. Two Rivulets pass through the Town, and feed it with Water, as well as drive many Mills for the Convenience and Profit of the People. The publick Buildings are very fair, especially the Church of St. Mary, which is very magnificent in its Building, and rich in its Ornaments, the Font alone being said to have cost five thousand Pounds; the Town-House, the Arsenal, the Exchange, the place of St. Dominick, and a College of Jesuits, with several Churches, are the other Buildings of chiefest Note here. This City hath suffer'd many Revolutions: About the Year 1100, the Danes possess'd it; afterwards the Polanders gain'd it: In 1305, the Teutonic Knights were Masters of it: In 1454, Casimer III. King of Poland regain'd it, and granted great Privileges to the Citizens; who afterwards in defence of the Augsburg Confession, sided with Maximilian of Austria against the Poles, which provok'd King Stephen Batbori to Besiege them in 1577. But by the Mediation of other Princes, they were restor'd to their Religion and Liberties, in 1597. And in 1632, the City was made a Member of the State, and admitted to a Suffrage in the Election of the King. In 1656, they vigorously repuls'd the Swedes, and adhered to the Interest of King John Casimir.

Stargard and Dirschow stand about 20 miles South from Dantzick, the latter on the Vistula.

Grabow stands on the Borders of Pomerania, 80 miles South-West, and seated on the Bay.

Elbing stands on a little River of the same Name, which rises out of the Lake Drausen, and falls here into the Frisch Haff, a Bay of the Baltick, which is the Haven of this City, at the distance of 4 or 5 miles from the Vistula, 30 from Dantzick to the East, about 60 from Uladislaw to the North, and 120 North-West from Warsaw. It has a most delightful Situation, is very Populous, and a Place of great Trade, the Inhabitants being wholly addicted to Business and Commerce. The City was built in 1239, and is divided into the Old and New Town. It was at first a Free and Imperial City, but afterwards fell into the Hands of the Knights of the Teutonic Order, and when Dantzick and Thorn shook off their Yoak, it follow'd the Example, and submitted itself upon certain Conditions, to the King of Poland. In the Year 1629, it was Taken by the Swedes, and being afterwards Surrender'd, was Taken again by them in 1655. There is an University in it, which was Founded by Albert of Brandenburg, Duke of Prussia. This Town, together with Thorn and Dantzick, are the Repositories of the Treasure and Archives of Royal Prussia. On the 14th of October, 1698, General Brandt, with a Body of Horse of the Elector of Brandenburg's Forces, came into the Neighbourhood of this Place, with design to put a Garison into it, upon account of an Agreement formerly made between the then King of Poland and the late Elector of Brandenburg, at the Treaty of Velaw and Bidgost, that this City should be put into the Hands of the Elector, as Security for Payment of a Debt of 400000 Dollars, due to him for the Assistance he had given the Republick of Poland in the War against Sweden, neither of which having been performed, he came now to demand it; but the City not receiving his Garison, he Block'd it up and made every thing ready for Bombarding it. Upon which the Citizens, unwilling to let things come to Extremity, and despairing of Relief from Poland, which was then in great Confusion, submitted upon Articles, and 1200 Brandenburgers enter'd the 11th of November, and kept Possession of the Place, till the beginning of the Year 1700, when when the Poles agreed to pay the Money; and till it could be raised, put into the Elector's Hands the Jewels of the Crown, and accordingly the Brandenburgers quitted the City, which remains in its former State.

Mirienburg, Marieburgum, called also Margem-burg by the Inhabitants, and Malbork by the Polanders, is seated on the Nogat, a Branch of the Vistula, at the distance of 25 miles from Dantzick to the South-East, and about 20 from Elbing to the South-West. It was heretofore the chief Seat of the Teutonic Knights, having been Founded by a Cross-bearer of that Fraternity, and took its Name, thay say, from a Miraculous Image of the Virgin Mary. The Castle was built in 1281, and reckon'd one of the strongest in these Parts: But in the Swedish Wars in 1644, it was burnt down, and the New one since built, is not so considerable, nor the Town very Noble; the Houses being of Wood and but mean, and the Inhabitants but Poor. The Town was Taken by the Poles in 1460. And by the Swedes in 1625, and in 1655. But was restor'd afterwards to the Poles, who still possess it.

Cu'm, an ancient famous City, stands on a Hill, the Foot whereof is Water'd by the Vistula, 50 miles South from Dantzick, and 40 North-West from Uladislaw; it is at present in mean State, having suffer'd much in the Swedish War, but was anciently a Fortrefs of great Importance; the Town was built by the Cross-bearers of the Teutonic Knights in 1223, and afterwards well Fortified against the Irruptions of the Heathen Prussians. Herman de Salza, Master of the Order, prescrib'd Laws for its Government, which were so considerable as to be taken notice of publicly, and a Specimen of them have been publish'd by Lambecius. It was also honour'd with an Episcopal See, but since the decay of the City, the Bishoprick hath been translated to Culmensee, or Culmsee, a small Town about 12 Miles South-East from Culm.

Thon, Torunum, which stands on the Vistula, about 20 Miles South from Culm, and 30 North-East from Uladislaw, 100 North-West from Warsaw, and 50 South-East from Dantzick; is the fairest and best built Town in Royal Prussia, the Streets being much broader, and the Houses statelier than at Dantzick; it is also adorn'd with a Gymnasium, or small University, a Library, Hospital, and a stately Town-House, exceeded by none but Amsterdam. All which Structures were erected in the beginning of this Century, through the Care and Industry of Henry Strobant, one of the Burgomasters, who died 1609. It was heretofore subject to the Teutonic Order, from whom it revolted in 1254, and was afterwards a free Imperial City; and tho' at present exempted from the Empire, and under the Protection of Poland, enjoys many Privileges. Here is a Bridge over the River, and at Old

Thorn, a mile off, are still the Ruins of a Castle. The famous Nicolas Copernicus, Author of the Theory, was born here. This City was Taken, and Regain'd several times in the Swedish Wars, from 1655, to 1665.

Braunslaw stands on the Frisch-Haff, 20 miles North-East from Elbing.

Wartemberg is 45 miles East from Elbing, in that part of the Regal Prussia, which advances forward into the middle of the Ducal.

The Ducal Prussia (which may now be also call'd Royal, in regard that the Elector of Brandenburg hath chosen this part of his Dominions to Honour with the Title of Kingdom, in his late Creation) is bound on the North with the Baltick, and Samogitia on the South with Warsovia, on the East with Lithuania, and on the West with Prussia Royal. It is the larger part of Prussia, extending Eastward from the Sea-Coast, above 100 Miles, and Southward towards Warsovia as far. The chief Towns in it are,

Koningsberg.	}	{	Pillaw.
Memel.			Heiligpeil.
Labiau.

Koningsberg, the chief City of the Ducal Prussia, and a place of great Trade, stands at the Mouth of the River Pregel, which here falls into the Frisch-Haff, 80 miles East from Dantzick, about as far West from the Confines of Samogitia, and 130 miles North from Warsaw. It is a large and well-built Town, divided into three parts; whereof that which is properly the Old Koningsberg, and was built in 1260, by the Teutonic Order, hath the Ducal Palace in it; The second stands in an Island, and is called Kniphoff, from an Officer of that Name, who joined it to Koninsberg in 1380. In this Part stands the Cathedral of the Bishoprick of Smarland, and an University Founded by Duke Albert; the third is called Lebenicht, which Berthold of Austria, added to the two former. The Lake called the Frisch-Haff, opens to the Baltick Sea, and makes a convenient Port to this City, which is thereby a great Emporium, and hath been subject to the Brandenburgher since the Year 1525:

Memel stands at the extream North-part of Prussia, upon a Lake of fresh Water, called the Curisch-Haff, which opening to the Baltick, makes a convenient Port, at the distance of 90 miles from Koningsberg to the North, and 60 from Mittaw in Courland, to the West. It is seated among Lakes, and is Fortified with a strong Castle, which renders it the Northern Key of this Country.

Labiau stands at the bottom of the Curisch-Haff, about 25 miles North-East from Koningsberg. Pillaw, a very safe Port on the Baltick, at the Mouth of the Frisch-Haff, about 30 miles West from Koningsberg. Heiligpeil stands overagainst it, within-side the Lake.

Of S A M O G I T I A and C O U R L A N D.

SAMOGITIA lies on the North of Prussia, in a Triangular Form, between Courland on the North, Lithuania on the East and South-East, and Ducal Prussia on the South West; a small part of it extending quite to the Baltick on the West, and the extent of it is about 100 Miles. It is a Marshy Soil, whence the Country has its Name, Samogitz, signifying such in the Language of the Inhabitants, and hath abundance of Rivers and Lakes, that often overflow the Land, which yields Pasture and Corn; but especially Woods in abundance, wherein great quantity of excellent Honey is found: A Race of Horses are bred here, which tho' small, are of a sprightly generous Nature. The River Chrozas, otherwise call'd the Russe, passes through the South-Point of this Country, whence running cross Prussia, falls into the Lake Curisch-Haff. The Inhabitants are a dull stupid People, and were with great difficulty converted from Paganism by King Uladislaus Jagello; nor even to this day is it entirely rooted out, the Inhabitants of some of the more desert Parts Worshipping Idols. This Country was sometime subject to the Russians, afterwards to the Teutonic Order, and at last Conquer'd by Uladislaus Jagello, King of Poland, in the Fourteenth Century, and hath ever since been part of the Kingdom. There are no considerable Cities here; those of greatest Note are,

Rosiem.	}}}	Birze.
Midnick.		Kiedainy.
Schwenden.

Rosiem, or Rosienie, is a small City seated near the River Dubissa, in the Latitude of 55, about 70 miles East from the Baltick Sea, near 50 West from the Confines of Lithuania, near 30 North from the River Russ, and about 80 miles North-East from Koningsberg. It is a Place of no great Note, but is by some reckon'd the Capital of Samogitia; tho' others give that Honour to

Midnick, or Vormatia, because it is the Seat of the Bishop of Samogitia: It stands on the River Wirpita, about 25 miles North-West from Rosiem, and is but a very poor ordinary Place:

Kiedainy stands 30 miles South-East from Rosiem. Schwenden 60 miles to the North of Rosiem, and near the Confines of Courland. And Birze, which bears the Title of a Dukedom, stands 100 miles East from Schwenden.

C O U R L A N D, or Kurland, lies on the North of Samogitia, between that and the River Duina, which divides it from Lithuania; whereof this was formerly reckon'd a part. The Baltick-Sea bounds it on the West, the Gulf of Riga and Duina on the North, Samogitia on the South, and Lithuania on the East. It is in length above 150 miles, but the breadth is not proportionate, being but 40, and in the Eastern part not above 20 miles. The Country is plain and fruitful, abounding with Corn and Honey; some parts of it are Fenny, and full of Lakes and Rivers. The River Duina washes its Coasts, and affords them Water-Carriage for their Goods to Riga, as the Baltick-Sea does for Foreign Trade. This Country was formerly subject to the Teutonic Order, afterwards to the Poles, and tho' at present it has its own Duke, he pays Homage to the King of Poland. It is divided into two Parts. 1. Courland, and 2. Semigallia; the chief Towns whereof are,

In Courland , which is the Western part	}	Goldingen.
divided from Semigallia by the River		Windaw.
Mussa.		Piltyn.

In Semigallia , the Eastern part beyond the Mussa	}	Mittaw.
		Egypten.
		Bauske.

Goldingen is usually reckoned the Capital of Courland, but otherwise not considerable. It stands upon the River Wetaw, about 30 miles from the Baltick, 130 Miles North from Koningsberg, and 60 South West from Riga.

Piltyn is the Seat of the Bishop of Courland, and stands upon the same River, about 20 Miles North from Goldingen.

Windaw, called by the Inhabitants Kies, is seated at the Mouth of the River Wetaw, near the Baltick. It was formerly the Seat of the Provincial of Liesland; and the Sessions of the Parliament of Courland, made it Populous; but its ancient Splendor is lost, and at present 'tis only considerable on account of some Trade; Pitch, Tar, Wax, and other Commodities, being exported hence to Foreign Parts.

Mittaw stands on the Banks of the River Mussa or Maus, 50 Miles South-East from Goldingen, 35 South from Riga, and above 250 North from Warsaw. It is the Capital of Semigallia, and the Seat of the Duke of Courland. The Town is mean, but the Castle is Magnificent. It was taken by Gustavus Adolphus, in 1621. but restored in 1629.

Bauski stands upon the same River, about 25 miles East from Mittaw.

Egypten stands on the Borders of Lithuania, 20 miles East from Bauski.

C H A P. V.

Of the Great Dutchy of LITHUANIA.

LITHUANIA, called Litwa, by the Inhabitants, Litweski by the Poles, and Littawen by the Germans, the largest Province of the Kingdom of Poland, lies on the East of the Provinces we have been speaking of, and is bounded on the North by Cowland, Livonia, and Muscovy; on the South by Volhinia and Polesia, and on the East by Polachia and Samogitia. It extends from the 52d to the 56th Degree of Latitude, and from the 44th, to the 45th Degree of Longitude, in Form almost Circular, and about 250 miles over. The Land is flat and Marshy, and was formerly overrun with Woods, but by the Industry of the Kings, they are in some measure cut down, and the Land cultivated. Here are many Lakes and Rivers which afford the Inhabitants plenty of Fish, as the Forests do Venison, Honey, Pitch, and Furrs; which last is very useful to the Inhabitants, for the Air is very cold, and makes such Cloathing very Necessary. The Land yields Corn (but the Cold often spoils the Harvest) and feeds great Herds of Cattle, wherewith the Country is well stock'd. Pitch, Tar, and Timber, are sent hence by the Merchants, and Wine, Salt, and Woollen Cloth receiv'd in return; all other Necessaries the Inhabitants have at Home.

Lithuania was formerly Govern'd by its own Prince, called the Great Duke, and comprehended also Volhinia and Polachia; till Uladislaus Jagello, their Duke, being chosen King of Poland, annexed it to that Crown, but with the preservation of the ancient Laws and Form of Government: This was sometimes in future Successions, opposed by the Lithuanians, and many Differences happen'd thereupon, till the Year 1569. it was finally agreed that the Lithuanians should never elect a Great Duke, but should assemble with the Polish Nobility upon an Interregnum, and both Nations together chuse one Prince, and that Volhinia and Polachia should be granted to Poland.

The Inhabitants were formerly most stupid Idolaters, till Uladislaus Jagello being Converted, introduced the Christian Religion here, built a Cathedral, and founded a Bishoprick at Vilna, and erected divers other Churches; so that in time Idolatry was suppress'd; but the lower sort being very ignorant and stupid, do to this Day, in many Places, retain some remains of it; and because a Serpent was the God they worshipped formerly, do still keep in their Houses an Adder, which they feed and cherish with great care. The Nobility here, as in Poland, are very Proud, and domineer over the Commonalty, which are as sneaking, and submit to a strange degree, the Tenant being his Lord's Slave, and the greatest part of his time bestow'd in his Service. The whole Country is divided into eight Palatinates, wherein are these Cities and Towns of Note.

In the Palatinate of Braslaw, which adjoins also to Samogitia, and lies on the North of Wilna.

In the Palatinate of Poloczko, lying East from Braslaw.

Eastward of Poloczko, lies the Palatinate of Witepsk, in which are,

On the West of Wilna lies the Palatinate of Troki, divided into two Parts by the River Niemen.

The Palatinate of Minski lies on the East of Wilna, and South of Braslaw, in which are,

In the Palatinate of Meislaw, which lies on the East of Minski, and South of Witepsk.

The Palatinate of Novogrodeck is the South-west Corner of Lithuania, having Troki on the North and Minski on the East.

Wilna, or Vilna, called also Vilenski by the Inhabitants, and die Wilde by the Germans, is seated at the Confluence of the Wilna and Wilia Rivers, in the Latitude of 54 30, at the distance of 120 miles from Koningsberg to the East, 180 from Warsaw to the North-East, and near 120 South from Mittaw. It is the Capital of Lithuania, and is a large and very populous City, Founded by Duke Gediminus, in 1305. The Houses are low, of Wood, and mean, but the publick Buildings are fine, among which are the Castle and Duke's Palace; the Cathedral and several Churches, all built of Stone, the Bernardine Monastery, the University Founded by King Stephen, in 1579, and the Foreign Merchants Houses, which are built of Stone, and well adorn'd, especially that of the Muscovian Company. Wilna is an Episcopal See, founded as we have said, by King Uladislaus Jagello, and a Place of Trade, but it is chiefly carry'd on by Foreigners, the Inhabitants being Poor and much addicted to Drunkenness. The Parliament, or chief Court of Judicature sit here one Year, and the next Year at Minsk. The Ducal Palace hath an Armory very well furnish'd. About two Miles from hence stands another Palace built of Wood, by King Sigismund, adorned with a Park, Orchards and Gardens: It is called Vversupa, being near the Water, which the Word signifies. In 1655. the Muscovians took Vilna, but it was afterwards recover'd.

The

In the Palatinate of Wilna, which adjoins to Samogitia.

The River Wilna, on which this City stands, divides the Palatinate into two equal Parts, and then washing the Borders, passes through some part of Samogitia and Prussia, and falls at last into the Baltick, having first received several other Rivers, and changed its Name into that of Rosse.

Wilkomierz stands in the lower part of the Palatinate, 35 Miles North-west from Wilna, on the River Swiera: And Osmiana stands in the upper part, 25 Miles South-West from Wilna.

Braslaw stands near the Confines of Courland, 70 Miles North-East from Wilna; it is the Capital of a Palatinate, and has a strong Castle built upon a Rock. The Town is seated upon a Lake, whence issues a small River, that about 20 Miles off falls into the Duina.

Miadzial stands 50 miles South from Braslaw, upon another small Lake and River, and Narocz stands upon a River of the same Name, 20 Miles South-West from Miadzial. Both these Towns by means of this River, have communication with Wilna.

Poloczko stands upon the River Duina, and another small River to which it gives Name 100 miles East from Braslaw. It is the Capital of the Palatinate, which was formerly a Duchy, a large and populous Town, and guarded by two Castles, one on the Duina, and the other on the Polotta. It was Taken by the Muscovites in 1563. regain'd by K. Stephen, in 1579. and since that again taken by the Muscovites, and Re-taken by the Poles.

Druia stands upon the Duina, 70 miles below Poloczko, and 30 East from Braslaw, and hath a Castle near it. Drissa stands at the Mouth of a River of the same Name, which falls into the Duina, 20 miles East from Druia; and Lissa is about 30 miles South from it.

Witepsk, the Capital of a Palatinate, is seated on the Duina, where it receives the Witza, 50 miles East from Poloczko; it hath a Castle which was often Taken and Re-taken in the last Muscovite War. It had formerly Dukes of its own, till Olgerd was chosen great Duke.

Wisnissa stands near the Duina, 20 miles below Wetepsk, and Ula, 20 miles below it, at the Mouth of a River of the same Name. Suras on the Duina, also is about 25 miles from Witepsk.

Troki the Capital of a Palatinate, and formerly the Seat of the Great Duke, is seated among inaccessible Marshes, whence issues the River Brasala, that 10 miles below falls into the Wilna: It is distant about 20 Miles from Wilna to the West, and hath a strong Castle for its Defence, built by Guedimin, Great Duke, in 1322. Taken by the Muscovites, and the Town very much destroy'd in 1655.

Grodno stands on the River Niemen near its Mouth into the Wilna, 30 Miles West from Troki. Grodno is seated partly on a rising Ground, near the Banks of the River Niemen, over which it has a stately Bridge of Wood. The Town is Fortified with a Castle founded upon a Rock, and is 60 Miles distant from Troki to the South. Bielica stands also on the Niemen, 60 miles above Grodno. And Merecz 40 Miles below Grodno, on a River of the same Name, which there falls into the Niemen.

Minsk, the Capital of another Palatinate, is seated in a Marsh, near the River Swislocz, 80 miles South-East from Wilna. It is a well built Town and hath a Castle for its Defence. Boryssow stands upon the River Berezina, 50 miles East from Minsk, which is a Regular Fortification, with deep Ditches and a double Palisade, and hath a Morass on one side. Brodzieck upon the same River, 40 Miles to the South. And Swislocz 20 miles more South where the River or the same Name falls into the Berezina.

Mscislaw stands upon the River Sos, in the Confines of Muscovy, 170 miles East from Minsk. It was taken by the Muscovites in the last War, and regain'd by King Sigismund I whose General Constantine, Duke of Ostrog, did here cut to pieces the Muscovite Army of 40000 Men. Mobilow, seated on a Hill near the Banks of the River Boristhenes or Nieper, (which passes quite through this Palatinate) 50 Miles South-East from Mscislaw, is a good well-built Town. It was Taken by the Muscovites in 1654, and Re-taken by the Poles in 1656. Orssa stands also on the Nieper, where it receives the River Orssa, 60 miles West from Mscislaw. It is a good Town and hath a strong Castle, but was Taken by the Muscovites.

Robaczow, the Capital of a Territory, which by some Geographers is reckon'd as separate from this Palatinate, is a large good Town, seated on the Nieper where it receives the Odrucz, 80 miles South-West from Mscislaw.

Novogrodeck, call'd also Litawiski, is one of the best Cities in Lithuania, and used formerly to be given to the Great Duke's Second Son. It is seated upon the River Niemen, 60 Miles South-West from Minski, and 60 South from Wilna. In this City and in Minski, the Diet or Parliament of Lithuania is alternately held. Walkowisca stands upon the River Ross, 60 miles West from Novogrodeck. Slanim stands upon the Sczura, 30 miles South from Novogrodeck; and Nesweis stands on the Eastern Confines, 60 miles from Novogrodeck, and as far South from Minski. Slucz bears the Title of a Duchy, and was formerly a separate Territory. The City stands upon a River of the same Name, 80 miles South-West from Novogrodeck, and is a large Town but the Houses are of Wood. Near this City a famous Victory was obtain'd by the Poles over the Tartars, in the time of King Sigismund I.

And now having Survey'd Poland properly call'd, Prussia, Lithuania, Samogitia, and Courland we shall proceed to Warsovia, wherein stands the City Warsaw, whence passing through Polabia, Polesia, Red-Russia, Podolia and Volhinia, finish our Journey to the Ukraine, the extream South-East part of the Polish Dominions.

C H A P. VI.

Of Warsovia, Polachia and Polesia.

WARSOVIA or Masovia, call'd by the Poles, Mazowse, and by the Germans, Die Masaw; may be reckon'd the most considerable part of the Polish Dominion, being the Seat of the King; and the Grand Dyet of the Kingdom, and also of a vast number of Nobility. It lyes in the middle of the Countries we have been Treating of, having Prussia on the North, the Upper Poland on the South, Polachia which parts it from Lithuania on the East, and the Lower Poland on the West. This is it's present Bounds, but formerly all Polachia, and that part of Lower Poland on the other side the Vistula, that is, the Palatinates of Dobrzyń and Płocko, were part of it, and the whole govern'd by a Duke of it's own, doing Homage to the King, till in the Year 1495. the Race being Extinct, Płocko and Dobrzyń were United to the Crown, and the rest given to Conrade Brother to King John Albert, whose Issue Male failing, in the Year 1526, it was finally annexed to the Crown. And Polachia which had been joyn'd to Lithuania, was also annexed to the Crown in 1567.

It lies between the 51 Deg. 30 Min. and 53 Deg. 20 Min. of Latitude, in form near Oval, extending from North-East to South-West about 130 miles, and in breadth about 90 Miles. It has the benefit of several Navigable Rivers, especially the Vistula, or Weissel, which runs through the Southern part, and the Bug passes quite cross from East to West. The Country is plain, and the Soil fruitful, yielding Corn, Cattle, Fish and Fowl, in good plenty.

It is but one Palatinate denominated from Czersko, which is the Seat of the Palatine; but Warsaw is the Principal City, which with the other chief Towns are as follow.

Warsaw.	}	Zakrotin.
Czersko.		Novigrod.
Latowicz.		Lumsa.
Wischgrad.

Warsaw, the Metropolis of Poland, is Seated upon the Vistula, in the Latitude of 52 Deg. 10 Min. 150 Miles North from Cracow, 120 South from Koninsberg, 100 East from Gnesna, and about 100 West from the Confines of Lithuania. It is a large and populous City, the Seat of the King of Poland, and of the Sessions of the Grand Dyet of the Kingdom. It is divided into four parts, viz. The Old and the New Town, the Suburbs of Cracow, and the Prag. The Palace is a noble Structure, in form four-square, built by Sigismund III. and much beautified by his Successors. The chief Church of St. John Baptist is very fine, as are the other publick Buildings, which are the Arsenal, the Castle, the Market-place, &c. Over the River here is a stately Wooden Bridge, and Beyond it stands another Palace of the King's call'd Viasdow, wherein the Dyet Assembles. It stands amidst many delicate Gardens and Groves; and not far from it in the Suburbs of Cracow, is to be seen the Monument of Demetrius Suiscius Great Duke of Muscovy, who being taken Prisoner, died a Captive in Poland, whose King to Honour him, built a small Chappel over it. In the Plains near this City the Election of the King is made. This City has lately suffer'd a terrible Calamity, for in the Month of Sept. 1708. a Fire broke out, which continued burning nine Days, and has reduc'd almost the whole City to Ashes.

Czersko stands also on the Vistula, 30 Miles South from Warsaw. It is a small City, the Seat of the Palatine, but else not very considerable. Latowicz stands on the River Limier 30 Miles East from Czersko. Wischgrad is seated on the Vistula, where the Bug falls into it, about 50 Miles North-West from Warsaw, and hardly 20 from Płocko. Zakrotin stands upon the Bug, 20 Miles above Wischgrad. Novigrod is seated on the River Narew in the North-East part of this Province, 80 Miles from Warsaw, and 20 Miles above it stands Lumsa.

POLACHIA, call'd by the Inhabitants Podlaske, and by the Germans Podlachien, is but a small Province, lying between Masovia and Lithuania, with Polesia and Lublin Palatinate on the South, and Prussia on the North. It extends in length, from North to South 120 Miles, but in breadth it is hardly 30. The River runs through the Southern part, and several smaller Rivers water the other parts. It is but one Palatinate, whereof the Capital is Bielsk. The Towns of chiefest note are,

Bielsk.	}	Narew.
Drobiezyn.		Suras.
Mielnick.		Augustow.
Lozice.

Bielsk the chief City of Polachia is seated on the River Biala, in the midway between Gracow in the North, and Bzeste on the South, 100 Miles East from Warsaw, and 80 West from Sluck. It is guarded by a strong Castle, and is a place of good Force. Drobiezyn stands on the River Bug, 50 Miles South-east from Bielsk, as doth also Mielnick, 10 Miles above it. Lozice is on the other side of the River, 20 Miles to the South. Narew stands 15 Miles from Bielsk to the North, and Suras 20 Miles further, and Augustow in the extream North part 60 Miles from Bielsk.

POLESIA is of much larger extent, comprehending in length from East to West above 200 Miles, but in breadth not above 60, or at most 70 Miles. It lies on the South of Lithuania and Polesia, on the East it is bounded with Volhinia, on the West with Upper Poland, and on the South with Red Russia, and Volhinia. It is a very Marshy Soil, and abounds with Forests, and Rivers; and consequently hath plenty of Venison and Fish: Honey also is found in the Woods, which the Inhabitants vend abroad. This Province is sometimes call'd the Palatinate of Bzeste or Bressici, that being the chief City and Seat of the only Palatine in the whole Province. The chief Cities are these, viz.

Bressci.	}	Wyhoneſſcz.
Koden.		Oleusko.
Miedzyrzeci.		Pinsk.
Zanow.		Davidow.
Bialla.		Wielsk.

Breſte or Breſſici, is Seated on the River Bug, 50 Miles South from Bielsk, and 100 East from Warsaw; it is the Capital of this Province, and is Fortified with a Castle built upon a Rock. Koden stands upon the same River 20 Miles above it. Miedzyrzeci stands in the Confines upon the River Kryſſina 30 miles to the West. Upon the same River 10 miles to the East, and 20 West from Koden stands Bialla, the Palace of the Duke of Radziwil, adorn'd with a Gymnasium or a small University. Zanow stands upon the Bug, 20 miles West from Breſte. Pinsk stands upon the River Pina, 90 miles West from Breſte. Wyhoneſſcz is 30 miles North from Pinsk. Davidow 70 East from Pinsk. And Wedlec a Castle, 20 miles more to the East. Oleusko stands in the extreme South-east part of Poleſia, on a River of the same Name.

C H A P. VII.

Of Red Russia, Polodia, Volhynia and the Ukraïn.

RED-RUSSIA in its ancient extent comprehended all Volbinia and Podolia, as well as the Province which now bears that Name, Russia, because formerly possess'd by Russes, and Red from a Clay of that Colour very frequent here; and because in the Woods the Earth is very Black, the Country is by some call'd Black-Russia, as also Little-Russia, to distinguish this from Russia or Muscovy: And in those Days it was govern'd by Princes of their own, who were formidable both to Poland and Muscovy; till in the Year 1341. Casimer II. call'd the Great, did incorporate it with Poland. It's present Bounds are Poleſia on the North, Volhynia and Podolia on the East, Upper Poland on the West, and on the South the Carpathian Mountains divide it from Hungary and Transylvania. It extends from 48 to 51 Degrees 20 Minutes of Latitude, 200 Miles from North to South, and in the Southern part 160, but in the North but half so much in breadth. The Country is something Mountainous, but water'd with abundance of Rivers, which render it very Fruitful.

The River Bug rises here, and passes from South to North, almost the whole length of the Country. The River Nieſter by the Ancients Nam'd Turla, hath also it's Source here.

The whole Province is divided into three Palatinates, which passing from North to South Occur in this Order.

The Palatinate of Chełm in which are,

Kraſnoſlaw.
Turisk.

The Palatinate of Belz.

{ Belz.
Zamoſcie.
Rubiessow.

The Palatinate of Lemberg.

Whereof the South-East part is called Pocutia or Pecenk.

{ Lemberg.
Przemyslaw.
Zoroſlaw.
Nidmerow.
Grodeck.
Felſtin.
Halicz.
Sniatyn.

Chełm stands in the Latitude of 51 Degrees; 60 miles South from Breſte, 110 South-East from Warsaw, and 30 East from Lublin. It is but a small City tho' the chief of the Palatinate, and formerly an Episcopal See; but this place being much destroy'd by the Muscovites and Tartars, during the Wars, the Bishops Seat was Translated to Kraſnoſlaw. So that at present the Town is not very considerable, but is Guarded by a Castle of Wood.

Kraſnoſlaw, or Kraſnoſlaw, stands 20 Miles to the South-west from Chełm, on the River Wieprz which here makes a Lake; it is a small City, but in good Condition, and enjoys the Honour of an Episcopal See. Turisk stands on the Borders of Volbinia 30 Miles East from Chełm.

Belz, or Belcz, stands among Marſhes 50 Miles South from Chełm. It is a small City built of Wood, and only considerable by being the chief of the Palatinate. Zamoſcie stands about 30 Miles South from Chełm, and 40 North-west from Belz, and Rubiessow 30 miles from Zamoſcie, and as far North from Belz.

Lemberg, Leopolis call'd Lwow by the Poles, is the most considerable place of this part of Poland, being an Archi-Episcopal See, the Capital of a Palatinate, and of all Red-Russia, and also a City of very good Trade. It is Seated upon the River Peltem which falls into the Bug, and is distant 40 miles from Belz to the South, 90 North from the Confines of Transylvania, 150 East from Cracow, and 180 South-East from Warsaw. It is no very large City but well Built, and in good State, and hath two Castles for its Defence, one within the Town, and the other without the Walls. Przemyslaw, Premisla, a well Built Populous City, and an Episcopal See, is seated on the River Sana, 60 miles West from Lemberg. Neimeraw stands 20 miles West from Lemberg, and Zoroſlaw 40 miles beyond that Eastward. Grodeck is 30 miles South-west from Lemberg. And Felſtin is near 30 miles South-west from it.

Halicz the Capital of the Territory of Pocutia, stands upon the River Tyra 50 miles South-east from Lemberg. It was formerly a very considerable place, having been the Capital of a little Kingdom, afterwards had its own Dukes: and lastly was the Seat of the Arch-bishoprick now Translated to Lemberg. But the Wars and Revolutions have alter'd it's State, and it is now not very notable, but hath a Castle for its defence. Sniatyn upon the River Pruth, 40 miles South-East from Halicz on the Confines of Moldavia is by some reckon'd the Capital of Pocutia.

PODOLIA

PODOLIA lies on the East of Red Russia, having Volhinia on the North, the River Niester or Turla on the South, Ocziacow Tartary on the East, and the Palatinate of Lemberg on the West. It is a large Country being 250 miles long, and near 80 miles broad. The River Boegh runs quite through it from West to East, and the River Niester washes its Southern Frontier, and several other smaller Rivers water the Country, which is exceeding Fruitful, veilding especially Wax and Honey in abundance. The Neighbourhood of the Turks, hath subjected this Province to frequent Invasions, especially in the Year 1672. the Turkish Army entred it, and took Caminiec, which the King of Poland granted to them, to obtain a Peace; but the Nation resenting it, in 1673. declared War against the Turks, and the Polish Army under the General John Sobieski, afterwards King, obtain'd a great Victory, and took some Places; but Caminiec remain'd in the Turks Hands till the late Peace at Carlowitz, wherein it was agreed that it should be restor'd to the Poles, and the Turks quit all Pretensions to Podolia, and the Ukrain. The Eastern part of this Province, altho' it be good Land, is in a manner a perfect Desert, by reason of the frequent Invasions and Ravage of the Turks.

It is divided into two parts Upper, and Lower, wherein are these Town, viz.

In Upper Podolia, which is the Western part, a Populous and Fruitful Country.

Caminiec.
Bouckzowka.
Trambowl.
Tarnopol.
Zbaras.
Bar.
Chelminck.

In the Lower Podolia, the Eastern part, call'd also the Palatinate of Braclaw.

Braclaw.
Winnicza.
Haman.
Konicpole.
Orihow.
Cazarne.

Caminiec or Kaminiec, call'd Kaminiec Podolski by the Poles, is the Capital of Podolia, and of a Palatinate, seated on the River Smotrżic, which a little below falls into the Niester, at the distance of 100 miles from Lemberg to the South-east, and not above 12 from the Confines of Moldavia. It is a Populous well built City, and an Episcopal See, surrounded with high craggy Rocks, and besides Fortified with Walls, and a very strong Castle; so that it is the strongest Place on this side, and used to be reckoned the Key of Poland. It hath several times been attacked by the Walachians, Tartars and Turks; in the Year 1669. it suffered miserably by Fire, and in 1672. was taken by the Turks, who kept possession of it, and thereby often made Inroads into Poland, and carried away vast numbers of Captives, till by the late happy Peace concluded at Carlowitz, in the Year 1699. it was agreed to be surrender'd, and accordingly the next Spring evacuated, and the Poles put in possession of it. Bouckzowka stands 20 miles West from Caminiec, Trambowl, 40 miles North from it, and Tarnopol 30 miles more North. Zbaras hath the Title of a Dukedom; it stands 20 miles North from Tarnopol, and near the Confines of Volhinia, Felstyr stands 50 miles North from Caminiec. Bar 60 miles North-east from Caminiec, is a strong Fortreis. Chelminck stands on the River Boeg among Marshes, on the Borders of Volhinia.

Braclaw the Capital of a Palatinate, and of the Lower Podolia, is seated on the River Bug, at the distance of 90 miles from Caminiec to the East, and 40 from the Confines of Moldavia: It cannot be expected that this should be a very flourishing City, considering the long Neighbourhood of the Turks, by whom it was laid wast in 1672. Winnicza stands upon the same River, 30 miles to the North. Haman stands 60 miles East from Braclaw towards the Ukrain. Konicpole stands upon the Bug, 60 miles South-east from Braclaw. Orihow is seated on the other side the Niester in the Confines of Walachia. And Cazarne is a Fort on the Confines of Oczakow Tartary near the Niester, in the South-east Corner of this Province.

VOLHINIA is a very large Tract of Land, especially if we comprehend the Lower Volhinia, otherwise called the Ukrain, for then it is 500 miles in length from East to West; but of that we shall speak by it's self, and at present consider Volhinia Superior, or the Palatinate of Lusuc; which is generally known by the Name of Volhinia, and is of itself a large and plentiful Country, near 200 miles in length, and 100 in breadth. It is bounded on the North with Polesia, on the South with Podolia, on the East with the Ukrain, and on the West with Red-Russia. And hath in it's Limits these Cities and Towns of note.

Lusuck or Lucko.
Krzemiennec.
Ostrog.
Zaslav.

Olyka.
Baranowl.
Zytomierz.
Berdiczow.

Lusuc called Lucko by the Inhabitants, is the Metropolis of Volhinia, and the Palatinate to which it gives Name. It is seated on the River Ster, 90 miles North-east from Lemberg, 130 miles North from Caminiec, 170 miles South-east from Warsaw. It is a large City, and the See of a Bishop, Suffragan to the Arch-bishop of Gnesna; but is chiefly Inhabited by Jews, Armenians and other Eastern People, that Traffick in these Countries. Krzemiennec is a small City seated on a Hill near the River Icua, 35 miles South-east from Lusuck, it is the Capital of a Territory, and hath a Castle founded on a Rock. Ostrog formerly the Seat of a Duke, to whom a great part of this Country was Subject, stands about 50 miles East from Lusuck. Olyka 20 miles East from Lusuck bears the Title of a Duchy; as doth also Zaslav, 20 miles South from Ostrog. Beretsko stands 20 miles South from Lusuck. Zytomierz stands towards the Confines of the Ukrain, 120 miles from Lusuck to the East, and Berdiczow upon the same Confines 40 miles South from Zytomierz.

VOLHINIA INFERIOR, commonly call'd the UKRAIN, or the Palatinate of Kiow, is of much larger extent than the Upper Volhinia, being near 300 miles in length, and 150 in breadth. The River Boristhenes or Nieper passes through the middle of it, from North west, to South-east, dividing it into two Parts, whereof the Western only is subject to Poland, the Eastern being under the Muscovites, who have ever since 1686. possess'd Kiow also. The Land in the Polish Ukrain is very Fruitful, but the Eastern Part of it (the Muscovian) is a meer Desert, by reason of the Neighbourhood of the Tartars. This is the Country of the COSSACKS, which being a People often mention'd in the History of these Parts, it will not be amiss to give a short account of 'em. They have their Name from Kosa a Scythe, their usual Weapon, and were originally a Crew of dissolute Rogues, that Assembled together from the Frontiers of Russia, Volhinia and Podolia, to practise Piracy on the Black Sea: They appear'd first in the Reign of Sigismund I. to the Number of six Thousand, who with shallow Boats, could pass those Rocks in the mouth of the Boristhenes, that hinder the Navigation from the Ukrain to the Black-Sea, and during the Summer they Rov'd all over the Black-Sea, and its Coasts, pillaging and spoiling wherever they came. This they continued many Years. Stephen Bathory King of Poland form'd them into an orderly Militia, and intending to use them against the Tartars, gave them the Town and Territory of Trethymircw, appointed a General over them, and gave them many Privileges; and for some time they were serviceable to Poland, in opposing the Tartars. But being sensible of their Strength, they began to set up for themselves, and in the Year 1557. Rebell'd; but their General being taken and Executed, it was quieted for a time. About the Year 1600. they were so Powerful that the Poles were forced to raise a large Army against them, who often worsted 'em, and took their Generals, but still they continued murinous, wherefore their Privileges were taken away, and they continued in a state of Enmity, till about the Year 1640. King Vladislaus VI. making War upon the Tartars, collected them together, and set over them for General Bogdan Chmielniski; who was afterwards a bitter and formidable Enemy to Poland: For the Cossacks, being oppress'd by the Polish Lords their Landlords, and on complaint receiving no redress, they Armed in vast Numbers, and calling in the Tartars, furiously attack'd the Poles; but King John Casimer so well resisted them, that the Tartars accepted of a Peace in 1649. But Chmielniski not trusting to that, obliged the Prince of Moldavia to join with him, which produced another War, in the Year 1651. wherein the Tartars and Cossacks were worsted. And since that time they have not been so considerable. We shall Speak of the Manners of these People when we come to Treat of Muscovy, which the Reader may consult immediately if he please to look toward the latter end of the second Chapter of our account of that Empire.

The Land as we have said, is fruitful, producing Corn and other Commodities, but by reason of the Ravage of the Turks, hath been but little Cultivated: For in the Year 1677. by Agreement, this Country was Relinquish'd to the Grand Seignior, who kept it till the Year 1699. when by the Peace concluded at Carlowitz, it was restored to the Pole.

The whole Province is but one Palatinate, denominated from Kiow; the chief Cities and Towns, whereof are these.

Kiow.	}	Czernobel.
Bialogrod.		Trethymircw.
Bialacerkew.		Czirkassy.
Ketelma.		Kudack.

Kiow, Kiowia, is seated on the River Boristhenes or Nieper, in the Latitude of 51. at the distance of 200 miles from Lucka to the East, 60 miles South from the Frontiers of Lithuania, and 100 North from Padolia. It is an Episcopal See, a Palatinate, and adorn'd with a kind of University; hath ten Churches, whereof four for the Roman, and the rest for the Greek way of Worship; it is also a Place of some Trade for Corn, Furs, Tallow, &c. and is Guarded by a Castle, and Surrounded with a Trench, and some other Fortifications; but is not very Populous, nor comparable to the ancient Kiow, which stood a little distant, and was formerly a very large and opulent City, whereof the Ruins of many stately Buildings and large Walls, are still to be seen. The two Churches of St. Sophia, and St. Michael, which remain in tolerable good State, were Sumptuous Buildings, the Walls of the former being Adorn'd with Mosaick Work, and the Roof of the latter very richly Gilt. The City was Founded by a Russian Prince Named Kius in the Year 861. and was the Metropolis of Tauro Scythia. Then it became the Seat of the Russian Empire, and was afterwards Govern'd by it's own Princes. It was Storm'd and Pillag'd by the Tartars in 1615. and has ever since declined. And as we said above is now subject to the Muscovite.

About half a League from hence in the Village of Piecharre stands a noble Monastery, the residence of the Patriarch, and under the adjacent Mountains are divers Grotto's or Caverns dug like Mines, wherein are preserv'd a great many Humane Bodies, which tho' long since Buried are still entire, and neither so hard or black as Mummies. Among these, two Princes are shewn to Travellers by the Russians, in the same Habit they wore when living. These Caves are just like the Catacombs at Rome, and perhaps deserve equal Veneration. The Mountain they are cut in is a Sandy Stone very dry.

Above Kiow about 30 miles to the South, stands Stayky, and 10 miles above that Ryszow, both noted for Passage of the River Nieper.

Bialogrod, stands 20 miles South-West from Kiow. Kotelma on the Frontiers of the Upper Volhinia, 40 miles South-West from Kiow. Bialacerkiew stands about the same distance South from Kiow. Trethymircw the Place which King Bathory, as has been said, gave to the Cossacks, stands upon the Nieper, 50 miles above Kiow, and is a Place of Strength, having a Castle for it's defence. Czernobel stands also on the River, but as many miles below Kiow. Czyrkassy, stands upon the River too, 80 miles above Kiow, and Kudack a strong Fort, built by the Poles in 1635. against the IncurSIONS of the Tartars, stands in the extream East Confines of the Polish Dominions, on the West side of the River near the Confines of Tartary.

That part of the Ukrain that lies on the East side of the River, is Subject to the Muscovite, to whom also the City Kiow has been surrender'd ever since the Year 1680.

And thus we conclude our Account of Poland, having passed through all the Provinces of this great Kingdom, and according to the best Informations could be procured, not omitted mentioning any considerable City or Town.

MUSCOVY.

MUSCOVY or RUSSIA.

Muscovia, aut Alba Russia.

CHAP. I.

Of MUSCOVY in general.

MUSCOVY, otherwise called White Russia, and Russia Magna, to distinguish it from the Province of Poland, called Russia Rubra, was anciently the greatest part of the Sarmatia Europæa. The Name of Russia was taken from the People, called Rossi, q. d. dispersed or scatter'd, being originally Wanderers without any Government. The Moschi mention'd by Strabo, were one Nation of these People, whence the Name of the Province of Muscovy, most probably, was derived; and since the Monarch has made this his Seat, the Name of this Province hath been Communicated to the whole Empire. It is the largest Country under one Government in Europe, nay perhaps in the World, being near 1500 miles broad. It lies between the 50th and 70th Degree of Latitude, including from the 7th Climate of the Temperate Zone, to the 2d Climate of the Frigid Zone: And in Longitude from from the 50th to the 100th Degree. It is bounded on the North with the Ocean, Denominated from its Shores Muscovian and Tartarian, and Nova Zemla divided from the Continent by the Straights of Meggar. On the South with Tartaria Minor, the Palus Meotis, Crim-Tartary and Turkey, and the Caspian Sea which parts it from Persia. On the East with the Asiatick or Great Tartary, and on the West with some Provinces of Sweden, Lithuania and Poland. It is in vain to talk of its utmost Extent, for the Eastern Part is all Wilderness, by reason of the Tatars; and the North Part the same, because of its extrem cold Climate. So that tho' the whole Empire be reckoned 1500 miles extent either way, yet that part of it that is Populous and well Cultivated (being the South-West Part) is not above 600 miles Square.

The CLIMATE must necessarily be very different in so vast a Tract of Land, but in general it is very Cold, and at Muscov itself, in the Winter time the AIR is not tolerable, the extreme Parts of Men's Bodies, as Noses, Ears, &c. being often mortified with the Cold; and tho' they wrap themselves up in Furrs, yet without continual Chafing their Noses and Fingers they are in danger of losing 'em when they come out of the Air. 'Tis said if a Man Spits it shall be frozen by that time it comes to the Ground, and Water thrown into the Air will fall down Ice. The Summer on the contrary is sultry Hot, but then it is short, and immediately follows the Winter; for no sooner is the Snow off the Ground, but the Corn shoots up so fast, that in two Months time they cut it; this is Attributed to the Snow, which lying on the Ground not only Mellows the Land, but also keeps the Plants from the Air, and lets them take good Root. As soon as they have Reaped they must Sow immediately for the Summer is not above three Months long, this may be true of some Grain, but not of all, for my Lord Carlisle says their Seed time is in April or May, and their Harvest in August. But notwithstanding this extreme Cold, the SOIL is very Fruitful, producing Plenty of Corn and divers Sorts of Fruits, particularly Melons; also Rhubarb in great quantity, Flax, Hemp, good Pasture, Wax and Honey. Many of the Provinces have large Forrests, wherein are taken Bears, Foxes, Sables, Ermins, and those other Wild Beasts, whose Furrs are so esteemed in all Parts; besides which, Russia furnishes the World with the Leather, call'd Russian and Buff, Pot-ashes for Soap, Hemp and Flax, Caviar made of the Rows of Sturgeon and Belluga, Ling-glass, Morie's Teeth, Sperma Ceti, and divers other very useful COMMODITIES, which are very Commodiously Transported by means of the many Navigable RIVERS wherewith this Country very much abounds. Those of chiefest note are the Volga or Rba, the Don or Tanais, the Occa, the Suchana and Fugb, which compose the Dvina, the Kama, the Oby, and the Jenesaida. Of these the Volga must be reckon'd the Noblest, being of singular use to the Russians, who by the means of it have Water-Carriage from Persia, quite up into the very Heart of their Country. This was the Rhe of the Ancients, and hath its Source in the Province of Resbow, which lies on the West of Moscov; and after a Course of near 2000 miles, it falls into the Caspian-Sea, in 70 Months at Astrachan. In its way receiving the Occa, which rises in Utrvin, and receives the Moska, as it passes by that Province, and falls into the Volga at Nisi-Novo- gorod; The Kama, which rises in Permia, and falls into the Volga, a little below Casim; and several other smaller Rivers, which contribute to enlarge this great Stream, so as to make it several Leagues broad, before it issues into the Sea. A particular account of it, is given us by a late Dutch Traveller, who Sail'd down the Stream from Moscov quite to Astrachan, by whose Journal it appears that he was near 4 Months on his Voyage.

The Don or Tanais, rises in the Province of Rezan, and passing by Pole, and the Rosdori Donski (dividing it from Crim Tartary) comes so near to the Volga, that an attempt was made to cut a Canal from one to the other, but the Nagayan-Tatars, who at that time possessed the Kingdom of Astrachan opposed it, and with a great Army beat off the Crim-Tartar and Turki from the Work: From hence the River Don winding to the West, falls at last into the Palus Meotis at Aoph. The Oby, the greatest River of Muscovy, flows out of the Lake Katbay in Great-Tartary, passes through the Muscovian-Tartary, making in its Course divers Lakes and Islands, and receiving many other Rivers, falls into the Northern Ocean at Samoieda. The Jenesaida rises also in Tartary, and falls into the same Sea, 100 Leagues East from Oby. The Dvina falls into the White Sea at Archangel; the Courses of the Suchana and Fugb, whose confluence compose it, will be seen in the Map, as will also the Course of the other Rivers, which we shall have occasion to mention in our following Description of the Country.

The INHABITANTS of Muscovy have the misfortune to bear but an ill Character abroad; whether they deserve so bad as they have, I cannot determin; but considering that they want the two chief means of Improving Men's Morals and Manners, which are Learning and Travel, we may the less scruple to believe Travellers, who all affirm that they are perfectly Illiterate and Brutish, and so very much addicted to Idleness and Drunkenness, that more than ordinary severe Laws are made against that Vice, and smoking Tobacco, with which they also used to Intoxicate themselves. They constantly Sleep after Dinner, and are fond of Hot Baths, which they frequently go into. And the Women do not scruple to go Naked into them in the Presence of Men, nay even in company with them (says the Baron Mayerberg) They affect Fannels, looking upon it as Graceful. In their Dealings they are Crafty and not over Honest: Jealous, Cruel and Proud; but withal of mean Spirit, when severely Treated. The Common People live in great subjection to the Lords, and they in as absolute dependance on the Emperor, who takes Care to keep 'em Ignorant, and therefore no Publick School, much less a University, is to be found in all his Dominions; even the Priesthood have no more Learning than serves them to Read Divine Service. All the Gentry are by Law forbid to Travel. But the Present Czar, having himself in the Years 1696. and 1697. taken a Journey abroad and Visited the Courts of Poland, Sweden, Denmark, Germany, Flanders, Holland and England; in seeing the Politeness of those People (added to his own Inclination to Arts and Sciences) hath been induced to change that Politique and encourage the Study of Languages; and already hath Erected Schools at Moscov, and sent the young Nobility to Travel, so that in all Probability this Nation will in a short time be much improved. The Nobility keep a great Number of Servants, but they are no better than Slaves Slaves. And I find in Authors that Boors are reckoned as part of a Nobleman's Estate, which shews there is the same Vassalage here as in Poland. They are of a robust and healthy Constitution, strong and fit to endure any Fatigue in War. The Women are well Favoured and fair enough, very Obedient to their Husbands, and patient under their Churlishness, tho' it often proceed to Blows; they are represented by Travellers as loose in their Behaviour, and too free of their Favours, and that the Wives will accompany their Husbands in Drunkenness, which may justify the Husbands for the Jealousy they are addicted to. Gallantry is so little there in Fashion, that no Body pays respect to Women, even tho' of Quality. The Houses in general all over Muscovy are very mean, being Built of Wood sordidly put together, the Chinks stop'd with Moss plaister'd over, and instead of Tiles, cover'd with Barks of Trees. Nor is the Furniture unsuitable to the Hovels, being of Wooden or Earthen Vessels; every House is furnish'd with a Stove, which they keep always very Hot in the Winter Time. Their Habit is a long Robe lin'd with Furr over a Cassock, Waist-coat and Breeches, with Bonnets of Cloth on their Heads. The Gentry have their Robes of Silk, Velvet or the finest Cloth, but the common Sort have either our coarsest Cloth, or a sorry Sort made at home.

The Russian LANGUAGE is a Dialect of the Slavonian as well as the Polish; so that he who understands either of them cannot be at any great loss in this. The Bibles and such few other Books as they have, are writ in Slavonian; and those who pretend to any degree of Learning, affect that Language in their Writing and Speaking: The Character they use has a near resemblance to the Greek, but they have augmented the Number of their Letters to thirty eight. The Russian Year begins in September, and their Æra is the Creation of the World. They reckon their Hours from Sun rising to Sun setting.

The Christian RELIGION was first taught in Muscovy in the Time of Volodimir Great Duke of Russia (A. D. 989.) who having by the Conquest of many Provinces render'd himself very considerable, was honoured with an Embassy from the Emperor Basilus, in whose Time (according to Zonaras) a Bishop was sent from Constantinople to convert the Russes, the Prince himself embracing Christianity, and soon after marrying the Daughter of Basilus, he contributed all his Power to the establishing it, which was accordingly effected. This is the most certain Account in History of the Conversion of Russia from Paganism. But the Russes pretend that St. Andrew the Apostle planted Christianity here, which was afterwards expell'd by the Tartars. As they receiv'd Christianity from Constantinople, so they have always continued in the Faith and Practice of the Greek Church, disbelieving Transubstantiation and Purgatory, communicating in both kinds, but pray to Saints and use images, and observe Auricular Confession; the Athanasian Creed is their Rule of Faith; and they have settled Liturgy which is used three times a Day. They observe four Lents with great strictness, and fast also Vvednesday and Friday in every Week. The Grand Festivals are Fifteen in the Year, most consonant to ours. But by reason of their Ignorance, they are miserably involv'd in superstitious ceremonies. The Government of the Church is by Metropolitans, Archbishops and Bishops; whereof the Metropolitan of Moscow, who was ordain'd by the Patriarch of Constantinople, was Primate, till about the Year 1588. when Hieronimus, Patriarch of Constantinople (that City being then in the Hands of the Turks) came to Moscow, and very solemnly resign'd his Patriarchal Dignity to the Metropolitan of Moscow, whose Successors have ever since born that Dignity, and is supream Head of the Russian Church: Immediately upon the Elevation of this Metropolitan (who was before the only one) two other Archbishops were made Metropolitans, viz. those of Novogorod-Veliki and Rostow, and since that two more have been added, whereof one resideth at Casan, and the other at Moscow. The Bishops are chosen by the Emperor, and the Patriarch by the Bishops. But the Earl of Carlisle says the Patriarch is Chosen by the Czar. Their Service consists in Singing Hymns, pronouncing the Gospodi, or, Lord have Mercy upon us, reading some Chapters, Athanasius's Creed, and St. Chrysostom's Homilies, but have no Preaching. The Monastick Life is used, and many Women are Shut up in Cloisters, but not so strictly but that they visit the World sometimes, and enjoy their pleasure.

The GOVERNMENT of Russia is absolutely Monarchical; for the Grand Duke, who is called Czar (supposed to be deriv'd from Cesar) is absolute Master over all his Subjects; the Legislative, as well as the Administrative, Power being solely in him. He appoints the Waywoods or Governors of Provinces, and all the Civil and Military Officers. The Nobility are very numerous, and were formerly very considerable, the Dukes being absolute Lords in their Provinces; but the Czars have from time to time taken away their Power, and they, as well as the other Nobles, are now Dependants on the Emperor, by whose Favour they obtain the Governments and Offices of Honour and Profit. At present, the chiefest degree of Nobility is that of the Boiars, which are those whom the Emperor Honours with being of his Council; out of which he chooses the Waywoods and other chief Officers.

The LAWS for deciding Civil Controversies formerly depended upon the Equity of the Judge: But in the Year 1647. by the Czar's Command, a Code or Body of the Law was compiled by the wisest Men in the Kingdom, and comprehended in one Volume in Folio, entituled Sabrona Uloshenia; that is to say, Universal and General Right: By which the Judges are to regulate their Sentences.

Several Courts of Judicature are held suitable to the Causes that come before 'em; whereof 'tis unnecessary to give a particular account.

A short Abstract of the History of Russia.

IT is almost impossible to know the Origine and Acts of a roving Nation of illiterate People; wherefore the Reader must not expect a very ancient Account of the Russes, whose very Name, as we have said, denotes Straglers; and who have apparently chang'd their Seat; for the Russia Rubra, now a Province of Poland, had undoubtedly its Name from them; and that Volhinia also was possess'd by the Russes is evident, since the Seat of their Mo-

Monarchy was Kiev, before Wolodimir remov'd it to the City of his own Name, which he built; so that the Muscovites are now in Possession of some Provinces formerly belonging to Lithuania and Poland, they are but an equivalent of what they have quitted to Poland. But the Acquisitions of the Russes have been all on the other side, viz. on the Tartars, who were for many Ages their most cruel Enemies: Wherefore the Tartarian Provinces they now possess by Conquest is a singular happiness to them; for whereas formerly the Tartars made Inroads upon them to the very Heart of their Country, and imposed most ignominious Terms upon their Princes. [as for Example, Batus the Tartar in 1237. having slain the Great Duke George, order'd that the Tartars hereafter should choose the Princes of Moscow, who should be oblig'd to go out to meet the Tartarian Ambassador on Foot and Bare-headed, present him a Platter of Mare's Milk, and give his Horse Provender out of his Cap; and for 200 Years together the Tartar had a House and a Guard in the Castle of Moscow] I say, whereas formerly the Tartars were their cruel Masters, the Case is now so alter'd, that almost all the European Tartary is subject to the Muscovite. At what time all these vast Regions were conquer'd, will be seen in this

Of these Princes we have no certain History before the Time of

1. Wolodimir, who having made great Conquests Eastward, removed the Regal Seat to Wolodimir, the chief City of that Province, which he built and gave Name to. He also married the Daughter of the Emperor Basilus Porphyrogenetta, and planted Christianity in Russia. He died in the Year 1015. and was succeeded by his Son
2. Wolodimir, or according to others Jaroslav, and said to have built that City. He died, A. D. 1146.
3. Wolodimir his Son succeeded, and was succeeded by his Son
4. Vitoldus.
5. George, slain by Batus, a Tartarian Prince, in the Year 1237. from which time the Russes were Tributary to the Tartars.
6. Jaroslav, Brother to George, succeeded
7. Alexander his Son.
8. Daniel or Danielsu, surnam'd Caleta. He remov'd the Regal Seat to Moscow, and assum'd the Title of Great Duke.
9. Ivan or John, his Son succeeded, being chosen by the Tartar, and much favour'd by him.
10. Ivan Ivanowitch, or John's Son succeeded.
11. Demetri Ivanowitch. He obtain'd great Victories over the Tartars, but at last was slain by them.
12. Vasilie or Basil Demetriowitch. He chased the Tartars out of Russia, and conquer'd Bulgar. Thro' Jealousie of his Wife he disinherited his Son, and was succeeded by his Brother
13. George, who at his Death restor'd the Crown to his Nephew
14. John Vasiliewitch Grotzdyn. He was the first that united Russia into one considerable Body, by taking away the Power of the Dukes, and uniting their Dominions to the Crown. He called himself Czar, King, or Emperor rather, and by some thought to be, q. d. Cesar, in imitation of the western Emperor. He is judged to have begun to Reign about the Year 1450. He conquer'd the Duke of Novgorod, and added that Province, as also Twer to the Crown. He turned the Tartar Governor out of Moscow, and shook off their Yoke. He put by his eldest Son, and appointed Gabriel, his Son by a second Marriage, to succeed him, who changed his Name to
15. Vasile Ivanowitch, and began to Reign in 1492. conquer'd Plescow and Smolensko, and gained great Victories against the Tartars, over whom he set a Governor. He died in 1532. leaving his Uncle George Guardian to his Son
16. Ivan Vasiliewitch a Child, who began to Reign in 1540. He became a very great Tyrant, but withal a great Conqueror. In his Time the Tartars ejected the Governor placed over them by his Father, and invading Russia, proceeded as far as Moscow, which they burnt and pillag'd, insomuch that the Czar was forc'd to submit to very ignominious Terms. This War was carried on by two Brothers, Mendligeri und Sapperi; who returning homeward, Sapperi settl'd himself King of Casan, but Mendligeri sat down before Rezan; and summoning it to surrender, told the Governor what had happen'd at Moscow, who replying, he could not believe it, the Tartar sent him the Original Instrument, subscrib'd by the Czar to convince him; the Governor seizing the Paper, return'd answer, That he would keep that and the City as long as he had Life: And so courageously he defended it, that the Tartar was forced to raise the Siege; and then the Governor sent the Writing to the Czar, with an account of what had happen'd; which so chang'd the Face of Affairs, that an Army was presently rais'd and march'd against Sapperi, who was still in Casan; which City, after a long Siege, was taken, July 9. 1552. and thereby very much enlarg'd the Russian Dominions; and pursuing his Victory; in the Year 1552. he took Astrachan also, which brought the Monarchy to its utmost height. He died March 28th 1584.
17. Fedor or Theodore, Son to Ivan Vasiliewitch, succeeded, and was a weak Prince. He married the Sister of Boris Feodorowich Godanove, who murder'd him and his Brother Demetri; and having made a Party in the Kingdom, was chosen Emperor. Theodore reign'd 12 Years, and died, A. 1597.
18. Feodorowich Godanow. He made away with many of the Nobility, and gave his Family all the profitable Employments; which gave such Disgust, that an Impostor starting up in the name of Demetrius, the Brother of Feodor above-mention'd, obtained such countenance that the Army revolted to him. Feodorowich died, April 13th 1605. supposed by Poison and soon after his Wife and Son Feoder. So that
19. Demetrius the Impostor entering Moscow the 20th of June 1605. was Crown'd without opposition; but the Russes soon discovering their mistake slew him, and advanced to the Throne

20. Vasilie Ivanovich Zuskie, who was Crown'd June 1. 1606. In his time the King of Sweden by pretending to assist him against the new Demetrius gain'd from Muscovy the two Provinces of Carelia and Ingria. Another pretended Demetrius started up in Poland, and being assisted by that Nation, caus'd great Troubles; and in the end Zuskie was deposed and thrust into a Monastery, the Russes chusing for their Monarch

21. Ladislaus, Son to the King of Poland; which raising the Minds of the Polish Army, at that time before Moscow, made 'em Insolent; and upon a Quarrel with the Russes, they run in and Plunder'd and burnt the City, pillag'd the Treasury, and made such miserable Havock, that it is said 4000 Houses were burnt, and 200000 Persons slain. In this desperate State, the Russes were quite heartless, till a Butcher stepping out, propos'd a Gentleman nam'd Pozarskey, for their General, under whom, with an honest Treasurer, he told 'em the Disorders might be compos'd. Accordingly the People immediately chose Pozarskey for their General, and made the Butcher Treasurer, bringing to him what Mony they could spare; with which he rais'd an Army, which, together with a Body of Cossacks then in Service in Muscovy, soon expell'd the Poles, and restor'd in some measure the publick Peace; whereupon the Nobility assembled, and chose for their Czar Michael Federowich, Son to the Patriarch Philaretos Nikidiz of the House of Romanow.

22. Michael Federowich began to Reign A.D. 1613. and by the Advice of his Father, (a Man of great Wisdom and Virtue) soon restored the publick Tranquility. He made Peace with the Poles, and with the Svedes; who, during the Troubles, had possess'd themselves of divers Russian Cities and Provinces; these were restor'd, and Muscovy made happy in a wise and good Monarch; who dying in 1645. was succeeded by his Son,

23. Alexis Michaelowich, a Martial, but mild Governor, who Reigned successfully thirty Years. He first began to reform the Military Discipline of the Muscovites, and brought in many Officers from Germany, under whom a Band of Foreign Troops have been ever since kept up. He Conquer'd Smolensko and Kiow, from the Poles. And died in the Year 1675, and was succeeded by his Son.

24. Theodore Alexiowich, who died in 1682. leaving no Children, and bequeathed the Crown to his Brother

25. Peter, his present Czarish Majesty, who has ever since had the Government. He is a Valiant Prince, a lover of Science, especially Mathematicks: And if it please God to give him Life, he will in all probability, raise the Russian Empire to the highest degree it ever was: For he has already in the late Turkish War, made himself Master of Azoph, an eminent Port, at the Mouth of the Don, in the Palus Meotis, whence is a Passage to the Black-Sea; as also taken Kasikermant on the Black Sea, at the Mouth of the Nieper, and is very busie in building Ships of War; by means whereof, he may in Time, be able to dispute the Mastery of the Black Sea with the Turks: And moreover, by the Encouragement he gives the Nobility to Study and Travel Abroad, their Manners will be abundantly Polished, the Russians become fit for Conversation, and be esteem'd like other Nations. The King of Sweden holds this Prince at present in full Employment, the Effect of which War we must wait.

Of the TROUBLES given to his present Czarish Majesty, by his Sister the Princess SOPHIA.

THE present Czar was but Eleven Years of Age when his Brother died, whereby he was the more expos'd to his Half Sister's Machinations. The Princess Sophia, as that Sister is Nam'd, was the Daughter of the first Wife of Czar Alexis: And the Elder Brother John, who was sometime Colleague with Czar Peter, was her Brother by the same Mother; whereas Peter was the Son by a Second Wife of the same Alexis. The Princess is a Person of very uncouth Form in her outward Shape, but of most acute and quick Parts in Mind. Her Temper was too much addicted to Ambition, and her Politick Genius was too extensive to be bound-ed by the narrow Rules of strict Virtue. Her Brother John was a weak Prince both in Body and Mind, for he was so extremely afflicted with Epileptick Fits, that his Reason was much impair'd as well as his Limbs disabled. On the contrary, the young Prince Peter, was always a very Virtuous, Active and Ingenious Person,

The Princess Sophia from the Monastery, where the Royal Princesses usually retire on their Father's Death, had in her Brother Theodore's time, got to Court, under pretence of assisting him in his Weakness, which gave her too sweet a taste of Government, to brook afterwards a Private Life. The first step she made was to procure her Brother John (whom she knew she could manage) to be Crown'd Colleague with Czar Peter. Next she got to be Administratrix of the Government, upon pretence of the Minority of Peter. She then took care to gain the Strelitzes or Guards, which is a Body of 18000 Men, intirely to her Devotion. And afterwards, the better to secure herself, she resolv'd to cut off all the Friends of Czar Peter, which by the help of her Creature Kouvanski, President of the Strelitzes, she propos'd to do by open Massacre, upon a pretence that they had been guilty of Poysoning the late Czar Theodore; but that Plot was not so secretly carried, but the Court got hint of it, and remov'd to the strong Monastery Troitzki, about 30 Miles distant from Moscow, which gave opportunity to many to escape, who had else Perished in that horrid Slaughter which was made in the Capital City. This Instrument Kouvanski, had soon after the just reward of his Villany; for presuming too much on his Merit, by a foolish proposal of Marriage between his Son and the Princess's Sister, he incur'd her Displeasure, and was left to the course of Justice, which put him to Death. Her next Step was the advancing her Creature, and Paramour, as 'twas reported, Prince Basil Galichin to the Office of Chancellor and first Minister of State, with whom she concerted many Plots to remove the two Czars: But the more Politick ways of bringing it about proving abortive, they had at length recourse to downright Assassination. Czar Peter had always been the Object of their Hatred; and was now the more so, by reason that contrary to their Designs, he was Marry'd and his Wife with Child, the Birth whereof they foresaw would strengthen him beyond control. Gallichin had the Affection of the Army, whom he had Commanded in two Campaigns against the Crim Tatars, but had the Enmity of many of the Nobility, by reason of the many Removals he had made to Model the State for his own Safety. The Princess had absolute Power over the Czar Iohn, and over the Strelitzes, and most of the Great Officers in the Army: But saw her Power daily sinking with Czar Peter; and at the same time saw him daily rising in the favour of the Nobility and Populace. These Circumstances may be the reason of the precipitate Boldness, which we are told by a Modern Traveller of Note, they ventur'd upon. For, as he relates it, the Princess engag'd Theodore Trekilatiraw, President of the Strelitzes, to find out a Party of his Men who should Assassinate the Czar. And that having concerted Matters with all her other Creatures, as most of the Ministry were, they proceeded so far as to pick out a Band of 600 of the Strelitzes which they could most confide in, and carry'd the Matter so privately, that these Men were actually on the Road to Obrokensk, a Country Seat where the Czar then lay, about 4 Miles from Moscow, before it was discover'd. It was in the Night time, which gave opportunity to two of their own Company under covert of the Darkeness to give them the slip, and by Gallichin, got time enough to advertize the Czar of his Danger. He was in Bed, and every Body Asleep; so he had difficulty enough to raise his Friends about him. Two of them he sent out to discover the Truth; who return'd with assurance that they were Eye-Witnesses of the approach of a large Body of Soldiers: This confirm'd him in the resolution of Escaping, which he had just time enough to do, with his Mother, Wife, and nearest Relations and Friends, before the Villains arriv'd; who finding the Bird flown, were in the utmost Confusion, and did no more but return to Moscow for new Orders. The Czar by Travelling with Diligence all Night, arriv'd next Day at Troitza, which, as we have said, is well Fortify'd; whither he Summon'd the Nobility and proclaim'd the Danger he had escap'd. He had the satisfaction to see them come in apace; and tho' the Body of the Strelitzes which he had Summon'd, were withheld by the Princess's Arts, yet many of them in Parties resorted to him. He also Summon'd Prince Gallichin, but he excus'd himself on pretence of attending the Commands of Czar Iohn. The Princess in the mean time found herself deserted by her darling Strelitzes, and saw that her most devoted Friends had not Courage to stir in her behalf; which put her into such Confusion, that she could think of no way of escaping the Czar's Vengeance, but by Pacification, to which purpose she employ'd her Relations, and such others as she thought had most Influence on her Brother; but 'twas all in vain, for the Czar could not be prevail'd upon to see her. And now the German Forces, (which are a good Party of Foreign Troops, that of late are kept up in Muscovy) being arriv'd at Troitza, and even the Strelitzes too, who upon second Summons had obey'd; the Court found itself strong enough to execute Justice. Accordingly they sent a Party of Soldiers under a bold Commander to Moscow, to seize Trekilatiraw, and other Delinquents; which they effected: And having put him to the Torture, made him confess the whole Plot, and in presence of several Boyars, by Word first, and afterwards by Writing, to the Czar himself declare, that their design was to have Murder'd him, his Wife, Mother, and all their near Relations. Seven others of the Conspirators corroborated his Testimony, and the Truth was too apparent to be deny'd. Prince Gallichin in the mean time thought it more advisable to come voluntarily than by compulsion, to Troitza, and accordingly resorted thither, but was seized at the Gate, and not admitted to the Czar's Presence. Trekilatiraw, and two of the Strelitzes, who were the Men that were to have Stabb'd the Czar, were Beheaded; the Colonel that Led them and five more of the boldest of the Strelitzes, had their Tongues cut out, and were banish'd to Siberia. Which was all the Blood that was spilt on this occasion, for the Princess was only confin'd to the Nunnery, and Prince Gallichin, with his Wife and Son Banish'd to Siberia. Several Boyars that were of his Party, were either Banish'd or remov'd from Court, and so Tranquility was restor'd. This happen'd in the Year 1689, and put an end to all dangerous Troubles this Prince has been perplex'd with; for tho' new attempts have been made upon his Life, and Comotions attempted in favour of Prince Gallichin, yet they have all pass'd off with little Trouble. This Prince Gallichin was a Person of great Genius and Gentility; he was descended of an Illustrious Family, and during the time of his Management, perform'd many noble Works; 'twas he began the Custom of sending the young Nobility Abroad, to learn Languages and Breeding; 'twas he that encourag'd Strangers to come to Moscow, to teach the People Manners; 'twas he that introduc'd the custom of Building Stone Houses instead of the Wooden Hovels they live in; and by his Encouragement some Hundred of Stone-Houses were built in Moscow: 'Twas he that built the Noble Stone-Bridge over the River in Moscow; 'twas he that by the liberal Payment of Adventurers, found out a safe way from Moscow to China by Land; 'twas he that fix'd Garisons and Stages on the way, and would have made it very Easie, as well as Safe. In short, 'twas he began that Method of Polishing the Muscovites, which his present Czarish Majesty has found so Reasonable, as to pursue in every Point. So that if insatiate Ambition had not been his predominant Passion, he must have liv'd the Ornament of his Country, and the Favourite of all Good Men.

The REVENUE of this mighty Prince is very large; it arises by 1. The Crown Lands, valued at 250000 Rubbles per Annum, each Rubble being of the value of Ten Shillings Sterling. 2. The Tagla and Podat, which are an Imposition upon Corn, and a Subsidy upon every Town, reckon'd to bring in 400000 Rubbles yearly. 3. The Customs, producing about 600000 Rubbles per Annum. 4. The Duty upon Baths and Publick Houses. 5. A great Duty upon Law-Suits. 6. The Czar hath the Monopoly of Commodities, as Furrs, Ising-glass, and Caviare. 7. Lands, set apart for the Maintenance of his Guards. And besides, the Nobility and Gentry are oblig'd to serve him in the Wars with Men Horses, Arms, and Provisions, proportionate to the Lands they possess, in the nature of Knight's Service.

The Emperor maintains a constant Guard of 18000 Foot, and near 5000 Horse at Moscow, and in Garisons on the Frontiers, to the number of 100000 Men more; and in time of War, he hath ordinarily an Army in the Field of 300000 Men, well Arm'd and provided, besides his Garisons and Guards.

Thus much for the Civil. Proceed we now to the Geographical Account of this great Empire.

Muscovy consists of a great number of Provinces, which being not distinguished by Priority of Judicature, we shall consider them according to Situation, dividing the whole Empire into three Parts, viz.

In entering Muscovy from Lithuania, these Provinces lie between the Wolga and the Lesser Tartary.

C H A P. II.

The Western Provinces of MUSCOVY, lying between the Wolga on the North-East, and Poland and the Muscovian Tartary, on the other sides.

HAVING in our Table, shewn Muscovy divided into three large Parts, we shall in the following Account of it, begin with the Western Provinces adjoining to Poland; and having Survey'd all the South-West Part, pass Northward to Lapland; and then return from North to South, thro' the middle Provinces; and lastly proceed to the Muscovian Tartary. Accordingly in passing from Poland to Muscovy, we may enter either at Pleskow, Bielski, Smolensko, Novogorod, or Czernibow. But that we may proceed in a Travelling order, and pass through all the Countries as they lye, we will begin with the most South-West part of Muscovy, wherein lye these Provinces, from South to North.

The Duchy of CZERNIHOWV, bounded on the South by the Ukrain, on the West by Lithuania, and on the East by Severia; it is in length near 120 Miles, and in breadth in the South, about 80 Miles, but decreases Northward till it ends in a Point.

The chief City, Czernibow, is seated on the River Dniza, but a few Miles from the Confines of the Ukrain, in Lat. 52. and is a well-built, tho' small City.

The Duchy of SEVERIA, or SEVVERSKI, adjoyns to Czernibow on the East: It is a large and fruitful Province, formerly subject to its own Princes, who in time became Feodals to the Duke of Lithuania, and afterwards to the Czar; but the Duke being accused of Treason, in the Reign of Vasilie, lost his Royalty, and the Country was annexed to Crown.

The chief City Novogorodeck Siemerski, stands upon the River Dniza, 50 or 60 Miles above Czernibow, hath a Castle and good Fortifications, according to the Russian manner, for its Defence. Bransko, reckon'd the other chief City, stands far more North.

VVOROTIN, another Duchy, lyes next to Severia on the East, having the Lesser Tartary on the South, whereby being expos'd to their Ravage, that part is Desert and Woody; but the Northern part is a good Country, Fertile and Populous.

The chief City IVorotin, stands on the River Occa, about 100 miles South-East from Siemerski, and is guarded by a Castle. And higher upon the same River stands Bolgoff, Arsol, and Crom; the Towns that are next considerable.

On the North of these two last mention'd Provinces, lies the Duchy of SMOLENSKO, stretcht out from East to West about 200 Miles, but in breadth not half so much: And was formerly subject to Lithuania, but Conquer'd by the Czar, and afterwards Recover'd by the Poles, who kept it for some time, notwithstanding the frequent Attacks of the Russes; till in the Year 1654 it was recover'd; and in 1686, by Treaty Surrender'd, and is still subject to the Czar. The River Nieper or Boristhenes, rises in the North-East Border of this Country, and passes quite through it. This Province abounds with Wild-Beasts, whose Skins are valued.

Smolensko, the Capital, is seated on the Nieper, near the Confines of Poland, a large well-built City, Fortified with good Walls and a strong Castle. Baudrand says, the Walls are six Cubits broad, and have 52 Towers upon them; and that the City contains 8000 Houses or more. It hath frequently chang'd its Masters, for sometimes it belong'd to the Poles, sometimes to the Muscovites, as did the whole Province. Sigismund III. King of Poland, Established here an Archbishop for the Greeks of the Roman Communion, and a Bishop for the Roman Catholics; but Czar Alexis put a Grecian Bishop in their place. The City is surrounded with Woods, wherein are taken the best Furrs in Muscovy. Dragobusa, the next chief Place, is seated also on the Nieper, 50 miles above Smolensko.

BIELSKI, a very small Province, lyes on the North of Smolensko, whose chief City Bielba or Bielow, stands on the River Osca, about 80 miles North-East from Smolensko. This was formerly a Dukedom, and Govern'd by its own Princes, subject to Lithuania, till Basilus subjected himself to the Czar.

RESCHOVV, another Duchy, lies on the North of Bielski and Smolensko; it joyns to Lithuania on the West, and was sometime subject to that Duke. The Country is full of Forests and Lakes, particularly the Forest of VVolkonski, wherein the River VVolga hath its Source, as also the River Dzmina, which passes through Lithuania and Livonia. The chief City Reschow, stands in the East part of the Province in the way to Moscow. And VVoloczk, 40 miles South from it: This Place is noted for a People remarkably Courteous and Genteel, and for White Hares in the Neighbouring Forests, the Hunting whereof is often the Diversion of the Czar.

TVVER, a small Province lying on the North-East of Reschow, with the Title of a Duchy, is a very Fruitful and Populous Country. The chief City Twer, seated on the Twaretza (at its Confluence with the VVolga) 40 miles North from Reschow, is a large Town, having near 60 Churches, very populous and Rich; the See of a Bishop, and the Station of a Mint. Tersack, or Torsack, another large Town, stands upon the same River, 20 miles to the North.

The Duchy of MUSCOVY, or MOSCOWIA, the chief Province of the Empire, adjoyns to Twer, Reschow, and Smolensko, and hath Rostow on the North, Razan on the South, and Razan and Susdal on on the East: Its extent is near 200 miles in length from East to West, and the breadth about 100 miles. The SOIL is not very fruitful, but the Air exceeding wholsom; which with the convenience of its Situation amidst the best Provinces of the Empire, makes it chosen for the Residence of the Czar.

The City Moscow, the Metropolis of the Kingdom is seated on the River Moska, in the Latitude of 55. 36. Longitude, 58. 45. Of its Magnitude in former times strange things are related, but it is so subject to Fire, by reason of its Wooden Houses, that mighty Conflagrations have happen'd there, and reduc'd the bulk of it half in half. In the great Fire and Ravage of the Tartars, which happen'd in 1540. they relate that 80000 Persons perish'd, being either Burnt, Slain, Drown'd, or Trod to Death. In 1611. the Poles burnt down (as they report) 41000 Houses: And yet in the Year 1662. when my Lord Carlisle was there Ambassador from our King Charles, it was judg'd to be 12 miles in Compass, and about 40000 Houses; but the Russians pretend it contain'd above twice that Number. It is of Circular Form, and consists of four distinct parts. viz. 1. Cataigorod, or Mid-City, surrounded by a Brick-Wall; in it stands the Castle, which is 2 miles in circuit, and Fortified with 3 strong Walls and a Ditch, and in the Castle are 2 Palaces of the Czar's, one of Timber and the other of Stone, built after the Italian Manner; the Palace of the Patriarch, the Exchequer, the Magazine, 2 Monasteries, 5 Churches, (among which that of St. Michael is adorn'd with the Tombs of the Grand Dukes or Czars) and several other publick and private Buildings. At the Castle-Gate stands the stately Church of Jerusalem, and before the Castle is the great Market-place; the great Bell weighing 336000 pounds, hangs in a Tower in the Castle, it is 13 Foot Diameter. 2. Czargorod encompasses the other, and is Wall'd about with Stone; herein is the Arsenal. 3. Skorodom, on the Northwest of the other, is chiefly Inhabited by the Woodmongers, that sell Houses ready made. 4. Strelitzia Slavoda, is the Quarters of the Strelitzes, or Guards of the Czar, and is Fortified with Wooden Ramparts. The Houses here are generally very mean, being built only of Fir-Timber Squar'd, and Dovetail'd one into another, and the Chinks fill'd with Moss; these are ready cut out, and when a Fire happens, 'tis but going to Market and you have a new House presently. Nor is their Furniture much better; so that except the Merchandize and Lives that may be lost by a Fire, the Damage is inconsiderable, which makes them never attempt to extinguish it any other way, than by pulling down the Neighbourhood, to hinder its spreading. The Streets are not paved with Stones, but Plank'd with Fir Timber. The Merchants have Vaults of Stone for their Magazines, to prevent the so frequent Damage by Fire. In the City there are no less than 2000 Churches and Chappels, if we may believe the common Accounts. Moscow was first Founded in the Year, 1334, by George, Duke of Wolodimer; and soon after the Great Duke, Daniel Alexandrowitz, taking a liking to the Place, made it his Residence, from which time it continually encreased, till it became the Greatest and Richest City in all the North. But the Tartars reduc'd it much, when they Took and burnt the City, on the 24th of May, 1570, already mention'd. The Polanders also Took it in 1611. and Burnt down, as we have said, 41000 Houses. However the Enemies were beat off and the City Repair'd; and tho' it may not now be so exceeding large as formerly, it is however very considerable, being the ordinary Residence of this Great Monarch, the Seat of the Patriarch, and a great Emporium, or place of Trade.

The other most remarkable Towns are, Troytza, 30 or 40 miles North from Moscow, where is a notable Monastery, and a Palace of the Czars, which is strongly Fortified. And, Columna or Columnas, upon the River Mosca, near its confluence with the Occa, 60 miles South-East from Moscow; which is a fair City encompass'd with a Wall, and dignified with an Episcopal See.

ROSTOW or ROSTHOW lies on the North of Muscovia, a fruitful and plentiful Country, anciently Govern'd by its own Princes, till Ivan Vasilowick put to Death the last Prince. and annex'd it to the Crown. The chief City Rosthow stands on a Lake of the same Name, 120 miles North from Moscow. Uglitz in the same Province seated on the Wolga, 80 miles West from Rosthow is noted for its excellent Bread. A few miles below stands Chlopigorod, which was formerly a great Mart, for all the Neighbouring Nations, but is now ruin'd. Perislaw another chief Town of this Province stands on the Borders of Muscovy, 50 miles South from Rosthow. It is a large Town and very Populous. The Czar comes frequently higher in the Hunting-Season, to divert himself.

JAROSLAW lies next to Rosthow on the North, and is a Rich and Fruitful Country, abounding with Corn, Cattle, and Honey. It was formerly the Royalty of the younger Sons of the Czar, till Ivan Vasilowick in 1565. took it to himself. The chief City Jaroslawn is large and populous, said to contain above 40000 Inhabitants; strongly Fortified, and hath a great Trade in Leather, Corn, Cattle and Honey: It stands upon the River Wolga, which passes through the middle of this Province. Roma Nova the other chief Town, stands on the other side the Wolga, 20 miles above Jaroslawn.

Returning now Southward.

The Dutchy of NISI-NOVOGOROD or Novogorod Inferior, lies E. of Jaroslawn, and South of Oustigh; it is a large Province, and though a great part of it be cover'd with Woods, yet it is a pleasant and fruitful Country. The River Wolga passes thro' it, and receives the Occa here, near which Confluence on the South Side of the River stands the City of Nisi-Novogorod in the Latitude of 56. 40. Longitude 75. and at the distance of 350 miles from Moscow to the North-East, it hath a Castle Seated on a Rock, but it is not in very good Condition; being less useful since the adjoining Provinces of Tartary have been subject to the Czar. Vasiligorod (Built by the Czar Vasilie against the Incursions of the Tartars) on the same side the River near 100 miles to the East, and Balagna somewhat more to the West, are the other Towns of chief Note in this Province; and a large Church built like that St. Sophia in Constantinople.

The Dutchy of WOLODIMER a small Province, but one of the most fruitful in all Muscovy city, is seated between the Rivers Volga and Occa, on the South of Niſi-Novogorod, having Suſdal on the Weſt, which divides it from Muſcovia, Rezan on the South, and Tartaria Mordua on the Eaſt. The River Ceſma, which riſes in Muſcovy, runs thro' this Province, and on it ſtands the chief City Volodimer 140 miles Eaſt from Moscow, and 150 South-Weſt from Niſi-Novogorod; it has its Name from Volodimer its Founder about the Year, 928. and was a conſiderable time the Reſidence of the Great Dukes of Muſcovy, till Danielau Michaelowitz remov'd the Regal Seat to Moscow, ſince which time it has declined, but the Ruins of its large Walls and Houſes are undeniable Proofs of its former Grandeur. The City is ſtill conſiderable, and the Country about it ſo fruitful that it yields Thirty for One.

The Duchy of S U S D A L, lies on the North-Weſt of that, having Niſi-Novogorod on the Eaſt, Volga on the North, Jaroſlaw and Roſtbow on the Weſt, and Muſcovia on the South-Weſt. It is Water'd by the River Volga, which runs croſs the middle of it; and the Ceſma in the South Part, on which ſtands the City Suſdal an Episcopalian See, Seated as we have ſaid on the River Ceſma, 50 miles Weſt from Volodimer, and 80 North-Eaſt, from Moscow; famous for a ſtately Monastery of Nuns, and for having been ſometime the Metropolis of Ruſſia. Caſtromogorod, called alſo Caſtrum, on the River Volga in the Weſtern, and Galez in the North Conſines, 180 miles from Suſdal, are the other chief Towns of this Province.

The Duchy of R E Z A N, a long Tract of Land, lies on the South of Muſcovia, Suſdal and Volodimer, extending from Eaſt to Weſt near 300 miles along the Banks of the River Occa; 'tis the moſt fruitful Soil in the World, if the Ruſſian Accounts may be credited, who ſay, that one Grain produceth many Stalks, and each Stalk many Ears, and grows ſo thick that a Horſe can hardly paſs thro': The Fruits alſo are very good, and the Inhabitants Courageous and Civil, and ſo Populous is the Province, that they are able to ſend 15000 Horſe and 40000 Foot to the Wars. It was formerly Govern'd by its own Duke, who was a very powerful Prince, but 'tis now ſubject to the Czar. The great River Don or Tanaïs hath its Source here, which, after a long angular Courſe, falls into the Palus Meotis at Azoph. The chief City Rezan is Seated on the River Occa, 80 miles South-Eaſt from Moscow, and 100 South-Weſt from Volodimer. It is a large City, the See of a Biſhop, Populous and in good State, and eſpecially famous on account of its notable Defence againſt the Tartars, in the Year, 1570. whereby the whole Empire was preſerv'd. Donkagorod 40 miles South from Rezan near the Head of the River Don: and Tzul in the Weſtern Conſines, near the Limits of Veronitz: which hath a ſtrongſt Caſtle Built by the Czar Baſilius, ſoon after he took it; are the Places of chiefſt Note.

The Province of ORGANIA, or the Palatinate of BELGOROD, as I find it call'd in the Modern Map of Mr. Theſing, is a large Tract of Land lying on the South of Rezan is water'd with divers Rivers, and hath a reaſonable good Soil, but adjoining to the Leſſer Tartary, it is ſo ſubjected to the Inſults of that Barbarous People, that it is not very Rich or Populous. Many ſmall Towns there are, but no Cities nor any Places of conſiderable Note except Voronitz or Veronecz ſeated on the River Don, and of late Years eſpecial'y very conſiderable, on account of the great Ships of War built there by the immediate Direction and Inſpection of the Czar, The River being it ſeems deep enough to carry them down to the Black-Sea; to which, ſince the taking of Azoph, the Muſcovites have free Access. We muſt not omit taking notice of a Miſtake in all the common Maps, of the Situation of this Town, and the Courſe of the River Don; for whereas they place it Eaſt-South Eaſt from Moscow, and make the Courſe of the River (in the 70 Deg. Long.) to ariſe Northward as high as the 56 Deg. Lat. and paſs Eaſtward to the 74 Deg. of Longitude; The Town in Truth ſtands almoſt directly South from Moscow, at about 200 miles diſtance; and the River continues running Southward from its very Fountain, without ever turning Northward at all: It alſo flows Eaſtward no further than the 69 Deg. of Long. and then returns Weſtward and falls into the Black-Sea at Azoph, in the 47 Degree of Latitude, and not in the 51 Degree as they lay it. This Correction we have from Mr. Theſing, an Ingenious Merchant in Holland, at whoſe Houſe the Czar himſelf Lodg'd, and gave him an Opportunity of making a Map from the original Surveys that that Prince had cauſ'd to be made of the Courſe of this River, and Situation of Azoph. Again, the quick Paſſage of the Ships from Voronitz to Azoph confirms this Account, which is perform'd in four Days; but if the River winded about ſo much as the old Maps make it, 'twould take up more than double that Time.

On the Eaſt of Ograina lies POLE, and on the South of it the ROSDORI DONSKI, or the Country of the Coffacks, inhabiting the Banks of the River Don, and denominated from their Town Rosdori, ſeated on the South Bank of that River, The former is a large Bog, and the latter almoſt all Foreſt; ſo that tho' there be ſome Villages on the Banks of the Don which River paſſes thro' both Provinces, and divides the latter from the Circasſi Tartary, yet no City or Town of Note is found here. This Country, as alſo the greateſt part of what follows, was formerly part of Tartary, and from time to time has been Conquer'd by the Czars. The ancient Tanaitæ, and the Eſſedones lived here. At preſent 'tis Inhabited by the Coffacks, who are oblig'd to aſſiſt the Czar in his Wars, and are in return protect'd by him, but are not immediately Govern'd by him, or indeed by any Body, only as their Wars make 'em chuſe a General, whom they obey with great Submiſſion.

Returning Northward, we enter

TARTARIA MORDUA, which is ſurrounded by Pole on the South, Rezan and Volodimer on the Weſt, Niſi-Novogorod on the North, and Czermiſſe on the Eaſt. It is the Habitation of the Mordua Tartars, who are the more Civiliz'd of thoſe People, and have Towns, whereof the chief is Adema, 120 miles Eaſt from Volodimer, and 60 South from Niſi-Novogorodeck. And Moruma ſeated on the Occa. This is but a ſmall Country, but

The CZERMIſſE on the Eaſt of it is a very large Tract of Land, extending from the 54 to the 61 Degree of Latitude; it is divided by the River Volga into two Parts, the Southern whereof, which adjoyns adjoyns to Mordua, is called the NAGORNOI, because Mountainous, and the Northern LOGOVI because a Flat Pasture Land. On the South of these live the VACHINES on the Banks of the Volga.

The Inhabitants of these Countries last nam'd are a rude barbarous People, having a peculiar Language among themselves, and living in Tents and Huts. Those of the Logowicz are notable Graziers; for their Country yeilding good Pasture, they breed abundance of Cattle; they are also very expert Archers and Hunt in the Woods. In Religion they are Pagans, for tho' they believe there is one Supreme God, and a Devil, they Sacrifice to him to avoid harm, and Worship the Sun and Moon; but have neither Temple nor Priest. The Women are clad in white Cloath, and all cover'd but their Face; Polygamy is frequent among 'em, and for want of Children a Wife is often put away. They are Subject to the Czar, and are oblig'd to assist him in War, but pay no certain Tribute, and only make voluntary Presents.

We have now made a Journey round one Moiety of the best part of Muscovy, and should cross the upper Stream of the Volga, and proceed Northward to the other Part; But must first speak of the Muscovian Ukraine, which lies on the South-West of these Provinces, on the Frontiers of Poland. And altho' it proper to mention here the Czar's new Conquests from the Turks, I mean Azoph and Cassikermen, altho' those two Towns are seated in the Turkish Tartary.

Of the UKRAINE in General and of its chief City Kiom, we have already spoken in our account of Poland, and there told you that that part of the Country that lies on the East-side of the Boristhenes, belongs to Muscovy, and that even the City Kiom has been surrender'd to the Czar ever since 1686. The Country is often ravag'd by the Tartars, and Inhabited by a roving Generation, as are the COSSACKS, and therefore is not in so orderly a State, as to afford Cities and Towns, and so might be pass'd over. But in regard the Cossacks are one of the Classes of People, who live different from the Civiliz'd part of Mankind, we shall detain the Reader to speak a little of them, especially since we are able to do it satisfactorily from the Sieur Beauplan, an Engenier, who was employ'd there by the King of Poland, in the Year 1636.

The Old City Kiom, was in its time considerable enough to be rank'd with the Best, as the height and breadth of its Ramparts, the depth of its Ditches, the Ruins of Churches, and the old Tombs of Kings demonstrate. The two Churches of St. Michael and St. Sophia have been Re-built and Adorn'd, especially the latter; but the Ruins of that of St. Basil, are not above 6 Foot high, wherein however, are still seen Greek Inscriptions of 1400 Years standing. The Situation of the Old City is on a Plain at the top of a Hill, and commands the Country on one side, and the Boristhenes, on 'other. At the Foot of the Hill, on the Bank of the River stands the New Kiom, a City of 4 miles extent, containing about 5 or 6000 Inhabitants. It is encompass'd with a wooden Wall, and has a Castle on the brow of the Hill, which commands the Lower Town, but is commanded by the Old one. There are many Churches in this City, whereof 10 of Russian of the Greek Communion, and 4 of Roman Catholicks. A pretty good Trade is carried on here in Corn, Wax, Honey, Furs, Tallow, Salt Fish, &c. The Houses are built after the manner of Muscovy, and seldom above one Story high.

The Land hereabouts is very Fertile, and produces so much Corn, that for want of means of Exportation, it lies upon their Hands; for the Boristhenes, which is their only Navigable River, is so clog'd with the Cataracts, that it is not Navigable for 50 Leagues below it, which hinders 'em carrying their Corn to Constantinople. Of these Water-falls there are no less than 13. which are made by Ridges of Rocks and great Stones lying cross the River, and by stopping the main Current, make the Falls 10 or 15 Foot deep. These Water-falls are called Porouys, and from them the People that frequent them, Zaporousky Cossacks. These Men are able to Navigate the River where no Body dares follow them, and so find a safe Retreat from their Enemies; which makes the Peasants, Servants, or other uneasy People fly thither, and encrease their Number, which is always very great, and has at divers times appear'd in very formidable Armies.

The Zaporousky Cossacks are a People of great Activity and Courage, of strong well-made Bodies and healthy Constitutions: They are very hardy against Fatigue, and scud in their little Boats upon the Boristhenes and other Waters, with wonderful skill and celerity. They fight better on Foot than on Horseback, and use Fire-Arms with much dexterity; they carry with them a vast number of Carts, which besides carrying their Baggage, serve them for a Rampart round their Camp; and they seldom care to Fight without them. They have among 'em all sorts of Trades, and are expert at Agriculture and all parts of Husbandry. They Brew a strong sort of Beer, which with Mead and Aquavivæ, they drink to excess. They live Merrily without Care, performing just as much Labour as is necessary for their Support, but go no further, as having no regard to Wealth, and are great lovers of Liberty. They are Christians of the Greek Church, and observe many Fasts and Feasts, which is indeed the sum of their Religion. There are some Nobility among them descended from Poland, who are Roman Catholicks. The People are distinguish'd into Gentry and Peasantry; and the latter are miserable enough, being obliged to Work three days in the Week for their Lords; and moreover pay so large a proportion of the product of the Lands they hold, that they are always kept Poor. The Lord's Power over their Vassals is so great, that they extend it to Life and Goods: And therefore the Peasants that happen to have severe Lords, flie to the Pourouys on the Boristhenes; where after they have acquir'd the Art of passing the Water-falls, they are qualify'd to be denominat'd Zaporousky Cossacks. These Cossacks spread themselves all along the Banks of the Boristhenes and Neighbouring Country, where they are so Numerous, that our Author says, in his Time they were 120000 Disciplin'd Men, who could be Rendezvouz'd in eight Days time. They were at that time commanded by the King of Poland, who made use of them in his Wars against the Turks: And they have at several times Plunder'd the Crim Tartary, Ravag'd Anatolia, Sack'd Trebizond, and run to the mouth of the Black-Sea, within 3 Leagues of Constantinople, where with Fire and Sword, they destroy'd all before 'em, and brought off vast Booty.

these Excursions are made in Parties of about 10000, who with ferry Boats of their own making, pass the Seas miraculously.

The River Dni or Tanaïs hath its source as we have told you in the Province of Régan, and the greatest part of its Course lyes through other Provinces of Muscovy. But its lower Stream passing by the Frontier of the Minor Tartary, the Muscovite was thereby stop't in his Passage upon it to the Palus Mæotis. And furthermore, the Turkish Sultan Mahomet II. to shut that Back door to Constantinople, wisely seized the Fortrefs A Z O P H, which stands at the Mouth of that River, into the Palus Mæotis, in Lat. 47 Deg. His present Czarish Majesty, whose Genius always lay very much towards Navigation, consider'd with just weight, the Advantage he should reap by possessing this Place; for at Warenitz upon this River, he propos'd to build Ships, from whence the Stream is so deep, that he could Float 'em to Azoph, and thereby gain the Navigation of the Palus Mæotis, whence through the Black-Sea, he may pass to Constantinople, as in effect his Ships actually did to carry an Ambassador, and even the Czar himself; for as 'twas afterwards reported, that Prince ventur'd himself aboard the Ship. I say, reflecting on this, he took the advantage of the difficult War the Turk was then employ'd in in Hungary against the Emperor, and in the Year 1693 he March'd with a great Army to Besiege Azoph, but had not the Fortune to succeed that time; wherefore leaving it block'd up all the Winter, he return'd next Spring, well supply'd with all Necessaries, and attack'd it with that Violence that he took it, and has ever since possess'd it.

Of the present State of it we are told thus by a Modern Traveller. Azoph was a Town of no large extent, and the Fortifications no more than a single Wall, with some Towers, besides a large Intrenchment, which serv'd for a Citadel. The Turks had added some Fortifications of Earth, which enabled them to resist the first Siege, 1693. But the Czar returning the next Summer, Attack'd it so furiously with his Bombs, that the whole Town was laid in Rubbish. So that after it was Taken, it was necessary to build it intirely New. The Czar caus'd it to be Re-built accordingly, and Fortified it perfectly à la Moderne, with Counterescarp, Covered-way, Half moons, &c. And in regard to his chief purpose in taking this Place, was to open a Passage for Trade into the Black-Sea, and thence to Constantinople and the Mediterranean; His next care was to make a convenient Haven. At Azoph here lies a Bar of Sand, which leaves but 7 Foot depth at low Water; wherefore he caus'd the depths all round to be Sounded, and found that at the Mouth of the River Miens, some Leagues Westward from Azoph, where the Turkish Ships used to Anchor, there is 15 or 16 Foot at Low Water, near which is a Cape where there is 12 Foot Water and a hard Gravel. Here he built a Fortrefs with five Battions, and a City, which he named Petrachina Tuba. He gave to that new City encouraging Privileges, and ordain'd that none but Native Muscovites should Inhabit it; which took so well, that in the Year 1697, when the Czar was in Holland, he receiv'd Advice, that there were already 10000 Inhabitants in it. He propos'd also to make a Canal of 3750 Foot long, and half so much broad, for a Basin for Ships to lie safely in, which we suppose is perform'd.

Kasikermant, his other Conquest in that War, is a Fortrefs seated at the Mouth of the Borisphenes into the Black Sea; but in regard that the Borisphenes is not Navigable, by reason of the Porouys or stony Dams below Kiow, as we have mention'd above, this place is not of equal convenience with Azoph. It stands in the Minor Tartary overagainst Oczacow.

CHAP. III.

Of that Part of Muscovy, that lies between the upper Channel of the Wolga on the South, and the White-Sea, and Ocean on the North

THIS Part of the Czarish Empire, is bounded on the West by Sweden and Norway, on the North by the Muscovian Ocean, on the South by the Provinces we have mention'd, and on the East by Siberia. Comprehending these Provinces, viz. Pleskow, Novgorod-Weliki, Biele-Ozoro, Wologda, Cargopolia, Muscovian Lap-land, Dwina, Juborski, Pet-zora, Cendora, Permia, Oustiuch.

The Dutchy of PLESKOW, formerly a Powerful and Free State, but now subject to the Czar, is the most Western part of his Dominions, bounded on the North with Ingria, on the West with Lithonia, (part of the Swedish Dominions) on the South with Lithuania, and on the East with Novgorod. The chief City Pleskow, call'd by the Russies Pfscow, is the See of an Archbishop, a City of very large extent, and reckon'd one of the strongest in all the North: It is divided into four Quarters, each of which hath its Wall, and is defended by a Castle built on a Rock. It was Govern'd by its own Princes, till Ivan Vasilowitz in 1509. united it to the Crown, and the Citizens who were then famous for their Valour, Civility and Honesty in Trade, were Transported; and Muscovites put in their place. There are several other strong Places in this Province, which as they gave the Czar great trouble in Conquering, are maintain'd now for defence of this advanc'd Frontier. Below Pleskow is the Lake Peibus, the Eastern part whereof which hath many Islands is in this, Dutchy, the rest in Lithonia.

NOVOGOROD, call'd WELIKI, or the Great, to distinguish it from others of the same Name, is a large and fruitful Province, seated between Pleskow on the West, Ingria, Carelia and Kexholm (parts of Sweden) on the North, Rescow and Twer on the South, and Rosthow; Ferslaw, &c. on on the East. Its extent from East to West in the Southern part, is 250 miles, but Northwards it grows exceedingly narrow. The Products of the Country are Wheat, Flax, Hemp, Honey, Wax and Leather, which formerly caus'd a vast Traffick here, when Govern'd by its own Princes; but the Muscovites often Warring against 'em diminish'd their Traffick, and since it has been under their Dominion 'tis not in so Flourishing a State. In the middle of the Southern part is the Lake Ilmen, whence Issues the River Volohova, which passes into the Lake Ladoga. On this River stands the chief City Novogorod Weliki, in the Latitude of 58. 23. Longitude 55. 0. call'd by the Dutch Newgarten: It is a large City surrounded with a Rampart of Timber and Earth, and Guarded by one Castle in the middle of the City well Fortified, and another on the other side the River, which is joyn'd to the City by a large Bridge; and wherein lives the Weywood or chief Governour in Civil Affairs, and the Metropolitan or Arch-bishop, who has the care of Ecclesiastical Matters. This City was once of vast Extent, as the Ruins of it's ancient Walls demonstrate, and its Power and Wealth, obtain'd by the mighty Traffick, was so great that it became a Proverb, Who can hurt God and Great Novogorod? Vitold, Great Duke of Lithuania, and at that time General of the Polish Army, was the first that diminish'd its Grandeur, having in the Year 1427. oblig'd it to pay a Tribute to that Crown. About 50 Years after John Basilowitz Grotzyn Warring against them, obtain'd a great Victory, and forc'd them to submit to his Government, and not long after caus'd the City to be Pillag'd, and many of the Inhabitants to be Transported to other places, and in the Pillage 'tis said he carried off 300 Cart Loads of Gold, Silver, and Jewels, besides abundance of other rich Goods; so Wealthy was the place at that time. Afterwards in 1569. John Basilowitz came again with an Army, and destroyed the Inhabitants most cruelly. The City and Province have always since been subject to the Czar, except in the Year 1611. when it was taken by the Poles, but in the following Treaty restor'd. The Town is but sorry built, the Houses being of Wood, but is adorn'd with 70 Monastries, and above 100 Churches, whose Steeples and Towers are cover'd with Copper gilt; among them that of St. Sophia is the Cathedral of this Arch-Episcopal Sec. In the same Province are, Stara Russa seated on the opposite shoar of the Lake Ilmen, whence issues a River that passes through the Town, and out of which Salt is made, that yields the Inhabitants a profitable Traffick. Some Authors affirm that from the Name of this Town the whole Nation were call'd Russes. Ladoga and St. Nicholas upon the River about 100 miles North from Novogorod, and near the Lake Ladoga (which in part belongs to this Province, and part to Sweden.) Mologa at the Confluence of the Nissa with the Volga on the Confines of Biele Ozoro, are the other Towns of Note in this Province.

BIELE JEZORO or OZORO a small Province of circular Form lying on the East of Novogorod, takes it's Name from a Lake of about 13 L. long, call'd Biele Ozoro, which signifies White Lake, on which stands the chief Town of the same Name, 200 miles East from Novogorod, and as many North from Moscow: It is a considerable Town and strong, especially the Castle which stands in the Lake, is esteem'd Impregnable. The Province is full of Woods and Lakes, and therefore the Ways impassable but in Winter.

Geblova Sabloda on the Volga 60 miles above Jaroslav is a place of Trade.

WOLOGDA lies on the East of Novogorod, and on the North of Jaroslav, it is a large Province, but very Woody and Mountainous. The chief City Wologda stands in a Bog on the River of the same Name (which falls into the Duina) at the distance of 120 miles from Biele Ozoro to the East: It is Walled with Stone, and it's Castle is reckon'd so strong that to it and the Castle of Biele Ozoro, the Emperor sends his Treasure in time of Danger; Sooska and Strelitz upon the River, 60 or 70 miles to the East, are reckon'd the next chief Towns of this Province.

CARGAPOLIA lies on the North of Wologda and on the West of Duina, extending to the White Sea, otherwise call'd the Bay of St. Nicholas. It is a large Province, but Mountainous and Barren. The People live somewhat like the Laplanders, tho' not quite so barbarous, having among them some Towns, whereof Kargapol is the chief, seated on a Lake out of which flows the River Onega, that crossing this Province falls at last into the White Sea.

Northward from hence lies the Muscovian LAPLAND, called LEPORIE, by the Russes, and divided into three Parts, viz.

BELLAMORESKOY LEPORIE, which lies at the bottom of the Bay call'd the White Sea, or Bella More, extending from the 64th. to the 68th. Degree of Latitude, and round about all the West and North-West Coast of that Bay: The Country is Barren, The Air extream Cold, and the Inhabitants a rude uncultivated People: And in general the whole Country is like the Swedish Lapland, of which we have already given an Account. Some few Towns here are, whereof the chief are, Soma, on the Frontiers of Cargapol, and the very entrance of Lapland, seated on the White Sea, in the Latitude of 64. More North on the same Sea stands Keretti, Latitude 66. 30. Ombay on the opposite shoar of the same Bay, 20 Leagues to the North-east; and Kandalax more Northward, at the very utmost Northern Shoar of the same Bay. MOUREMANSKOY LEPORIE the most Northern part, lying between the Norwegian Lapland on the North-West, the Swedish Lapland on the West, and the Bella Moreskoy on the South. It is a Mountainous and Woody Country, and hath no Towns of any note; Kola a small Port-Town at the Mouth of a River of the same Name, which falls into the Muscovian Ocean, is the chief, it stands in the Latitude of 69 Deg. TERSKOY LEPORIE is the East part of the Muscovian Lapland, it is almost surrounded by the Sea, and is the Land that makes the Bay called the White-Sea. This is also a Woody Barren Country, Warsiga is the chief Town in it, and stands on the South Coast over against Archangel. Lockena another small Port stands at the Mouth of the River of the same Name, which falls into the Ocean, in the Latitude of 68 Deg. Returning now Southward we enter,

DUINA, a Province of very large extent being near 300 miles broad, in form of a Lozenge; having the Straights of the White Sea on the North-West, Cargapol on the South-West, Condora on the East, and Oustiugh on the South-East. It takes its Name from the River which runs cross it, and is called Duina q. d. Twain, because it consists of the two Rivers Suchana and Fugb united, and falls into the White Sea. The Country is Barren and hath but very few Cities and great Towns: The Inhabitants live upon dry'd Fish and Venison, (the Land producing no Corn) and their chief Commodity is Salt, the Vent whereof was their only Trade, before the English came to Traffick at Archangel; but now the conveying Goods from all parts of Muscovy to that Market, doth somewhat enrich the Country. The chief City of the Province is,

Archangel. or St. Michael Arch-Angel, called by the Russes Archania, seated on the East Side of the River Duina, near its Mouth, in the Latitude of 65, and Longitude of 63 Degrees. It is no very large City, but Rich and Populous, of modern Structure, being not considerable till the the English Ships coming there to Traffick made it resorted to. At present 'tis the See of an Arch-bishop, and its Haven so much frequented, that in the Summer Season (for in the Winter 'tis frozen up) there are often seen 3 or 4 Hundred Ships at a time from England, Holland, Sweden and Denmark. And indeed 'tis in a manner the only Port of Muscovy; for since the way to it has been discover'd, the Voyages to Narva, where formerly the Russian Commodities were bought, are left off. The English were the first Discoverers of it, for Sir Hugh Willsughby in the Year. 1553. having receiv'd a Commission to discover the North-East Passage to China, Richard Chancellor, Master of one of the Ships, was separated from the Fleet, and accidentally fell into the Bay of St. Nicholas or White Sea, where he was well receiv'd, and being sent for to Court, was kindly Entertain'd by the Czar Iohn Basilowick, and a free liberty given to the English to Trade in his Dominions; insomuch that a Company of Merchants were Incorporated at London, in 1555. and large Privileges granted them by the Czar; upon which Encouragement a Trade to Russia was carried on, to the great Profit of both Nations, which for some Time the English enjoy'd solely. The Dutch and other Nations struck in for a share of it, but could not Trade upon the same Advantages, by reason of our Privileges, till the Civil War, and the Death of K. Charles I. provok'd the Czar so far against the English, that he took away those Privileges; and tho' by a solemn Embassy from K. Charles II. soon after the Restoration, they were endeavour'd to be regain'd, it could not be effected, and our Merchants have now little better Advantages than other Nations. About 20 Miles to the East of Arch-Angel stands St. Nicholas, a small Port on the White-Sea, which seems to be the more ancient Place, since it has given Name to all this Bay. Collocated upon the Duina 20 miles above Arch-Angel, is also reckon'd one of the chief Towns of this Province.

Sallowitzogda a large City inhabited by many considerable Merchants and curious Mechanics, as we are told by Isbrandts, stands on the Limits of this Province, in Lat. 63. Near it according to the same Author is a Country of 70 German Leagues extent, nam'd WOLLOSTUSGY, inhabited by Men of different Language, and suppos'd by that Author to have come from Livonia; they are Civil, and Christians of the Greek Church.

On the North of Duina, in the Muscovian-Sea, lies the Island Marfonowitz, divided by a narrow Strait. In the East part of it stands the Town Candences, whence the Island is sometimes call'd Candenora, and is mention'd in some of the Northern Voyages.

ZUHORSKI, called also Zugoria, Zugria, &c. lies on the North-East of Duina, having the Sea on the North and East, and Oustiugh on the South. By its Northern Situation 'tis no Wonder that the Land is Barren, the Soil overrun with Forrests, and the People of mean Condition. Zuhora, the chief Town, stands on a small Bay in the North Coast, in the Latitude of 68 Degrees. And over against it, about 20 Leagues off in the Sea, lies the Island Colgoza.

Eastward from hence lies the large Province of PETZORA, a Barren and Woody Country, surrounded with Mountains. A River of the same Name rises in the East Confines, and runs quite thro' the Province, and falls at last into the Ocean by many Mouths, on which stands the chief Town Petzora or Puste Ozoro, about 30 Leagues from the Sea; Weliki Poyassa stands near the head of the River, and Papinowgorod about 100 miles below it.

The Montes Ryphei five Obii, commonly call'd Stolp, and by the Russes Weliki Kameny Poyas, i. e. the great Girdle of Rocks, begin from the Bay of the Muscovian-Sea, near the Straights of Weygats, and continue on almost quite round this Province, and a good part of Siberia.

CONDORA or CONDINSKY, lies between Duina on the West, Zuhorsky on the North, Petzora and Siberia on the East, and Permia on the South. It is a large Province with the Title of a Dutchy, but not considerable, being very Woody and Mountainous. The chief Town is Wirchaboura, seated in the Northern Part, in the Latitude of 66.

OUSTIUGH a large Province, lies between Permia, Condora, Duina, Cargapola and Wologda; this also is but a Poor Country; a great part of it is cover'd with Woods, wherein are the best black Foxes, whose Furrs are the chief Commodity of the Land: The River Fugb rises on the East side of the Province, and the Suchana enters it out of Wologda on the West, and both meeting together about the middle make the great River Duina, at the Confluence whereof stands the chief Town Oustiugh, q. d. (according to Luyts) Ostium Fugæ, which is noted for the Fairs held Annually in it for the Sale of Fox Skins, &c.

The Dutchy of WIADSKI lies on the West of Siberia, having Permia on the North, Oustiugh on the West, and Casan on the South. It is a Barren and Marshy Country, Conquer'd from the Tatars by the Emperor Vasilie. The great River Kam passes through it, and falls into the Volga at Casan, and the River Wiadka gives Name to the Country. The chief Towns are Cotelinitz, upon the Wiadka, near the Confines of Casan. Slaboda, more to the North-west. Cblinoff on the Wiadka, near the Confines of Permia, and Oorloff on the same River in the middle of the Province.

PERMIA or PERMSKY, lies on the South of Condora, between that, Oustiugh, Wiadski and Siberia. It is a Mountainous Country, and not considerable considerable but for the Rivers; the great River Kama hath its rise here, as also Tuga, which falls into the Wolga, and several other smaller Streams arise in these Mountains. The chief Town Permia should be large by its Name, being called Veliki or Great Permia; but it is not mention'd by Authors as considerable, and few Travellers have been this way to inform us. It stands upon a small River that falls into the Kama, Lat. 62. according to the Maps.

But Tibbrandts gives the Capital of Permia the Name of Solikamskoj, and places it in his Map, in the 60 Deg. Lat. Which, says he, is a very fine large and rich City, abounding with Salt Works, and maintains a good Trade in Salt sent away by Shipping on the Kama, which falls into the Wolga. Note, That Author reckons the Eastern Frontier of this Province the Limits of Europe.

C H A P. IV.

Of Nova Zembla, Samoieda, and Siberia; with the Kingdoms of Casan, Bulgaria and Astrachan. All which may be call'd the Muscovian Tartary in Europe.

HAVING described all the Western and Midland part of the Muscovian Empire from North to South, we proceed next to the Eastern Part, which tho' of near as large Extent, is by no means comparable for Wealth and Cultivation; this being Inhabited by Tartars, who being in general a rude unpolish'd People, we must not expect to hear of fine Cities and cultivated Lands among them; so that tho' here be large Kingdoms, there are only a few Cities, which the Russians have Built to maintain their Authority over the Natives. In passing thro' these Countries, we shall begin in the North, and proceed to the South, till we come to Astrachan, the utmost City in Europe.

NOVA ZEMLA, q. d. New Land, is separated from the Continent of Muscovy, by the Straights of Wygats, or as the Dutch call it, the Strait van Nassau, which lies in the Latitude of 68 Degrees North from the Equator; and this Land which makes the Strait, is a Promontory advancing Southward from the main Country; which is conceived to reach far more North; and is by some affirm'd to join to Tartary. But the contrary was supposed by our Navigators, who sought that way to pass to Cathay and China. The Longitude is from 70 to 90. But the old Maps laid it vastly more Eastward.

The English first discover'd this Land, in the Year 1556, since when it has been often visited by English and Dutch, in search of the North-East Passage. But the coldness of the Air, and the Mountains of Snow which cover'd the Land, hinder'd 'em from giving any great Account of it. Some Dutchmen Winter'd there in the Year 1595. But the Cold was so severe, that they had enough to do to keep themselves alive. They saw not the Sun from November 4, to January 24. during all which time they had continual Darkness, except what the Moon gave them from the first to the last Quarter, during which time she was seen by Day as well as Night. However, some parts of it, they say, are Inhabited by a People of low Stature, Idolaters and Barbarous. The Grand Czar having sent to discover the Country, assumes the Title of it, though he receives no Obedience, nor exercises any Authority there, the Air being too Cold for a Governor to live in it. What can more be said of it, the Reader will find in our account of the Countries about the Pole, at the latter end of this Work.

The most Northern part of the Continent of Muscovy is Inhabited by several Nations of Barbarous People, call'd by the Russes SAMOIEDS, or Man-Eaters, and thence the Country SAMOIEDA: Which is divided into OB DORA, (where liv'd the Vogulici and Hugritschci) seated on the West-side of the River Oby; and MANAMO and LOPPA, on the East-side of the River. The Mountains Riphei, that surround Petzora, is the Boundary on the South-side, and the Sea on the North; but Eastward it extends to the Asiatick Tartary. The Inhabitants are of low Stature, with broad flat Faces, small black Eyes, resembling much the Laplanders and Greenlanders, as well in Form as way of Living, only they Feed more vilely, for they eat raw Flesh, and even Carrion, and dry'd Fish instead of Bread. They have no Towns nor settled Habitations, but like the Laplanders, remove from Place to Place, seeking the best Game for themselves, and Pasture for their Rain-Deer; which, as in Lapland, is their only Cattle of Service. They Travel in Sleds drawn by Rain-Deer, in which they will run 200 Miles in a Day. They Lodge in Tents made of Skins and Furrs, extended upon Sticks and Poles, are very nimble and excellent Archers, which they acquire by Hunting Wild-Beasts for their Food. Thus they live in the Summer Half-year; but in the Winter they keep in Caves under Ground, and to supply themselves with Light, have Lamps, which are fed with the Oil of Fish. They wear a sort of long Skate on their Feet, with which they slide on the Snow with great ease and celerity. Their Habits are all of Furr, and made close to their Bodies. They are of a hardy and healthy Constitution, Strong and Active. In Religion they are Pagans, Worshipping the Sun, and Sacrificing to Idols: They are also addicted to Sorcery, like the Laplanders: But this is much suppressed in those Parts subject to the Muscovite, where Christianity hath been planted, and pretty well received.

The means whereby they became subjected to the Czar, may be worth Relating. In the Time of Ivan Basilowitz, that is about 150 Years ago, there lived in the Province of Oustingh, upon the River Wysigda, a Husband man, named Onako, who by Industry had acquired some Wealth; and having three Sons to assist him, they fell into a Trade with the Samsieds, that used to bring Furs to the Fair of Ouslingb: And finding the Furs exceeding rare, had the Curiosity to enquire out their Country; accordingly he insinuated into their Acquaintance, and sent some of his Servants Home with them, with strict Orders to observe the Country, and way to it. At their Return, commanding his Servants to be silent, he sent divers Friends, and more Servants the next Year, and with them some Commodities of small Value, which might be useful there; these passing as far as the River Oby, found those Rich Furs very plenty, and to be purchased at easie Rates: Wherefore lading themselves with their Purchase brought Home a very profitable Return to their Master. Which Trade being continued by this Family, they grew exceeding Rich, so as to build many Churches and Towns, Employ 10000 Servants, and pay the King 20000 Rubbles a Year for Custom. But when they had sufficiently Feather'd their Nest, to prevent Destruction by Envy, they resolv'd to inform the Czar: Accordingly some of them repairing to Court, with Presents to the chief Minister, inform'd him what they knew of these Countries, which was received very kindly; and the Czar Theodore being informed of it, Rewarded the Family of Onako's with great Privileges and Honours; and sent many Gentlemen, and Soldiers under their Conduct, to make a Discovery. These being Richly Clad, and Furnished with such small Presents as might be acceptable to the Natives, took a Journey to Samsieds; where behaving themselves discreetly, and bestowing their Presents freely, they gained the Affection of the People; and by extolling the Goodness and Greatness of their Monarch, prevailed upon them to submit to his Government, and pay as an Acknowledgment a pair of Sables every Year for every Head that was able to Shoot, which was but a Trifle to them, but a great Wealth to the Czar: And to satisfy the Samsieds, they took several of them with 'em to Moscow, (leaving Hostages for their Return) who were so astonished at the Pomp of that Court, the Greatness of the Armies, the Convenience of the Houses, and the like, that they immediately desir'd to be accepted as the Czar's Subjects, and have Persons sent to instruct them in this Regular way of Living. Since which time the Christian Religion hath been taught among them, and the People are become more Civiliz'd.

Ysbrandt's Ides tells us, that they are several Nations, differing in Language and Customs: But are in general a very Stupid People, and have little of Man more than Speech, and of the most disagreeable Figure in the World, being short of Stature, broad Shoulder'd, flat Faces, broad Noses, hanging Lips, and frightful Eyes, of brown Complexion, small Beards, and long Hair.

The Chief Towns built by the Russes here are Olschogored in a Peninsula, near the Mouth of the Oby; but that being found too near the Sea, was razed, and in its stead Zergolt was built in an Island of the Oby, in the Latitude of 69 Degrees, and above that upon the Oby, in the Latitude of 67. 30. Naxenscoy, or as others write it, Nieuenascoy, at first a Castle only, now grown into a good City. Southward from hence on the Oby also Stands Toom, in the Latitude of 66. 0. The Chief City of that part of the Country is called Loppa, and seems by the Map to be the chief City of all Samsieda. Several other smaller Towns have been built on the other side.

South and East from hence lies TINCOESIA, or Habitation of the Tingesh, a Mountainous Country beyond the River Jenizai, and properly belonging to Tartary, but is by some Geographers reckon'd part of Moscow.

The Great Province or Kingdom of SIBERIA, lies on the South of Obdora, between the River Oby on the East and Petzora, Permia, and Wiadski on the West, extending no less than Ten Degrees in Length, viz from the 58th to the 68th. The Land is Woody and Marshy, and the Inhabitants are chiefly of the Tartarian Race. The chief Cities built here by the Russes, are Pobem, a Castle near the Confines of Obdora and Petzora. Tobolsca the chief City, seated upon the Rivers Irisch and Tobol, in the Latitude of 65. Here is a Bishop's See, a Supreme Court of Judicature for all Samsieda, and Siberia; and hither the Tribute is brought from all the Provinces beyond, and conveyed to Moscow. Calami upon the Oby, and Ostro on the other side, a little above it. Tumen or Tinna, South from Tobolska on a River of the same Name, where is held a great Market for Furs. Zaphanim, more to the North-West, seated upon the River Toera, Built for a Stage to Travellers this way, as was also Vergateria, the first Town in Siberia, out of Permia. It was built in the Year 1590, and is the Residence of a Governor and Garrison, who Yearly distribute out the Corn and the other Provisions to the further Garrisons that live where the Ground is not Tilled. Taara, in the middle of the Province, seated on the Irische, in the Latitude of 62. 0. Lipen or Lopen, much farther South, viz. in the Latitude of 59.

In this Province are comprehended the People, Calami, Pega-Horda, Schibanski, Cosaski, and Nagja-Horda.

On the East-side the Oby, overagainst Siberia, lie LUCOMORIA and Grustinsky, wherein are Grustina on the Oby, in Latitude 62, and Serpenow, above 200 miles from it to the East.

The Account of SIBERIA, given by his Excellency Ysbrandts Ides.

SIBERIA, is Inhabited by various Clans of Tartars, whose Interests and Manners are different and are not unlike the common Tartars in their way of Living in General, except that they are of a civiler kind. They are either Pagans or Mahometans in Religion, altho' forc'd to pay Obedience to the Czar. The Country is every where well Peopled, as well by Russians, who practise Husbandry as Tartars and other Nations. Corn and Cattle is very plenty and cheap: And from the River Irisch which passes through the middle of the Country they receive such a great quantity of Fish, that that also is exceeding cheap. Of Wild-Beasts, they have Elks, Stags, Deer, Hares; and of Wild-Fow Pheasants, Partridges, Swans, Wild-Geese, Duck and Storks.

'Tis about an Hundred Years since this Country has been subjected to the Czar, by this Accident. A certain Robber, named Jeremak Temeseiemi in the Reign of Ivan Vasilievicz, Plunder'd all the circumjacent Country, and greatly injur'd the Czar

Subject

Subjects, for which being pursued by the Czar's Forces, he fled up the River Kama, to the Lands of a famous Rich Man named Strogino, of whom he craved Protection, and his intercession to the Czar for Pardon, promising to merit it by the Conquest of Siberia. And accordingly Summon'd his Fellow Robbers together, and being assisted by Strogino with Boats, Arms and Workmen, he passed by Rivers part of the way, and over-Land the other part, and coming to the Fort Tumeen, which is seated on the River Tura, in the 55th Deg. of Lat. and in 78 Longit. He took it, and proceeded on the River to Tobolska, which he also Took. But he was soon after Drowned by Accident, and so reaped not the Fruits of his Labour. But the Czar took advantage of his Conquest, and sent an Army thither, and subdued the whole Country; which has ever since paid Tribute to him, and been Govern'd by his Waywode or Vice-Roy. The Places of Note which the Ambassador pass'd through in his passage cross this Country, are,

Utska, a Castle seated near the Frontiers of Permia, in the 55th Deg. Lat. Ajada, another Castle, seated 180 miles more to the South-East. Neuian on the River Neua. Tumeen, a City strong and Populous, seated in the 55th Deg. Lat. and 80 Long. on the River Tura, and Inhabited mostly by Russians. He tells us all the Country he had pass'd through, was Fertile and well-Till'd Grounds, Woods, and charming Fields, with many Villages well Inhabited by Russians. The Furrs, which abound near Tumeen, are only Red-Fox, Wolf, Bear, and grey Squirrels, of a finer sort than are found any where else all over the Muscovite Empire, and therefore none are sold to Merchants, but the whole preserv'd for the Czar's Use.

Tobolsk, or Toboloska, the chief City of Siberia, stands at the confluence of the River Tobol with the Irtisch, in the 58th Degree of Latitude, as laid down in our Author's Map, altho' the former Maps place it in 64, and in the 82d Degree of Longit. It is seated on a high Hill of large circuit, the bottom whereof is Inhabited by Mahometan Tartars, who drive a good Trade up the River Irtisch, and carry Goods cross the Grand Tartary to China. The City is well Fortified, and has always a strong Garison, under the Command of the Weywood who Resides here, and upon Orders from the Czar, can bring 9000 Men into the Field, besides many Thousand Tartars, who serve the Czar on Horseback. The Kalmuck-Tartars, who live more to the Southward, together with the Orda Cossacks, in their strolling IncurSIONS, frequently commit great Insolencies in this Country, but are soon repulsed with the Forces the Weywood sends against them. This City is also the place of Residence of a Metropolitan, sent hither from Moscow, who exercises Supreme Spiritual Jurisdiction over all Siberia and Duria.

For the convenience of Travellers, the Czar allows an annual Pay to a sufficient number of the Russians, who Inhabit the Banks of the Irtisch, and are called Jemskicks; for which they supply all Persons that Travel on the Czars account, with Carriages, Boats, and Men, to convey them as far as Surgut, on the Oby, which is a Journey 500 miles by Water, which is the ordinary Passage in Summer; but not above half so much by Land as they Travel in Winter, in Sleds over the Ice and Snow. These Sleds are small, and drawn by Dogs, whereof two Yoak'd together, will draw a Load of two or 300 pound Weight very expedi-

Demianskoi, 150 miles North from Tobolska, is a Town seated on the Irtisch. And Somareskoy-Jam, is another on the same River, near its confluence with the Oby.

Surgut, is a City seated on the East-side of the River Oby, in about the 60th Deg. of Lat. and 90th of Long. The River here is half a mile (I suppose he means German) over. The Country round about abounds with Sables, Ermins, and Black Foxes, whose Skins are excellent Furrs. These Ermins are the finest and largest of all Siberia, and the black Fox-skins are so rich a Furr, that a skin is sold for 2 or 300 Rubbles. Hyena's and Beavers are also very plentiful here. The Hyena is a very rapacious Creature; he will sit on the branch of a Tree, and throw himself on a Hart, an Elk, or a Doe, and fix himself so close with his Claws and Teeth, that he will eat a Hole in the Flesh, and by the violence of Pain, make the Creature fall his Prey. The Beavers are strangely Ingenious in gnawing down great Trees and conveying them to their Holes, where they build themselves Houses and Repositories for their Winter Food. The Stories the Sicarians tell of the Strength and Ingenuity of these Creatures, are incredible.

Nazum, seated also on the Oby, in the 58th Deg. of Latitude, 220 miles South-East from Surgut, is a City provided with a Fortrefs or Castle, and a pretty strong Garison of Cossacks. The Country all round it abounds with Ermins, Sables, Beavers, and Foxes. The Banks of the Oby to this Place, are Inhabited by a People call'd Ostjacks, who Worship Idols, and are Ignorant Lazy People, with the broad flat Faces of Samoieda. Their Cloaths are made of the Skins of Sturgeon, wherewith the Rivers greatly abound. They have petty Princes among them, one of whom is the Knezka or chief, and gathers the Tribute, which they are oblig'd to pay to the Waywoods for the Czar's Service. In Winter they live in Caves under-ground, and their Country is too cold at all times to admit of Tillage; so there is no Corn or Fruits hereabouts. All the Country from hence to the River Jenizea, is of the same kind, without any remarkable Place in it, and therefore shall end here, because in our Accounts of Tartary we shall give an account of Jenizefcoy, and all the Country forward.

Tomskoy, seated in Lat. 52. on the Torn, which falls into the Oby, is a strong Frontier, Garison'd with Russians and Cossacks.

As for DAURIA, which I had occasion once to mention, it's a Country seated far Eastward in Tartary, and will be spoken of in its place.

The Kingdom of CASAN, formerly Subject to its own Prince, who was a powerful Monarch, but Conquer'd by the Great Duke John Basilowitz. Lies on the South of Oustinch and Permia, but according to Ysbrandts Map, not near so far to the East as the common Maps make it. The two Rivers Kama and Volga run thro' it; and the Countrey is Fertile. The chief City Casan is seated on a River of the same Name near its Confluence with the Volga; in the Lat. 55. Long. 69. It is a large City, the See of a Metropolitan, and the Seat of the Czar's Governour of these Parts, and is well Fortified. The Castle is of Stone, and well provided with Artillery, and a good Garison. On the Volga 70 miles more West, stands Kockschaga, and 130 miles to the North North is Malmisi on the River Casan; and Borders of Bugar, Tatul Seated on the West-side the Wolga. Of the Revolution in this Country by the inroad of Sapperi the Tartar, in the Reign of Itan Kasimich, we have spoke of when we spoke of that Prince among the Kings of Muscovy.

The Kingdom of BULGARIA, otherwise called the Region or Herda of Zavakani, lies on the South of Casan. The Chief Cities are Bulgaria in the North part, 70 miles South from Casan, and Samsara, 120 miles South from Bugar, and not far from the Wolga.

More South lies the Great Kingdom of ASTRACHAN, which reaches from the Confines of the Czermisse, and Bulgaria, as far as the Caspian Sea, and is the most Eastern Country of Europe; being divided from Asia, by the Mountains on the East, and by the Caspian Sea on the South-East; the former separates it from Great Tartary, and the latter from Persia. Its West and Southern Bounds are Roldari Donski, and Pole, and on the North the Kingdom of Bugar. The Climate here is over Hot, and the Summer very long, for Olearius observes that in Sept. and Octob. the Heat exceeded what is in Germany in the middle of Summer. The Winter as he tells us is but of two Months durance, but is so intensely Cold that the Wolga is Frozen over and bears Sledges. The Land is fructiferous enough; but the Tartars that Inhabit it are a People that never Cultivate; so that the Country lies in a manner Desert, and the Inhabitants only Live in Tents, which they Pitch where their Convenience or Fancy invite them. The Russians have several Towns on the Banks of the River Wolga, which runs through this Kingdom, and falls into the Caspian Sea at the Chief City of it. Those of the chiefest Note are these that follow.

Saratof, Seated in the Latitude of 52 Degrees, 12 Minutes: It is a Fort with a Garrison constantly in it, to defend Travellers from the Robberies and Insults of the Tartars. Here begins the Country of the Caimuc Tartars, a very Deform'd, Barbarous, and Rapacious People. Tzaritzza, Czaritzza, q. d. Casaria and in some Maps erroneously written Larissa, which lies on the West side the River Wolga, is a strong Town having a good Wall with 6 Bulwarks, and a good Garrison always maintained in it. It is seated, in the Latitude of 49 Degrees, 42 Minutes.

A little below this City is the Trench that was attempted to be cut to make a Communication of the Wolga with the Don or Tanaïs.

Below this is seen the Ruins of Czarefgorod, which was Demolish'd by Tamerlain. And some Leagues lower, in the Latitude of 48. Degrees, 40 Minutes, on the West side the River stands Tzarnegar, call'd otherwise, Michael Novogorod, a small City, but well Fortified, and the Station of a good Garrison; it is Environ'd with Palisadoes, and hath Watch-Houses at a miles distance on every side, whence they can see any Enemy. The reason of building this place, was to defend the Passage of the River against the Cossacks who used to Rob here, and in particular defeated a Russian Convoy with great Wealth, letting the Soldiers pass first, who by reason of the rapidity of the Stream could not return to the assistance of the Merchants though they saw 'em Rob'd. Upon the Banks of the River all along grows abundance of Liquorice, but the Country lies all Waste and Unill'd. Three days passage more down the River lies the famous City Astrachan in the Latitude of 46 Deg. 22 Min. [as for the mistake in the Printed Travels of Olearius, which Places it in 26. 22. it must be an Error of the Press, for every body agrees in 46 or 47 Deg.] and about 20 Leagues (or 12 or 13 as Father Avril) from the Caspian Sea. It stands in an Island made by two Branches of the Wolga, which by many Mouths falls into the Caspian Sea. It was heretofore the Royal Seat of the Nagayan-Tartars, till taken by Assault by the Czar Ivan Basilowitcz, after his Conquest of Casan, in the Year 1554. and the Tartars being driven out, he Re-peopled it with Muscovites, and Encompass'd it with a Stone Wall and other Fortifications. It was at that time a small City, but becoming a place of Trade, the Czar Michael Federowitcz added a large part, call'd, the Streli-tza-gorod, or Soldiers Town, to which many private and publick Buildings have been added, which has encreas'd it to a large City: The Walls are strong, and guarded with 500 Pieces of Brass Cannon, the Gates carefully shut up every Night, and no Tartar ever suffer'd to live in the City, neither are they permitted to build Towns, or to Fortify places. The convenient situation of this City makes it resorted to by Persian, Armenian, and other Merchants, and creates so great a Traffick that the Czar Receives for the Customs, 250000 Crowns per Annum, altho' the Duties be very low; Besides the convenience of vending all the Native Commodities of Russia, and receiving in Exchange the Silks and other valuable Commodities of Persia and India.

It is seated in a Temperate AIR, and in a Fruitful SOIL, producing all sorts of European Fruits, particularly Vines so plentiful as to make a great quantity of Wine: They have Beef, Mutton, Wild-Swine which make very good Pork, Fowl and Fish, in great Plenty. On one side the Town in a dry and barren Heath, they find abundance of Salt, which is dug out of the Hollows of Rocks, and is vended abroad to great profit. Hereabouts is found a strange sort of Fruit, call'd Baronez, or the Lamb, in form resembling that Creature, and cover'd with a Down so thick and strong, that the Skins are used in Garments; it grows upon a Stalk two Foot high, fasten'd at its Navel, the Head always inclining to the Grass; and such is its Vegetative Heat, that it consumes all the Grass near it; which makes the People confidently aver, that it eats Grass. In the Year 1669, this City was taken and Plunder'd by the Cossacks, under the Leading of Steno-Radzin, who upon a disgust on account of his Brother, being punished at Moscow, rais'd a Rebellion, and Ravag'd all this Country, and even passed over to Persia, where he Plunder'd Tercki and other Cities on the Caspian Sea. But the Year after the Czar sent an Army against him, which Retook the City, and Totally Routed him and his Party.

Below this City towards the Caspian Sea, in the River Wolga, they take abundance of the Fish call'd Biloege, the Rows whereof makes that which we call Cavear, whereof they make great Profit. The NAGAYAN TARTARS have their Seat upon the Frontiers of this Country; they sometime possess'd the Land between the Don and the Wolga; but the Czar's Power has driven 'em over this last River to the Eastward, about the Banks of the River Taick and the Caspian Sea. They are of the common Tartar kind in Form and Behaviour, and Mahometans in Religion.

HUNGARY, Hungaria.

HUNGARY is a part of the Ancient PANNONIA, which comprehended all that is now call'd Carniola, Croatia, Carinthia, Styria, a great part of Austria, almost the half of Hungary, Slavonia, Bosnia, and a part of Servia. It was divided into Pannonia Superior, or Conularis, and Inferior, or Secunda Conularis. The former lay towards the West, and comprehended Carniola, Croatia, Windorum Marchia, Carinthia, Styria, and the greater part of Austria. The latter lay towards the East, comprehending Bosnia, Slavonia, and as much of Hungary as lies between the Rivers Danube, Drave, and the Raab. So that not above a third part of that which is now called Hungary, lay within the Ancient Pannonia, the rest lying in the Countries of Jazyges Metanastæ, and the Daci. Whether the Pannonii, who first Inhabited Pannonia, gave Name to the Country, or it to them, is more than can be Learned, (as Reiskius observes) from the Grecian or Roman History. Julius Cæsar first Invaded it, C. Octavius Cæs. Augustus Subdued it, and Tiberius reduced it into a Province. From that time until the declining State of the the Roman Empire, it was under the Jurisdiction of Rome; but afterwards the Goths invaded it, who were expell'd by the Huns, as these were by the Lombards; whom the Huns drove out again. At last about the Year 900, in the time of the Emperor, Arnolphus, there came a Warlike People out of Serbia, who overcame the Huns, and mixing with the Remnants of those that were left, made themselves Masters of all that Country, that is now called Hungary; which is bounded (according to Cluverius) with the Mountains Crapack on the North, which divide it from Poland and Russia; on the East with Transilvania, and Valachia; on the South with the Drave; and on the West with Stiria, Austria, and Meravia. It lies between 45 and 49 Degrees Latitude, and 38 and 44 Longitude.

The Air of the Country is abundantly Temperate, but not very Healthful in many Places, where Mists and Fogs are too frequent; but the Soil is good, and yields such plenty of all things, for the Life and Delight of Man, that it hardly yields to any Country in Europe; For it brings forth all sorts of Corn, especially Wheat, in great Abundance, and produces plenty of Generous Wine. It so abounds in Cattle that one Year with another the Number of Oxen and Cows that go from thence to Vienna, have been computed to be about Four-score Thousand; which are not all consumed there, but dispersed over a great part of Germany. And there is so great Plenty of Venison and Wild-Fowl, that (Hunting and Fowling being free to every Body) Hares, Pheasants, Partridges, and other such like, which seem the property of the Great and Rich among us, are the common Food of the meanest Boars there. This Country is also mighty Rich in Mines of Gold, Silver, and other Metals of less value, which we shall give a particular Account of when we come to describe the Towns and Places near to which they are, and especially that at Cremnitz, in which they have Worked Nine Hundred and Fifty Years. There are also many Excellent Hot Baths in this Country; particularly those at Buda, which are esteemed the Noblest in Europe, not only in respect of the Large and Hot Springs; but the Magnificence of their Buildings.

There is no Country in Europe better River'd than Hungary; on the East-side it is washed with that Noble and Navigable River Tibiscus, or the Tesse, which runs into the Danube between Peter-Waradin, and Belgrade. On the West-side runs the River Arabo, or Raab, which rises in Styria, and falls into the Danube near Zavinum or Raab. On the South runs the Drave; which rising in the Territory of Salzburgland, falls into the Danube near Erdoed, or Old Teutoburgium and Esseck, about Three Hundred Miles from its Spring. On the same side is also the River Save, which arising in Carinthia, entreth the Danube at Belgrade. Upon the North-side of Hungary are the Rivers Gran and Waag, which rise from the Carpathian Mountains. But above all, the great Danubius or Thonau is most considerable. It runs quite through Hungary, and begins to be Navigable at the City of Ulme in Swabenland or Suetia; and passing by Ingolstadt, Ratisbonn, Stratling, Passau, Lintz, and Vienna to Presburg, and from thence through Hungary, makes a Course of above Three Hundred Miles before it passes by Belgrade; and having washed the Shoars of Servia, Bulgaria, Valachia, and Moldavia, at last empties at many Mouths, into the Euxine, or Black-Sea, after having drank in above Sixty considerable Rivers, and perform'd a Course of above Fifteen Hundred Miles.

As this Country excels in Rivers, so has it also many considerable and Long Bridges, as that at Vienna, which takes above two Thousand Trees to Plank it; The Long Bridge of Boats over the Danube between Strigonium and Barchan. That between Buda, and Pest, is above half a Mile long. There is also a Bridge at Calocza, very handsome and well contriv'd. But the most considerable of all is that at Esseck, built partly over the Drave, partly over the Fenns, which are often overflow'd. It is five Miles long, and has Towers built upon it at the distance of every Quarter of a Mile, and is handsomely Rail'd on each side, and Supported by great Trees, Erected under it, Nine or Ten in a Rank to each Arch.

There are also in this Country Two considerable Lakes, viz. the Lake Balaton, or Platsee, which lies between Vesprinum and the Drave, and has some Forts upon it: And the Newfidel-See, so call'd from the Town Newfidel. The former of which is said to be above Forty, the other about Twenty Eight Miles long. There are also in this Country several Long and Spacious Plains: Inasmuch that Dr. Brown, in his Description of it, says, he Travell'd from Vienna to Belgrade, about Four Hundred Miles, upon continued and uninterrupted Plains.

Many Roman Emperors have Honour'd this Country, with their Presence, Birth, Death and Achievements, For (to omit Trajan, Caracalla, Galienus, Constantius, and many more) the Emperors Aurelianus, Probus, Gratianus, Maximianus were Born at Sirmium. Claudius Gothicus Died in or near it. Zovian and Valentinian were Born in Dammonia, Ingenius and Vetranio were saluted Emperors there. And at Sirmium was held a General Council. And the Roman Armies being much in this Country, is the reason why such vast Quantities of Old Medals have been found in it.

As to the Genius of the Hungarians, however Barbarous their Ancient Predecessors might be, the Modern Hungarians are a Warlike and Politick People; but are by the Generality of Writers charged with Laziness, and Gluttony, which seems to be the Natural Effect of their Excellent and Fruitful Soil; and they are generally of a Turbulent and Rebellious Disposition. This Country having been the Seat of the War so long, and the Turkish Power so much prevailing in those Parts, Learning has not been allow'd to flourish, and so we are not to expect any University beyond Vienna. Those who have a mind to be Scholars, and have Money to bestow upon their Education, do commonly Study at Vienna, Prague, or Breslaw.

The Language of the Hungarians is proper to themselves, and different from all other: A Specimen of which we shall set down for the Curious Reader's Speculation, out of the Lord's Prayer. My Attyanck Ky vagy az meniegbe megh Szentel Tesseck az te newed, &c. In some parts of Hungary they speak Slavonian. The great difference between the Languages of these Countries, obliges them to learn other Languages, especially the Latin, which the Gentry and Soldiers generally speak. It is very useful for a Traveller till he come to Belgrade, but below it of no use to him at all.

As to the Government of Hungary, Historians are divided about it; for some maintain, particularly Coringius, Conringius, that even after the Establishment of Christianity, Hungary was no Kingdom, nor Govern'd by any set kind of Laws, before the 12th. Century: but the Hungary Writers say, That in the Time of Paganism, their Country was Ruled by Dukes, who Exercised Monarchical Power, tho' they never assum'd the Title of Kings; and that the last of these Dukes was one Geyza, or Gejza, who in his old Days resign'd the Government, and recommended his Son Stephen to the Nobility, who out of the respect they bare to the Old Man, chose his Son their King, and Crown'd him during his Father's Life; from whom down to this present Time we have a Succession of 45 Kings, as the Reader may see in the following Catalogue. The Nature of the Hungarian Monarchy has been long in Dispute, some maintaining that it was Hereditary, others, that it was Elective; but the Civilians of that Nation are now generally agreed, That the present Emperor has a just Title to that Kingdom, and that Jure Hereditario. It has been also hotly disputed, Whether Hungary was an Independent and Absolute Kingdom, or a Tributary Province, under the Emperor of Germany's Protection; but Lazius proves by many Examples, That the Kings of Hungary have always done Homage to the Emperors, before their Accession to the Crown of that Nation.

The Hungarian Horsemen, whom they call Hussars, are much better Soldiers than the Foot, whom they call Heyducks; which may be ascrib'd in a great Measure to the vast Number of Excellent Horses, which are bred in this Country. In former Ages, the Hungarians never went to the Field without their long Shields; but in the Year 1572. their General, George Count of Serin, persuaded them to lay them aside, by reason they were too great a Burthen to them. Their Naval Force which the Emperor uses for defending this Country, consists in his Ships and Gallies upon the Danube. At the Siege of Belgrade, as Doctor Brown relates, from the Turkish History, the Hungarians sent down the Stream from Buda 200 Ships and Gallies, as Mahomet the Great brought the same number up the Stream, as well appointed: And certainly there never was such Numbers of Ships of Force, nor such Signal Engagements at such a distance from the Sea, as there have been upon the Danube.

The Revenues of this Crown arise from the Mines of Silver and other Metals, the Impost upon Cattel, and other Customs and Taxes less considerable; which in all, is computed to amount to Two Hundred Twenty and Four Thousands Ducats Yearly: And an Hungarian Ducat being valued at 10 Shillings English, the Emperor's Revenue, as King of Hungary, is an Hundred and Twelve Thousand Pound Sterling.

The Establish'd RELIGION of Hungary, since the Emperor's Conquest of it, is the Roman Catholick: tho' the number of Protestants be very great; for the Lutheran Reform'd Religion prevail'd here, but for many Years it was Persecuted, and Civil Wars ensued thereupon, the People chusing rather to be under the Turk, with whom they might enjoy Liberty of Conscience, than submit to the Emperor who was Zealous in Establishing Popery. But now, as we have said, that is the Predominant Religion, and for the Government of the Church there are Two Archbishops at Gran and Colocza, and Sixteen Suffragan Bishops, whereof Five are Subordinate to the Archbishop of Gran, Eight to the Archbishop of Colocza, and the other Three are under the Archbishop of Spalato in Dalmatia.

HUNGARY, by the Inhabitants call'd MAGIAR, and by the Sclavonians Wagierski; was sometime a Kingdom of vast Extent; for in the middle Ages these Monarchs subdued all the neighbouring Provinces, Eastward as far as the Black-Sea, and Southward to the Adriatick-Sea, so that Sclavonia, Croatia, Bosnia, and Dalmatia, as well as Transilvania, Servia, Wallachia, Moldavia and Besserabia, were under their Subjection till the Turks took Possession of 'em. But now as we have shewn, the Drave is the Southern, and the Mountains on the Limits of Transilvania, the Eastern Boundaries.

It was divided into many Counties, the Number whereof, is not agreed on by Authors, some reckon 74. others 73. and some again Contract the Number to 60, 54. or 50. But the large and long Possession of the Turks, might well confound those Divisions: And we shall consider it as divided by the Danube into two parts. The Upper or Larger, on the North and East side of the River, and the Lower on the South-side of it. These two Parts are subdivided into Governments; the Upper into Four, viz. of 1. Presburg. 2. Bergstet, or the Berg Towns. 3. Newhausel. And 4. Caschau. And the Lower into Three, viz. of 1. Buda. 2. Raab. And 3. Canisia.

PRESBURG, otherwise call'd POSON by the Inhabitants, is pleasantly seated on the North side of the Danube, 32 miles East from Vienna, 28 from Raab to the North-west, 32 from Newhausel to the West, and not above 5 miles from the Frontiers of Austria. It is a pleasant well built City, the Capital of the Upper Hungary, and of a particular County: and after the loss of Strigoniun or Gran, made the Place of Convention of the States of the Realm: It is well Fortified, and has a Castle built of Stone on the top of a Hill, which has four Towers, in the strongest whereof is kept the Royal Crown of Hungary, so much talk'd of, and by the Hungarians wonderfully esteem'd, as being believ'd to be presented by an Angel from Heaven to St. Stephen their first Christian King. Here are many Churches, among them a Fair one Built for the Lutherans, in the year 1638. and a Dome or Cathedral whereof, the Jesuits have the Use. The Archbishop hath a Palace here in the Suburbs, well adorn'd with Gardens, Walks, Fountains, &c.

Newhausel, call'd Vymar by the Hungarians, stands on the River Neutra, or Nitrach, 32 miles East from Presburg, 64 North-west from Buda, and 10 Miles from the Danube; a place of small extent, but the Capital of a large County, and a Fortress of great Importance, being the Bulwark against the Turks on this side. It is built in a Moorish Plain, but hard at bottom, and every where passable; its Fortifications are in form of a Star, with 6 points, each Defended by a high rais'd Bastion, encompass'd with a large wet Ditch; to which is added by the present Emperor, a Fort nam'd Leopoldstadt. There are but two Gates to the Town, which are defended by a Half Moon on each. In the Year 1663, it was taken by the Turks, after a great Loss, and a long Siege, But in the late War Prince Charles of Lorraine, Set down before this Town, Ann. 1685. and having defeated the Seraskier, who was marching to its Relief, he took it by Assault, after a Siege of 40 days, and found in it 100 Peices of Brass Cannon and a Booty of Immense Value.

Schintz, a large Fort of 4 Bastions, stands on the River Vagus, 20 miles North from Newhausel.

Neytra stands 10 miles East from Schintz, on a small River of the same Name, which 25 Miles below falls into the Danube.

Leopoldstadt, a noble, regular Fortification, of 6 Bastions, stands on the River Vagus, 20 miles from Schintz, and 40 from Newhausel to the North.

Tyrnaw, Tryn or Dryn, otherwise call'd Szombat is a small Town on a River of the same Name, 20 miles South-west from Leopoldstadt, and 30 North-east, from Presburg: Chiefly noted for the Residence of the Archbishop and Chapter of Gran, whilst that City was in possession of the Turks.

Transschin the Capital of a County, is a very fair Town seated on the Top of a Rock, 20 miles from Tyrnaw, and 10 from Leopoldstadt, to the North, and not very far from the Confines of Silesia. It is defended by a very strong Castle, which renders it almost Impregnable, and stands so high that it is seen at a great distance. About a mile from this Town are two Hot Baths, much frequented by Strangers. These Waters are so common hereabouts, that the People dig Pits wherein they find hot Water, and that so near the Rivers, that they can reach their Arms into the Cold Water whilst the rest of their Body is Sweating in the Fire.

Cremnitz is reckon'd the first among the Berg or Mine-Towns, which Honour is paid to its Antiquity rather than Grandeur, being of small extent, but surrounded with Suburbs, and defended by a strong Castle, suppos'd to stand on the highest Ground in Hungary, 50 miles distant from Newhausel to the North-east, 40 miles from Leopoldstadt to the East, and 50 miles North from the Danube. It is Famous on account of its Gold-Mine, which has been wrought above 900 Years; the Entrance into the Mine is thro' one Cuniculus or Horizontal Passage, call'd the Erbstal, which is 170 Fathoms Fathoms deep, and the Vein runs 9 or 10 miles in length, and some of the Passages, which have formerly been cut thro' Rocks, by being disused are grown up again and hardly passable, tho' undoubtedly at first they were wide enough. So Rich is this Mine that they sometimes find lumps of pure Gold, Specimens whereof are seen in the Emperors Repository at Vienna. And even the common Earth on the neighbouring Hills being washed affords Gold.

Not far from the Gold Mine there is another of Vitriol 80 Fathoms deep, the Earth whereof purified and reduc'd to a Calx is used in making Aqua Fortis. In the Town is established a Mint wherein Gold Ducats and other Pieces are Coin-ed.

Schemnitz, the fairest of all the Seven Berg or Mine-Towns, is built on a Rocky Hill which renders the Street's uneven, 20 miles distant from Cremnitz to the South, and 30 from the Danube to the North. The Town is adorn'd with Three beautiful Churches, and defended by as many Castles. One whereof is exceeding high, and was used as a Watch Tower, to discover the Approach: The Air of this Place is not Healthy, but the neighbouring Baths are very restorative. And the Country being Rocky, Provisions are difficultly brought hither, so that if it were not for the Rich Silver-Mines, this Town would have few Inhabitants. Of these Mines there are several, but the Two call'd the Trinity, and the Windschat, are the chief, the former is 70 Fathom deep, and mostly supported by Props, being an Earthy Soil; the latter is much deeper, and in some Places wonderfully Hot. The Ore is Rich, and besides most of it holds some Gold, which they separate by melting the Silver, then grinding it, and afterwards dissolving it in Aqua-Fortis, made out of the Vitriol of Chremnitz, wherein the Gold subsides, and the Aqua-Fortis is drawn from the Silver by Distillation, and made to serve again. Not far from Schemnitz is a Rock where is found a red Substance which grows to the Ore called Cinnaber of Silver, and which is used for Paint, making as fine a Vermilion as the Cinnaber its self. There are also found in these Mines Crystals, Amethysts, and Vitriol naturally Crystalliz'd.

Newsol or Beftricia, 10 miles North from Cremnitz, is the Third in the Number of the Berg-Towns, and stands on the River Gran at the Foot of a Hill, on which stands the Castle and the great Church cover'd with Copper. It is a good Market Town, to which is brought plenty of Provisions; but is chiefly remarkable for the Copper-Mines near it, the most considerable in Hungary; wherein the Ore is so firmly Incorporated with its Stone-Bed, that the separation cannot be made without great Pains and Difficulty, the Ore being often melted 14 times before it can be made fit for use. The Inhabitants are Lutherans, and Speak the German, Hungarian and Wendish Tongues. At Mismills, a Village near Newsol, are many Furnaces for melting the Mettal, and Silver is sometimes extracted out of the Copper.

Puggantz was heretofore a fair Town, and still retains a fourth Place in the Rank of the Berg-Towns, but hath been so often burnt and laid waste by the frequent Incurfions of the Turks, that the Miners were forced to give over their Work till peaceable Times should come.

Kenigsberg, the Fifth of the Berg-Towns, stands near the River Gran, 10 miles West from Schemnitz; it doth not much exceed Puggantz in Note and Dignity at this Day, the Miners having for the most part retired from thence to Chremnitz and Schemnitz, where they meet with much better Employment. However this Town is noted for a sort of four Mineral Water that hath wrought many notable Cures.

Tillen another Berg-Town of great Antiquity, but of late Years fallen to decay and deserted, because of the failure of the Veins.

Libeten, 15 miles North-East from Newsol, the last of the seven Berg-Towns, was likewise formerly more noted than at present, being left for the same Reason. Altho' still some small Quantities of Copper, with a little Silver, are dug out of the Mines.

Besides these there are other Towns remarkable for Mines, tho' they are not registred among the former, among which the most remarkable is Horn Grundt, about 7 miles distant from Newsol, where lies a Copper Mine in the Rocks, the Ore whereof is extreme Rich, yielding ordinarily 20 or 30, nay sometimes 40, 50, and even to 60 Pounds of Metal in the Hundred Pound of Ore; which is either of a yellow or black Colour, the former yielding the more Metal, but the latter containing some Silver. There are also several Sorts of Vitriol found in this Mine, viz. White, Green, Blew, and clear transparent Red, besides a green Earth or waterish Sedement call'd Berg-grun, used in Painting. Moreover here are two Springs of Vitriolate Water that in 14 Days turn Iron into Copper; these Fountains are esteemed, because thereby the worst old Iron is made pure Copper, more Ductile and Malleable than other.

Glaszkitten, 7 Miles from Schemnitz, was sometime noted for a rich Gold Mine, which has been lost ever since Betblem Gabor, Prince of Transylvania, over-run this Country, and forced the Inhabitants away. The Place is however much resorted to on account of the Hot-Baths, whereof there are Five; the Waters are very clear, the Sedement Red and Green, and the Wooden Seats under Water incrustated with a Stony Substance. And Silver is gilded by lying in the Water. Among these, the Hot Springs of that call'd the Sweating Bath drain thro' a Hill, and fall into a Bagnio built on purpose to receive 'em. At one end whereof is erected a noble Stove, heated by the Streams of those Waters, and so contrived, that by choosing a higher or lower Seat, ones Sweating may be regulated, and any Degree of Heat obtain'd at Pleasure.

Eisenbach lies about 4 miles from Glaszkitten, and 5 or 6 from Schemnitz, and is Famous for its Hot-Baths, Two of which are very convenient and much frequented; but the Third, which is made of the waste Water of the former, is not much used, being almost continually full of Snakes, who delight in this Warmth. The Water is of a Petrifying Nature, the Sedement, which is of a red Colour, turns to Stone, and the Planks which surround the Bath are all Petrified. Silver is chang'd Yellow by lying in it.

Esperies or Eperics, is a strong Town seated on the River Tarkzel, near the Frontiers of Poland, 150 miles East from Fresburg, and 60 miles North from the River Teyffe. It is the Capital of the County of Sero, and Famous for its Fairs and Salt-Mines. And about half an Hour from the Town there is a famous Salt-Mine, the Veins whereof are so large, that there are dug out Pieces of 10000 Pound Weight of pure Salt, which is of a grayish Colour, but being ground to Powder becomes exceeding White; some Pieces are Blew, some Yellow, &c. and so hard that they Carve it into divers Figures. The Water of this Mine is so impregnated with Salt, that being Boyl'd up it affords a blackish Salt which they give to their Cattle. Near this place spring two deadly Fountains, the Waters whereof kill the Birds and Beasts that taste them; wherefore they are always kept cover'd and wall'd round to prevent any coming to them.

Leutsebe, the Capital of the County of Zips, stands near the Frontiers of Poland, 20 Miles West from Eperies, on the top of a high Hill, whence is a fine Prospect of the Neighbouring Country. It is a handsome large Town, having a considerable Annual Fair, and inhabited chiefly by Germans of the Lutheran Religion, who however talk the Hungarian Tongue, and hold a Traffick with all the Neighbouring Places: They are Remarkable for their Courteous Behaviour and Sincerity in Dealing.

Cajcsaw, seated on the small River Tareza, 20 Miles South from Eperies, and 40 North from the Teyffe, and 100 North-East from Newhausel. It is one of the Royal Free Towns govern'd by the Emperor's immediate Deputy, which makes a great resort of Persons of Quality, and hath render'd the Town one of the best built in Hungary. It is very well Fortified, and hath an Arsenal the most considerable in the Kingdom. The great Church is supply'd by a German and Hungarian Minister by Turns, both which Languages are ordinarily spoken here. The Air is as Pestilential and Unhealthy as any in Hungary, which renders Strangers subject to Sicknefs. Moreover their Wine is bad, being ting'd with Chalk or Lime, and breeds Lameness in the Joyns; and yet the same Wine being carry'd abroad is very good; and the chief Trade of the Town consists in the Vent of it into Poland and elsewhere. This Place being formerly possess'd by the Turks, was regain'd in the Year 1685.

Agria, call'd Eger by the Germans, and Erlaw by the Inhabitants, is seated in the middle of all Hungary on the small River Agria, which about 15 Miles below falls into the Teyffe, 60 Miles from Buda to the North-East, and 120 from Presburg to the East. It is a considerable City, being the See of a Bishop, and a regular Fortification of great Strength. The Castle stands on the other side the River on a Hill, and has the Reputation of being one of the strongest Holds in the Kingdom. When Solyman II. Besieg'd this City in the Year 1552. with 70000 Men, tho' it was not then guarded by such Fortifications, it was defended with wonderful Courage and Resolution; so that after the Turks had Batter'd it 40 Days with 50 pieces of Cannon, and made many Assaults in which they lost 8000 Men, they were fain to draw off and quit the Siege. But in the Year 1596. Mahomet III. took it, and put the Garrison to the Sword. Since when the Turks held it till the late War, when it was regain'd by the Imperial Forces after they had Block'd it up for three Years, in which time 10000 Turks perish'd in it, either thro' Hunger or Diseases, 4000 Inhabitants march'd out with the Garrison, 300 staid and demanded Baptism, and many Christian Slaves were set at Liberty. The Turks left in the place 150 pieces of Artillery, 7 Mortars, and great store of Provisions and Ammunition. And by this Conquest all the adjacent Country was reduc'd to the Imperial Obedience.

Filleck is a very considerable Fortress by reason of its advantageous Situation, on the top of a Craggy Hill; so inaccessible that there is only one way up to it, and that so very narrow, that only one Person can pass at a time. It stands on the Road from Presburg to Transilvania, 20 Miles West from Agria, and 40 North from Buda. It was Fortified with a Castle and strong Walls, but taken by the Turks however in 1560. and recover'd by the Imperialists in 1593. and again taken by the Bassa of Waradin in 1682. But some Differences arising between him and Count Teckley's Party, he caus'd it to be Dismantled and Deserted. Near this Town is a Curiosity view'd by Travellers, being a Hole or Cavern in a Rock, wherein the Water dropping from the Arch at top, petrifies at the bottom, and becomes a white Stone us'd by Painters.

Novigrod, a small but very strong Town, and the Capital of a County, is seated 30 Miles South-West from Filleck, 15 Miles from the Danube, and 50 South-East from Newhausel. It is defended by a strong Castle, founded on a high Rock, and encompass'd with a Moat cut in the Rock 34 Foot deep. It was taken by the Germans from the Turks in the Year 1594. but lost again in 1663. and now recover'd and subject to the Emperor.

Pest or Pesth, a large Town seated on the Danube over against Buda, to which you pass by a fine Bridge of Boats half a Mile long. It is built of a Quadrangular Form, and by reason of its fair Walls and Towers of the Turkish Mosques, affords a delightful Prospect at a distance. This place hath been often Taken and Retaken by the Turks and Christians, but was assur'd to the Emperor by the Conquest of Buda in 1686.

Colocza, Colocia, Coloza, & ad Statuas Colossas, is an Ancient City, seated on the Danube 50 Miles South-East from Pest: The Capital of the County of Bath, and the See of an Archbishop, but for some Ages overrun with Mahometanism, and recover'd by the Imperialists in the Year 1686.

Bath-Monster, which gives Name to the County, stands near the Danube, 25 Miles South-East from Colocza. Bodrock, which gives Name to another County, stands also on the Danube, 25 Miles below Bath.

Segedin, or Seged, the principal Town of the County of Bodrock, is seated on the River Teyffe, or Tibiscus, over against the Mouth of the Marisch, 55 Miles from Colocza to the South-East, and 60 from Belgrade to the North. It was taken by the Turks in 1552. and recover'd by the Imperialists after the taking of Buda in 1686. This is the furthest Town on the Tibisc subject to the Emperor.

Gyula, call'd Gywa by the Hungarians, is a strong Town seated on a Lake 30 Miles North-East from Segedin, and as many South from Great Waradin: It was taken by the Turks in 1566. but recover'd with the rest of Hungary in the late War.

Lippa, stands on the South-side of the Marisch, 35 Miles South-East from Gyula. Being situate in the County of Temeswaer, which was granted to the Turks by the Treaty of Carlowitz; it was by the same Article agreed to be Dismantled.

Caransebes stands in the same Territory upon the River Temes, 50 Miles East from Temeswaer, also Dismantled by the same Treaty.

The Iron Gate mention'd in the History of the late War, stands on the Frontier of Transilvania and Wallachia, 30 miles East from Caransebes.

Temeswar being Surrender'd to the Turks, we shall speak of that in our Account of their Countries.

Waradin commonly call'd Great Waradin, is Seated on the River Kerecz, in the Confines of Transilvania, to which it sometime belonged, 60 miles from Segedin to the North-East, and 50 miles from Zolnock to the East. It is the See of a Bishop, and a Place of great Strength, being Fortified with a strong Castle on the East-side, and firm Ramparts, besides five Royal Bastions and a Regular Ditch, supply'd by Water from the Rivers: And within is another Enclosure, consisting of some Bastions, and a high Wall, to serve as it were for a Citadel. In the Year 1290. King Ladislaus III. built the Cathedral Church: And in 1642, the City was Taken by the Crim Tartars, but quitted soon after: In 1662, it submitted to the Turks, but was recover'd by the Imperialists, after a Memorable Siege and Blockade in 1692.

Zolnock, the Capital of a County, to which it gives Name, stands at the Confluence of the River Zagmwa with the Teyffe, 60 miles above Segedin to the North, and in the Mid-way between Great Waradin to the West, and Buda to the East, about 50 miles from both. The Two Rivers almost surround it, and make it a convenient Place for a Garrison, being also large enough to receive 4000 Men, and very well Fortified. Nevertheless this strong Hold was shamefully quitted by a Garrison of 850 Men, in the Year 1552, when the Turks had Besieg'd it but Three Days, notwithstanding the Governor's Courage and Resolution to hold out to extremity; who being taken in the Castle, was civilly Treated, and at his Request the Garrison pursued and all cut to pieces by the Turks. It continued in their Hands till the Year 1685. when it was recover'd by the Imperialists.

Debreczen stands 40 miles East from Zolnock towards Transilvania, and is notable for an Illustrious School, or small University Established in it.

Zatmar, a small but well Fortified Town in the Mountains towards Poland and Transilvania, 50 miles North from Waradin, and as many East from Tockay, and about 40 South-West from the Head of the River Teyffe. It is surrounded by the River Samasch, and is a Hold of great Strength, taken by Count Teckley, in the Year 1680, and afterwards Regain'd by the Imperialists. It is the Chief of a Territory, lately made a County, under the Emperor's Jurisdiction.

Montgatz, or Munkatz, stands a little beyond the River Teyffe, towards the Frontiers of Poland, 40 miles East from the Head of that River, 30 North from Zatmar, 50 South-East from Eperies. It is a Fortress of impregnable Strength, built on a steep Rock, and consists of three Castles one above another, the First commanding the Second, and the Second the Third, each encompass'd with a Trench cut in the Rock, and the whole surrounded with a Morass. The Town stands at the bottom of the Rock in the County of Peregas. This Place was for a long time defended by the Princess Ragotsky, Wife to Count Teckley, against a very considerable Army, that were oblig'd to raise the Siege; but continuing a Blockade for some Years, she was at last forc'd to Surrender, in the Year 1693.

Ungwar, or Ungbuar, seated on the River Ungh: near the Frontiers of that part of Poland Nam'd Red-Russia, 20 miles North-West from Mongatz, 40 East from Eperies, and 90 North-East from Zolnock, is by some Authors affirm'd to give Name to the whole Kingdom, altho' at present it be not considerable, except for its Strength and commodious Situation at the Foot of the Karpach Mountains. It is the Chief of a Country; and being in the Possession of Count Teckley, he Lodged his Treasures and best Goods in it, till it was taken by the Imperialists in 1685.

Tockay, a very strong Town and Citadel, is seated on a Marshy Plain at the Confluence of the Teyffe and the Bodrach, 40 miles South from Ungwar, 50 North from Zolnock, and 30 East from Agria. It is the chief Town of the County, denominated from Zemlin, which stands 20 miles North of it, and is Noted for its good Wine. Count Teckley seized it in 1683. but the Imperialists recover'd it in 1685. Near this place is found a sort of Earth call'd Bolus Tockaviensis, much esteemed for its Medicinal Virtue.

These are the Places of chiefest Note in Upper Hungary.

IN LOWER HUNGARY.

BUDA, Buda aut Aquineum, called Offen by the Inhabitants, and Buden by the Turks, Anciently and still reckoned the Capital of the Kingdom, took its Name probably from Buda, King Attila's Brother, its Restorer: Or, according to others, from the Budini, a Scythian People mention'd by Herodotus. It is seated on a Hill, on the South-Bank of the River Danube, over against Pesth, 90 miles from Presburg to the South-East, 100 miles from Esseck to the North-West. It is a large City, Rich, Populous, and very strongly Fortified; It was very much Enlarg'd, and Adorn'd with publick Edifices, by Sigismund King of Hungary, who was Crown'd in 1387, and among others he built the Castle, which is very strong, and was afterwards the Seat of the Kings; it stands on the top of the Hill and commands the Town, and is surrounded by a deep Ditch, divers old Towers, and some Modern Ramparts. The City lies on the declivity of the Hill, and the Suburbs call'd Wasterland, beyond it towards the Danube, over which you pass by a very fair Bridge of Boats to Pesth. The many sumptuous Buildings that were formerly seen in this City, are all fallen to decay during the time the Turks possess'd it: For in the Year 1526, Solyman II. took this City; but Ferdinand Archduke of Austria, recover'd it the next Year. In 1529. the same Solyman took it a second time, after the Garrison had endured Eleven General Assaults. Again in 1541, it was Attack'd by Ferdinand, but by Solyman again Reliev'd, and the Siege rais'd. The Archduke Matthias attempted to Besiege it in 1598, and 1601. but both these Enterprizes proved ineffectual. At length the late most Valiant Prince, Charles Duke of Lorrain, sat down before this City in 1684, but could not then effect what he afterwards accomplish'd: For in the Year 1686, after a Memorable Siege of Ten Weeks continuance, he recover'd this important Place to Christian Obedience, being taken by Assault, on the 15th. of June, 1686. The Baths of Buda are reputed the Noblest in Europe, not only on account of the plentiful Plentiful Hot Springs, but also for the Magnificence of their Buildings. They are eight in Number, being appointed for Men in the Morning, and Women in the Afternoon: The chiefest of them is that of St. Elizabeth, having a strong sulphureous Smell and petrifying Juice; but it is so intensely Hot, that to make it tolerable a mixture of Cold Water is usually thrown in.

GRAN, Strigoniæ, stands on the South Bank of the Danube, 30 miles from Buda, 60 South-East from Presburg, over against Barchan, which stands at the Mouth of the River Gran. It is a very considerable City, formerly the Seat of the Kings, and at present the See of an Archbishop who is Primate of the Kingdom, Chancellor and President of the Royal Council: And adorn'd with many magnificent Buildings, whereof the Cathedral Church dedicated to St. Stephen, the Archbishop's Palace and the Castle are the most considerable: Here are also two large Towers, one towards Temesburg, and the other facing the River towards Barchan; these are join'd by a Wall, fortified with divers Redoubts and a Ditch flank'd with hewn Stone, besides a Terrass, environ'd with strong Pallisadoes, and 4 great Points like Ravelins. The whole is divided into two Parts, the upper standing on the side of a Hill, and the lower along the Banks of the Danube, and fence'd with a strong Fort built on the Hill of St. Thomas, so that an Enemy has in a manner three different Towns to take before he can be Master of Gran. But notwithstanding this Strength it was taken by Solyman II. in the Year 1543. and in vain Besieg'd by Matthias Arch-Duke of Austria with 50000 Men in 1574. Afterwards the Imperialists again set down before it in 1595. and their General Count Mansfield routed the Turkish Army; but he dying soon after, the Siege was continued by the Arch-Duke with great Vigour, and the City at last taken. In this Siege Sir Thomas Arundel of Wardour-Castle in Wiltshire signaliz'd great Valour, he storm'd the Water-Tower, and pull'd down the Turkish Banner; for which Service and his continual Bravery during the whole Siege, the Emperor Rodolphus created him a Count of the Empire, and King James I. made him a Baron of England; which Honours his Posterity still enjoy. Afterwards the Turks under Mahomet III. retook it in the Year 1606. and possess'd it till the late War, when in the Year 1683. after the Defeat of the Turkish Army before Vienna, the Imperialists recover'd it, and defended it against the Turks, who again attack'd it in 1685. but were entirely defeated by the Dukes of Lorraine and Bavaria. The adjacent Country is exceeding fruitful, affording great quantities of generous Wines.

Komar, Comorra, Komara or Komora, is a very strong and populous Town, seated on the East-corner of the Island Schut on the Bank of the Danube, 40 miles East from Presburg, and 25 West from Gran: It is almost encompassed with the Rivers Danube and Wagz, and surrounded with a pleasant Champaign Country, over which from its Towers may be seen many Turkish Forts. It was first Fortified by King Matthias Corvinus, and became the chiefest Bulwark of Christendom, against the Turks after the loss of Gran. And therefore a good Garrison was always there maintain'd, under a trusty Governour, of whom Baron Brach testified his Fidelity very signally, for after the taking of Raab in 1591. Simon Bassa besieg'd Comorra with 60 Ships, and a large Army of Turks and Tartars, endeavouring at the same time to Corrupt the Governor; but he instead of accepting the Bribe, beheaded four of the five Turks sent to him on the Errand, and spared the 5th. only to go back to his Master with the Answer, that he scorn'd his Offers: And in the end they were fain to raise the Siege: Since that time the Town hath been enlarg'd, and better strengthned with a Fort, call'd the Tortoise, and 4 Battions.

Raab or Favarin, a small City dignified with an Episcopal See, stands on the Southern Branch of the Danube, that makes the Island Schut, where it receives the River Raab, 20 miles South from Komorra, 40 South-East from Presburg, and 30 West from Gran. It is a strong Town, being Fortified with Seven Large Bastions, and Four Cavaliers, or High Mounts overlooking them. The Country round it is Champaign, and nothing can command it but a Neighbouring Hill, which is undermined, and may be blown up at pleasure: Somewhat further in an open Field stands a Watch-Tower; from whence an Enemy's Approach may be seen at a distance. Sinan Bassa Besieg'd this City, and at one Attack lost 12000 Men before it: But at last it fell into their Hands, by the Treachery of Count Hardeck its Governor, for which he was Beheaded at Vienna; and was surpriz'd by Stratagem in the Year 1606, by Count Swartzenburg Governor of Comorra, and so Recover'd, and ever since Remain'd in the Emperor's Possession. The Famous General Mentecuculi was Governor of this Town, and used to reside here when his leisure permitted.

Altenburg, Ovaria, call'd Owar by the Hungarians, is a very strong Town and Fortrefs, seated on the Danube, where it receives the Leytha, by which Rivers it is surrounded, over against the West-End of the Island Schut, and 20 miles South from Presburg. It is esteem'd the best Fence the Austrians have on this side, and is a considerable Out-Work to Vienna, from which it is distant 50 miles to the East.

Alba Regalis, Stuhl Weissenberg, call'd Stolin-Biograd, by the Slavonians, and Ekekeis Feierwa by the Hungarians, stands in the midst of an inaccessible Marsh on the Banks of the River Zarmiza near the Lake Balaton, whence that River Issues, in the middle between the Danube and the Drave, 40 miles South from Gran, as many South-West from Buda, and 80 South-East from Presburg. It is well Fortified with three Bastions, and two other Works on one side, the other being sufficiently cover'd with the Morass, and join'd to the firm Land by three Causeways. It was heretofore Famous for the Coronation and Interment of the Kings of Hungary, till it was taken by the Turks in 1543. From whence it was recover'd by the Duke of Mercœur in 1602. But they took it again the Year following, and kept it till the Year 1688. when it was regain'd by the Imperialists.

Vesprin, or Weisburn, the Capital of a County, and the See of a Bishop, stands near the Lake Balaton, 15 miles from Alba Regalis, and 55 from Buda to the West. This City was taken by the Turks, in 1593, but afterwards Recover'd, and now Subject to the Emperor.

Canisa, or Kaniseba, is one of the strongest Holds in these Parts, seated on the River Sala, which a little below falls into the Drave about 20 Miles West from the Lake Eletton, 6 South-West from Alba Regalis, and near 100 South from Piesburg. It fell into the Hands of the Turks in the Year 1600. and in the following Year the Archduke of Austria endeavour'd to regain it; but after a Siege of two Months he was fain to quit it. In 1604. Count Serini laid Siege to it, and had carry'd it if timely Succours had been sent him, In the late War it was Block'd up by an Army of 8000 Men, under Count de Buliani, from the 30th of July 1688. till April 1690. when at last it was Surrender'd with this Expression from the Turkish Officer, I here resign you the strongest Fortrefs in the Ottoman Empire.

Sigeth, or Zygeth, is seated on a Morass near the River Alne, which 20 Miles below falls into the Drave, 44 Miles from Alba Regalis to the South, 64 from Canisa to the East, and 74 from Buda to the South-West. It is a strong Town, being Fortified with a well-built Castle, besides three Walls, and as many Ditches. It was taken by the Turks in the Year 1566. after a Siege of two Months, notwithstanding the brave Defence of Nicholas Esdrin its Governor, who perish'd with his Guard of 200 Men in encountring the whole Body of Ottoman Forces: During this Siege Solyman II. died in the Camp. In the Year 1688. the Imperialists recover'd this important Fortrefs, and found 58 pieces of Cannon in it. There is another Town of this Name in Transylvania, near the Spring-head of the River Teyffe or Tibiscus.

Five Churches, or Funff-Kirken, Quinque Ecclesie, takes its Name from Five Fair Christian Churches in the Town; it stands on the River Keoritz, 12 Miles from the Drave, 30 Miles East from Sigeth, 50 West from Esseck, and 70 South from Buda; some Authors make this the Teutoburgium of Antoninus; but others with more Probability fix that old Roman Fort at Erdwy, a Hamlet on the Mouth of the Drave. It is not a place of equal Strength with those we have been mentioning. It was burnt by Count de ini in the former War, in his Return from Esseck; and in the late War in the Year 1686. it was taken by surprize by Prince Lewis of Baden. St. Stephen, King of Hungary, made this City a Bishop's See, Mohatz, a small Town seated near the Danube, between the Rivers Zarwiza and the Drave, 30 Miles South from Colocza, 25 North-West from Esseck, and 35 East from Five-Churches, chiefly memorable for two Battles Fought near it: The first between Solyman the Magnificent, and Lewis or Lodowick II. King of Hungary. Wherein this Prince being in the heat of his Youth, adventur'd with an Army of 20000 Men to engage the Army of 300000 Turks, by whom he was overpower'd, many of the Nobility kill'd, and himself in endeavouring to escape, rode into a Bog, where thro' the Weight of his Armour, he perish'd in the 20th Year of his Age. The Consequence of this Battle was very Fatal; for the Turks pursuing their Blow slew 200000 Hungarians, and got such Footing in the Country, that they could never be remov'd, till the late happy War, whereby all Hungary was regain'd. The second Battle was almost as Fortunate on the Christian side; for on the 29th of July 1687. the Prime Vicer pass'd the Drave at Esseck, with design to attack the Christian Army under the Duke of Lorrain; accordingly on the 20th of August the Battle was Fought, wherein the Turks were entirely Defeated with the loss of 12000 Men, all the Tents, Baggage, Treasure, and 100 pieces of Ordinance, 12 Mortars, with Ammunition and Provisions proportionate.

TRANSILVANIA.

TRANSILVANIA, call'd Erdely by the Hungarians, and Siebenburgen by the Germans, derives both its Latin and Hungarian Names from Woods and Forests, with which it is encompass'd, almost on all sides; but the High-Dutch Denomination hath a different Original of much later Date, taken from the seven chief Towns in this Principality, and alluding to the manner of Living of the ancient Pannonians, who having fixt their Tents in those Parts, for the more ready suppressing of any Insurrection that might be rais'd against them by the Natives, were wont to keep in distinct Bodies, and accordingly divided themselves into seven Bands or Regiments, every one of which contain'd 3857 able Soldiers. Thus being encamp'd in several quarters of Transilvania, they made Entrenchments round about, and for their better Security built a Fortress or Castle at every Camp, which first occasion'd the Alteration of the Name of this Country; Siebenburgen, in the German Tongue, signifying seven Forts or Towns. It was added to the Roman Empire under the Name of Dacia, by the Emperor Trajan, and contain'd in Compass about 1000 Italian Miles, according to the Report of Eusebius and Jernandes; but at present nothing more is comprehended under the Name of Transilvania than only a part of the Old Walachia, lying in form of a Rhomb or Lozenge, and being bounded on the North by Poland, on the South by Walachia Proper, and part of Hungary, on the East by Moldavia, and part of the same Walachia, and on the West by Upper Hungary: Its Extent from North to South, consisting of about 50 Leagues, and 68 from East to West. The AIR is altogether as Temperate as in any part of Hungary, and not so much corrupted with infectious Vapours, altho' the Waters are Unwholesome, by reason that they pass thro' Mines of Alum and Mercury. The Country (as the Name imports) is every where environ'd with Forests, growing for the most part on the Sides of high Hills and Mountains. The Chief of these is Mount Carpathus, nam'd Crapack by the Transilvanians, and Biescid by the Russians, which runs along the North of the whole Principality, dividing it from the Russian Empire; and indeed the Inlands are almost as Mountainous as the Limits, insomuch that one can hardly Travel from one great Town to another, but by a Road leading thro' a Wood, and over some Rocky Hill. The highest inland Mountain stands near Fogaras, on the River Alc, its Top being inaccessible and always cover'd with Snow: However the SOIL brings forth abundance of Corn, Pulse and delicious Fruits; affording likewise good Grapes, Honey and Wax, together with several Mines of Gold, Silver, Lead, Quick-silver and other Minerals. The chief Mines are at Scullatti and Rimili Dominurdez, in the latter whereof the Miners have sometimes found large Lumps of Virgin Gold, and sent them to the Mint without any further Purifying. The best Silver Mines are near Offera and Radna, where they have also good store of Copper, and accidentally light on a Vein of Gold. In the Copper-Mines they usually meet with Brimstone and Icing-glass, as also plenty of Steel at Cyck, and of Iron at Thorosch and Huniade. Lastly, the County of Marcmarus affords vast quantities of Stone-Salt, even so far as to supply the greater part of the Neighbouring Nations with that Mineral. The Pasture Grounds yield Fodder to innumerable Herds of Cattle, more especially large Oxen, with which the Transilvanians, in time of Peace, are so over-stock'd, that a fat Ox may be then bought for 12 or 14 Shillings, and sold again for 50 or 60 Rix-Dollars in Austria. They have also a good Breed of stout and swift Horses, that are very much esteem'd in Foreign Countries. The Forests abound with Buffles, Elks, Stags, and a sort of wild Horses that run incredibly swift, and have large Manes hanging down to the Ground, wild Boars, Foxes, Martins, and other sorts of Game. The Hares are much larger here than in the Western Parts of Europe, and their Skins carry a far purer Furr. The Wolves and Bears in Altland, and other adjacent Countries, run often in Doves, viz. 30 or 40 together, and do much Mischief, during the Winter, among the Horse and other Cattle. There is no Nation in the World, where Wheat grows, more plentifully than in Transilvania, so that even the Peasants feed on no other sort of Bread, the Blade of this Grain being here usually as thick as an ordinary Reed, and shooting up to a great Height. Their Wines are reckon'd much more noble than those of Walachia, the Windisch Marquissate, Austria or Moravia, but far inferior to the Rhenish and Hungarian, having commonly a Tincture of Chalk or Sulphur; for which Reason it is reputed a mighty Promoter of the Gout, and such like Distempers. The most remarkable Rivers are, the Marisk, the Alt, the Samos and the Chrysa: The two former of these spring forth out of the Scythian Carpathus; the Alt falls into the Danube, but the Marisk and Samos intermix their Waters with those of the Teyffe.

The Principality of Transilvania is inhabited by three sorts of People, that have different Laws and Customs, viz. the Ciculi or Siculi, the Saxons and Hungarians. Of these the first lay claim to the greatest Antiquity, and are still govern'd by their old Laws and Constitutions, being really a Branch of the Ancient Scythians, who were driven driven out of Pannonia, by Attila and his Huns. They divide themselves into seven Cantons, every one of which is Absolute within itself: Tho' all of them are united with the Transilvanians, and one with another for the defence of their Country against the Common Enemy. As for the Saxons (according to the Opinion of Toppeltrine) they are the true Relicks of the Ancient Daci; calling themselves even at this Day Decen, Defen, or Detf. ben, which is an easy Corruption of the Daci or Deci. The German Writers, especially those of the best Repute, acknowledge the whole German Nation (and consequently their Saxons) to be the Offspring of the ancient Transilvanians. But whencesoever their Original is deriv'd, they are certainly near of Kin to the Inhabitants of the Lower Saxony, and use the same Dialect, altho' the Corruption of their Tongue, by a mixture with the Hungarian, renders the High-Dutch more difficult to be understood among them. Those Saxons possess the Province call'd the Seven Towns: The Siculi dwell on the Banks of the River Marisk; and the Hungarians possess the Frontiers of Walachia; the two latter are for the most part Calvinists, and the Saxons almost generally embrace the Doctrin of Luther, but none will allow any Pictures or Images to be set up in their Churches. There are also among them some Roman Catholics, Greeks, Trinitarians, Photinians and Anabaptists; tho' their Parry is not so considerable.

However, these three distinct Nations are govern'd by one Sovereign, styl'd the Waywood, or Prince of Transilvania, whom the Grand Signior often caus'd to be Elect'd and Depos'd at his pleasure. But the Power of the Turks is now expell'd. The two Noble Families of Batbori and Ragotski, have supply'd this Country with many Princes, who were oblig'd to send a certain Tribute to the Port, until Michael Abafsi, the 23d. Prince from John Huniades, who succeeded John Kermant, A. D. 1661. with the Consent of the States of Transilvania, resign'd the whole Country to the Emperor of Germany and King of Hungary for ever, as it appears from the Act bearing Date at Hermanstadt, May 9. 1688. Whereupon Imperial Garrisons were accordingly receiv'd into all the principal Places. Afterward, the said Prince dying in 1690. the States, in a general Assembly, resolv'd to adhere to the Interests of the Emperor and the young Prince, Son to the deceas'd, who was confirm'd by his Imperial Majesty, against all the Pretensions of Count Teckely and the Ottoman Port. Thus the Principality of Transilvania remains entirely Incorporated with the Crown of Hungary, under the Imperial Protection. Its chief Revenues arise from the Sale of Salt, very great Quantities whereof are made at Tarda, and convey'd from thence on the River Marisch, into Hungary. And the first Article of the Treaty of Peace between the Emperor and the Turk at Carlowitz, declares that Transilvania shall remain entire to his Imperial Majesty, with the ancient Limits as before the War. The chief Towns here are,

Hermanstadt, Hermanopolis, aut Cibinium, call'd Zebe by the Inhabitants, the Metropolis of Transilvania, and the Royal Seat of the Prince, stands in the middle of a large Plain, on the side of the Rivulet Ciben, which a little below falls into the Alt, being distant 60 Miles from Colaswar or Claußenburg to the East, and 32 from Gula Feiruar, or Weissenburg, toward the Frontiers of Moldavia;

as also 500 from Belgrade to the North-East. It is a large and fair City, bearing the Title of an Episcopal See, under the Metropolitan of Colocza in Hungary, altho' at present destitute of a Bishop; neither is its Strength less considerable, the great Number of Fish-ponds and Pools of Water rendering it inaccessible, besides its firm Walls and Ramparts. The Houses within the Gates are generally well-built, and for the most part cover'd with Slate, which is esteem'd an extraordinary piece of Magnificence in the Apartments of a Transilvanian Citizen. There are also many good Springs; and the River-water is convey'd by small Channels thro' every Street; nevertheless the Air is thought to be very Unhealthy, and to cause the Gout, the Epidemical Distemper of the Burgers, insomuch, that many of the best Houses want Inhabitants. Here are usually held the General Conventions and Courts of Judicature of the other six chief Towns of the Saxons, all Actions of Law being brought thither to Tryal. The principal Trade of the Place consists in Cloth and Mead, both which are here made in great Quantities and sent into the Neighbouring Territories. The Princes of Transilvania were wont formerly to put themselves under the Protection of the Grand Signior; but Prince Abafsi at the Solicitation of the late Duke of Lorrain, adher'd to the Emperor's Interest, and was prevail'd with to receive an Imperial Garrison of 3000 Men into this City, A. D. 1687.

Having Travell'd about a German Mile from Hermanstadt, we meet with Saltzburg, or Wiagna, that takes its Name from the Salt-pits, which (as it hath been already intimated) bring Yearly a very considerable Revenue into the Prince's Exchequer. Not far from hence appears Michelberg, a strong Fortress erected on the top of a Hill, wherein are laid up all the Arms and Military Ammunition of the whole Territory of Hermanstadt. Two Miles from this place stands Roche-Thurn, or the Red-Tower, so nam'd from the Colour of the Freestone with which it is built, where the Inhabitants are forc'd to keep a continual Watch and Ward, for fear of a sudden Invasion by the Turks, out of whose Dominions there lies only a very narrow Road this way into Transilvania.

Cronstadt or Brassaw, Corona aut Stephanopolis and Brassovia. is pleasantly situated in the midst of fair and rich Vineyards, about 65 Miles from Hermanstadt, almost to the North-East, near the Confines of Moldavia and the Carpathian Mountains. It is also taken by some Authors for the Praetoria Augusta of Ptolemy. However it is a Bishop's See, and a place of some Strength, as being tolerably well fortify'd with Walls and Ramparts of Earth. The Houses are high and well-built, but generally cover'd with Laths instead of Slate. The Citizens are all Saxons, without the least mixture of Hungarians or Walachians; so that their peculiar Language is here spoken in its greatest Purity. A good School hath been Founded here for some time, besides a Library, that goes beyond any throughout the whole Kingdom of Hungary.

The Country round about Cronstadt bears the Name of Burzia, or Burzland, and is the outmost Boundary of the Principality of Transilvania, which gave occasion to the Hungarian Proverb, That Burzia says Amen to the High-Dutch Paternoster: Meaning, that this Country is the last wherein the German Tongue is understood, the Sclavonian entering on the Frontiers of Walachia. Moreover, it may not be improper to observe here, that the Road from Alstadt and other parts of Transilvania, leads directly to Zeidenwald, a Forest extending for the space of 10 Miles in Length; during which unpleasant Passage, Travellers are carry'd over a continu'd Bridge, or Causey of Planks, the Soil being for the most part Marshy and full of Boggs.

Bispricz, Beste cza, or Besteriza, Bispicia; sometimes also call'd Nofenstadt, by the Germans, is remarkable for its Situation in a spacious Plain, on the Banks of a River of its own Name. It is a Town of small extent, but very neat, and of so good Note, that many of the Hungarian Historiographers allow it the third place in the Catalogue of the Saxon Cities, giving it the Precedency to Segeswar and Megiez. The Burgers (as it is generally reported) speak as good Dutch here, or better, than at Cronstadt. But the Air and Water of the adjacent Country are both reputed very Unwholesome; so that the Inhabitants, especially the meaner sort, that drink Water, are very apt to be Deaf, Dumb, and very Unactive. This Town is distant about 80 Miles from Hermanstadt to the North-West, as also 20 from Burgles, and 60 from Weissenburg to the North.

Megiez, or Medwisch, is seated in the very heart of Transilvania, on the Banks of the same River with Segeswar, in a Country well furnish'd with Wine and other rich Merchandizes. Indeed it is not very large, yet indifferently well fortify'd with a deep Ditch and an old Wall. But its greatest Strength lies in the Church founded on the top of a Hill, according to the usual Custom of the Inhabitants of those Parts, who built their Churches Castle-wise, to avoid being put to a double Charge.

Schesburg, or Segeswar, (as it is nam'd by the Hungarians) Segethusa, extends itself along the side of a Hill and the Banks of the River Cochel, at the foot of the Carpathian Mountains, about 10 Miles from Hermanstadt to the North, and 14 from Cronstadt to the West. As to its Form, it very much resembles Buda, but falls far short of that City in its Largeness and number of Inhabitants. It is divided into two Parts, viz. the Upper and Lower, the former being built on a Hill and a place of great Strength; but the latter is not well defended, tho' more Populous, by reason of the Convenience of Water for the use of the Burgers for carrying on their several Manufactures; more especially that of dressing their Cloth, whereas the other part of the Town is destitute of any Brook or Spring.

Milembach, or Zaashebes, according to the Hungarian Denomination, Zabesus aut Sabeseus, is a Town of much Antiquity, but otherwise scarcely considerable, lying on a very hollow Valley, and Westward tolerably well secur'd with Boggs and Moorish Grounds. But it may be easily attack'd on the other side and is by no means a place of Strength.

Clausenburg, Caudiopolis, is situate on the Rivulet Samus, near the foot of the Mountains towards the Borders of Hungary, at the distance of 36 Miles from Weissenburg to the North, as many from Besteriza or Bispicz, and 60 from Waradin to the East. It is a large populous Town, and the Principal of a County of the same Name, being fortify'd with an old Castle and other Bulworks, so as to be capable of enduring a smart Siege; as it did in the Year 1661, when Abdali, Prince of Transilvania, joyning with a body of Turks, laid Siege to it; it being at that time govern'd by David Retani, a valiant and faithful Soldier, who, notwithstanding the Town was but indifferently Fortify'd, and very ill provided with Cannon and Ammunition (inasmuch that he was forc'd to found Artillery out of the Town Bells) bravely tally'd out upon the Enemy, and was very successful, till General Schedinau, who was then in Hungary, getting together about 6000 Men, came to his Relief; upon the News of which, the Turks thought fit to raise the Siege, and make the best use they could of their Heels, leaving great quantities of Victuals and Provision behind them. It is also a place of great Traffick, and well frequented by reason that all the Conventions of the States of Transilvania, and Provincial Courts of Justice are held therein by the Prince. It heretofore perhaps bore the Name of Patruissa, but is at present call'd Coloswar by the Hungarians. The greatest part of the Towns-men are Arians and Phoetinians, inasmuch that the other six Towns (where Lutheranism is generally profess'd) took an occasion to exclude Clausenburg out of the Number of the seven States of Transilvanian Saxons, and to admit Bross or Zasvaras into its room. Moreover, the Hungarians may be made free of this Town, and are allow'd to bear Offices therein; a Privilege never granted them in any other Saxon City.

There are divers other small Towns and Burghs in Transilvania entirely Inhabited by the Saxons; but all of them by some means or other, depend on the Seven preceeding.

The chief Towns in Transilvania Inhabited by the Hungarians, Walachians, Siculi, &c.

Weissenburg, Alba Julia, call'd by the Hungarians, Giula Fejerwar, is conveniently situated on a rising Ground, from whence, almost 2 Miles round about, one may take a most delightful Prospect of a champain and fruitful Country. It is water'd with the gentle Streams of the River Marisk, and was in Times past much larger than it is at present; as may still be discern'd from its old Boundaries without the Walls, containing 5 Miles in Compass. And it continu'd for a long time the Metropolis of Dacia, being honour'd with the Royal Palace and constant Residence of the Monarchs of that Kingdom. It was also formerly a Bishop's See under the Metropolitan of Colocza; but that Dignity was transferr'd elsewhere by Queen Isabel, the Widow of John I. King of Hungary. This City is distant 34 Miles from Hermanstadt to the West, 68 from Temeswaer to the North-East, 90 from Waradin to the East, and 196 from Buda. The ancient Inscriptions and Characters, upon Tombs and Tables, that are found in and about this Place, do plainly shew that the Goths anciently Inhabited this Country. And the Coins and Medals that are found in it, are an evident Proof that the Roman Legions were once here: It owes its Name of Alba Julia to Julia Augusta, the Mother of Marcus Aurelius Antonius Pius, as appears from an old Inscription upon a Marble Table in the Church of St. Michael, which is this,

I. O. M. E. Junoni.

Pro Salute Imp. M. Aur. Antonii Pii Aug. & Juliae Aug. Matris Aug. M. Ulpius. Mucianus, Mil. Leg. XIII. Gem. Horologiare Templum a Solo de suo ex voto fecit, Falcone & Claro. Cest.

Thorda is suppos'd to stand in or near the same place with the Salin of Ptolomy, which Town took its Name from the great number of Salt-pits in the adjacent Territory.

Deva, a Town chiefly noted for affording a sort of excellent Wine, and guarding the Passage thro' the Eysenthor, in the Turkish Dominions. It was taken after a small Resistance by Michael Abaffi, late Prince of Transilvania, during the Wars maintain'd by him against his Competitor Kemeni Janos, A. D. 1662.

Enguedine, call'd Annum by the Romans, from a Causeway leading towards it, which one Annius, a Captain of one of their Cohorts, had caus'd to be rais'd. Some Fragments of this ancient Military Way are yet to be seen, besides other Monuments of Antiquity often found in and about this Town.

Newmark, Nova Marchia, or Waser-Heley, according to the Hungarian Denomination, is seated on the River Marisch, at the foot of the Carpathian Mountains, 36 Miles from Clausenburg or Coloswar to the North-East. In this Town the general Assemblies of the Siculi, are usually conven'd at certain appointed Times.

Agnabat or Agnethin, is one of the chief Towns of Transilvania, tho' of little Strength, and water'd by the River Herbach, 25 Miles from Hermanstadt almost to the North. Queen Isabel assembled a Diet here for the Preservation of her Son, but Marvinusius caus'd it to be dissolv'd, and levy'd War against his Sovereign Prince, the end of which prov'd fatal to both.

PROVINCES recover'd from the Turks, viz. SCLAVONIA, CROATIA, and MORLACHIA.

The Province of SCLAVONIA lies on the South-West of Hungary, between the two Rivers Drave and Save, having the Danube for its Eastern and Stiria for its Western Bounds, comprehending in extent from East to West according to Cluverius, 50 German Leagues (or 200 English Miles) and in Breadth 12 German Leagues (or 48 English Miles) it is part of the ancient Pannonia, and took its present Name from the Slavi, a Northern Nation, who came from Scythia about the time of the Emperor Justinian, and overrun Greece and the neighbouring Countries, as well as Poland and Moravia. And on their account in those Times, all the ancient Illyricum also (which comprehended Croatia, Bosnia and Dalmatia) bore the Name of Slavonia. Their Force was first broken by the Venetians, who conquer'd this Country; and to keep the Natives under, oblig'd them to submit to the most servile Employments which their robust, strong Bodies, made them fit for; and some Etymologists pretend that the word Slave came from these People thus subjected. They were undoubtedly in former times a very considerable Nation, as is demonstrated by the Extent of their Language, which is one of the four Original ones of Europe, and is spoken by the Poles, Russes, Hungarians, and many other Nations: Dr. Heylin reckons up Twelve; but Gesner says no less than sixty Nations speak the Slavonian Language. By divers Revolutions this Country became at last tributary to the Hungarians, from whom it was taken by the Turks; Solyman the Magnificent invading this Province in 1540. reduc'd it to his Subjection, under which it remain'd till the late War, when in the Year 1687. after the Defeat of the Ottoman Forces at Mohat, they murin'd against the Grand Visier, which oblig'd the Turks to desert it, and so the whole Territory, except Gradisca, submitted to the Emperor; and by the late Treaty at Carlowitz, the greatest part of the Province is for ever resign'd up by the Grand Seignior to his Imperial Majesty.

The Air is Temperate and the Soil Fruitful, producing Corn, Cattle and Pasture. The People Robust and Warlike; those that Inhabit the Eastern Parts, on the Banks of the Save, as well on this side, as the Servian are call'd Ratzians, by which Name they are often mention'd in the History of the late War. Both the Greek and Roman Profession of Christianity is follow'd here; and the Papists are permitted to have Mass said in their own Language. The Division of their Province into Counties cannot exactly be set down; some divide it into Seven, and others Six, and other makes but Four. The Turkish Power has confounded that Distinction, and 'tis sufficient to say these are principal Cities, viz.

POSSEGA, otherwise call'd Picentina, and Segovitzza, the Metropolis of the Province and the Capital of a County to which it gives Name, lies in the middle of the Province with respect to East and West, and 15 Miles North from the River Save, in the Lat. of 45. 30. Long. 36. and is seated on the River Oriana, 50 Miles from Five-Churches to the South, and 120 from Belgrade to the West, in an exceeding fertile Country. It contains about 1000 Houses, and is surrounded with Walls and other Fortifications; and is a place of Consequence on account of its Jurisdiction over 400 Villages, and its considerable Traffick. The Turks under Solyman took it in 1544. and retain'd it till the Year 1687. when the Germans besieging it, the Turkish Governor made some shew of Resistance by firing some Canon, but soon deserted the place, and left in it a great quantity of Ammunition and Provision, and 5 pieces of Cannon.

Walpo or Valpo, stands on a River of the same Name, 35 Miles North East from Possessa, and about 10 from the Drave: It was taken by the Turks in 1543. and re-taken after a short Siege by General Dunewalt in 1687.

Esseck, a Place of much Antiquity, and suppos'd to be the ancient Mursa, which Conjecture is corroborated by part of an ancient Latin Inscription still to be seen on one side the Gate, wherein is read the Emperor Ælian's Name in fair Characters. It is a large and populous Town, seated at the Confluence of the Drave with the Danube, and is particularly remarkable on account of its famous Bridge, which is 5 English Miles long, and near 30 Yards broad; the reason of its Length is, because it not only lies over the River Drave, which divides into Branches, but also passes over a large Morass. It consists of thick Oaken Planks supported by great Trees, nine or ten in a Rank between every Arch: It is Rail'd on each side, and hath Watch-Towers at every quarter of a Mile's distance; and is in the whole so noble a Work, that it surprizes the Eye with the View of it, and the Imagination in considering whence that vast quantity of Timber could be fetch'd. By this Bridge the Turks Forces us'd to march and invade the Christian Countries; wherefore in the former War, viz. Ann. 1664. Count Serini attack'd and burnt a great part of it; and in this late War, Ann. 1685. Count Lesley set Fire to it a second time, and took the Town; but the Castle holding out, he blew up the Magazines and left it. The next Year, the repairs were begun to Repair it, the Duke of Lorraine for the taking of Buda, march'd this way, and in destroy'd what they had in many Months, by the Hands of some Men, been raising. In the Year 1687, the Turks deserted the Town, which the Imperialists took possession of and held it, notwithstanding the Attack made in 1690. by an Army of 15000 Turks. The Town is Large and Populous, well furnish'd with Shops and Caravanseras or Inns (as Sir P. Rycaut tells us) for Accommodation of the Armies and great number of Travellers that pass thro' it. The Houses are of Wood, and the Streets instead of Paving, plank'd with Trees, which render'd it so liable to Fire, as to be almost entirely burnt down by Accident in 1685 when Count Lesley was there. The Fortifications are not very strong, notwithstanding the Cost and Pains the Turks have bestow'd on 'em. In History 'tis noted, that Magnentius the Usurper and Murderer of Constantine II. was defeated by Constantius in the Year 349. and Lewis II. the young King of Hungary, was routed by Schman II. near this place. Esseck is distant 50 Miles from Pességa to the North-East, and 60 from Belgrade to the North-West.

Walcwar, upon the River Walpa, near its Mouth into the Danube, about 20 Miles South from Esseck. And Iack, about 10 Miles South-West from Walcwar, and near the Banks of the Danube, have been both often mention'd in the History of the late War.

Peterwaradin, Acuminium aut Petro-Varadinum, seated on the Banks of the Danube, 30 Miles South-East from Esseck, in the County of ancient Sirmium, hath been famous during the late War. The Turks made it a Head Quarters after they had lost Buda, and kept a Bridge of Boats here over the Danube. It was often Taken and Retaken during the late War, and being dismantled in 1688. by the Imperialists, and afterwards burnt by the Turks, it was Re-fortify'd by the Emperor in 1691. and made a place of great Strength.

Salačkament stands 15 Miles East from Peterwaradin, which is a Town of no great Note, except for the Battle fought near it in the Year 1691. between Prince Lewis of Baden and the Grand Visier, wherein the former obtain'd a very signal Victory with the Death of 25000 Turks, among which were the Grand Visier, the Saraskier, and many of the principal Officers: The Particulars whereof the Reader will find in Sir Paul Rycaut's late History of that War.

Carlowitz, famous for the late Treaty of Peace in the Year 1699. between the Emperor and his Confederates on one part, and the Grand Seignior on the other, stands near Salačkament.

Semryn, in the Road to Belgrade, and on that account often mention'd, stands 12 Miles East from Salačkament, and about as far West from Belgrade.

Alc-Sirmium, Sirmium, or Sirmich, call'd Szvim by the Hungarians, the Capital of a County to which it gives Name, was heretofore the Metropolis of Pannonia Inferior, afterwards the Seat of the Præfectus Prætorie Italici, and hath been honour'd with the Personal Residence of many Emperors, and on that account the Scene of many Actions. Here Vetricano or Bertanio was Proclaim'd Emperor by the Illyrian Soldiers at the Death of Constantine the Great, but was deserted and soon oblig'd to submit to Constantius. In its Christian State it was the See of a Bishop, and honour'd with a Council, wherein the Emperor Constantius was present, Ann. 356. An Arian Synod was also held here soon after; and the City was considerable till the Turks became Masters of it, who have to far alter'd its State that Modern Travellers tell us 'tis but a poor Village. It stands 25 Miles South-West from Peterwaradin, 60 West from Belgrade, and not above 5 from the River Save.

From hence to Posséga, along the Banks of the Save, being subject to the Turks, no considerable Town is seen, only Bredt, a small Town on the Save, 15 Miles South from Posséga, is remarkable for a Victory obtain'd over the Turks by Prince Lewis of Baden in 1688. Beyond Posséga to the West, stands Gradisca or Gradisk, seated on the Banks of the Save, about 30 Miles from Posséga, a strong fortify'd Town, taken by the Imperialists under the Duke of Croy, in the Year 1691.

Vircovitz or Virobotiza, a City guarded with a Castle, which was taken by Count Lesley in 1684. and thereby the Passage open'd to Esseck; stands near the Drave, 50 Miles North-West from Posséga.

Zagrab or Agram, seated near the River Save, 100 Miles West from Posséga, and about 12 from the Frontiers of Carniola, is the Capital of a County, and the See of a Bishop; 'tis divided by a small Rivulet into two Parts, one of which being nam'd Agram, has occasion'd the whole Town to be sometime so call'd: It is adorn'd with a fair Cathedral, dedicated to St. Peter, the first Christian King of Hungary, and strengthen'd with good Walls and other Fortifications, and is a populous City.

CROATIA and MORLACHIA.

This Country was part of the ancient Pannonia Superior, according to Oritelius and Cluverius, or part of Illyricum, according to the late Oxford Maps. And after the declining of the Roman Empire was overrun by the Northern Barbarians, and in time became a considerable Kingdom: Which, according to Baudrand, extended from the River Drave to the Adriatick Sea, and was divided into three Parts viz. 1. Croatia Savia or interamnensis, which lay between the Drave and the Save (the present Sclavonia). 2. Croatia propria, or the present Croatia lying between the Save and the Mountains Rebiu. and Albius. The Third lay between those Mountains and the Adriatick Sea, which is the present Morlachia: And tho' that Monarchy be long since terminated, yet the Emperor of Germany still retain the Title of King of Croatia.

The present Boundaries of this Province are the River Save on the North, and Morlachia on the South, if Morlachia may be reckon'd a separate Country, and not rather a part of Croatia, as many Geographers do, and then the Adriatick Sea must be reckon'd the Southern Boundary. Bosnia lies to the East, and Carniola on the West; its utmost Extent may be reckon'd about 80 Miles either way. It is a fruitful Soil, producing Wine and Oyl as well as all Necessaries for Life. The People are call'd Croats, and by the Germans Krabaten, are Valiant Hardy

TURKEY in Europe.

THAT Part of Europe now subject to the Turks, and by their Arbitrary Government render'd in a great measure depopulate, was formerly the most considerable of all this Continent, and hath been the Habitation of Nations that made the greatest Figure in Ancient History. The Valour, Wisdom and Learning of the Ancient Grecians is known to all the World. Thrace, Mysia, Bacia, Pannonia and Illyricum, were for many Ages the Seats of considerable Nations, and their Actions often remember'd in History. And these Parts were by much the most Cultivated and Populous of all Europe. But as Wealth begets Luxury and Pride, and those breed Effeminacy and Animofities; these People lost their Primitive Virtue, and by Wars for Superiority, were in time so weaken'd, that they became a Prey, first to the Macedonians, and afterwards to the Romans; who made all these Countries Provinces of their Empire. But still so considerable was this Country, that Constantine the Great,

Great remov'd his Seat into Thrace, and the Succession of that Monarchy continu'd here, after it was terminated in Italy. But as the numerous Swarms of Goths and other Northern Nations had overrun Spain and Italy, so the Huns, Goths, Slavi, &c. as much infested the Eastern Empire in Europe, as the Sarazins did in Africa and Asia, inasmuch that the latter Emperors had little more than the Title of that Dignity (their Dominions and Power being reduc'd to a small Compass) before the Turks attack'd them.

Of the Origin of the Turks we shall have occasion to speak in our Account of Turcomania. And of the Rise of Mahomet in our Account of Arabia, where we shall shew that the Mahometan Empire was begun by the Sarazins, who had held it 400 Years, before the Turks under Tangrolipix got possession of Persia, and thence intulst the Sarazins. That both Turks and Sarazins were worsted by the Tartars, who Conquer'd Persia, Affyria, &c. will be shewn in its proper place; and therefore to avoid Repetition, we shall here only speak of the Rise of the present Race of Turkish Kings descended from Ottoman.

At the time that Haalon the Tartar Conquer'd Persia, and Expell'd Cassanes, the last of Tangrolipix's Race, there was another small Kingdom of Turks at Macban in Persia, under the Head of the Oguzian Family, which was an Honourable Race; whether more Ancient than the Seluccian, of which Tangrolipix descended, or second to that, I cannot determine; it was at least so considerable as to be allow'd a Regal Power in that small Dominion it possess'd. Solyman, who was the Sultan of it at that time, An. 1260. having little Hopes to protect himself against so formidable a Power, thought it his wisest Course to avoid the Rage of the Tartars by Flight; and accordingly retir'd into Asia Minor with his Family, Friends and Cattle, with sorry Equipage in Carts, and Tents for their Habitations. But it seems he was not easy there; for he was returning to Persia, when he was by Misfortune drown'd in the Euphrates. Some of his Family pursu'd his Design, and return'd into Persia; but his Son Ertogrul abode where he was, and beg'd a piece of Land of Saladin the Turkish Sultan of Iconium, to feed his Flocks in. He had a good Train of Followers, and was able to assist the Sultan in his Wars, wherein they did him very signal Service, and therefore had a large share in his Favour. Ottoman, the Founder of the present Turkish Empire, was the Son of Ertogrul. He was a Person of great Courage, penetrating Judgment, and boundless Ambition; by Warring against the Christians, who possess'd many Castles in those Parts, he acquir'd a petty Sovereignty, and after the Death of Saladin took upon himself the Title of Sultan; and was so successful in his Wars, that in the 28 Years he Reign'd, he Conquer'd the greatest part of Phrygia and Bythinia; and having taken Prusa, he made it the Seat of the Turkish Kingdom. He Died in 1328. and was Succeeded by his Son Orchanes, in whose Time the Turks pass'd the Hellepont and took the City Gallipoli; which Footing in Europe being once obtain'd, they were never after driven out. To him succeeded Amurath, who took Adrianople, and Conquer'd part of Servia and Bulgaria. He Died An. 1390. and was succeeded by his Son Bajazet, who laid Siege to Constantinople, Ravag'd Walachia and Theffaly, and was going on in a furious Torrent of Conquest, but was stop'd in his Career by Tamarlain the Tartar, who after a bloody Fight Defeated his Army and took him Prisoner. Mahomet, the youngest Son of Bajazet, and Amurath II. the Son of Mahomet, Reign'd successively till the Year 1450. at which time began to Reign the Great Mahomet II. who took Constantinople. That fatal Conquest happen'd A. D. 1453. since which time Constantinople has always been the Seat of the Ottoman Empire. A particular Account of the Progress of their Arms would be too long to set down here; but the Reader will be able to gather it up out of the Accounts we have given in the Description of these Countries.

The present Boundaries of TURKEY in EUROPE, are the River Niester or Twla, and the Carpack Mountains, which divide it from Poland on the North; the Archiepelago, the Gulf of Lepanto, and the Ionian Sea on the South; the Euxine or Black-Sea with the Thracian Bosphorus, and the Propontis on the East; and Transylvania, Hungaria, Sclavonia and Croatia on the West, comprehending in the whole these Countries, viz.

CHAP. II.

Of GREECE, hodie Rumelia.

GREECE is judg'd to have been the part of Europe first Inhabited, which its early flourishing State, together with its Neighbourhood to Asia, from whence we know all the Earth was Peopled, give very good Grounds to believe. Ancient History is full of the Actions of the many Nations that Inhabited these Parts; and the Learned World is still indebted to the many Wise Philosophers of this Country, whose Writings continue to be most instructive to Mankind. To say nothing of its Celebrated Historians, Orators and Poets; the Wildom of its Lawgivers, the Valour of its Captains, and Morality of its Inhabitants, are sufficiently known to every body that knows any thing of Antiquity: In short, Greece was anciently the most Celebrated Region of the Universe, surpassing all others in Arms, Arts and Science. It was for many Ages divided into many small Kingdoms and States, till Philip King of Macedon, and Alexander his Son, reduced it all to his Subjection. This Kingdom was afterwards pull'd down by the Romans, and Greece made a Province of the Empire, as it continu'd (but mangled by the Gots and Huns) till the Turks overrun it; these are its present Masters, and have effaced all its Ancient and Magnificent Monuments, as well as reduc'd the People to the most servile Slavery, and ignorant Stupidity.

The ancient Name of this Country was Hellas, which the Latins chang'd into Græcia, and the Turks now call Rumelia. But it must be remember'd that the ancient Hellas comprehended only that Province, since nam'd Acchaia, and by the Turks is call'd Livadia; but that Name is often extended and made to mean the whole Country, which is seated between the 36 and 43 Degree of Latitude, and between the 37 and 45 Degree of Longitude: Bounded on the North by Romania, Bulgaria and Servia, whence it is divided by a Chain of Mountains, whose Eastern part was call'd Scodrus by the Ancients; on the South by the Mediterranean Sea; on the East the Archipelago; and on the West the Adriatick Sea, or Gulph of Venice bounds it. Extending in Length, from the Mountains above-mention'd in the North, to Cape Caglia in the Morea, in the South, 100 German Leagues, according to Cluverius, which makes 400 English Miles; and its utmost Breadth he reckons to be 89 German Leagues, i. e. 356 Miles.

The AIR is exceeding Temperate and Healthy; and the SOIL very Fruitful, abounding with Corn, Wine, delicious Fruits, and great Herds of Cattle, together with Fowl and Venison in great plenty.

The CHRISTIAN RELIGION was planted in Greece immediately after the Death of our Saviour, by St Paul and Timothy, and it flourish'd there for many Ages with more Purity than in the Western Church, producing many Champions for the Faith, and venerable Fathers, whose Writings convey to us the Discipline and Doctrine of the Church in its Native Purity: Of which Religion there hath been a continu'd Succession to this time; but since the Turks have been Masters, and made the People Slaves, its State is much declin'd.

The Ancient LANGUAGE of Greece is still known to us, being preserv'd in the Writings of Aristotle, Plato, Xenophon, Herodotus, Thucydides, Plutarch, Demosthenes, Æschines, Isocrates, Hesiod, Homer, Sophocles, Aristophanes, and many other Philosophers, Historians, Orators and Poets; and has been deservedly esteem'd as well by the Romans in their most flourishing State, as by all Europe ever since: And to us Christians it is particularly Valuable, by being the Language of the Gospels and the rest of the New Testament, whereby we receive the means of Eternal Salvation. The Greek was spoken in five different Dialects, viz. the Attick, the Dorick, the Æolick, the Ionick, and the Common Dialect; and was the most Manly, Haughty, Comprehensive, and yet most Sweet and Mellow of any Language extant. But the Modern Greek is so far chang'd by the mixture of Foreign Languages, that the Genuine Stile is very little understood among the present Inhabitants.

Because this Country is very much mention'd in ancient History, and the Classick Authors, we shall set down its ancient Division, according to Cluverius and Laurenburger, before we proceed to its State, viz.

Ancient Greece was Divided into Five Parts, viz. HELLAS, T H E S S A L I A, M A C E D O N I A, E P I R U S, and P E L O P O N N E S U S. Which were Subdivided thus,

M A C E D O N

Sometime call'd Emathia, from Emathius one of its Kings; took its present Name from Macedon, the Grandson of Deucalion, as Solinus, or more particularly. Son of Jupiter and Thyie the Daughter of Deucalion, as Stephanus; but by Cluverius rather thought to be deriv'd from Mygdonia, a Province of this Country. Was a considerable Kingdom Founded by Ceraunius, and of above 400 Years standing before Perip extended its Bounds, and added Thessaly with part of Epirus and Albania to it; but his Son Alexander, surnam'd the Great, rais'd it to the highest pitch of Grandeur; for he not only subdu'd all Greece and Thrace, but also conquer'd Asia, Egypt and Lybia, so that his Empire extended from the Danube to the River Indus, and from the Black to the Red Sea.

The ancient Bounds of Macedonia propria, were Thrace and Mount Scodrus on the North, which divided it from the Upper Mæsia and Illyricum; on the West the Adriatick Sea; on the South Epirus and Thessaly. Its ancient Division we have already set down; but when Paulus Æmilius the Roman General had overcome Perseus the last Macedonian King (which happen'd A. M. 3782. U. C. 585. after the first erecting this Monarchy by Ceraunius. 625. and before Christ 168 Years) and made this a Province of the Empire; it was divided into four Provinces or Regions. Teste Livio: The first, which border'd on Thrace, was subdivided into four Parts, Edris, Ochromice, Bisaltia and Sintica, seated on the River Strymon. In the second Region were nine Parts, Orbelia, Almopia, part of Pæonia, Jeria, Pelagonia, Mygdonia, Amphraxis, Chalcidicia and Praxia. In the third were six Parts, Pieria, Bottica, Emathia, Lyncæstis, part of Pæonia and Æstria. In the fourth and last Region, which was the Western part, and lay on the Ionian or Adriatick Sea, were twelve or rather ten Parts, Albania, Taulantia, Elymiæ, Ecdetis, Dassareta, Parthyæ, Deurippus, Pelagonia, Stymphalia and Orestis.

The present Macedon is bounded on the West by Albania, on the East by several Bays of the Archipelago, on the North by Romania and Bulgaria, on the South by Thessaly. It is Rich in divers Mines of Gold; abounds with Corn, Pasture, Cattle, Venison, and in some Parts Wine and Oyl. Here are many Mountains and Rivers, but none very Large or Remarkable, except Mount Athos, whereof we shall speak in its place. By the Turks, Macedon is divided into three Parts, viz. 1. Jambie, which contains the first and second Region of the Romans. 2. Crenopolitani, part of the third Region. And 3. Macedon, which is the greatest part of the third Region. The chief Cities are,

Thessalonica, commonly call'd Salonichi, heretofore the Capital of the second Region of Macedon, now the Metropolis of the whole, and the Seat of the Turkish Præfect, stands on the Bottom of a Bay, to which it gives Name, in the Latitude of 41. 20. Longitude 43. 200 Miles East from the Coast of the Adriatick Sea, 350 West from Constantinople, 150 South from the Danube, and 100 North from the Isthmus of the Morea. The City was anciently call'd Thermia, and the Bay Sinus Thermicus, and it was formerly adorn'd with many sumptuous publick Buildings, whereof only a Triumphal Arch remains. St. Paul preach'd the Gospel and wrote two Epistles to the People of this City; all which denote its ancient Splendor, and tho' by many Revolutions and the Turkish Government it be somewhat reduc'd, it is however still a very considerable Place, being a Celebrated Emporium, and a large and populous City, inhabited by Christians and Jews, as well as Turks; and bears the Title of a Metropolitan See. It is encompass'd with old Walls, which are reckon'd to be four Leagues in Circuit, and defended by a Citadel on a Hill on one side, and two Forts on the other. The Christians have 30 Churches, and 5 Convents; and the Jews 36 Synagogues, and 2 Colleges where-to their Youth resort from all Parts to Study: The Churches are stately, especially that of St. Mary; but the Turks have taken that as well as St. Demetrius the Cathedral, St. Sophia and St. Gabriel for Mosques. There is a great Traffick here; and the Haven is much resorted to, for Silk, Leather, Iron, Cotton, Wax, Honey, Wooll, Corn, &c. which is chiefly carry'd on by the Jews, who are numerous and wealthy. Salonichi was first built by Cassander and Thessalonica, Daughter to King Philip, and Sister to Alexander the Great. It was the Birth-place of Eustathius, who wrote the Comment on Homer, of Constantius Hermenopolus, Demetrius Cyrenodius, and Theodorus Gaza. It always underwent the Fate of Macedon, and so was subject to the Greek Emperors, from whom it was snatch'd in 1180. by William King of Sicily; but soon recover'd by Andronicus Palæologus, and sold to the Republick of Venice, in 1313. from whom Sultan Amurath II. took it, and the Turks have ever since possess'd it.

Amphipolis Tur. Embeli, sometime the Capital of Macedon, stands upon the River Strymon, which a little below falls into a Bay of the Archipelago, and gave Name to it; 60 Miles from Salonichi to the North-East. It was heretofore known by the Names of Urbs Martis, and Novem Vix, and is often mention'd in ancient History; for Aristagoras the Milesian flying from Darius, endeavour'd to settle here, but was oppos'd by the Edonii; the Athenians planted a Colony here, which were cut off by the Thracians; afterwards Agion the Son of Nicias repell'd the Edonii, and planted a Colony. It is an Archbishop's See, and inhabited by some Christians; but it has now only its ancient Grandeur to brag on.

Siderocapsa, Sidrus, Sideros & Seydra, Profl. a small Town, notable for its Neighbouring Gold-Mines, which were discover'd in King Philip's Time, and yielded him 1000 Talents every Year; they are still wrought, and afford the Grand Seigneur a considerable Revenue. It is a Bishop's See, and stands on the South-East of Salonichi, near Mount Athos.

Philippi or Filippo, a City at the foot of Mount Pangæus, on the confines of Thrace, 20 or 30 miles North from Amphipolis, is famous for the Battle fought in its neighbouring Fields, where Brutus and Cassius the Murderers of Cæsar were defeated by Marc Antony and Octavius. Its ancient Splendor is testified by an Amphitheatre almost entire, and other Ruins of Sumptuous Buildings. Christianity was planted there by St. Paul, and the People honoured with an Epistle, which is part of our Canon of Scripture; 'tis still an Archbishop's See, but a place of small Habitation.

Contessa and Cavalla, seated on the Strymonian Bay (which runs between Thrace and Mount Athos) do both give Names to it, being by some call'd Golfo di Contessa, and by others de Cavalla. Strymon, which first gave Name to this Bay and the River on which it stands; is a little distant from Amphipolis. Staggyra, now Libanowa, famous for the Birth of Aristotle, stands on the West Shore of the same Bay.

Mount Athos is often mention'd in Antiquity for its Height: Pomp. Mela tells us, That it rises into the Clouds, above the lower Region of the Air: And Pliny says, Its Evening Shadow reaches as far as the Island Lemnos, which is 60 miles distant: It stands on a Promontory jetting into the Sea, between the Gulph of Strymonium or Contessa, and the Sinus Singiticus or Golfo di Monte Santo, about 70 miles East from Saloniki: The Isthmus, which is 12 Stadia broad, Xerxes dug through, and from thence Athos is sometimes called an Island. It is now Nam'd Monte Santo, from 24 Monasteries which stand upon it, mostly of the Order of St. Basil; these are so fully stock'd with the Monks of the Greek Church, and are so well esteem'd, that the Patriarch of Constantinople, Elects all his Bishops out of them.

Pella 30 miles South-West from Theffalonica, and now call'd Zuchria, (and by others Jeniza or Janiza, tho' that be only a new Town of the Turks built near it) is judg'd to have been a Royal Seat of Philip and Alexander, which the Marbles and Royal Buildings daily dug up do Testifie.

ALBANIA hodie. Arnaut.

Between Macedon and the most Eastern part of the Venetian Gulph, and near its Mouth, lies Albania, by the Turks call'd Arnaut: It is sometimes call'd Albania Proper, or Upper, to distinguish it from Epirus which is the Lower, and bounds it on the South, as the Mountains, Maritas, or Argentaro, and Servia do on the North. It extends about 160 miles from North to South, and about 100 from East to West. The SOIL is Fruitful, producing Generous Wine, Flax, and Cotton, as also Wax in the Woods, and Salt dug out of the Mountains. The Inhabitants make Tapistry, which with the other Commodities they vend abroad.

This with Epirus, was the Country of the Famous Prince George Castriot, commonly call'd Scanderbeg, whose mighty Valour against the Turks is Celebrated in History: With a small Army for many Years, he oppos'd the whole Turkish Power, and gain'd 22 Battles over them. At his Death he left his Country to the Venetians, but they were not able to maintain the Inland part of it, which was soon reduc'd by Mahomet II. whose Successors have held it for the last two Ages. The People are eminently Valiant, and their Horses exceeding Swift, so that their Cavalry are made use of by Turks. The chief Towns are Scutari, Scodra, Turc. Iscodar the Metropolis, is seated on a Rock, near a Lake, whence Issues the River Boiana, 25 miles North from the Venetian Gulph, about 20 from the Frontiers of Dalmatia, and 70 from Ragusa to the East, 240 from Saloniki to the West, and about 40 from the Mountains to the South. Baudrand says, It was the Seat of the ancient Kings of Illyricum: It is now a good large City, defended with a Castle seated on a Hill, and has been for these 200 Years Subject to the Turks. But the Christians have however a Bishop here, and some Churches.

Ducagni, Ducagnium, stands on the East side of the River Drino, 25 miles from Scutari to the East.

Alessio, Lissus, stands on the same River, 30 miles below Ducagni, near its Mouth into the Adriatick Sea, and forms a Bay now call'd the Gulph of Drino, anciently the Illyric Bay. It is by some reckon'd the Capital of Albania, and is particularly famous for the Sepulchre of Scanderbeg, who died here in 1467. and even the Turks have such veneration for him, that they carry away pieces of his Tomb for Relicks, and esteem it as a Charm to animate their Courage in Battle: It is fenced with a Castle, and is the Seat of a Bishop; but Subject to the Turks.

Dolcigno, Dulcinium, Olcinium, seu Ulcinium, is a safe Port Town, with a Castle, seated on the Gulf of Venice, 30 miles South-West from Scutari, and 40 West from Alessio.

Antivari, Antibarum, another Port Town seated on a Rock, 10 miles West from Dolcigno.

Croya, Croia, or Crua, by Brietius still the Metropolis of Albania, is an impregnable and inaccessible Fort, seated on the River Lizane, 30 miles South from Alessio, and as many East from the Sea. By reason of its Strength it was chosen by Scanderbeg, for his place of Residence, and by him strongly defended against the frequent Attacks of the Turks; but a few Years after his Death they took it.

Durazzo, Drazzi, the Dyrrhachium of the Romans, and Epidamnus more anciently; is a noted Sea Port on the Gulph of Venice, at the Mouth of the River Argentaro, 20 miles South from the Gulph of Drino, and 40 South-West from Alessio: It is a large, and was formerly a very fair City; Memorable for the Exile of Cicero in it, and the Landing of Pompey (when he retir'd before Cæsar) from Brundisium in Italy, over against which it stands, and this was therefore the common Passage thither. In early times, viz. A. U. C. 315. this City was Besieg'd by a Company of Banditti or Corfairs, and the Citizens implor'd the assistance of the Corinthians, who were defeated by the Corfairs, and these assisted by the Athenians, which gave occasion to the Corinthian War, and became at last the Leaven as it were of the great Peloponnesian War, so famous in the Greek History. Latterly it has been Subject to the Turks, since the time of Bajazet II. who took it, but it is not much Inhabited by reason of the unwholsomeness of the Air.

Albanopoli, an Inland Town seated not far from the head of the River Drino, 70 miles East from Durazzo, and as many South-East from Ducagni, was anciently the Capital of Albania, but now destroy'd and but a small Town.

Ocryda, Lychnidas, Turc. Guistandel, seated upon a Lake of the same Name, whence issues the River

Drino, 25 miles South from Albanopoli, and 80 South-East from Durazzo; an Archbishop's See; but now Subject to the Turks.

La Valona, Aulon, Procl. Aulon Navalis, stands on the Mouth of the Gulph of Venice, 40 miles from Durazzo, and 60 from the Gulph of Drino to the South, and 50 from Otrida to the West. It is a very capacious Port, and was formerly a place of Strength, but the Turks took it from the Venetian, and held it till the late War, when in the Year 1690. they deserted it, upon the taking of Canina by the Venetians, and the appearance of their Army before it.

Over against Valona, about 2 Leagues to Sea, stands the Rocky Island of Saseno, a deserted place, and frequented by none but Turkish Pirates.

E P I R O S, or Canina.

On the South of Albania, along the Coast of the Ionian Sea, lies Epirus (call'd by some Albania Inferior, and by others Canina, which Name others restrain to the North-part of Epirus) having Theffaly on the North-East, and Acroia on the South-East. It is from South-East to North-West near 100 miles in Length, and about 60 in Breadth. It is divided from Albania by the Mountains Clamusa cūm, Mon-

20 miles South from Butrinto; the Venetians gave the Inhabitants the Two Islands on the South of Corfu, call'd Pachsu, and Anti-Pachsu, wherein is very Fat Pasture.

Larta, or Ambracia, Ambracia, and Ata. It grew up out of the Ruins of the Ancient City Ambracia, sometime the Regal Seat of the Kings of Epirus; others make Ambracia a different Place. It is seated at the bottom of the Sinus Ambrochianus now Gulf of Larta, 20 miles from the Sea, 60 from Butrinto, and 140 from Durazzo to the South-East, 60 from Lepanto to the North-West, and 200 from Saloniki to the South-West.

Preveza, Seated at the Mouth of the Gulf, 20 Miles West from Larta, and 40 South-East from the Island Corfu, stands in the place of the Ancient City Nicopolis. It was a place of Strength, and possess'd by the Turks till the Year 1684. when the Venetian General Morosini took it, and by the Treaty of Carlowitz it was agreed to be demolished.

Over-against it on the Mouth of the same Bay stands Actium, now Cape Figalo, Famous for the Naval Battle between Marc Antony and Augustus, formerly an Eminent City, wherein stood a Temple of Apollo, now an ordinary Sea-Port and Promontory.

The Island CORFU, Corcyra, or Phæacia, lies in the Ionian Sea, over-against the Coast of Epirus, by his Name, and mention'd in History. And to his Sons are attributed the Honour of giving Name to many parts of Greece, as Hellen to Hellas; Doris to the Dorians, near Mount Parnassus. Xuthus his Third Son was Father to Achæus Founder of the Achæans, and Ion from whom the Ionians or Inhabitants of Attica.

The Modern Thessalians are for the most part Christians, but Subject to the Turk, remarkable for their Cruelty and Warlike Disposition. The Extent of Thessaly is about 120 miles either way, and the chief Towns in it are,

Larissa, Turc. Asababa, the Capital, seated on the Banks of the River Peneus, about 40 miles above its Mouth into the Gulph of Saloniki, 80 from Saloniki to the South, 50 from the Island Negropont to the North-West, and 100 from Lepanto to the North-East, and very near Mount Olympus. It is one of the most flourishing Cities of Greece; and hath been sometime honour'd with the Grand Seignior's Residence (especially during the War of Candia) who hath a Palace here in the upper-part of the Town. It is the See of an Archbishop, and adorn'd with good Buildings, particularly a very fair Stone Bridge of Nine Arches over the River. This was the Birth place of the famous Achilles: It was taken by the Bugarians in 937. and by the Turks in the 13th. Century.

Tricala stands upon the same River Peneus, about 50 miles West from Larissa, and was formerly Armiro, Eretria, at the bottom of the same Bay, and gives the present Name to it, being stil'd in the Modern Maps Golfo del Armiro, stands over-against Demetriada, 20 miles South from it, and 25 North from Negropont, is an Ancient place, being mention'd by Strabo, Thucydides, Polybius, Stephanus, Livy, and others; and by some reckon'd the Port whence the Argonauts set Sail; and that it was here that Xerxes Fleet was so sorely shatter'd by Tempest, that Greece was deliver'd from his intended Invasion.

Zeitton, or Zeitton, Thebe Pthioica, or Thessalica, seated upon the Sinum Malicum, gives the Modern Name to that Bay which runs between, into the Land of Thessaly over-against Negropont, being now call'd Golfo de Zeitton, it stands 30 miles from Armiro, and near 60 from the River Peneus to the South, and 30 from the Shoar of Negropont to the West.

Capo di san Georgia, Magnesia Promontorium, a Cape with a Sea-Town on the North of the Golfo del Armiro, 20 miles from it, and 30 East from Pegasa, and not far from the Mount Pelion.

Before we leave Thessaly, we must take notice of Mount Olympus so Famed in Antiquity for its height, the Top reaching above the middle Region of the Air. it stands on the North of Larissa, and is a continued Ridge for many miles.

Ossa, more to the South on the other side the River Peneus, and Pelion somewhat more to the East are Two other Notable Mountains. And between Olympus and Ossa on the Banks of the River Peneus

Sometime call'd Emathia, from Emathius one of its Kings; took its present Name from Macedon, the Grandson of Deucalion, as Solinus, or more particularly. Son of Jupiter and Thyis the Daughter of Deucalion, as Stephanus; but by Cluverius rather thought to be deriv'd from Mygdonia, a Province of this Country. Was a considerable Kingdom Founded by Ceraunius, and of above 400 Years standing before Philip extended its Bounds, and added Thessaly with part of Epirus and Albania to it; but his Son Alexander, firman'd the Great, rais'd it to the highest pitch of Grandeur; for he not only subdu'd all Greece and Thrace, but also conquer'd Asia, Egypt and Lybia, so that his Empire extended from the Danube to the River Indus, and from the Black to the Red Sea.

The ancient Bounds of Macedonia propria, were Thrace and Mount Scodrus on the North, which divided it from the Upper Mæsia and Illyricum; on the West the Adriatick Sea; on the South Epirus and Thessaly. Its ancient Division we have already set down; but when Paulus Æmilius the Roman General had overcome Perseus the last Macedonian King (which happen'd A. M. 3782. U. C. 585. after the first erecting this Monarchy by Ceraunius. 625. and before Christ 165 Years) and made this a Province of the Empire; it was divided into four Provinces or Regions, Teste Livio: The first, which border'd on Thrace, was subdivided into four Parts, Edonis, Odmentice, Bisaltia and Sintica, seated on the River Strymon. In the second Region were nine Parts, Orbelia, Almopia, part of Pæonia, Feria, Pelagonia, Mygdonia, Amphraxis, Chalcidicia and Praxia. In the third were six Parts, Pieria, Botissa, Emathia, Lyncæstis, part of Pæonia and Æstria. In the fourth and last Region, which was the Western part, and lay on the Ionian or Adriatick Sea, were twelve or rather ten Parts, Albania, Taulantia, Elymiotis, Ecdetis, Dassareta, Parthyæi, Deuripus, Pelagonia, Stymphalia and Orestis.

The present Macedon is bounded on the West by Albania, on the East by several Bays of the Archipelago, on the North by Romania and Bulgaria, on the South by Thessaly. It is Rich in divers Mines of Gold; abounds with Corn, Pasture, Cattle, Venison, and in some Parts Wine and Oyl. Here are many Mountains and Rivers, but none very Large or Remarkable, except Mount Athos, whereof we shall speak in its place. By the Turks, Macedon is divided into three Parts, viz. 1. Jambli, which contains the first and second Region of the Romans. 2. Cornenolitari, part of the third Region. And 3. Macedon, which is the greatest part of the third Region. The chief Cities are,

Thessalonica, commonly call'd Salonichi, heretofore the Capital of the second Region of Macedon, now the Metropolis of the whole, and the Seat of the Turkish Præfect, stands on the Bottom of a Bay, to which it gives Name, in the Latitude of 41. 20. Philippi or Filippo, a City at the foot of Mount Pangæus, on the confines of Thrace, 20 or 30 miles North from Amphipolis, is famous for the Battle fought in its neighbouring Fields, where Brutus and Cassius the Murderers of Cæsar were defeated by Marc Antony and Octavius. Durazzo, Drazzi, the Dyrrhachium of the Romans, and Epidamnus more anciently; is a noted Sea Port on the Gulph of Venice, at the Mouth of the River Argentaro, 20 miles South from the Gulph of Drino, and 40 South-West from Alessio: It is a large, and was formerly a very fair City; Memorable for the Exile of Cicero in it, and the Landing of Pompey (when he retir'd before Cæsar) from Brundisium in Italy, over against which it stands, and this was therefore the common Passage thither. In early times, viz. A. U. C. 315. this City was Besieg'd by a Company of Banditti or Corfsairs, and the Citizens implor'd the assistance of the Corinthians, who were defeated by the Corfsairs, and these assisted by the Athenians, which gave occasion to the Corinthian War, and became at last the Leaven as it were of the great Peloponnesian War, so famous in the Greek History. Latterly it has been Subject to the Turks, since the time of Bajazet II. who took it, but it is not much Inhabited by reason of the unwholsomeness of the Air.

Albanopoli, an Inland Town seated not far from the head of the River Drino, 70 miles East from Durazzo, and as many South-East from Ducagni, was anciently the Capital of Albania, but now destroy'd and but a small Town.

Ocryda, Lychnidas, Turc. Guistandel, seated upon a Lake of the same Name, whence issues the River

Drino, 25 miles South from Albanopoli, and 80 South-East from Durazzo: an Archbishop's See; but now Subject to the Turks.

La Valona, Aulon, Procl. Aulon Navalis, stands on the Mouth of the Gulph of Venice, 40 miles from Durazzo, and 60 from the Gulph of Drino to the South, and 50 from Otrida to the West. It is a very capacious Port, and was formerly a place of Strength, but the Turks took it from the Venetians, and held it till the late War, when in the Year 1690. they deserted it, upon the taking of Canina by the Venetians, and the appearance of their Army before it.

Over against Valona, about 2 Leagues to Sea, stands the Rocky Island of Safeno, a deserted place, and frequented by none but Turkish Pirates.

E P I R U S, or Canina.

On the South of Albania, along the Coast of the Ionian Sea, lies Epirus call'd by some Albania Inferior, and by others Canina, which Name others restrain to the North-part of Epirus having Theffaly on the North-East, and Achaia on the South-East. It is from South-East to North-West near 100 miles in Length, and about 60 in Breadth. It is divided from Albania by the Mountains Chimera, clim, Montes Arceceramii, or the Ceraunian Mountains, which by reason of their great height were often torn by Thunder; and from Theffaly by the Mountains, Megano, clim, Mens Pindus, and from Achaia by the River Abelcus, now Catchi. The Soil is good, and especially on Mount Chimera the Cattle are exceedingly Fatned.

This Country was Anciently Subject to its own Princes; then was United to the Kingdom of Macedon, afterwards Subjected to the Romans, and by them very much Ravag'd by reason the Inhabitants often Revolted. Then again to its own Princes, and now to the Turks, except some Places which the Venetians have regain'd in the late War.

In the Ancient Account of Albania, this comprehended the Provinces of Chacnia, Theffretia, Almena, Dalopia, Amphibolia, and Acarminia. And in the middle of it in the Province of Theffretia, stood the famous City Dodona, wherein were Trees that Answer'd, and Vocal Oaks, as the Poets relate. The chief Towns at present are, Chimera, a very strong Town, Seated in the North part of Epirus on the Mouth of the Gulf of Venice, near the Confines of Albania, 50 miles from Durazzo to the South, and 20 from the Island Corfu to the North. It is a well-built City, and a Place of Trade, the Capital of a Territory of the same Name, and the See of a Bishop, but Subject to the Turks.

Butrinto, Butthretum, five, Butthretus, a Port Town over-against the Island Corfu 35 miles South East from Chimera, 100 from the Mountains to the South, and 60 from Larta to the North-East. It was formerly a considerable, but now an ordinary Town inhabited chiefly by Fishermen, by reason of the abundance of Fish in the Bay to which it gives Name. It is the See of a Bishop, but has been Subject to the Turks above 100 Years.

Perga, Torone, a Port-Town, with a Castle Subject to the Venetians, stands also over-against Corfu

20 miles South from Butrinto; the Venetians gave the Inhabitants the Two Islands on the South of Corfu, call'd Pachsu, and Anti-Pachsu, wherein is very Fat Pasture.

Larta, or Ambracia, Ambracia, and Ata. It grew up out of the Ruins of the Ancient City Ambracia, sometime the Regal Seat of the Kings of Epirus; others make Ambracia a different Place. It is seated at the bottom of the Sinus Ambrochiensis now Gulf of Larta, 20 miles from the Sea, 60 from Butrinto, and 140 from Durazzo to the South-East, 60 from Lepanto to the North-West, and 200 from Saloniki to the South-West.

Preveza, Seated at the Mouth of the Gulf, 20 Miles West from Larta, and 40 South East from the Island Corfu, stands in the place of the Ancient City Nicopolis. It was a place of Strength, and possess'd by the Turks till the Year 1681. when the Venetian General Moresini took it, and by the Treaty of Carlowitz it was agreed to be demolished.

Over-against it on the Mouth of the same Bay stands Actium, now Cape Figalo, Famous for the Naval Battle between Marc Antony and Augustus, formerly an Eminent City, wherein stood a Temple of Apollo, now an ordinary Sea-Port and Promontory.

The Island CORFU, Corcyra, ut et Phacaria, lies in the Ionian Sea, over-against the Coast of Epirus, but a few Leagues from it, and 30 Leagues from the Coast of Italy, extending from South-East to North-West about 40 miles. It was anciently Inhabited by a sort of Cersairs, and the People are mention'd in History, particularly in the Corinthian War above-mention'd. The Island is possess'd by the Venetians, to whom it has been Subject ever since the Year 1382. and enjoys a most fertile Soil, producing Corn, Wine, Oyl, Honey, Flax, Salt, Medicinal Herbs, &c. It is divided into Four parts, and besides many Towns and Villages hath one good City, viz.

Corfu, Seated on the Eastern Coast over-against Butrinto, and in the Latitude of 40 Degrees; it has a very Capacious Port, and is guarded by Two Castles.

T H E S S A L Y, Theffalia.

The Country next adjoyning to Epirus on the East between that and the Aegean Sea, and Gulf of Salonichi, is Theffaly, anciently called Aemonia, and Pyrrhaea, according to Briettius. A large part of it is now called Fanna, and the other part Comenolitani. Macedon bounds it on the North, and Achaia, or Livadia on the South. From both which it is divided by Mountains, and also from Epirus by Mount Pindus, so that it is surrounded with them except on the East, where it opens to the Sea. It enjoys a Fertile Soil, and Healthy Air, and yields all sorts of Grain and Delicious Fruits, such as Oranges, Lemons, Figs, Pomegranates, Grapes, Olives, &c. The Ancient Inhabitants were Noted for their Courtesy, but accused of Gluttony and Sorcery. In the Tradition of those Times they were accounted the first that tam'd Horses, and set out Ships. Demetrian Reign'd here contemporary, with Cecrops the first King of Athens, in whose time happen'd the Deluge (by the overflowing of the River Penens) known by

by his Name, and mention'd in History. And to his Sons are attributed the Honour of giving Name to many parts of Greece. as Hellen to Hellas; Doris to the Dorians. near Mount Parnassus. Xuthus his Third Son was Father to Acheus Founder of the Acheans, and son from whom the Ionians or Inhabitants of Attica.

The Modern Thessalians are for the most part Christians. but Subject to the Turk, remarkable for their Cruelty and Warlike Disposition. The Extent of Thessaly is about 120 miles either way, and the chief Towns in it are,

Larissa, Turc. Asababa, the Capital, seated on the Banks of the River Peneus, about 40 miles above its Mouth into the Gulph of Saloniki, 80 from Saloniki to the South, 50 from the Island Negropont to the North-West, and 100 from Lepanto to the North-East, and very near Mount Olympus. It is one of the most flourishing Cities of Greece; and hath been sometime honour'd with the Grand Seignior's Residence (specially during the War of Candia) who hath a Palace here in the upper-part of the Town. It is the See of an Archbishop, and adorn'd with good Buildings, particularly a very fair Stone Bridge of Nine Arches over the River. This was the Birth place of the famous Achilles. It was taken by the Bulgarians in 981. and by the Turks in the 15th. Century.

Tricali stands upon the same River Peneus, about 50 miles West from Larissa, and was formerly Notable for a fine Temple Dedicated to Esculapius.

Zanna, from which all this part of the Country is Nam'd, is a well built City, Seated on a Lake of the same Name, 40 miles from Tricali, and as many North from Lepanto.

Scotusa, a small City, and the See of a Bishop, is seated 18 miles West from Larissa. In this place there was an Oracle of Old not inferior to that of Delphi. And near it Q. Flaminius with the Roman Army obtain'd a signal Victory over Philip the Son of Demetrius.

Pharsalus, Farfa, Famous for the Battle fought in its Fields between Pompey and Cesar, wherein the former was intirely Defeated; whence Lucan's Poem of this Battle is Entituled Pharsalia; is seated 30 miles South from Larissa, as many North from Zeitton, and is the See of an Archbishop. But we dare not determine this to be the Ancient Pharsalus, because Cuverius places that in Estiotis, and then it ought to lie more to the Westward, and Laurenburger in his Map places it in Pelasgia, 50 miles North from Larissa, whereas Saxson, and the Modern Maps place Pharsa, as we have said in the mid-way between Larissa and Zeitton, and about 20 West from the Gulph of Armiso.

Demetriada, Demetrias, 50 milest South-East from Larissa, seated upon the Gulf which is sometimes call'd by its Name, otherwise Nam'd Sinus Pelasgius, or Pegasicus from the City

Pegasa, now Volo, on the North-side of the same Bay, 20 miles East from Demetriada, 50 East from Larissa, and 40 North from the Island Negropont. It hath a spacious Harbour, and was a strong Fortrefs after the Ancient manner, and in the late War made use of by the Turks, for a Magazine for the Provisions they gather'd in the Neighbouring Provinces. till General Morosini took it, and found there a vast quantity of Victuals, and 27 Pieces of Cannon; which having carried off, he set Fire to the Magazines, Houses, and Mosques, and demolish'd the Walls.

Armiso, Eretria, at the bottom of the same Bay, and gives the present Name to it, being build in the Modern Maps Golfo del Armiso, stands over-against Demetriada, 20 miles South from it, and 25 North from Negropont, is an Ancient place, being mention'd by Strabo, Thucydides, Polybius, Stephanus, Livy, and others; and by some reckon'd the Port whence the Argonauts set Sail; and that it was here that Xerxes Fleet was so sorely shatter'd by Tempest, that Greece was deliver'd from his intended Invasion.

Zeitton, or Zeitton, Thebe Pthioica, or Thessalica, seated upon the Sinum Malicum, gives the Modern Name to that Bay which runs between, into the Land of Thessaly over-against Negropont, being now call'd Golfo de Zeitton, it stands 30 miles from Armiso, and near 60 from the River Peneus to the South, and 30 from the Shoar of Negropont to the West.

Capo di san Georgia, Magnesia Promontorium, a Cape with a Sea-Town on the North of the Golfo del Armiso, 20 miles from it, and 30 East from Pegasa, and not far from the Mount Pelion.

Before we leave Thessaly, we must take notice of Mount Olympus so Famed in Antiquity for its height, the Top reaching above the middle Region of the Air it stands on the North of Larissa, and is a continued Ridge for many miles.

Ossa, more to the South on the other side the River Peneus, and Pelion somewhat more to the East are Two other Notable Mountains. And between Olympus and Ossa on the Banks of the River Peneus, lie the fruitful and pleasant Valleys of Tempe, ACHAIA; HELLAS, sive Grecia Propria, hodie LIVADIA.

This Province tho' the last in our Description, may be reckon'd the most considerable part of Greece, as comprehending the famous Cities of Thebes, Athens, Delphi, Pythia, &c. also the Mountain Parnassus, Helicon, and other places most Eminent in Ancient History. And it is plain that it was Anciently esteem'd the principal part by its Name being Communicated to the Whole; and the Ancient Geographers by way of Excellence term this Grecia Propria. Its Name of Achaia seems to have been borrow'd from a small Province in Peloponesus so call'd. And the present, of Lavadia, is most probably taken from the Town so call'd, of which we shall speak in its Place.

Achaia lies on the South of Thessaly, from which it is divided by Mount Oeta, now Lacha, having on the South, the Morea, divided from it by the Corinthicus Sinus, now Golfo di Lepanto, the Corinthian Isthmus, and the Mare Saronicum, now Golfo di Engia. On the West the Ionian Sea; on the N. W. by Epirus; and on the East the Aegean Sea and the Euripan Strait, which separates it from Negropont, and is thence denominat'd Golfo de Negropont. It is a Pleasant and Fruitful Country, extending from East to West along the Sea-Coast about 50 miles.

It was divided, as we have shewn in our Table of Ancient Greece, into Eight Parts: At present being Subject to the Turks, who are not very Polite, we cannot pretend to set down any Division; but but the Principal Towns are,

THEBES,

THEBES, Thebe, Surnam'd Beotica, being the Capital of that Province and Ogygia, from Ogyges the King of Beotia; also Heptapylus, from its seven Gates; at present by the Inhabitants call'd Teiva, and by others Striva, or Strides, as it is written in the common Maps; stands on a rising Ground near the River Asopo, 20 miles from the Gulph of Negropont to the South-West, 40 from the Isthmus of Corinth to the North-East, and 150 miles from Lepanto to the East, in the Latitude of 38 Degrees, 22 Minutes. It was anciently a very considerable City, and with the Country about it, one of the most powerful States of Greece. At present, as Sir Geo. Wheeler informs us, it is reduc'd to a small Town, and hardly Inhabited but in that Place, which was the Castle of Cadmus; so that tho' the extent of it may be near 3 miles in Circuit, the Inhabitants are not reckon'd above 3 or 4000, whereof the greatest part are Christians, they having several Churches, and an Archbishop, whose Cathedral is Nam'd Panagia Chrysophoritia, whereas the Turks have only two Mosques. As to its ancient State, 'tis said to have been built by Cadmus, who, as the Poets Story, being sent by his Father Agenor in quest of his Sister Europa, carry'd away by Jupiter, after many fruitless Journies, coming to Beotia, he was admonish'd by the Oracle, to build a City, to which he added a Fort, which always after bore his Name. Many Stories are related of Cadmus, that he Kill'd a Dragon, whose Teeth being Sowed in the Ground, grew up Armed Men; that he was the Son of a King of Sidoniz, whereas in Truth he was but the Son of a Cock; that he brought Letters into Greece. Some say he had a large Posterity that Reigned after him; others that he lived to see the end of his Family, and he with his Wife, were turn'd into Serpents; and that Amphion expell'd him out of Thebes, and built the Walls of it by the Harmony of his Lute. Thus far the Poets. Ancient History deduces the Princes of Thebes from Cadmus, and name Amphion as the 5th Prince, who expell'd the Line of Cadmus and Wall'd the City. His Son Lagus succeeded, and him Oedipus, whose Story is well known; his Sons Eteocles, and Polynices, quarrelling, caused the famous Siege of Thebes. Cadmus is reckon'd to have been Contemporary with Josuah, and the Theban Siege to have happen'd 37 Years after that of Troy. King Philip of Macedon took the City, and put the Garrison to the Sword; and afterwards Alexander quite destroy'd it, leaving no House standing, but that of the Poet Pindar. Cassander, the Son of Antipater, and King of Macedon, Rebuilt it. Hercules, and the God Bacchus, as well as the Poet Pindar, are said to be Natives of this Place; as also the two great Captains, Epaminondas and Pelopidas. But of all its ancient Grandeur, there now only remain some Vestigia of the Cadmean Fort, and some Inscriptions that certify its former State. In the Suburbs is seen a most clear Fountain, suppos'd to be the ancient Dirce. It must be noted, that there were other Cities of the same name, which are mention'd in History, as Thebes in Cicilia, which was Sack'd by the Greeks, when they went against Troy. Thebes in Aegypt, near Troy, the largest of that Name; it had 100 Gates, and gave Name to the Province Thebesus. Another in Ionia: Another in Theffaly, &c.

Aulis, a Sea-port over-against Negropont, about 20 miles East from Thebes, was famous for its Harbour, and was the Rendezvous of the Grecian Fleet when they Sailed to the Siege of Troy.

Orcomene, Orchemenus, formerly celebrated for its Horses, stands 30 miles West from Thebes, and near the Centre of the Country, a few miles North from the Lake of Thebes, anciently Copias Lacus. Here was a very rich Temple, Dedicated to the Graces, now a strong Castle.

Livadia, Libadia, whence the Country is Nam'd, stands on the Gulph of Lepanto, about 20 miles West from the Isthmus of Corinth. Here was anciently the Altar of Trophonius, celebrated for its Oracle. It is Inhabited chiefly by Greeks and Jews, who drive a Trade in Corn, &c.

Plataea, a City often mention'd in History, but especially on account of the notable Battle fought between Mardonius the Persian General, and Pausanias the Lacedemonian, wherein the vast Army of Persians were Routed, and 40000 Kill'd, by a handful of Greeks, which finish'd the Ruine of Xerxes. It stands between Thebes and Athens.

ATHENS, Athens, by the Turks Athina, corruptly Saitina, Satinas, and Satines, as it is written in the Modern Maps, is seated near the Sea, 40 miles from Thebes, and a little more from Negropont to the South, 40 miles East from the Isthmus of Corinth, and about the same distance West from Cape Raphai, the utmost Eastern Land of Achaia. It was anciently the Metropolis of Greece, as well as the Capital of Attica, and one of the most famous and flourishing Cities of the Universe; whether you consider its Antiquity, Power, Grandeur of its Republick, Senate and Academy; or especially that it was a long time the Seat of the Muses, and the Nursery of all Arts and Sciences, which made it Renown'd throughout all Nations. And we have Cicero's Testimony, that the Athenians were perfect Masters of Politicks, Philosophy, and Husbandry: That they were the first Founders of Law and Equity: And that they transmitted these things to the rest of Mankind: It is at present the Capital of a Duchy, which before the Turks took it, was subject to its own Dukes, and had the good Fortune to escape the Turkish Fury, better than the other Cities of Greece, being still a good large City, well Inhabited, and place of a pretty good Trade for Wine, Oil, Fish, &c. the Town standing but 2 miles from the Sea, call'd the Gulph of Engia, which opens to the Archipelago. It is Water'd with the Rivers Cephissus, and Ilissus; whence by Aqueducts under Ground, the Water is convey'd into the City, to the publick Fountains, and private Houses. The SOIL round it is exceeding fruitful, and yields very rich Wines, incomparable Olives, as well as Corn, and Pasture in good plenty. And the AIR is so pure, that when the Plague rages round it, Athens is Healthful. The City is encompass'd on the North-side with the Mountain Parnus; on the North-East with that of Pentilicis 6 miles off; and the Hills Coridalia now Daphnibouni, on the North-West; and Hemattus, or Tellibouni, on the South-East; and on the Sea-side stand the Citadel, a mile and an half in length, but it is not very strong. Near the Town stands a pointed Rock, now call'd from the Chappel on the Top St. George's Mountain, which is probably the Anchesmus of Pausanias: The River Ilissus flows round it by the Hill, heretofore nam'd Museum, from the Poet Museus, whence it falls into the Cephissus which pass passes through a Wood of Olive Trees, at least 6 miles long now the greatest Wealth and Ornament of the Athenian Plain. In the Town the Houses stand very close, and the Streets are narrow. The Haven formerly known by the name of Portus Phalerus, was formerly a very good one, but now much choak'd up with Sand. The Inhabitants are reckoned about 10000, whereof three parts are always Christian Greeks and no Jews are admitted. Christianity was in a pretty good State here, when the Town was under the Turks, the Archbishop having then a Revenue of 4000 Dollars per Annum, and the Christians enjoyed no less than 200 Churches in and about this City, besides several Convents. The Turks had 5 Molques, whereof one is the ancient Temple of Minerva.

As to the ancient State of Athens, we are told it was Founded by Cecrops, who Nam'd the Town Cecropia, and Reign'd King there 50 Years; this is suppos'd to have happen'd soon after the Deucalian Flood, 800 Years before the building of Rome, and 550 before the Birth of Christ; He Enacted many Excellent Laws, Erected the Council Areopagus, afterwards so celebrated in the World, and added other Cities to his Kingdom; which daily encreas'd in Wealth, Grandeur and Strength. In the time of Erichonius the 4th King, the Name of the City was alter'd to Athens, in Honour of Minerva, whom the Greeks call'd by that Name, and to whom the City was dedicated. It continued a Monarchy for near 50 Years, till Codrus by his singular Magnanimity, threw himself among the Enemies in Battle, that by his Death he might save his Country; the Oracle having predicted that the party who lost their King, should be Victors. After which the Athenians would not admit of a King, that no Man might enjoy the Honour that Codrus had had, whose Memory they so much Reverenced. They were afterwards Govern'd by Magistrates, call'd Archontes, under whom they most Valiantly defended their Liberties and Territories against all Enemies, even the numerous Armies of Persians under Darius and Xerxes not excepted. The Lacedemonians were their constant Enemy, with whom they contended for the Sovereignty of Greece. The Spartans once took the City and set 30 Tyrants over it, but they soon threw off that Yoke, and with the assistance of the Thebans under Epaminondas, entirely defeated them, and thereby extended their Dominion exceedingly. But at last growing into Luxury, they were Effeminated, and became a Prey to the Macedonian Monarch. Under the Romans they were Protected and enjoy'd Liberty; except when Sylla to revenge their siding with Mithridates, Plunder'd the City, and put the Inhabitants to the Sword. Among the Emperors, Constantine the Great was their peculiar Patron and Benefactor, Honouring their Governour with the Title of Arch-Duke: And Constantine II. gave them several Islands in the Archipelago. In the time of Arcadius, they were miserably Haras'd and Pillag'd by the Goths, and underwent divers Revolutions afterwards, till at last it was taken by the Turks, in 1455. and remain'd subject to them, till the Year 1687, when the Venetians happily retook it after a short Siege. The Christian Religion was planted here by St. Paul, as we are told in Sacred Scripture, and one of the Areopagus, with other Persons of the first Quality were his Converts.

The present Vestigia shew the ancient Splendor of its Buildings. Sir George Wheeler gives us an Account of those Monuments, too large to insert here, having only room to name the chief of 'em; which are the Acropolis, a Fortress built on a Rock, on the West-end of the Town, with inaccessible Precipices on every side but the North West, where you mount by a steep Ascent to the Entrance. This is suppos'd to have been the first City, round which the Buildings encreas'd, and this serv'd afterwards for a Cattle, as it still does, but is now separate from the Town, the Houses about it being fallen down: Toward the bottom of the Hill are seen the remains of ancient Walls, suppos'd to be those built by Theseus, when he enlarg'd the City. The Temple of Minerva, the most beautiful Piece of Antiquity, stands in the Citadel: The Theatre of Bacchus, on the South-side of the Cattle: The Magnificent Pillars, Gate, and Aqueduct of the Emperor Adrian: The Stadium, where the Publick Games call'd Panathenæa were exercis'd, as also the publick Races, Fighting of Wild-Beasts, &c. The Ruins of the Areopagus: The Odeum, or Musick Theatre: The Temples of Theseus, Augustus, and Jupiter Olympus: The Tower of Andronicus Cyrrhæstes, or Temple of the Eight Winds: The Phanari, or Lanthorn of Demosthenes: These are still to be seen; but the Academy where Plato taught his Philosophy; the Portico, where Zeno the Cynick held his Lectures; and the Lyceum which was the College where the incomparable Aristotle taught Philosophy, are all effac'd.

Marathon, still call'd Marathona, and Marafon, seated on the Gulph of Negropont, 40 miles North-East from Athens, and 60 South-East from Thebes, is now an ordinary Village, but formerly a considerable Town; memorable for the great Victory of the Athenians under Miltiades, over the Persians; wherein 11000 of the former beat 600000 of the latter, having Kill'd no less than 100000 of them. It is also mention'd by Ovid, on account of Theseus, who drag'd a Wild Bull through the Town, and Sacrific'd it to Apollo at Delphos.

Megara, Lisæa vel Lissa, anciently the Seat of a Monarch, and afterwards a Republick, who were considerable enough to maintain Wars against the Athenians and others, and Plant a Colony in Sicily; it was honour'd with the Birth of Euclid the great Mathematician, and gave Name to the Country round it; is now but a poor Village, seated about 10 miles from the Sea, 30 miles West from Athens, and 20 East from the Isthmus of Corinth. The Old City stood on two little Rocks, where some of its Footsteps remain, but at present it consists of about 3 or 400 sorry Huts rather than Houses, on one of those Rocks. The Turks had formerly a Veyvode here, but a Party of the Pirates that frequently infested these Coasts, carried him away, which has frighted all others from thence; so that none but Christians are its Inhabitants.

Eleusis, now call'd Lepina, a Sea-Town, 20 miles West from Athens, tho' now a poor Village, was formerly a considerable City, and sometime even Vied with Athens. But it has been so often pillag'd by Pirates, that it is now in a manner destitute of Inhabitants. The stately Temple of Ceres, made the City much resorted to, and the Ruins of it do still invite Travellers to Visit it; where are visible marks of a most superb Structure, all of a very fine white Marble, adorn'd with excellent Carvings and Statues.

Delphi, Sabona, now Castri, the Capital of Phocis, was anciently much Celebrated for its Temple and Oracle of Apollo; the Temple was a Magnificent Structure, enrich'd with innumerable Gifts, which render'd render'd it exceeding Glorious: In it was a dark Cave, where the Priestess Nam'd Pythia, and the Cave Pythium, sitting on a Tripod or Stool with three Legs, receiv'd the Inspiration of the God, Swelling, Foaming, and Raving, like one Possess'd, or Distracted: The Answers were always Ambiguous, and so Mysterious, that it was difficult to understand 'em; and yet it was plainer than others, for Hermias the Philosopher says, that those that did not understand the Answers at Dodona, came hither for an Explication. The Town of Casiri, which sprung out of the Ruins of Delphi, consists only of about 200 Houses, Inhabited most by Christians, who have 5 or 6 Churches, and the Turks but 1 Mosque. It is surrounded with craggy Rocks. Delphi stands in the middle of Greece, and by ancient Greeks call'd the Navel of the Earth, the Poets telling that Jupiter let fly two Eagles, one from the East, and the other from the West, that he might discover the middle, and those Eagles met at this Place. Near it stands the Famous Mountain Parnassus, Sacred to Apollo and the Muses; the high Cliffs of it appear in two points, which makes it to be call'd Biceps Parnassus, and between 'em the Water falls down after Rain or Snow in great abundance, and hath almost worn them asunder: And just below the Clift rises a Spring with a very plentiful Source of Water which is undoubtedly the ancient Castalis, wherein the Pythian Prophets and the Poets that pretended to Inspiration, us'd to Bath themselves, and drink of its Waters. It has Marble Steps at its descent, and Niches for Statues cut into the Rock. This Stream running down a steep Precipice, falls into the River Pleistos and separates Mount Cirphis from Parnassus, whence it runs by Crissa, and falls into the Bay of Salona.

Not far from Parnassus, but more Eastward, and reckon'd in the Limits of Beotia, stands Helicon, the other Mountain Consecrated to Apollo.

Lepanto, Naupactus aut Naupactum, now call'd Epaëtes by the Greeks, and Einebachri by the Turks, is the chief City on the Gulph, whereto it hath lately communicated its Name, tho' formerly it was denominat'd of Corinth. It stands near the Strait of the Dardanelis, 40 miles from Delphi, 80 from the Corinthian Isthmus, and 120 from Athens to the West, 120 from the Island Corfu to the South-East, and not above 8 Leagues from the opposite Shoar of the Morea to the North. It is built on the side of a high Hill, rising up from the Shoar, in four several Stages, between every one of which is a Wall, and at the bottom lies the Port, of Oval form, whose Mouth is so narrow that a Chain may be drawn cross it, and it is defended by a small Castle on each side with Cannon; and this Harbour is lin'd with Walls, which appear of ancient Structure; but the Port cannot admit large Ships, because the Mouth is shallow: Neither are the Christian Ships of bulk permitted to come up to the Castle, but lay at Patras, on the Peloponnesian Shoar. It is a place of Trade for Turky Leather, Oil, Tobacco, Rice, Barly, &c. And on each side of the Town, under the Mountain (which is probably the ancient Corax) fruitful Valleys are stretch'd out towards the Sea; that Westward is Planted with Olive-Trees, Vineyards, and Corn; and the other side is divided into Gardens of Oranges, Citrons and Limons; it is also Water'd with many fresh Streams that issue from the Mountain, and shadow'd with plain Trees: The Wine here is the best in Greece. This is the Account Sir George Wheeler gives us of this Place, which must needs be very Pleasant, and would undoubtedly be well Inhabited, if the Turks did not treat the Christians ill, inasmuch that the Archbishop is oblig'd to live at Arta. The Emperor Manuel Paleologus, gave this City to the Venetians, in the Year 1408. who Fortify'd it and made it so strong, that in 1475 it was able to resist Mahomet the Great, who Besieg'd it with an Army of 30000 Men. But Bajazet II. in 1498, partly by the Power of 150000 Men, and partly by Corrupting the Governor, took it. In the late War. Anno 1697, the Venetians retook it, after a few Hours Battery; having just before dishearten'd the Turks, by the taking of Petras, the Dardanelis, and other Places: But by the Treaty of Carlowitz in 1699, the Venetians were oblig'd to quit Lepanto, and demolish the Castle call'd Romelia.

Not far from hence happen'd a most memorable Sea-Fight between the Christians and Turks, on the 2d. of Octob. 1571. Wherein the Venetian Fleet consisting of 210 Gallies, 6 Galeasses, and 23 great Transport Ships, obtain'd a most signal Victory over the Turkish Fleet, consisting of 200 Gallies, and 70 Frigats, whereof 130 Gallies were taken, many more burnt and sunk, 30000 of their Men kill'd, and near 20000 Christian Slaves set at Liberty; with the loss of only 8000 Men, on the Christian side.

A few Leagues to the West of Lepanto, and 20 Leagues East from the Island Cefalonia, is the Strait of the Gulph of Lepanto, guarded by two Castles. The two Promontories that make the Strait were anciently Nam'd Rhium and Anti-Rhium, the former on the Peloponnesian side, now nam'd the Castle of Morea or Patras, and the latter on the Achaian Shoar now call'd Capa Moliceo, and the Castle Romelia. These Castles are strong and well provided with Cannon; and are Nam'd the Dardanelis of Lepanto, in allusion to those of the Hellepont.

CHAP. III.

OF PELOPONNESUS, or the MOREA.

ON the South of Achaia lies the Peninsula of the Morea, join'd to the Continent by the small Isthmus denominat'd from Corinth, because that City stands upon it; but otherwise surrounded by the Sea. On the North the Gulphs of Lepanto and Engia flow between it and Achaia; the Gulph of Patras between it and Cefalonia on the North-West; the Ionian Sea on the South-West; the Mer de Sapienza, and the Sea of Candia on the South; and the Aegean Sea on the East. It lies between 36 and 38 Degrees of Latitude, and between 40 and 44 Degrees of Longitude, comprehending about 150 Miles in Breadth.

This Country hath been known by different Names in several Ages: It was at first call'd Argos, with the Addition of Achaicum, to distinguish from Argos Peloponicum or Thessaly. Afterwards Ægialia, from Ægius a King of the Sicyonians: Then Apia, from Apis the third King of Argos: And at length Peloponnesus, from Pelops, the Son of Tantalus who brought a Colony hither, out of Phrygia, and Reign'd there for some time. The Modern Name of Morea, is said to have been deriv'd from Morus, a Mulberry Tree, call'd in Greek Μορέα, either because the Form of it resembles the Form of that Leaf, or because those Trees grow plentifully here. Others make it deriv'd from Romea, by a Change of the Letters. And again, others say, the Moors gave it the Name.

This Peninsula is the most Noble of all Europe, whether we consider the Courage and Virtue of its ancient Inhabitants, the Splendor of their Cities, and Power of their States, or the Fertility of its SOIL, which produces plenty of Corn, Wine, Oyl, most delicious Fruits, and all that can contribute to the Delight as well as Necessaries of Life. The Mountains, fill'd with Game and Medicinal Plants, were Celebrated by the ancient Poets; the most Remarkable are, Mount Cyllene in Arcadia, on which Maja brought forth Mercury. 2. Menalus, Consecrated to the God Pan, so call'd from Menalus, the Son of Lycaon. 3. Minthe, now Oline. 4. Nonacris, where the River Styx takes its Rise. 5. Taigolus, &c.

The Principal Rivers are, 1. Carbon or Orfea, anciently call'd Alpheus, and fam'd for its Virtue, in taking away Spots and Blemishes in the Skin:

The Poets attribute a miraculous Course to this River, through the Ionian Sea, till it intermixeth with the Fountain Aethusa, in Sicily, because it is often swallow'd up in the Earth, and rises again with greater Force; but it really rises in the Mountain Stymphalus, runs through Arcadia and receives the Rivers Celaden and Amarinthe, with 140 other Rivulets, and falls into the Gulph of Castel di Tornese. 2. Eurotas or Valali Patamos, which rises in Arcadia, runs through Laconia, and falls into the Gulph of Castel Rampari. 3. Planizza, formerly call'd Inachus, and Haliacmon. 4. Pamissus or Spirnazza, that falls into the Gulph of Coron, near Calamata. 5. Styx, whose Waters are Deadly, thro' their excessive Coldness, which gave occasion to the Poets to fain it to be one of the Rivers of Hell.

The Inhabitants are esteem'd Ingenious and Warlike, imitating their Ancestors, who maintain'd a War against the Athenians for 27 Years, which is the Subject of the excellent Histories of Thucydides and Xenophon. Pausanias reckons but three Nations here, viz. the Achaians, Arcadians and Dorians. But, according to Ptolomy it was anciently divided into eight Parts; tho' Cluverius reckons but six, as we have shewn in our Table (the other two, Corinthia and Sicyonia, being by him included in Achaia propria) wherein were comprehended many powerful States, as, the Lacedemonians, Corinthians, Sicyonians, Argives, Arcadians &c. whose Actions are notably remembred in History. After many Revolutions the whole Country became subject to the Emperor Manuel Comnenus about the Year 1150. who divided it at his Death among his seven Sons; these Princes were call'd Despotes, and tho' appointed, and subordinate to the Emperor, were in a manner Absolute at Home; and the Emperor seldom putting by the next of kin, it was also Hereditary. Demetrius and Thomas, the Brothers of Constantine Palaeologus, were the last of these; for in their time the Turkish Sultan Mahomet II. took it, and beat out the Venetians that were then upon it. Since when they always held it, and maintain'd a Sangiack at Modon, till in the late War, the Venetians under General Morosini Re-conquer'd it, and by the Treaty at Carlowitz, the whole Morea is entirely resign'd by the Turks to the Venetians.

It is now usually distinguish'd into Four Parts, viz.

I. The Dutchy of Clarenza, bounded on the North by the Gulph of Lepanto, on the East by Saccania, on the West by the Gulph of Patras, and on the South by Zaconia and Be'vedore. Containing the old Districts of Achaia proper, and Sicyonia. The most Remarkable Towns are,

II. Belvedere, extended between the River Carbon or Orfea, which parts it from Clarenza on the North, the Sea of Sapienza on the South, Zaconia on the East, and the Ionian Sea on the West. It contains the ancient Messenia and Elis. The chief Towns are,

Modon.
Belvedere.
Coron.
Calamata.
Navarino.
Olympia.

III. Lacœnia, or Braccio di Mana, the largest of the Four, comprehending the ancient Arcadia and Laconia, and is situated between Clarenza on the North, Saccina on the East, Bevedere on the West, and the Sea of Spylæ on the South.

Malvasia.
Mistira, or Lacedæmon.
Zarnata.
Chierofa.
Megalopolis, or Leontari.
Colochina.

IV. Saccina, or Romania Minor, comprehending the ancient Argia, Sicyonia and Corinthia. It is seated between the Gulph of Engia on the North, and that of Napoli on the South, Clarenza on the West, and the Ægean Sea on the East.

Napoli di Romanica.
Corinth.
Argos.

Patras, Patra call'd Badra and Balubatbra by the Turks, is seated on a Hill near the Sea, at a little distance from the Mountain formerly nam'd Cerynea, not above 10 Miles from the Mouth of the Gulph Lepanto to the South, near 20 Leagues from the Coasts of the Island Cefalonia to the East, and 90 Miles from the Isthmus of Corinth to the West. It was Founded (according to Pausanias) by one Eumelus, who was instructed in the Arts of Husbandry and Architecture, by Triptolemus, and call'd the place Patra: afterwards when the Ionians were expelled from Peloponnesus Achaia, another Benefactor, nam'd Patrus, very much enlarg'd it, so as to show up the old Arca, and gave it his Name. It is commonly written in the Maps Paleo Patra, or Paleo Patras. It was ruin'd some time after, in the War between the Aetolians and the Gauls, and was in that State till the time of Augustus Cæsar, who having made use of its Harbour for his Navy, took notice of the Town, and conferr'd many Privileges on the Inhabitants he invited to it from the Neighbouring Towns, calling it Colonia Augusta Arca Patrensis. It is a considerable City, very populous, especially of Jews; a Place of good Trade, and the See of an Archbishop. It is defended by a strong Castle, built on the highest point of the Hill, from whence there is an easie Descent every way to a fruitful Valley, well planted with Oranges, Lemons and Citrons, much esteem'd for their delicious Taste. In these Gardens, besides a great number of tall Cedars, there is a famous Cypress Tree, perhaps the oldest and biggest in the World, being 16 Foot round, and the Branches shooting out 20 Foot an end. In ancient Times the Goddess Diana was Worship'd here in a most cruel manner; for a Beautiful young Man and Maid were Annually Sacrific'd to her; till by the Preaching of St. Andrew, Euppius was Converted to Christianity, and the horrid Superstition laid aside. But afterward that Apostle suffer'd Martyrdom here, being Crucify'd by order of Ægeus, the Pro-Consul of the Province. The Christian Religion however was so well Planted by him, that it continu'd to flourish, and the Archbishop in the Primitive Age, was Honour'd with the second Place in the Councils; and at present hath a Thousand Churches under his Jurisdiction. In the time of the Despotes of the Morea, it enjoy'd the Title of a Dutchy, and was sold by the last of these Princes to the State of Venice, in the Year 1406. from whom the Turks took it in 1463. The Venetians under the famous And. Doria, recover'd it in 1533. but lost it again the next Year, and the Turks continu'd Masters of it till the late War, when in the Year 1687. it was taken by the Venetian General Moresini, and is now subject to that State.

This City gives Name to the Gulph or Sea that flows between the Coasts of the Morea, and the Island Cefalonia.

Clarenza or Chiarenza, which gives Name to the Dutchy, stands upon the Gulph of Patras, 25 Miles South from that City. This is suppos'd to be the ancient Cyllene, and was sometime of great Note, the Capital of the Dutchy, and under its own Princes; it was also a place of Trade, having then a commodious Haven, but is now choak'd with Sand: And the Condition of the Town is so far alter'd, that there remains hardly any Footsteps of its former Grandeur. P. Mela honours this place with the Birth of Mercury, tho' others impute it to a Hill in Arcadia, call'd Cyllene, and thence is he call'd Cyllenius. The Town Cyllene was anciently the Sea-Port to the City Elis, and a commodious Harbour for Ships, that come from Sicily. But some are of Opinion, that not Chiarenza, but Antraxilla, stands in the place of the ancient Cyllene.

Caminitza a little Town upon the River Evenus, about 12 Miles South from Patras, is thought to be the ancient Olenus, which Strabo and Ptolomy call a Town of Achaia in the Peloponnesus, Built by Olenus, the Son of Vulcan. It was an Episcopal See under the Archbishop of Patras.

Modon, anciently call'd Methone, now Maitune or Mutum by the Turks, is seated on the Southern Shoar of the Morea, near the Cape, over against the small Island of Sapienza, about 140 Miles South from Patras. It hath a fair commodious Haven and is a Strong, Rich and Trading City, dignify'd with a Bishop's See, and was the Place of Residence of the Turkish Sangiack, or Governor of the Morea. This was one of the seven Cities which Agamemnon promis'd to Achilles, and was at that time possess'd by Menelaus King of Lacedæmon. In the Asian War with Antony, Agrippa at his first Landing made himself Master of this Place, and took it from Bochus King of Mauritania, whom he slew. It sustain'd much Damage in the time of the Emperor Trajan, by the Inroads of the Illyrians; but the Prince to make Amends, granted it many Privileges which were confirm'd by Constantine the Great. The Venetians took it in 1124. but were routed the next Year by the Greek Emperor. In 1204. they got it again, but lost it for some time to the Genoese Pirates, whose Captain Leo Veteran being taken the Town was again recover'd, and held it till 1498. when Bajazet II. Belieg'd it with an Arm of 150000 Men, whose Power forc'd a Surrender tho' it was long Defended. In 1659. the Venetians took it again; but the Turks recover'd it in the end of the Candian War. And finally, in the late War the Venetians retook it, and now enjoy it.

Coron, Corona, one of the most important Place in the Morea, is seated about 20 Miles East from the Cape de Gallo, which is the Acritas Promontorium of Ptolomy, on the West-side of a Gulph, which it now gives Name, but formerly call'd Sinus Messeniacus, on the Southern Shoar of the Morea, about 25 Miles East from Modon. It was anciently ently a Colony of the Thebans, call'd Pedafus by the Poets, Epea by Paulanias, and Corona by Strabo and Pliny, from a Brass Coronet found in digging its Foundation. The Town lies on a Tongue of Land, advancing into the Sea, the Land-side being guarded by a large Tower, built by the Venetians in 1463. and the two Angles to the Sea surrounded with an old Wall, and flank'd with strong Towers. It hath no immediate Port, but the Gulph which bears its Name, is a safe Harbour. The Country about affords good store of Fruits, Grain, Oyl and Silks, which the Inhabitants vend abroad, to their great Advantage. This Town also was subject to the Venetians, taken by Leo Veteran in 1204. as well as Modon, and recover'd with that soon after. And with that also was lost to Bajazet II. in 1498. The Spaniards under Andr. Doria, Charles V's Admiral took it in 1532. but soon lost it. And it remain'd under the Turks, till General Morofini in the Year 1985. reduc'd it, notwithstanding the obstinate Defence of the Besieg'd, and the Succours that came to their Relief.

Messeniga, 10 Miles North from Coron, is the ancient Messene.

Calamata, tho' an unwall'd Town, had a Castle of good Force, which was surpriz'd and burnt by General Morofini, in 1657. And again in the late War, Anno 1685. the same General retook it, and caus'd it to be entirely demolish'd. It stands on the Confluence of the River Aris, with the Camissus, not above 10 Miles from the bottom of the Gulph of Coron, about 20 Miles from that City to the North, and 35 from Modon to the North-East, and is a Place indifferently well inhabited.

Navarino, Navarinum, aut Pylus Messeniaca, one of the most ancient Towns in the Morea, is seated on the West side of the same Promontory of Land that Modon and Coron stands on, 13 Miles North from the former, and 28 Miles West from the latter. It is divided into the Old Town and the New; the former is seated on a Rock that advances out into the Sea, which is naturally very strong, and besides well fortify'd: The latter stands on the side of a Hill, and is defended by strong Walls, and a Citadel with 6 Bastions, built by the Turks in 1572. At the bottom whereof lies the Haven, the best and most capacious of all the Morea, and its Entrance commanded by the Cannon of the Old Town; and therefore it was chosen by Sultan Ibrahim for the Rendezvous of his Fleet, design'd for Candia in 1644. The Turks were Masters of this Place from the Year 1498. till 1686. when General Morofini with a Fleet of 200 Ships, soon forc'd the Old Town to Surrender; but the New Town made a resolute Defence, in hopes of Relief, till they heard of the Defeat of the Seraskier by General Coningsmark, which made 'em then Surrender.

Castle Tornese, call'd Clementzi by the Turks, is a small Town near the Cape of Tornese, which shoots out into the Sea, on the West side of the Morea, between the Gulph of Arcadia and that of Patras, and is distant 30 Miles from Chiarenza to the South, 50 from Navarino to the North West, and about 3 Miles from the Sea Coasts. It was formerly nam'd Chelonates, and stands on an Eminence that overlooks a pleasant Country. General Morofini took this Place, after the taking of Patras in 1687.

Belvedere, the Elis of the Ancients, gave Name to this Duchy, and is a large Town, seated on the River Peneus, 15 Miles from the Ionian Sea to the East, about 10 from Castle Tornese to the North, as many from Chiarenza, and 40 from Patras to the South. Formerly Famous for producing excellent Horses, and had its Name Callesopium of the Greeks, and Belvedere of the Italians, from its pleasant Situation.

Cyparissa, seu Cyparissia, now Arcadia, sometime a City, and good Port, but now in decay; stands 20 Miles North from Navarino, and gives its modern Name to a large Gulph now, as its ancient one did formerly, being then call'd Sinus Caparissius.

Langanico, the ancient Olympia, vel Olympia Pifa, is seated on the River Apheus, not far from its Mouth into the Gulph of Arcadia, 25 Miles from that Town, and near 50 from Navarino to the North, and 55 from Patras to the South. It was anciently known throughout the World, for the famous Games instituted by Hercules, and Celebrated every fifth Year, in its neighbouring Fields, wherein the bravest Youths of Greece contended for the Prize, and esteem'd the obtaining it the greatest Honour in the World. Hence came the Computation of Time by the Olympiads, well known to Historians. It is now but a small Town, and not at all considerable.

Mistra, or Misistra, the ancient LACEDÆMON, or SPARTA; or rather a City about 4 Miles from the Ruins of that, as Sir George Wheeler tells us; stands in the South East part of the Morea, on the River Eurotas, 30 Miles North from its Mouth into the Gulph Colochina, or Sinus Laconicus, 100 Miles South from Corinth, 60 North-East from Coron, 40 South-West from Napoli di Romania, and 40 from Malvasia to the West. The City was first call'd Lelegia from Lelex its first King, who was Cotemporary with Cecrops the first King of Athens, afterwards Lacedæmon from the Name of his Successor, and Sparta from his Daughter or Wife so nam'd; or, according to others, from Spartus, the Son of Phoroneus King of Argos, whom they make its Founder. Its Antiquity was very great, so that a true Account of its Foundation is not extant; but 'tis judg'd to have been built in the Time of the Patriarch Jacob, and near 1000 Years before the building of Rome. We are inform'd by Polybius, that it was of a round Form, extending 48 Greek Stadia or Furlongs, that is to say, 6 English Miles in Compass. There never was any City that surpass'd it for Military Glory, as having had the greatest share in those noble Achievements that made the Grecian Name so Illustrious; for they contended with Athens for Mastery, and subdu'd almost all Greece. Their Lawgiver Lycurgus was Famous for Wisdom, and left them such Rules for Government, that the Lacedæmonians were as Eminent for Politics, as the Athenians were for Learning. They were govern'd for many Ages by two Kings, at the same time under the Inspection of the 25 Gerontes, or Senators, and afterwards of 5 Magistrates, call'd Ephori. The last of the Kings was Cicomenes, who destroy'd the Power of the Ephori, and was himself Conquer'd by Antigonus Dason King of Macedon, and the City and State made part of that Monarchy. This happen'd about 230 Years before Christ, and about 1300 Years after the Foundation of the City. The Ruins of this City, which testify its ancient Magnificence, are still to be seen at Mistra, which is an Episcopal City of some Magnitude, consisting of four different Parts, viz. the Town, the Castle, and the two large Suburbs, one of which is call'd Mefceherion, or the Middleborough, and the other Hexceherion, or the Outerborough. The Castle, City and Mefceherion lie on one fide the River Erutus, now call'd Vafeli-petamus; and the Hexceherion on the other fide of the River. The Castle or Citadel, now call'd To Castrum, advantageoufly feated on the top of Mount Taygetus, is furrounded with good Walls, and by fome is affirm'd to be fo ftrong, as never to have been taken by open Force: Within it formerly flood the Temples of Diana Lipetbaria, and Minerva Panachaia; beſides the Monument of Euripylus, Son of Eumen, who was prefent at the taking of Troy. The Town lies at the Foot of the Castle, which covers it towards the North; it confifts of two fpacious Streets, and ſeveral ſmall crofs ones; the old Market place, call'd Agora by the Greeks, is beautify'd with a curious Fountain, and hath a Church near it, built out of the Ruins of Minerva's Temple: Here are alfo the Remains of four Marble Buildings, which are the moſt conſiderable Antiquities of Mifitra, viz. the Persian Gallery, or Portico, built in Memory of the Victory over the Persians at Platee; the Temple of Helena; the Temple of Hercules; and the Temple of Venus Armata. In the Town ſtands alfo the Cathedral Church, call'd Panagia, or All-Holy: It is a fine Building, having Marble Pillars to fupport the Roof, which has ſeven Domes, and the Pavement is a curious piece of Moſaick Work; the Biſhop's Palace; the Monastery of the Pandaneſſis, whole Church exceeds the Cathedral, for Beauty, tho' not ſo large. In the Mefceherion, or Middle-fuburb, is another Church call'd alfo Panagia, that is far more Sumptuous than the two already nam'd: And there alfo flood the Turks fineſt Moſque, for the building of which they made uſe of the Ruins of Lacedemon, and thereby undoubtedly deſtroy'd many notable Antiquities. Without the Walls are ſtill to be ſeen the Dromas, where the Spartan Youth perform'd their Racing, Wreſtling and other Sports; and the Platon, or Grove of Plan Trees, the Shade whereof is very reſreſhing and delightful. The Grecian Emperors made this City an Appenage of one of their Sons, with the Title of Dyſpot, or Lord of Sparta; in which it remain'd till it was taken by the Turkiſh Sultan Mahomet II. ſoon after the taking of Conſtantinople about the Year 1460. Three Years after the Italians ſtorm'd it, but could not conquer the Citadel, and ſo rais'd the Siege. And again in 1473. the Venetians took the Town, but not the Castle, and it remain'd ſubject to the Turks till the Year 1687. when General Morofini having conquer'd the greateſt part of the Morea, oblig'd both Town and Castle to Surrender.

Malvaſia, or Napoli di Malvaſia, heretofore known by the Name of Epidaurus, and afterwards Monambafia, is ſeated on a Rock in the Sea, on the Eaſtern Coaſt of the Morea, near the Mouth of the Gulph of Napoli di Romania, near 60 Miles from that City to the South-Eaſt, about 40 from Mifitra to the Eaſt, and about 30 from the Iſland Cerigo to the North. It is join'd to the Continent by a fair Timber Bridge, and is a place of notable Strength, being inacceſſible but on one ſide, and defended by a triple Wall. It has a convenient Harbour defended by the Fortreſs, which is of great Advantage to the Inhabitants for their Traffick. Tho' it ſtands on a Rock, it is ſupply'd with good Springs of freſh Water, ſufficient for the uſe of the Town, and Gardens about it, which are very Beautiful, and produce excellent Fruits, eſpecially the Grapes whereof the Wine we call Malmſey is made. The City, tho' it be a ſmall one, is dignify'd with a Metropolitan See, and has a Suburb enclos'd with a ſtrong Rampart, beſides the Citadel. 'Tis ſaid to owe its Foundation to a Colony of Argos, and was frequented on account of the Temple of Æſculapius; but Baudrand gives away this Honour to another Town, calling this Epidaurus Limera, in Laconia, and diſtinguiſhes it from another Epidaurus in Argia, now call'd Pigadia, according to Niger; and Æſculapio, according to Pinerus; wherein ſtood that famous Temple, which gave occaſion to the Poets to call Æſculapius the Epidaurian Deity. Buno, in his Notes on Claudian, ſays the ſame, and places it in Argia. Epidaurus was alſo the old Name of Ragusi Vecchio, in Dalmatia. Tho' the Fortreſs of Malvaſia ſeem almoſt impregnable, it was taken by the French and Venetians from the Greek Emperor, and retaken by the Venetians, who held it till 1573. when they deliver'd it to Sultan Solyman to purchaſe a Peace. In the Candian War the Venetians Storm'd and Burnt it; but the Turks rebuilt and held it till the late War. In the Year 1689. the Doge Morofini attack'd it; but being call'd home, he left the Place Block'd up, which continu'd from the 14th of September to the 10th of Auguſt following, when they ſurrender'd, and was the laſt Place in the Morea that held out.

Zarnata, a Fortreſs of conſiderable Strength, ſtands on the Weſt-fide of Zaconia, 30 miles South-Weſt from Mifitra, and but a few miles from the Sea call'd the Gulph of Coron. It is ſeated on a Hill, and defended by Towers and other Fortifications. But was however taken by the Venetians in the Year 1685. in the very ſight of the Captain Baſſa, who durſt not attempt its Relief.

Chieleſa, a ſtrong Town of a mile in Compaſs, ſeated on a Rock, at the diſtance of 20 miles from Zarnata to the South-Eaſt, and about 15 from Cape Matapan to the North, but 2 miles from the Sea, and near the Place where flood the ancient Vitula, a Trading City of good Note, which gave Name to the Port, formerly well frequented, but now neither Commodious nor ſafe. Chieleſa is chiefly valu'd for its Strength, being ſurrounded with Walls, and flank'd with Towers, and the Rock on which it ſtands is very ſteep and craggy. General Morofini took it in 1685. and the Turks endeavouring to regain it next Year, were routed, and loſt all their Artillery and Baggage.

Cape Matapan is the moſt Southern Point of Land in the Morea.

Colochina, in the midway between that Cape and Mifitra, and 30 miles Eaſt from Zarnata, is only notable for giving Name to a Bay, anciently nam'd Lacenicus Sinus.

Cape Malio, Malea Promont. is the moſt Eaſtern Point of the Morea, and 25 miles South from Malvaſia. Over againſt it on the South, lies the Iſland Cithera, now Cerigo.

Megalopolis, the ancient Metropolis of Arcadia, and the Birth place of the Hiſtorian Polybius, is now a ſmall City, but Episcopal, nam'd Leontari; it is ſeated at the Foot of a Mountain, on the River Alpheus, 40 miles North-Weſt from Lacedemon, 75 from Corinth to the South, in the Center of the Morea, and in the North Limits of the Dutchy of Zaconia.

Napoli di Romania, the Capital of the Dutchy of Seccania, or Romania minor, was anciently nam'd Nautia, from Nautius the Son of Neptune, and is call'd Anaphia by the modern Greeks; it is a strong and fair City, seated at the bottom of a Gulph of the Aegean Sea, to which it gives the modern Name, but anciently call'd Argolicus Sinus. It stands on the top of a small Promontory or Cape, which is divided into two Parts, one side whereof shoots forth into the Sea, making a safe and spacious Harbour, and the other toward the Land, renders the Passage to the Town almost inaccessible, being only thro' a narrow stony Way, between the Mountain Palamida and the Sea-shoar. The Haven is spacious enough to receive a large Fleet, but yet so straight in its Entrance, that only one Galley can pass at a time. Besides this Natural Strength, there is a strong Citadel, about 100 Yards from the City, and in the whole this is one of the strongest Places in all the Morea, and longer resisted the Turks. It is the Capital City of the Morea, with respect to Government, and the See of an Archbishop, and reckon'd to contain above 60000 Greeks, besides many other Inhabitants. It is seated, as we have said, near the bottom of the Gulph, about 60 Miles North from Mistra, and 30 South from Corinth. This City had been subject to divers Masters, before it was Sold to the Venetians in the Year 1333. who bravely defended it against the Attacks of Mahomet II. in 1460. and Soliman II. in 1537. but were oblig'd to resign it two Years after to procure a Peace. And it was the Seat of a Turkish Sangiack, till the Venetians recover'd it again in the Year 1636. when General Coningsmark Besieg'd the Town, and Morosini defeated the Seraskier, on the 29th of August, which oblig'd the Garrison to Capitulare.

Argos, or Argo, aut Argos Peloponnesiacum, was heretofore the Metropolis of the Dominions of King Agamemnon, and the Country of Argia. It is seated on the River Planiza, or Inachus, now Najo, 20 Miles North from Napoli di Romania, and 40 South from Corinth. It was anciently a very stately and magnificent City, and the Capital of a Kingdom for several Ages, till Percus remov'd the Regal Seat to Mycene: afterwards it was a Commonwealth and had a share in all the Wars of Greece. But it is now reduc'd to a very low Estate, consisting of Paltry Houses, except the Citadel and the Bishop's Palace, for it is an Episcopal See. This City was purchas'd by the Venetians in 1388. from whom it was taken by Mahomet II. in 1463. but recover'd by General Morosini in 1696. But we must note, that besides this, there were other Cities in Greece of the same Name, viz. Argos Amphilocheium in Epirus, Argos Pelasgicum in Thessaly, and Argos Hippium in Achaia, fam'd for its excellent Horses.

CORINTH, now commonly call'd Corintho, and Co anto, and by the Turks Gweme, was anciently call'd Ephira. It stands about the middle of the Isthmus between the Gulph of Lepanto and Angia, about 2 Miles from the former, and 5 from the other, 85 from Patras to the East, 54 from Athens to the South West, 25 from Argos, and 85 from Mistra to the North. Whether Sisyphus, the Son of Aeolus, built it, (as some say) about the Year of the World 2616. or a Wrestler, call'd Aletes, (as others) or by neither, (as others declare) is uncertain; but it was anciently the Capital City of Achaia, and the Glory and Ornament of Greece. Its Situation between the Ionian and the Aegean Seas render it Rich and Strong. It was a Place of great Trade, and in Power and Command, inferior only to Athens and Lacedemon. The Athenians and Corcyreans were so sensible of its Naval Force, that it gave Rise to the Peloponnesian War. Dionysius the Sicilian Tyrant, being Banish'd his own Country, came here and set up a School. Its commodious Situation between the Sea-ports of Lecheus and Cenchreae, the former of which in the Sinus Corinthiacus or Gulph of Lepanto, the other in the Sinus Saraconicus, or Gulph of Angia, contributed mightily to its Richness; for Lecheus lay to the West of it, and provid'd a most convenient and safe Port for the Ships which came from Italy and Sicily; the other, Cenchreae, lay towards the East, and receiv'd the Ships that came from Asia. But as Trade brought Wealth, so that brought in Lewdness Luxury, Insolence and Contempt of their Neighbours, having the Boldness to put Indignities even upon the Roman Ambassadors; which, with the Apprehensions which Rome had of its growing Power, was the Reason why A. Luc. Mummius was sent to Burn it. The Corinthian Brass is said to owe its Beginning to the burning of this City, being a mixture of a great many Statues and Images of Gold, Silver and Brass, which were melted down in that Conflagration; tho' others maintain that the Corinthian Brass or Meral was well known before this happen'd. Whoredom was so much practis'd, and Whores in such Esteem in this Place, that they not only put all marks of Honour and Respect upon them, but offer'd up Publick Prayers to Venus for their Preservation and Encrease. Julius Caesar in great measure Rebuilt and Peopl'd this City a-new, by sending a Colony of Veteran Soldiers to it. It is defended by a Castle, known formerly by the Name of Acro-Corinthus, standing on a very high Rock, which is a perfect Precipice all round, except on the South-side, where it slopes a little more. The ancient Despotes, or Lords of it, gave it to the Venetians, who kept possession of it till Mahomet II. took it from them, together with the adjacent Country; but they recover'd it from the Turks in the Year 1687. It is now no better than a good Country Town: Nor must we judge of the Number of its Inhabitants from its Compass, the Houses not being contiguous, but standing in 10, 12, or sometimes more together, with a good Space between each of these Parcels, commonly so large as to be a good Corn-field.

The Isthmus of Corinth being but 6 Miles over, was often attempted to be cut, viz. by Demetrius, Julius Caesar, Caligula, Nero, and by one Herodes Atticus a private Man. There was a Wall built cros from Lecheus to Cenchrae call'd Hexamilion, because it was 6 Miles long; which stood till the time of the Turks, and was by them twice thrown down, the Venetians having rebuilt it. The Ionians of old erected a Pillar here, upon the side whereof that look'd to Attica, was written Τὰ δὲ ἔχει Πελοπόννησος ἀλλ' Ἰωνία: And on the side towards Corinth, Τὰ δὲ ἔστιν ἡ Πελοπόννησος ἔ Ἰωνία. And in this place Plays were solemnly Celebrated every Fifth Year, (which were thence denominated the Isthmian Games) in Honour of Palaemon the Son of Athamos King of Thebes, and his Mother Ino, who leapt into the Sea with her Son in her Arms to avoid her Husband's Fury, who had in a mad Fit kill'd his other Son, and as the Poets fable, they were receiv'd by Neptune into the Number of the Divinities of his Train. Others say they were Instituted tated by Teseus in Honour of Neptune, See Potter's Antiq. Greece. The Ruins of the Theatre, Stadium, Temple of Neptune, &c. are still to be seen.

Sigon, now Basilica, or Vasilica, the Capital of Sicyonia, an ancient Kingdom, which was also call'd Ionia, and Ægialia, according to Strabo; and Deme-trius by Plutarch; stands on the River Asopus, about 20 Miles South-West from Corinth, and not above 5 Miles from the Sea, or Gulph of Lepanto. It is often mention'd by the Poets, being noted for the fine Oyls growing in its Neighbourhood, also for Marble, Statuary and Painting. It was the Country of the Poet Aratus. At present 'tis but a poor Town, and has only the Ruins to demonstrate its ancient Splendor.

Nemæa, a Village with a Grove, anciently Famous for the Games there Celebrated in Honour of Hercules, who slew the Lyon, whose Skin he afterwards wore, in this Wood; or, according to others, in Honour of Archemorus, slain by a Serpent. It is now call'd Triflina, and stands about 30 Miles South from Corinth.

Mycene, now nam'd Charia, or Agios Adrianos, from a Castle built there by the Emperor Adrian; once the Capital of a Kingdom, remov'd from Argos by Perseus, and continu'd 200 Years. This City was built by Lacedemon, the Son of Semele, and was in its time very considerable; but now 'tis no more than an ordinary Village, seated about 10 Miles North from Argos, and 35 South from Corinth.

CHAP. IV.

Of the ISLANDS on the Coasts of GREECE, &c.

HAVING Travell'd thro' the Continent of Greece, we come now to the Islands that lie round about its Coasts, whereof there are a vast Number in these Seas; but many of them are so small that they are hardly worth mentioning. Those that deserve particular Notice, such as Candia, Negropont, &c. we will give as ample an Account of as is necessary, and if we pass over the rest with only naming 'em, and their Situation, and a general Character, we hope it will not displease the Reader. Beginning then at the Ionian Sea, on the Coast of Epirus, we meet with Corfu, and the two Pachsu, whereof we have already spoken in our Account of Epirus. The next is

St. Maura, Leucadia or Neritia, on the Coast of Achaia, a pleasant, fruitful Place, with Vines in abundance. It was first inhabited by a Colony of Corinthians, now subject to the Venetians. On the North-East Point stands the Town of St. Maur, which gives the Modern Name to the Island, and is not above a League distant from the Coasts of Achaia.

The Ecbiades, or Curzolari, are a Cluster of Islands that lie on the East of St. Maura, and at the Mouth of the River Achelous. Whereof the Chief is Colombo, Dulichium, near the Shoar of Achaia subject to the Turks. The rest are very small.

Cephalæna or Cefalonia, Cephalenia quæ & Samos, an Island of good Extent, being 120 Miles in Circuit, and a fertile Soil, producing Wooll, Wax, Honey, Silk, Wine and Oyl; seated between St. Maura on the North, and Zant on the South, and about 20 Leagues West from the Mouth of the Gulph of Lepanto. It is subject to the Venetians, and hath two chief Towns, viz. Cefalonia, an Episcopal See; and Argostoli, a very good Port on the Southern Shoar.

Zant, Zacinthus, about 4 Leagues South from Cefalonia, and above 7 or 8 West from the Coast of the Morea; is not of half the Extent of Cefalonia, but is very fruitful, affording Wine and Oyl, besides Currants in great plenty, subject to the Venetians. The chief Town of the same Name is large and populous, surrounded with a Wall, hath large Suburbs, and a very capacious Port, where the English have a Factory. There are also many other Towns (some say 50) upon this Island.

The Strophades, or Strivoli, are 2 small Islands on the South of Zant, producing Wine and Oyl, but subject to the Turks.

Sapientza, Sephagia, Oenussa, on the South of the Morea over against Cape de Gallo, gives Name to the Sea that flows about it; but otherwise not considerable, being almost deserted by reason of the Incursions of the Pyrates.

CANDIA, olim CRETA, the largest and most Celebrated Island on the Coasts of Greece, was formerly known by divers Names, as Hecatompolis, Aeria, Curetis, Marcaros, Marcaronesos, &c. And was in times past a considerable Kingdom. It took its Name from Crete a Nymph, the Daughter of Hesperis; or as others, from Cretus its King. It is seated in Latitude between 34 and 35 Degrees, being not above 60 Miles in Breadth, but from East to West, it extends from 42 Degrees 30 Min. to 47 Degrees, being in Length from Cape Salomon in the East, to Cape Cornico in the West, (according to Cluverius, 70 German Leagues, i. e.) 280 English Miles. It lies South-East of the Morea, and is the Land that includes the Sea call'd the Archipelago.

Its SOIL is most Fruitful, producing Corn, Wine; the best Oyl, Oranges, Limons, Figs, and other delicious Fruits, Salt, pleasant Pastures, Cypress, Laurel, Myrtle, and other curious ever Greens.

The AIR also is Healthy and Temperate, except the South Wind, which is sometimes too Robust: Here are no Stags, Wolves, Foxes, or other wild Beasts; but the Spider Tarantula is very troublesome, his Sting being Mortal, unless Musick be apply'd to the Patient. Nor are here any large Rivers, only Brooks that water the Meads. The most notable Mountain is Psiloriti, or Mount Ida, mention'd in Antiquity for the Corybantes or Idæi-Dactyli, the Priests of Cybele, that took care to nourish Jupiter in his Infancy, and continually beat their Drums lest Saturn should hear the Child cry.

The

The INHABITANTS were always Infamous for their Vice and Piracy, but withal, The Invention of Navigation, The Use of Arrows, The Art of War, and Recording their Laws, is Attributed to them. Teste Cluverio. They were very early Govern'd by Kings; and afterwards by Dukes, till Q Metellus Conquer'd, and made the Island a Province of the Roman Empire and it continu'd under the Emperors of Constantinople till about the Year 823. when the Saracens surpriz'd and took it, and built the City Candia, which in time gave Name to the whole Island. The Emperor Nicephorus Phocas retook it; and Baldwin Earl of Flanders and Emperor, gave it to Boniface Marquess of Monferrat, who sold it to the Venetians for a great Sum of Money.

They held it for above 400 Years, till Anno 1645. the Turks fell upon this Island, took Canea, and sat down before Candia, which was so well defended being assisted by divers Nations, that it held out 24 Years, but was taken at last in 1669. and has since with the whole Island been subject to the Turks.

The Island was anciently notable for its Hundred Cities, whence it was call'd Hecatompolis. Whereof the most considerable (according to Cluverius,) were, Cortyna the Capital of the Island, Cydon which the Greeks call'd the Mother of Cities, Gnossus the Regal Seat of Minos, Therapna, Dium, Lyctus, Lycastrus, Phaestus, Manethusa, Dictyna. Under the Venetians it was divided into 4 Territories, denominated from the 4 chief Cities, viz.

The Territory of Setia, which is the most Eastern Part; wherein are these chief Towns,

{ Setia.
 Lasthi.
 Boniporto.
 Cinosa.
 Gerapetra.

In the Territory of Candia, which lies on the West of Setia, are { Candia.
 Gortina.
 Spinalonga.

The Territory of Retimo, lies next to that of Candia on the West & Retimo.

The Territory of Canea is the most Western Part, and contains { Canea.

 Garabusa,
 Sfachia.
 Fenicha.
 Castle Selino.

Candia, aut Matium the Capital of the Island, is seated on the Northern Coast in the middle of the Isle, in respect to East and West. On a Plain, at the Foot of a Mountain, and hath a Commodious Harbour. It is a very large City, divided into the Old Town, and the New, and was a Metropolitan See (now the Seat of the Turkish Sangiack) strongly Fortified by the Venetians, with a Castle and other Bulwarks, and an Arsenal well furnish'd with Military Stores, which enabled it to hold out that memorable Siege of 24 Years continuance. For the Turks sat down before it in the Year 1645. but were beaten off with great loss, yet not so but they continu'd it Block'd up, till 1667. and then the Siege was renew'd with great Vigour, and the Town taken Sept. 27. 1669. Thus the Famous and Fruitful Isle of Candia, the Cause, and Occasion of all that Blood and Treasure that was spilt, and exhausted in 24 years War, fell at length to the Fortune and Increase of the Turkish Empire, being the most Impregnable Fortress of the World, strengthen'd with as much Art and Industry, as the Human Wit of this Age was capable of inventing. After a strait Siege of 2 Years, 3 months, the 27 days, allotted for the Surrender, being expir'd on the 17 of Sept. 1669. being Friday, the great Cross Erected on the Wall, was taken down, after Midnight; and about 9 that Morning, the Principal Citizens offer'd the Keys of the City to the Grand Visier, in a Basin of Silver, on the Breach of St. Andrea. The Turkish Army took Possession that day, and the Grand Visier, made his Entry on the 4th. of October. Four Parts of five of the City were Ruin'd and Demolish'd, during the Siege. All the Bells and Ornaments of the Churches and Houses, to the very Locks of the Doors, were carry'd away; the Arms remaining, were old and rusty, and not above 350 Pieces of Cannon left upon the Walls, and those for the most part but very small. The Inhabitants (as Sir Paul Ricaut goes on) were allow'd by Treaty to retire, so that when the Turks entred, there remain'd only 5, except some few decrepit Jews and Greeks, about 30 in Number, so that never could be a more sad Spectacle of Desolation, nor a more clear Mirrour of the Miseries of War.

During this Siege, on the Venetians side were kill'd and wounded 30985. Of the Turks 180754. The Storms which the Turks made upon the Town, were 56. The Combats under Ground 45. Sallies made by the Venetians 96. Mines sprung by the Venetians 1137. By the Turks 472. Barrels of Powder spent by the Venetians 50317. Granadoes of Brass and Iron 100960. Granadoes of Glass 84875. Cannon-shot of all sorts 276743. Pounds of Lead 18044957. Pounds of Match 13012500. It is not certain what quantity of Ammunition the Turks spent, only the Brass taken up in the Streets, which came from the Enemies Bombs, was so much, that whole Ware-houses were fill'd with the Metal, and was worth many thousand Crowns. In the year 1692. the Venetians attempted to Besiege Candia; but were repuls'd with loss.

Gortina, formerly one of the chief Cities of Crete, now a large Village, Nam'd Gortina, stands on the River Letheus 20 miles East from Mount Ida, and near as far from the Southern Shoar. About 20 miles East of this Town, towards Gnossus, stood the Labyrinth, the Stupendious Work of Dedalus, and the Seat of the Minotaur, some Ruins whereof are still seen.

Spina longa, a Castle, on a good Port, in the Northern Shoar, 50 miles East from Candia.

Setia,

Seria or Sistia, Cythem, the least of the four Principal Cities, stands on a very good Haven, in the North Coast, 70 miles East from Candia.

Grossus formerly the Regal Seat of Minos, now a Village, call'd Cingia, stands about 30 miles West from Seria.

Gerapetra or Hierapetra, Sacra Petra, a Town with a Castle, on the South Coast, 20 miles South-West from Seria, whence the Neighbouring Promontory takes its Name.

In the extrem East part of the Island are the 2 Capes Sidero and Salomon, near which was the Portus Pulcher now Boniporto.

Rethimo, Rethymna, Rethymnum, the Capital of that Territory, stands on the Northern Coast, 50 miles West from Candia. It hath a Castle on a Rock, and a reasonable good Port.

The Mountain Ida, now Pfilariti, mention'd above, stands in the Limits of this Territory.

Cezes the ancient Cydon, call'd the Mother of Cities, a strong City of Quadrangular Form, with a Port, on the North Coast, 100 miles West from Candia.

Sitochia olim Leuri Montes, a Castle on the Southern Shoar over against Canea.

Castle Selino, Lissus, on the same Shoar 30 miles West from Sitochia.

Cape Crio, Columetopen, The South-West Point of the Island, over against which, lies the Island Clauder now Goga.

On the North West of Candia, near the Coast of Laconia, lies the Island Cythera, now Cerigo, subject to the Venetians, with a Castle on the West side and a safe Port.

The Cyclades, or Islands of the Archipelago,

So call'd from the Circular Form they lye in, are situated between Candia on the South, and Negropent on the North. The number of them is various. Isidorus makes 'em 50. These that follow are of chief Note, and are all Subject to the Turks, but Tenos, which the Venetians have.

Santorini, olim Therassia, is an Island 36 miles round; Seated 60 miles North from the middle of the Coast of Candia. There are several Castles upon it which stand upon craggy Rocks, those of St. Nicholas and Learo are extrem high and inaccessible, in the former lives a Greek Bishop, and about 500 Souls, most whereof live in Caves dug in the Pumice-Stone Soil: The latter has about 150 Houses built round a Rock, in the middle of the Castle upon which there stands a Greek Church. The Land produces Vines, whence they draw Wine enough for their own use, and some small quantity to sell, but no other Fruit, and very little Corn or Cattle. Beans, Pease, Eggs, taken in the Rocks, and Bisket is their Food. The People are Healthy and Stout, but lead an idle, slothful Life. An irruption of Fire that broke out suddenly in the Harbour, about 100 Years ago, so burnt and scorch'd the Coast, that it looks like Hell, says my Author (Thevenot.) Another irruption happen'd about the Year 1640 which with hideous Noise threw pumice Stones out of the Sea a vast way.

Policanore an Island of 8 miles Circumference, seated 30 miles from Santorini, is nam'd by Thevenot as a pleasant place producing Corn, Fowl, Sheep and other Necessaries, but no Wine. The Inhabitants make Woollen and Cotton Stuffs, and Cheese, with which and Barley they pay their Tribute. There is a Castle on it, seated on a very high Hill.

Millo, call'd Zephyria by Aristotle, Mimallis by Callymachus, and Melos by Strabo, about 20 Leagues North from Candia, over against Canea, hath an excellent Port, 6 miles long and 3 over, with good depth of Water; but chiefly frequented by Pirates: It is about 40 miles in Circuit, and the whole Country is Mountainous, except a Pleasant and Fertile Plain, 6 or 7 miles long, in the midst of which stands the City of Millo, containing (according to the Sieur du Mont's Description) about 20 narrow Streets, wherein says Thevenot 2500 Souls inhabit. The Inhabitants are generally Greeks, but there are also 300 or 400 Souls of the Latin Church, who have their Bishop and Cathedral. The Island affords necessities for Life, and the People live well enough. The Venetians maintain a Podestat in the Island, to gather the Tribute; but there is no Garrison kept in it, so that the first well attended Corfsair that comes is King of it, so long as he pleases to reside in it. The Women are so accusom'd to the Converse of the Pirates, that they are generally very liberal of their Favours, but not quite so frank as their Neighbours of Argentera, (anciently call'd Cimolus) which is another little Island about 20 miles in Compass, containing only a little Town, and Village, both Inhabited by about 500 Women; for there is not a Man in the Island except 7 or 8 Papa's, who perform Divine Service. These Women have no Trade to maintain 'em, but live purely on the Work of Nature; so that all the Merchants and Corfsairs who come to the Island, chuse a Female Companion, either Fair or Brown, according to every Man's particular Fancy. The Children are left to the disposal of the Women; the Girls grow up, and Work to maintain their Mothers; but as soon as the Boys are 12 years old, they are put on Board the first Vessel that touches on the Island. I do not vouch for the Truth of this, altho' some Travellers report it. Millo is surrounded by many smaller Islands, particularly Argentera, above mention'd so call'd from a Mine of Silver.

Siffano, olim Siphnus, a few Leagues on the North of Millo, hath a good Town of the same Name, say some Travellers, but Thevenot tells us, the Castle which stands on a Hill has 3000 Inhabitants, besides which there are no Houses in the Island except a few Gentlemen's Seats. It is about 40 miles in compass, (according to Baudrand) and belong'd formerly to the Family of Gozadini in Venice; but the Turks have been, Masters of it ever since the Year 1450. It was anciently famous for its Gold and Silver Mines. Its principal Town is Nam'd Schinusa, and stands on a Hill. The Inhabitants are divided in matter of Religion, some following the Greek, and some the Romish way of Worship, And (says Thevenot) are very Rogues.

Poros, Paris, or Pario, a few Leagues to the East of Siffano, hath a good Town of the same Name and a Commodious Haven; Famous for its good Wine, and excellent Marble.

Naxos now Nicfia, lies on the East of Paros, divided by a Channel of 2 or 3 Leagues Broad, is 120 miles in Circuit, hath a Town of the same Name, several Villages and Monasteries, and some Commodious Havens. It has been noted for its plenty of good Wine, and excellent Marble, and at present exports very good Wine and Cheese, and the Soil produces all necessaries to Life. The Inhabitants are Drunkards and idle Drones; in imitation of their Ancestor Bacchus, the ruins of whose Palace they pretend to shew.

Amorgo or Morgo, on the South-East of Naxos, hath a Castle, and some Villages.

Delos, or S. Deli, or Sdilles, 10 Leagues North from Naxos, formerly noted by the Poets, for the reception of Latona, who is said to have been deliver'd there of Apollo, and Diana: Here was a Temple and Oracle of Apollo richly endow'd.

Mycone on the East side very near Delos, Populous and Fruitful, but the Inhabitants are Pirates tho' Christians.

Tenos, now Tine or Titte, on the West side of Delos, subject to the Venetians, is a high Rock of Marble, but in some parts Ferril. It has 2 Ports, and a very strong Castle with a Town of the same Name, seated on a high Rock on the West-side.

Rhena, now Suda, and Seladuffa, on the South-West of Delos.

Andros, or Aadrus, olim Cauros, of near 30 miles extent, but Mountainous. The chief Town of the same Name stands on a Rock on a Bay in the South-Coast, and in the middle of the Island. Here are also Two other good Towns; Dium on the West-Coast, and Hydrussa on another Bay in the South-Coast from Andros.

Zea, 8 or 9 Leagues South from Andros, and West from Delos, hath a Town of the same upon the Coast.

Polyagos, now Fermenia, lies next to Zea on the South, Mountainous and Woody.

Seriphus, Serfino, next to it, hath a Town of the same Name.

Thera, olim Caliste, now Zermia, lies a few Leagues South-West from Seriphus, and West from Siphonorus; hath Salubrious Baths which are much frequented.

Islands in the Gulph of Engia, Sinu Saronico, are,

Engia, or Egina, in the Mouth of that Gulph, which, as we have said, flows between Achaia, and the Morea. The Country of the Fabulous Æacus, Judge of Hell: It is a fruitful Soil, and has a Town of the same Name with a Haven.

Salamis, now Colure, lies more within the Bay on the Coast of Achaia: It is of 50 miles compals, and has Three Towns, viz Coloumi, Metropolis, and Ambulachi, near which stood the ancient City Salamis, memorable for the Defeat of Xerxes's Fleet, by Themistocles, and the Athenians, The Birth-place of Solon, and the Regal Seat of Telamon the Father of Ajax.

Kæra, a Rock on which Xerxes sat on a Silver Throne to behold the Battle of the Two Navies.

Islands in the Ægean Sea.

NEGROPONT, anciently nam'd EUBOEAE, and now Egripos by the Modern Greeks; is an Island lying along the Coast of that part of Achaia, formerly nam'd Bæotia, extending above 100 miles in Length, but not above 25 in Breadth. It is suppos'd to have been first joyn'd to the Continent of Greece by an Isthmus, which, either by the Violence of the Tides, or as others, by an Earthquake was broken: It is divided from the Continent by the narrow Channel Euripus, whose Tide Ebbs and Flows Seven times a Day, as says Pomp. Mela; nay, even sometimes much oftner, as 10, 11, 12, 13, or 14 times a day, being often very irregular; and again at other times observing the Course of the Moon, and flows as regularly as the Sea. It is next to Candia, the largest Island in these Seas, and is call'd the Queen of the Ægean Sea, on account of its Fertility as well as Largeness; The Soil producing Corn, Wine, Fruits, and Cattle in so great abundance, that all sorts of Provisions are wonderfully Cheap. The Mountain of Caristo is famous for its excellent Marble, and the Stone Amianthos, or Asbestos, whereof 'tis pretended incombustible Cloath was made, was found here. After the Eastern Emperors had parted with Negropont, it fell into the hands of the Turks under Mahomet II. about the Year 1470. who with a Fleet of 300 Sail, and 120000 Men attack'd it, and have ever since held it.

The chief Towns are,

Negropont, or Egripos, in a Peninsula on the South-Coast in the middle of the Island with respect to East and West, and over-against Aulis in Achaia, to which it hath a Stone-Bridge with a Castle in the midst of the Channel built by the Venetians. It stands in the place of the Ancient Chalcis, and is a large place, the Walls of the City being two miles in Compass, and the Suburbs much larger. In the former live the Turks and Jews, and in the latter the Christians, the whole being esteem'd 14 or 15 Thousand Inhabitants. The Turks have four Mosques, one whereof was the Cathedral Church of St. Mark: And the Christians have several Churches and a Bishop. This is the Seat of the Captain Bassa, or Admiral of the Turkish Navy, who is Governor of this City and Island, and also of Achaia: And in the Harbour which is very safe and capacious, there constantly rides a large Fleet of Gallies, ready at all times to go out against the Corfairs or other Enemies. The City is so strong that it cost the Turks 40000 Men to take it: And when the Venetians attack'd it in the Year 1688. they were fain to leave it without Success.

Caristo, or Castelrosso, a good City with a Commodious Port on the Eastern Shore of the Island 50 miles distant from Negropont. And a few miles North from it, is the Promontory Capherus mention'd in Antiquity, on account of Nauphius the Father of Pelemedes, who there drowned himself because Ulysses and Diomedes had escap'd him.

On the North-East of Negropent lies the Island Syres, by Ortelius said to be the lurking-place of Achilles: It is of Triangular, or rather Pyramidal Form, with a Ridge of Mountains cross it Two ways, and has a Town of the same Name, with a safe Haven on the Western Shoar, besides some Villages.

At some distance to the North-East, and in the Mouth of the Gulph of Salonichi lie a Cluster of Islands, among which Pelagnisi, Olim Alonessus, Sciurus, now Sciara, Scopelius, now Scopulo, are the chief, but they contain nothing memorable.

LEMNOS, now STALIMENE, a large Fruitful and well Cultivated Island, seated in the North of the Aegean Sea, at an equal distance almost from the Coasts of Greece, Natolia, and Thrace: in the Latitude of 41 Degrees, the chief Town standing directly over-against Monte Santo, or Mount Athos, whose Shadow reaches to its Market-place, tho' it be 86 miles distant, as some say, tho' by the Maps it does not appear to be above 60 miles. The Form of the Island is Quadrangular, and its extent about 25 miles over. The chief Town of the same Name stands on the West-Shoar: It is a small City, and hath a good Port. Opposite to it on the East-Shoar stands Misira another good Town, near which is dug the Terra Lemnia, a sort of Mineral Earth reckon'd good against Poysons, Infections, &c. and is much esteem'd, being sent Abroad in small Peller mark'd with a Publick Seal. This Island is noted in Antiquity for the fabulous Fall of Vulcan; and so the Entertainment of Jasen, and the Argenatus by Hypsipyle.

Samothrace, now Samandrachi, a small Island North from Stalimene, in the midst between the and Thrace, has plenty of Honey and Wild-Deer but no convenient Port, nor frequented but by Pirates.

Lembro, Imbros, lies on the East of Stalimene, near the Mouth of the Dardanelis. It has a Cattle on the Top of a Mountain, and a safe Port.

Tasso, Thassus, seu Thalassia; lies near the Coast of Thrace, about 12 Leagues North-West from Stalimene: It has a Town with a good Harbour on the North-Shoar, and several Castles,

The other Islands in the Archipelago, as Tenedos, Lesbos, Scio, Samos, Icaria, Pathmos, Lero, Choos, Astypalea, and Carpathus, being situate on the Coast of Asia are describ'd there, as well as Cypus and Rhodes; so we shall now proceed to speak of the rest of the European Turkey.

CHAPTER V.

Of the Western Part of Turkey in Europe, comprehending the Province of Bosnia, with a small Part of Slavonia, and Hungary; as also of the Republick of Ragusa, and Dalmatia.

HAVING Travell'd through Hungary, Sclavonia, Croatia, and Morlachia; and begun our Account of Turkey in Europe, with Greece, because the most noble part of it: We Return now to speak of the other Provinces of that Empire; and here the Province of Dalmatia first offers it self; but that being mostly recover'd by the Venetians, the principal Cities of it have been describ'd in our Account of the Dominions of that State; so that it is only necessary here to say, that DALMATIA is seated along the the Coasts of the Adriatick Sea, between Albania on the East, and Morlachia on the West, having Bosnia and Servia on the North, and the Sea on the South, except where Ragusa intervenes: It extends very much in Length even near 200 miles, but its Breadth is not above 30. or at most 40 miles.

The Soil of it is in some parts Mountainous, but otherwise very fertile, producing Corn, Wine, Oyl, Honey and Wax.

This Province was part of the Ancient ILLYRICUM, but that extended much farther both West and East; for Cluverius tells us, That it was joyn'd to Italy on the West, being only parted by the River Arfia, in Istria; thence by a Line drawn to that Ridge of Mountains that part Morlachia from Croatia; which Mountains divided it from Pannonia. On the North, and Eastward it extended to Mount Scodrus, now Chimera, and the River Drilo, now Drin, in Albania; and so comprehended the present Morlachia, Dalmatia, and part of Albania. But its Limits were often extended and restrain'd during the time of its being a Kingdom; which was suppress'd by the Romans, and Illyricum made a Province of their Empire, a little before the Third Punick War. Afterwards the Dalmatians assert their Liberty, and were for sometime a considerable People, extending their Country on all sides; but in the end it became part of the Eastern Empire till its Declension, when the Sclavi made it part of their Kingdom: Afterwards the Huns over-run it; who committing Piracies on their Neighbours, were Attack'd and made Tributary by the Venetians. In process of Time Dalmatia became a separate Government under its own Dukes, of whom Demetrius was about the Year 1076, invested by the Pope with the Title of King. Upon the failure of his Line in 1310, it was claim'd by the King of Hungary, as part of the Kingdom of Croatia, and part of it was possess'd by him, and part by the Venetians. At present the Venetians have all the Coasts, and the Principal Cities; and the Turks the Skirt of the upland Country on the Limits of Bosnia, and Servia.

The chief Towns Subject to the Venetians, as we have said in our Account of Italy, are,

Zara, } Traw,
Nona, } Cliffa,
Sebenico. } Cattaro.

Other chief Towns not mention'd there.

Scardona, }
Castel-novo, } Budoa.

And the chief Towns Subject to the Turks, are

Trebigna, }
Narenza, } Antivari.

Scardona, call'd Skardin by the Slavonians, is a place of great Antiquity; by Ptolomy, plac'd in Liburnia, by Strabo call'd Scardo, and Scordona by Porphyrogenita, formerly the Metropolis of Dalmatia, but now Ruinous; however the See of a Bishop Translated from Belgrade. It stands on the River Kerka in the Frontiers of Morlachia, and Bosnia, 20 miles North from Sebenico. It was sold to the Venetians in 1411. by the Waywood of Bosnia; but being afterwards taken by the Turks, was recover'd by the Venetians in 1683.

Narenza, or Narenta, which P. Mala calls Nara, and Pliny Narona, stands on the River Naro, 70 miles East from Spalato, and 40 North from Ragusa. It was anciently a very Great and Powerful City, having under its Jurisdiction (according to Varro) 98 Towns, and assum'd the Sovereignty of the Gulph of Venice, but was subdu'd by the Venetians in 987, and lost almost all its Ancient Splendor. It was an Episcopal See; but in 1479 the Turks took and still possess it. Near to this place there is a Plain 30 miles Long, and 2 miles Broad, which is very Fruitful, and produces plenty of Corn in Six Months of the Year; but constantly about the middle of October it is overflow'd, and continues so the other six Months of the Year.

Trebigna stands 40 miles South-East from Narenza, and the Frontiers of Ragusa, Subject to the Turks. An Episcopal See, formerly subject to the Ragusians.

Castel-Nevo, is seated on the West side of the Gulph of Cattaro, 3 Leagues from its Mouth, 15 miles West from that City, and near 60 East from Ragusa. It is a very strong place, being Built on a Rocky Ground, and defended on the North-side by the Castle Salimanga. This Town was taken from the Turks in 1583, by the Confederate Forces, but lost the next Year. But in the Year 1687, the Venetians finally took and still possess it.

Budoa, mention'd by Pliny, Ptolomy, and Stephanus, under the Names of Butua, Bulua, and Buthaer, is situated on the Sea-Coasts between the Gulph of Cattaro, and the Town of Dolcigno, about 20 miles East from the former. It is an Episcopal See, and subjected to the Venetians.

Antivari, Antibatum, stands on the Borders of Illyria, of which it is sometime reckon'd part, on the Coast in the midway between Budoa and Dolcigno. It was under the Venetians an Archiepiscopal see; but has been Subject to the Turks above an Age.

The Territory of the Republick of RAGUSA, lies on the Sea-Coasts, partly Island and Peninsula, and partly on the main Land of Dalmatia, which bounds it on the East, as the Bay of Narenza, and the Island Lefina do on the North, and the Adriatick Sea on the South. The Country is about 60 miles Long, but not proportionably Broad. The Soil is not over-fruitful, but the Country is reasonably Populous, and a well govern'd Republick, but Tributary to the Turks, and often smother'd by the Venetians, and insulted by other Princes. But they are so fond of their imaginary Liberty, that they will not be persuaded to put themselves under any Potent Master who could protect 'em. The Government is somewhat like that of Venice, except that thro' the Jealousy of the Inhabitants, the Doge is chang'd every Month, as also the Governor of the Castle of Ragusa. This little Republick brags of Antiquity beyond Venice, and put it self (as Sir P. Rycaut says) under the Protection of the Turks before they were Masters of any part of Europe: And by the Treaty of Carlowitz this Sovereignty is particularly conserv'd by the Turks. The chief Towns are,

Stagno, } Sabioncello.

RAGUSA, call'd by the Slavonians Dubrounick, suppos'd to be the Ancient Epidaurus; but as others, Built by the Epidaurians after the Destruction of their own City, whereof they say Ragusi Vecchio, 2 miles from it is the Ruins, The City is not much above a mile in Compass, but Populous, the See of a Metropolitan, and one of the chiefest Marts in these Parts, having a safe and Commodious Harbour on the Adriatick Sea, near 100 miles South-East from Spalato, 60 West from Cattaro, as also 120 West from Dura &c. It is well Fortified with a strong Castle, a steep craggy Rock, and good Bulwarks, and Environ'd with large Suburbs. It hath also a Garison of 200 Men, and the Burghers keep constant Guard. The Port is named Sante Croce, and is secur'd by the small Island Lacima, which lies about half a Mile from the Town on the one side, and a Cape of Land on the other, which is Fortified. This City was miserably shatter'd by an Earthquake on the 6th. of April in the Year 1667, whereby the greatest part of it was destroy'd.

Stagno, Stagnum, is a small City with a Commodious Harbour, and an Episcopal See, 20 miles North from Ragusa, at the Isthmus of the Peninsula, in whose Western Part, 25 miles from it stands Sabioncello, or Sabio, another good Town, with a Haven over-against the Island Curzola.

To the Ragusians are also Subject,

The Islands, Meleda and Augusta, or Aufla, both lying near the Coasts of the Peninsula; the former about 20 miles in Length, with a Town of the same Name, is not above a League distant; the other lies to the West of it, and on the South of Curzola, not so large.

Curzola, Coreyra niger Strabo, an Island larger than either of these, lies also not above a League or Two from the Western Coast of Ragusa, the chief Town of the same Name, being seated on the North-Shoar over-against Sabioncello, formerly Subject to Ragusa, but now to the Venetians.

There are Three or Four other small Islands, but not considerable.

B O S N I A.

On the North of Dalmatia lies Bosnia, call'd Woffen by the Germans, between that and the River Save, which parts it from Sclavonia on the North, as the River does it from Servia on the East, and the Unna from Croatia on the West. It was anciently that part of Pannonia, call'd Inferior, or Secunda Conflularis, and took its present Name from the River Bosna, or Possna, which runs through some part of it, and falls into the Save. It was sometime an independent Kingdom; afterwards became Tributary to the Hungarians; and Lastly, was Subjected to the Turks, who still enjoy it.

The AIR is Sharp, but the SOIL produces some Corn, and some Mines of Gold and Silver. It is divided into the Upper and Lower; the former being the Southern part to Dalmatia; the latter on the Banks of the Save. The chief Towns are,

In the Upper { Bagnaluca, { Tina.

In the Lower { Fayczza.
 { Bosna-Serajo.

Bagnaluca, or Banialuck, stands on the Confines of Dalmatia, 30 miles North from Spalato. It was taken by the Turks in 1527, and is the Seat of their Governor.

Tina, is 30 miles West from Bagnaluca, near the Head of the River il Kirk, and near the Confines of Croatia and Dalmatia, 30 miles North from Sebinico.

Fayczza, Giezza, or Gaitia, thought to be the Ancient Emate, stands upon a Hill 50 miles North from Tina, 20 South from the Save, and near 40 East from Wibic in Croatia. It was formerly the Metropolis of Bosnia, and the Seat of their King, taken by the Turks, and recover'd by the Hungarians in the 15th. Century; but finally reconquer'd by the Turks in 1530, and made the Seat of their Sangiac. It has a strong Castle, and other Fortifications for its Defence.

Bosna-Saraya, or Sarajo, stands upon the River Mizlazza, 75 miles East from Fayczza, 25 South from the Save, and 15 West from the Frontiers of Servia. It is now reckon'd the chief Town of Bosnia.

Of the Part of Sclavonia and Hungary granted to the Turks.

By the Treaty of Carlowitz, it is agreed, That a Line drawn from the Bank of the Tibisch, opposite to Titul, and to that Angle of Land made by the Confluence of the Tibisch and Danube, thence over the Danube, and thence over part of Sclavonia to the place where the Bosut falls into the Save (which is over-against the Limits of Bosnia) shall be the Boundary of the Two Empires: That part toward Belgrade being Subject to the Turk, and the rest of Sclavonia remain to the Empire. In the Turkish part stands no considerable City; Salankement, Semlyn, and what else was worth notice, we have already mention'd in our account of Sclavonia.

By the same Treaty of Carlowitz, it is also stipulated, That the Province subject to the Fortress of Temeswar, (which is the South-East Corner of Hungary) bounded by Transylvania, and Walachia on the East and North-East, the River Marosch on the North, the River Tibisch on the West, and the River Danube on the South, shall remain under the Ottoman Dominion; and the Imperialists shall demolish, Caransebes, Lippa, Czanad, Berscho, Sabla, and Three or Four other places never to be Refortified. The Imperialists and Turks to enjoy in common the use of the Rivers Marosch, and Teyffe, and the Islands which his Imperial Majesty hath therein shall remain in his possession.

Temeswaer, the Capital of this Province, is a large strong Town, seated on the River Temes, (whence it took its Name) near the Confines of Transylvania 40 miles North-East from Belgrade, 75 from Great-Varadin to the South, and 130 from Buda to the South-East. It was taken by the Turks in 1552, after a Vigorous Defence, made by a Spanish Garrison, then in the place, who contrary to Treaty were all cut to Pieces by the Turks. It has ever since been the Seat of a Bassa; and is so strongly Fortified, that they call it Invincible.

C H A P. VI.

Of SERVIA and BULGARIA,
olim Moesia, Superior & Inferior.

THE Ancient Moesia, contained these two large Provinces, except the most Eastern part, on the Banks of the Black Sea, which was possess'd by the Scythians, and call'd Scythia Pontica. It was divided into the Superior or Prima, which is the present Servia; and the Inferior or Secunda, now Bulgaria; the Division being at the River Ciabus. In the Upper bordering upon Macedon, liv'd the Dardani, whence the Country was Nam'd Dardania. In the Lower, which Borders upon Thrace, the Tribal were the most noted Nation; these had the Honour to Vanquish Philip King of Macedon, in his Return through their Country, from an Expedition to Sarmatia. Beyond them Eastward, lay the Scythians, of whom the most considerable part were the Getae, Inhabitants of both sides the Danube, in Dacia as well as Moesia.

M. Licini

M. Licinius Crassus entirely subdu'd it to the Roman Empire; and afterwards the Upper Masia took the Name of Servia, and the Lower that of Bulgaria, and became in time two Independent Kingdoms, which were finally Conquer'd by Mahomet II. and are still subject to the Turks.

SERVIA lies Eastward from Bosnia, having the Rivers Danube and Save on the North, Albania and Macedon on the South, Bulgaria on the East, Dalmatia on the South-West, and Slavonia on the North-West, from which it is divided by the River Save, as the River Drino is its Division from Bosnia. Its Extent is above 250 Miles in Length, from East to West; and 130 in Breadth, from North to South. Being seated in Latitude from 43 to 45 Degrees. And in Longitude from 37 to 43 Degree.

The AIR is Temperate and Healthy, and the SOIL so fruitful, that Masia was call'd by the Romans the Granary for Corn; but by reason of the severe Government of the Turks, it is not half Cultivated. Dr. Brown tells us, 'tis a fruitful and pleasant Country, consisting of Plains, Woods and Hills, which would produce Wine, Corn and Metals, if duly Manur'd: It hath also excellent Horses, and is well water'd with Rivers.

The INHABITANTS were always reckon'd a Barbarous, Cruel sort of People, much inclin'd to Robbery and Drunkenness, and tho' professing Christianity, according to the Greek Church, are often guilty of selling Children to the Turks. There are Roman Catholicks among 'em; but the Greeks and Jews (who manage the Traffick) inhabit the Cities, and the Turks the Burghs and Fortresses. The chief Towns in Servia are,

Belgrade,	}	{	Nissa,
Semendria,			Scopia,
Widin,			Novibazar:

BELGRADE, call'd by the Germans Greichsh-Weisemburg, and Nandor Alba by the Hungarians, Alba Græca, aut Alba Bulgaria; suppos'd to be the ancient Taurunum, seeing that is plac'd in the Pcutingarian Tables, 3 Miles from the Confluence of the Danube and Save, at least it grew up out of its Ruins. It is seated on a Hill in the Country of Rascia, on the South-side of the Danube, and East-side of the Save, at the Confluence of those two Rivers, in the Latitude of 45 Deg. and Longitude 38 Deg. 30 Min. It is a large City very well fortify'd, and admirably seated for Trade, having besides the Danube, the Convenience of the Save, Drave, Tibiscus, and other Navigable Rivers to convey the Commodities which the Fertility of the Country would produce, if it were inhabited by a Virtuous and Industrious People, under a regular and favourable Government. And in effect this is the greatest Mart in all these Parts, being Traded to by the Ragufans, by the Merchants of Vienna, who have Factories in this City, and by the Armenians and Jews, who are numerous here, especially the former, who have a Church. Belgrade was formerly the Bulwark of Hungary. It resisted the two Sieges of Amurath II. in 1439. and Mahomet II. in 1456. but was at last taken by Solyman the Magnificent in 1521. The Turks slighted it for many Years, having Frontiers so much more advanc'd. But when the Imperialists had taken Buda, in 1686. they thought of repairing these Fortifications, which they immediately set to work upon. But however could not make it strong enough to resist the Christian Army, who under the Duke of Bavaria sat down before it, and September 6th 1688. took it. But it was a Place of too much Importance for the Turks to sit down with the Loss of; wherefore in 1690. they invested it with an Army of 60000 Men, under the Command of the Grand Visier. The Garrison consisting of 6000 Men, made a brave Defence, till the Magazine was unhaply blown up by the fall of a Bomb, the Store houses fir'd, part of the Walls blown up, and the Trenches fill'd with Rubbish, which gave the Turks so much Advantage, that they enter'd with Sword in Hand, and cut all the Garrison off, except the Governor and 300 Men, who found means to escape. And it is now the Frontier of Turkey on this side. The River Danube is very broad here, and its Stream so rapid, that it permits not the Waters of the Save to mix with it, but (as Dr. Brown expresses it) cuts that River off, and the Waters of the one, and the other, are visibly distinguish'd; that of the Danube being white and thick, and the Save green and clear.

Semendria, anciently a Roman Colony, and afterwards the Capital of Servia, but now ruinous; stands near the Banks of the Danube, 20 Miles East from Belgrade; near this Place Sigismund, King of Hungary, was defeated by the Turks in the Year 1409. and in 1427. they took the Place; which the Christians beat 'em out of, after they had taken Belgrade in 1688. but two Years after the Turks retook it by Storm, and put all the Garrison to the Sword.

Widin or Viddin, seated on the Danube at the Mouth of the River Lom, is a Fortress of great Moment for covering the adjacent Parts, which made Prince Lewis of Baden, after he had beaten the Turks in 1689. and soon after taken Nissa, to march with a Party of Germans in the Month of October that Year, to this Place, which he took by Surprise; but the Castle held out for some time, which however was forc'd to submit to the Conqueror; and they held it till the Year 1690. It stands 150 Miles East from Belgrade, and about 70 North from Nissa. In the Neighbourhood of this Town has happen'd several Battles, viz. in 1443. the Memorable one of Hunniades, who set upon the Turks by Night, and kill'd 30000 of them. In 1595. the Turks lost 19000 in Battle at a little distance from this place, And at the taking of the Town above-mention'd, Prince Lewis flew 2000 of those that made defence.

Nissa, seated on a River of the same Name, which falls into the Morava, the chief River of this Country, at the distance of 140 Miles South-East from Belgrade, and 60 South from the Danube. It is a Town of Strength and great Importance, and was the most advanc'd Town that the Christian Army possess'd in their Progress in this Province. A. 1689. Prince Lewis of Baden with an Army of 15000 fought the Turks near it, entirely defeated their Army of 80000 Men, and immediately took Possession of the Town, which was reasonably well fortify'd. But in the Year 1690. the Turks retook it after a Siege of 3 Weeks; and soon after the Frontiers of Turkey were again extended to Belgrade, tho' on this Loss the Turks were ready to accept Peace on any Terms. But it pleas'd God to order it otherwise, and permit this Province to be still subject to these Arbitrary Masters.

Scopia or Uscopia, Scupi, Ptol. a City of great Trade, and the largest in these Parts, as Dr. Brown says, is seated in a pleasant and plentiful Country, partly partly Hills, and partly Plains, on the River Var- dar or Axius, at the Foot of Mount Orbelus, near the Confines of Macedon, 60 Miles from Nissa, and 120 from the Danube to the South, 60 from Sophia to the West, and 100 from Salonicbi to the North-West. It is a populous Place, adorn'd with fair Houses, many Mosques, and delightful Walks all round it. 'Tis also a Place of considerable Commerce, between Bulgaria, Macedonia and Belgrade, and has Streets of Shops cover'd over, as the manner is at Belgrade, and other Trading Cities of Turkey. When Mahomet I. Conquer'd it, he plac'd here a Colony of Asiaticks, which with Jews were its chief Inhabitants. Before that it had been an Archi-Episcopal See. In the Year 1689. the Turks abandon'd this City, and General Picolomini took Possession; but because it was not strong enough to hold, he burnt and left it.

BULGARIA, five Moesia Inferior.

Eastward from Servia, along the Southern Banks of the Danube, quite to the Black Sea, lies Bulgaria, bounded on the South by a Ridge of Mountains, which part it from Thrace or Romania. Its Extent is more in Length than Servia, being near 300 Miles from East to West; but in Breadth 'tis not above 60 in the middle part, but near twice as much at each end. It hath high Mountains, fruitful Valleys, plenty of Oxen and Sheep, and in general a good fertile Country. Formerly subject to its own Kings, now the Turks, and inhabited by Greek Christians, as well as Turks and Jews. The chief Cities are,

Sophia,	{	Axiopolis,
Silistria,		Proslaviza,
Nigeboli,		Baba,
Ternova,		Magnegalia,
Hasgrad,		Varna,
Dorostero,		Mesember.

S O P H I A, or Sofia, otherwise call'd Triadizza, the Capital of this Province, is seated on the River Icher, in a spacious Plain, near Mount Hemus, at an equal distance from the Confines of Servia, Romania and Macedon, being 65 Miles distant from Scopia to the East, 110 from Salonicbi to the North, 90 from the Danube to the South, and 100 from Philippoli in Romania to the West. It is a large, populous and well-built City, on the Road from Constantinople to Belgrade; the Seat of the Beglerbeg of Rumeli, but however destitute of Walls. It was anciently nam'd Sardica, and took its present Name (as is generally believ'd) from Sophia, the Wife of the Emperor Justinian, in whose Honour that Prince Re-founded
it. It was for some time the See of an Arch-Bishop, and was Famous for a general Council held in it in the Year 347.

Silistria, a large City, the second of Note in Bul- garia, and by some reckon'd as the Capital, and the Seat of a Turkish Sangiack; stands on the River Abis, or Jatrus, 70 Miles North from Sophia, and 25 South from the Danube: Sansen places this City on the Danube, 150 Miles more East, but with what Reason I can't tell, since all other Maps and Writings place it as we have said.

Nicopolis or Nigeboli, and by the Turks Sciltaro, stands on the Danube, at the Mouth of the Jatrus, or Ischar, 25 Miles North from Silistria. Luyts calls it Gemin; major & minor, quas Danubius inter- fluit; but as no Maps express so much, nor other Authors mention it, we must leave it to the Reader's further Search. It was built by the Emperor Trajan, after the Defeat of King Decabius; and as Baudrand tells us, was an Arch-Episcopal See, in its Christian State. Near this Place Sigismund, King of Hungary, was unfortunately Defeated by Bajazet the Turkish Emperor, in the Year 1396. which was owing more to the Divisions among the Christians, than the Bravery of the Turks; for as History relates, there fell 60000 of the Turks, and 20000 of the Christians.

Ternova, another good City, stands on the River Fantra near Mount Hemus, about 20 Miles from the Confines of Romania, 30 from Silistria to the East, and 40 from the Danube to the South. Ferrarius calls it Arch-Episcopal, and the Metropolis of Bulgaria.

Dorostero, Dorostorus, Dorostolon aut Dorostena, formerly a considerable City, and a Bishop's See, is now a Village only, seated near the Danube, 130
Miles East from Silistria.

Axiopolis stands also on the Danube, 30 Miles below Dorostero.

Towns in Bulgaria, on the Coasts of the Black-Sea, are,

Tom, Tomisware or Balla, seated in an Island made by the Mouths of the Danube, is the Place to which the Poet Ovid was Banish'd.

Proslaviza, or Chiusstenge, olim Istropolis, stands at the Mouth of the South Branch of the Danube.

Magnegalia, 20 Miles more to the South, a small Port.

Varna, the Dicynopolis of Pliny, stands upon the River Zyra, a few Miles from Sea. A few Miles from it a notable Battle was Fought in the year 1444 between the Turks and Christians, wherein Lewis, King of Hungary, was kill'd. It stands in the Midway between Magnegalia and Mesember.

Mesember, Mesembria, ut & Menebria, Strabo, Mesambria, Herod. stands on the Confines of Roma- nia, and on a small Bay, which is an ancient Port, mention'd by Historians, as the People about are by the Poet Ovid. Ferrarius calls it Urbs Archi- Episcopalis; but whether it be so still, we dare not say.

CHAP. VII.

OF ROMANIA aut THRACIA. And of the Greek and Turkish Emperors.

THIS Country had its first Name, as 'tis thought, from Thrace the Son of Mars; or as others, from the Sharpness of the Air, and the rough Temper of the People, quasi Τραχέα aspera regio, a sharp or cruel Country; thus Cluverius. The Name of Romania was given it by the Emperors, when they had establish'd their Throne there: And since the Turks Conquer'd it, 'tis nam'd Rumeli.

It is a large Country, bounded on the North by Mount Hæmus, call'd by the Greeks Balkan, Sclavonians Cumoniça, Italians Monte Argentaro, or Costonazza, a long continu'd Ridge of high Mountains, which divide this Province from Bulgaria, on the South by the Archipelago, on the East the Propontis, and Bosphorus, and the Euxine or Black-Sea, and on the West by Macedon and Bulgaria. Its utmost Extent from East to West is near 300 Miles, that is, from the City of Constantinople to the Confines of Macedon: And its Breadth is about 150 Miles. The Air is Cold, but the Soil however produces plenty of good Corn and Pasture, and some, but very little, Wine. In the Mountains are Mines of Silver, Lead and Alum. It was anciently divided among many Nations or People, even no less than 50, according to Pliny. Afterwards made Tributary to the Macedonians; then Conquer'd by the Romans, under Caius Scribonius Curio, Proconsul; long possess'd by the Eastern Emperors; and lastly Conquer'd by the Turks, who have govern'd it for near 250 Years past. The chief River is the Meriza, olim Hæbrus, which takes its Rise at the Foot of Mount Rhodope, near the Confines of Macedon, passes by Philippipoli and Adrianople, and falls at last into the Archipelago; in this River 'tis said Gold Sand is sometimes found.

The Christian Religion, according to the Greek Church, is generally Profess'd, notwithstanding that the Government is all Mahometan; there are also many Jews, and some Papists. The chief Cities are,

Janicoli,	{	Scutari,
Philippipolis,		Abdera,
Nicopoli,	{	Gallipoli,
Adrianople,		Sestos,
Trajanople,	{	Selivera,
Constantinople,		Rudisio.
Galata,

Janicoli or Nonocolo, stands on the River Meriza, on the Road between Sophia and Philippipoli, 60 Miles East from the former, and 40 West from the latter.

Philippipoli or Philiba, olim Trimontium, a large City, but without Walls, seated also on the Meriza, near 60 miles East from the Confines of Bulgaria, and as many North from the Archipelago. It is an Archiepiscopal See, and was taken by the Turks in the Year 1360. who have ever since held it.

Nicopoli stands on the Confines of Macedon, 20 Miles from the Archipelago, and 40 South from Philippipoli.

Adrianople, or Adrinopolis, call'd Endrem & Drenale, took its Name from the Emperor Adrian, by whom it was Repair'd in the Year 122. and is seated on the River Meriza, in the middle of the Province, 130 Miles from the Confines of Bulgaria to the East, 150 from Constantinople to the West, 70 from the Archipelago to the North, and 60 from Mount Hæmus to the South. It is a large well-built City in a wholesome Air, esteem'd the second of Romania; and before the raking of Constantinople, was the Seat of the Turkish Emperor, after the Year 1362. in which they took it; and it is still very frequently Honour'd with his Presence, especially during the late War, and at any time when the Plague rages at Constantinople.

Trajanople, so nam'd from the Emperor Trajan, being before call'd Zermis, stands on the Meriza, 50 Miles South from Adrianople; it was formerly a considerable City, and the See of an Archbishop, but is now dwindled into a small Town.

Abdera, or Asperosa, seated on the Coast of the Archipelago, 70 Miles South-West from Adrianople, and 50 West from the Mouth of the River Meriza, and about 15 from the Bistonian Lake. It is more notable for Antiquity than its present State. It was Built by Abderus, the Son of Diomedes, or Abdera, the Sister of Diomedes, according to Solinus and others. And it is by others imputed to Abderus, one of the Companions of Hercules, torn to pieces by Diomedes's Horses; and was once in so good Estate as to be proverbially call'd Abdera the Beautiful. It was the Birth-place of Democritus the Philosopher, who put out his Eyes that he might the better Contemplate; as also of Protagoras the Philosopher. The Inhabitants were addicted to Frenzy and Lunacy, which occasion'd the Proverb Abderrica mens to denote a Lunatick.

Gallipoli, a large City with a Castle, Magazine and Fortification, and a good Port in the Mouth of the Dardanells and Propontis, stands in the Thracian Chersonesus, or Peninsula over against Lampsaco, in Asia, at the Mouth of the Strait call'd the Dardanells or Hellepont, toward the Propontis, or Sea of Marmora, 110 Miles South-West from Constantinople, and 130 South-East from Adrianople. This Place was heretofore much more considerable than at present; for tho' it be 5 or 6 Miles in Compass, it is not proportionably Populous: The Inhabitants are reckon'd about 20000, whereof two Thirds are Turks, and the rest Christians and Jews. It hath two Bays convenient for Gallies, whereof that on the South-side is capable of Ships of Burden. And on the Shoar are some dry Stations for Ships. The Town appears more advantageously from without than within side; for the high Steeples of the Mosques, and the Cupola's of the Bezeestans, or Places of Trade like Exchanges, both here and in all the chief chief Cities in Turkey, make a fine Show at a distance; whereas within the Town the Houses being low, built of Wood and Earth; the Streets narrow and cover'd, make but an ordinary Appearance. This is the Seat of the Beglerbeg of the Islands, the Præfect of these Seas.

Sestos, the ancient Town and Castle, the Ruins whereof still appear 25 Miles South from Gallipoli, over against Abydos on the Asian Shoar, call'd the Dardanelis, Famous for Xerxes's Bride here over the Hellepontus. These two Castles serve to command the Passage of this narrow Straight, and secure Constantinople on this side, as do those on the Thracian Bosphorus on the other side of the Propontis.

Rudisto, or Rodesto, a City of good Trade, having a commodious Haven on the Propontis, 20 Leagues North from Gallipoli.

Selivra, another Port and large Trading City on the Propontis, 12 Leagues North-East from Rudisto, and as many West from Constantinople.

The Propontis, on which these Towns as well as Constantinople are seated, otherwise call'd the Sea of Mamora. flows between the Archipelago, and the Euxine or Black-Sea, to both which it communicates only by two narrow Straights; that on the South-west is the Hellepont, of which we have been speaking; the other on the North-East is the Bosphorus of Thrace, which leads to the Black-Sea; both these Straights are very narrow, especially the latter; so that the Propontis seems but a Lake, the Asian Land on one side, and the Lands of Thrace on the other, surrounding it, except where these two Channels have broke thro'. It is 140 Miles from East to West, and 60 from North to South.

CONSTANTINOPLE is seated in Europe, very near the Shoar of Asia, on a Point or Tongue of Land that juts out into the Sea of Mamora, in a Triangular Figure, 6 Miles long, and 14 in Compass, two of its Sides being wash'd by the Sea. At the distance of about 20 Miles it affords the finest Prospect in the World, to the Wonder and Astonishment of all those who look upon it; for it lies along the Shoar for above 6 Miles, and so situated sloping towards the Sea, that you perceive at once an infinite number of Mosques, adorn'd with high Domes cover'd with Lead, and high Turrets, but especially with a lovely Prospect of the Castle of the Seven Towers, and of the Seraglio, which are particularly remarkable, both for their Largeness, and vast Number of gilt Globes, and Spires resembling little Steeples. But it appears much more Glorious and Delightful without than it does within; for the Houses are generally of Wood, and the Streets so narrow, that in the greatest part of 'em two loaded Horses cannot go a-breast; and their Houses jut out so far near the Top that in several places one may step from one Window to another, which exposes it to the fatal Inconveniences of Fire, which breaks out frequently, and proceeds irresistibly, till it meets with some Garden or empty Place, where there are no Houses to be burnt: And besides, this sort of Architecture is very offensive to the Eye; for the Streets are extremely disfigur'd by this Irregularity. Nor have their Houses any external Ornament, for they are made for the most part of rough unplaster'd Wood daub'd over with nasty red Paint, and look very ugly.

This City was Founded by Pausanias King of Sparta, about 660 Years before the Birth of Christ, and was call'd Byzantium, which Name it retain'd till Constantine the Great resolving to make it the Metropolis of the World, order'd it to be Rebuilt with all imaginable Magnificence, and call'd Constantinople, or Constantine's Town; but the Turks call it Stamboul. It was for a long time the Seat of the Eastern Emperor: The French in Conjunction with the Venetians, took it in the Year 1203 and 7 Years after 'twas retaken by the Greeks, who remain'd Masters of it till the Year 1453. when it fell into the hands of Mahomet II. and at present it is the Capital City of the Ottoman Empire. The Air is so extremely pure here, that the Inhabitants are never subject to any reigning Disease, except the Plague, which once every Year sweeps off vast Numbers of 'em. The Walls which surround this City at present are the same that were built by Constantine the Great, except in some places where they have been repair'd. They are double on one side next the Land, with Battlements after the Oriental Fashion, and Towers from place to place; and besides they are defended with a lind, but shallow Ditch. These, with the Castle of the Seven Towers, are all the Strength of Constantinople; for the Inhabitants not being accusom'd to War, would only serve to hasten a Famine; and Bombs would make terrible Work, considering the Manner and Materials of their Houses.

The Places and Things most worth seeing are, 1. The Beseftin, which is a distinct Canton of the City, enclos'd with Walls and Gates, where all the Merchant keep Shops. This is the finest and most regular Place in Constantinople: It is divided into Streets, and cover'd above with Planks, joyn'd together with Rasters, which form a kind of Roof, sufficient to secure them against all the Inconveniences of bad Weather. The Merchants in these Shops keep only a Pattern of what they have in their Warehouses. In one part of it there are Goldsmiths, in another Drapers, in another Mercers, and so all other Shopkeepers. And this is the only Place in Constantinople where there are Shops; for the rest of the City consists of little narrow Streets so desolate, that one may see more Streets than Persons as he passes along. The second Place remarkable, is the Hippodrome, which was Built by the Emperor Constantine for Exercises on Horse-back, and is still call'd the Place of Horses. It is an Oblong Square 400 Paces long, and about 200 broad; in that End of it which is opposite to the Seraglio, there are two Obelisks, one of 'em consisting of one Stone, is 70 Foot high. The third Thing remarkable, is the Church of Santa Sophia, which unquestionably hath lost much of its Magnificence, and is now the principal Mosque of the City. It is at present 120 Paces long, and 80 broad. The Walls are square, but the Vault or Roof is round, and so artificially contriv'd, that so large a Structure is supported without any Columns; for those Rows of Columns that form the two lower Portico's serve only for Ornament, and are so plac'd, that they cannot be suppos'd to carry any other Weight than that of two Galleries, and even the greatest part of these Columns are so old, that they are forc'd to bind them about with great Iron Hoops to prevent their falling. At the four Corners of the Building, where the Vault begins to be round, the Four Beasts mention'd in the Apocalyps are painted in Mosaick: but the Turks have disfigur'd these, as they have done the Image of our Saviour, which is over the principal Door. This Temple is pav'd with very fine Marble, cover'd with Mats, by reason of the Coldness of the Marble, which might incommode those that come to pay their Devotion, who always put off their Shoes before they enter. This Mosque is the only Ancient Structure of that Nature in Constantinople; for all the rest were built in this and the last Age, by Sultans or Sultaneſſes, whose Names they bear, the finest of which is that Built by the Sultaneſs Valide, Mother of Sultan Mahomet IV. The Grand Signior's Arsenal is at the end of the Port beyond Cassum-pacha and Galata, and contains a considerable Extent of Ground. The Gallies are laid up under 120 Arches; and 'tis said there are Arms in it for 60000 Men; but no Christian is allow'd to see them. The Seraglio, so much admir'd and talk'd of by those who never saw it, is Built on a Point of Land that juts out into the Sea, and is surrounded with high Walls, with a Parapet at the Top, and Battlements like those of the City. It is almost 4 Miles in Compass, the greatest part of which is taken up with Gardens. The Structure is irregular, and it is nothing but a vast heap of Buildings, not unlike some old Castles in Christendom. The principal Entry is near Sancta Sophia, and exactly resembles the Gate of an old paltry Town without Architecture or Ornament. On the Right-hand of the first Court, there are Apartments for the Sick, who are lodg'd as poorly as if it were in an Hospital. On the other hand are Magazines for 1000 Men, in case the Grand Signior had occasion at any time to Arm his Domestick Servants for the Security of his Person. In the next Court are the Grand Signior's Kitchens on one side, and Stables on the other for 100 Horses. Very near this Seraglio, and within the same Inclosure, stands the Old Seraglio, where the Wives of the Sultan's Predecessors are kept, and in a Third Seraglio the present Sultan's Wives are Lodg'd, joyn'd close to that of the Grand Signior. But a longer account of this famous place is not easy to be given, since few are allow'd to survey it all, and besides by this time 'tis like the Reader has enough on't.

But above all things that are to be seen about this City, the Harbour, which is called the Port by way of Excellency, is the most agreeably surprizing. 'Tis 3 Miles long, and almost 1 Broad, clean and deep throughout, even to the Shoar, the largest Ship coming up to the Land. At the Entry into it there is a high square Tower, commonly call'd the Tower of Leander, from a person of that Name; who, as the Story goes, us'd to swim thither every Night to his Mistress who was Imprison'd in the Tower.

It would be too tedious, and would swell the Description of this City, beyond what the Nature of this Work will allow, if we should relate all the various Accidents and Revolutions that have happen'd in it, from the time that Constantine the Great removed the Imperial Seat thither from Rome, till Mahomet II. Emperor of the Turks, made himself absolute Master of it, on the 27th. of May 1453, after having Slain Constantine XV. the last of the Grecian Emperors.

Constantinople stands in the Latitude of 41 Degrees, and 30 Minutes, and Longitude of 49 Degrees, and 30 Minutes: On the Propontis on one side and the Thracian Bosphorus on the other, by which it is separated from Asia, but at so little distance, that common Boats pass over; and Scutari on the Asian side is reckon'd a Suburbs to it; as is also

Galata adjoining to Constantinople on the North-side the Port: It stands on the South-side of a steep Hill, which jets out a Promontory into the Bosphorus. It is a City of its self, being surrounded with Walls and large Suburbs, exceeding Populous, and chiefly inhabited by Christians and Jews. It is a place of great Trade, and hath a Caravanſeraï, or Publick Store-house wherein the Merchants Lodge their Goods: It is handsomely Built and well adorn'd with Cupula's, &c. On the Top of the Hill stands a round Tower adorn'd with Spires, and might be intended for a Fortrefs. On the North-side of Galata lies the Suburb

Pera, by which Name is sometime understood all Galata. It consists of one large Street running Northward, with divers cross ones, and is honour'd with the Residence of the Christians Ambassadors.

Scutari, or Scudaret, is seated on the Asian Shoar over against the Port between the Two Promontories of the Seraglio and Galata. It is a large Town, suppos'd to be the Chrysopolis, and Diane Forum of the Ancients, although there be no remains of Antiquity. It is Adorn'd with a Royal Mosque, Built and Endow'd by the Sultaneſs's Mother: As also a Palace or House of Pleasure of the Grand Seignior's. Not far from hence on the Brow of a Hill may be seen one of the most beautiful Prospects in the World; for the City of Constantinople, Galata, and Pera, the Bosphorus, and the Propontis, with the Country about on both Shoars may be seen at once.

Constantinople thus increas'd with Scutari, Pera, Galata, as also Cassum-pacha, and Tophana, which all lie contiguous, may be reckon'd one of the largest Cities in the World.

Of the Government and Customs of the Turks.

This Empire was Founded by Ottoman, or Osman the First, about the Year of our Lord 1300. and its Seat was at first Establish'd at Prusa, a City of Bythinia in Asia Minor, which they took in the Year 1325. Afterwards it was Translated to Adrianople in Thrace, and at last fix'd at Constantinople; where generally their Emperor, whom we commonly call the Grand Signior, keeps his Court, and from whence he issues out his Absolute and Uncontrollable Commands over all those vast Dominions that are under his Jurisdiction in Europe, Africa and Asia. For, according to the Primitive and Fundamental Constitution of the Government, the Turkish Empire is absolutely and entirely Despotic; that is, the Supreme and Arbitrary Power is lodg'd in the Person of the Emperor, whose Will is the only Law by which he Rules, and who acknowledges no other Maxim of Government than sic volo, sic jubeo. He is not curb'd by any Written Law or Custom, and those whom he oppresses, have not so much as a Right to complain. He may take away any Man's Estate, and either keep it, or give it to another. Sometimes he passes by the most Ancient Bassa's, and in one Day advances a simple Chiaux, or even a Cook to the Dignity of Grand Visier. He can, and does send for the Heads of those he has a Mind to be rid of, who are murder'd without any Tryal or Form of Justice, and even without knowing the Reason of his Displeasure, which sometimes is more than he knows himself. In a Word, his Pleasure is the Supreme and Uncontrollable Law. This unlimited Power of the Sultan is founded on the Mahometan Religion, which enjoyns a blind Obedience to all his Commands under the pain of Damnation.

The Grand Visier is the Chief Minister of State, and is call'd King by the Turks, to shew how much their Sultans slight and undervalue that Title, in imitation of the old Roman Emperors, who bestow'd Kingdoms on their Favourites. The Grand Visier is entrusted with the whole Management of Affairs, and his Power is almost equal to the Sultan's. He is in a great measure the Arbitrer of Peace and War, and creates the Fortune of all the great Officers in the Empire. 'Tis true, he ought to do nothing without the Advice of a Council compos'd of Seven Bassa's, call'd the Visiers of the Council; but they have only the Shadow of Authority, which scarce deserves to be mention'd.

The next to the Visier Azem, or first Visier, are several Beglerbegs (which, as Sir Paul Rycant observes, may not unaptly be compar'd to Vice-roys in some parts of Christendom) who have under their Jurisdiction many Sangiacks, Beyes, Aga's and others; to every one of these the Grand Signior in Honour gives three Staves trim'd with the Tail of a Horse, to distinguish them from Bascha's who have only two. They are the Governors of Provinces.

The next in order are the Bassa's, who are a sort of Lieutenants in the Provinces. Their Office is to Administer Justice exactly, and to keep the People in Subjection to the Government. But they often abuse their Authority, and exercise more Arbitrary Power and Tyranny over the People than the Grand Signior himself. Every Bassa maintains a certain Number of standing Forces at his own Charge, who are always at his Command upon all Occasions, being well paid, which the Emperor's Army sometimes is not, for want of Money. This is the fatal Source of all those Seditions that have so often shaken, and will at last overturn the Empire. A Prince that would secure the Loyalty of his Forces, must take care of them himself, visit them often, give out all Orders, prefer Men of Knowledge, keep both the Officers and Soldiers under an exact Discipline, and pay them punctually. The Grand Signior observes not one of these, and therefore he may blame himself for the Unruliness of his Army. The Fate of Monarchs depends on their Armies, and without these neither Alexander, Cesar, nor Lewis XIV. could have made such Conquests; or the Confederates in the late War been able to put a Stop to his growing and formidable Power.

There are two sorts of Beglerbegs, says Sir Paul Rycant; the first is call'd Has ile Beglerbeglick, which have a certain Rent assign'd them out of the Cities, Countries, and Signiories allotted to the Principality; the second is call'd Saliane Beglerbeglick, who have a certain Salary collected by the Grand Signior's Offices, with the Treasure of the whole Government, out of which also are paid the Sangiack Beglers, that is, the Lords of the several Counties, Towns and Cities, and the Militia of the Country. Of the first sort he reckons up 22, and of the other 6, for a particular Account of both which, we must refer the Reader to the fore said Author's Present State of the Ottoman Empire; where he may also find an Account of all the other inferior Officers belonging to that Government.

As to the Manners and Customs of the Turks, they are opposite to us almost in every thing. We content our selves with one Wife, they marry several Wives: Our Habit is short, theirs long: We wear our Hair long, and our Beards shav'd, they shave their Hair, and suffer their Beards to grow: we write in a strait Line from Left to Right, and they in a crooked from Right to Left. and it were easie to add several other Instances of the same Nature, since the Opposition reaches even to the meanest Actions, such as the easing of Nature, for they crouch down to Piss, like Women: They obstinately adhere to their ancient Customs, and accuse the Franks of Fickleness and Inconstancy, and boast of their Strength of Mind, that fixes on solid Enjoyments, and take no notice of Trifles; but one that seriously considers the Genius of this Nation, will easily find, That what they call Strength of Mind, Constancy and Solidity, is at the bottom nothing else but a pure Insensibility, and a Weakness that is altogether inexcusable in any reasonable Creature. They are so far from endeavouring to improve their Understanding, that one would think they affected Ignorance, and are so little acquainted with the Transactions of the World, that many of them scarce know the Name of their reigning Sultan. They never publish any Books, Journals, Gazettes, or the least Account of Publick Affairs.

They are much addicted to the Study of Magical Divination, and of the Philosopher's Stone. They are surprizingly negligent of the Publick Interest, and in that respect, run exactly counter to the Maxims that are observ'd in all well-govern'd States. If we consider this incurable Flaw in their Government, we may venture to conclude, That Posterity will not find many Objects of Admiration in the future Monuments of their Power and Glory. If the Egyptians, Greeks and Romans had not been Inspir'd with a nobler Ardour, we should not now see so many Curious and Inquisitive Persons undertake such long and troublesome Voyages, to visit the Ruins of their ancient Grandeur, or discover the Medals that give Light to their History. The Turks are so extremely careless of the Management of Publick Affairs, that their Streets are not so much as Pav'd: And if there were not Legacies left for such useful Works, I am apt to believe, there would not be a Fountain in their Towns, or Bridge on their Rivers. They have no Incorporated Societies, Town-Houses, Sheriffs or Burgo-Masters. There are no fast Posts or Carriers, so that when a Man has occasion to Write to any remote place, except Constantinople, Alger or Cairo, he must sometimes wait a whole Year for an Opportunity; and even between Smirna and Constantinople there are only Arabs, who go on Foot, and frequently stay a Month before they set out.

As to their Administration of Justice, they have no written Laws, but what are contain'd in the Alcoran, which they hold to be the Rule of Faith, and the Standard of Justice, and every thing that it forbids is esteem'd unlawful, and punishable. Nevertheless the Cadis and Bassa's judge as they please, for the Book is very short, and besides, a great deal fuller of Dreams and Absurdities than of Laws or Moral Precepts; and those few it contains are so ambiguously express'd, and deliver'd in so loose a manner, that these greedy Officers cannot desire a more favourable Opportunity to satisfy their Avarice. Besides, they judge without Appeal, and cause the Sentence to be Executed upon the Spot. 'Tis true, some highly injur'd Persons have recourse to the Grand Signior's Divan; but that is seldom done, by reason it is Expensive and Troublesome; and besides, the Injustice done them must be very plain, or 'tis in vain to expect Satisfaction. All Civil Affairs are judg'd by the Cadis, according to the Deposition of Witnesses, without any regard to Writings. And if you can but bring two Persons to Swear that they saw you pay 1000 Piasters to your Creditor, which you ow'd him upon your Note or Bond, he loses his Money; and (as Du Mont says) there's always plenty of Knights of the Post, to be had for a small matter: And besides, the Cadi, whose Office lasts but for a Year, and who grows Rich in a few Months, thinks it not beneath the Dignity of his Office to take a little Money, and give Sentence as you would have it.

The Judgment of Criminal Affairs belongs to the Bassa, who proceeds much after the same manner; for Money clears the most Barbarous Malefactor; and without that, Justice degenerates to Cruelty. 'Tis true, the Grand Signior sends Superior Bassa's from time to time, attended with some Companies of Soldiers, to search after unpunish'd Malefactors; but these great Inquisitors have not power enough to resist the Charms of Money. There are several sorts of Punishments inflicted on the Malefactors in this Country; such as Beheading, Drowning, Hanging, Strangling, Burning, Impaling, and the Strapado. The two last for Turks that renounce the Mahometan Faith. Robbers and Murderers are Hang'd. Women are Drown'd. The Rebellious and Seditious are beheaded. Christians who Blaspheme Mahomet or the Alcoran, or lye with Turkish Women, are Burnt.

The Government of the Cities is manag'd by five kind of Officers, the Bassa, Sub-Bassa, Vaivod, Cadi, and the Receiver of the Customs. The Bassa is properly the Governor, and judges Criminal Causes; and the Sub-bassa is as it were his Deputy. The Vaivod examines the Measures and Weights, punishes Drunken Persons, and all Disorders in the City. The Cadi is the Judge in all Civil Suits. And the Receiver of the Customs is impower'd to take Cognizance of all Fraudulent Practices relating to Pecuniary Duties, in all which Cases he is both Judge and Party.

As for the Religion of the Turks, they say, God has sent four Prophets to Reveal his Will to Mankind, viz. Ensch, Moses, JESUS CHRIST, and Mahomet. They call Jesus Christ the Breath of God: They own his Miraculous Conception, and the Virgin's perpetual Virginity, but say that Judas was Crucify'd and not his Master, which they say, serves better to display the Glory of Christ, than the Christian Doctrine; but for all they affirm that Christ was a Holy Man, and a chosen Vessel, they will not be persuaded to believe a Trinity. They differ not from us in our Opinions concerning the Divine Attributes, only they have such a peculiar Fondness for Predestination, that they extend it even to the most indifferent Actions. They believe that there is an infinite Number of Angels, some good, some bad; the first they call White, the other Black Angels or Devils, and that every Man has one of each sort. They think that the Souls of the Wicked remain in their Graves, where they are Tormented by the Black Angels till the last day, when they shall be sent to Hell, together with their Bodies, and be punish'd there for a certain time, according to their Crimes, and then go to Paradise; for they think the Doctrine of Eternal Punishment absurd. They believe that at the Day of Judgment the Beasts will rise and give an account before Christ, of all the Kindnesses and Injuries they have receiv'd from Men. They are very Nice and Ceremonious about their Washings, and Bathings after Pollutions. They pray five times a day, in the Morning at Break of Day, at Noon, at 3 of the Clock in the Afternoon, at 6 in the Evening, and an hour after the Close of the Evening. Friday is their Festival-day as Sunday is ours. Their Lent lasts but 30 days, but is very strictly kept; for they neither Eat, Drink, nor Smoak Tobacco, while the Day lasts; which is very hard upon them, when it happens in Summer. They neither Eat Hogs Flesh, nor Drink Wine, nor can they endure Images. They think Deeds of Charity very Meritorious, and therefore leave many Legacies. There are several other things which a Turk must believe, and do, but it would be too tedious, and not so fit for a work of this Nature, to give the Reader a particular Account of them.

The whole Turkish Militia, (as Sir Paul Rycaut observes) is of two sorts, one that receives Maintenance from certain Lands or Farms, bestow'd on them by the Grand Signor; others that receive their constant Pay in ready Money. The great Nerve or Sinew of the Turkish Empire, is that of the first Rank, which are of two sorts, viz. Zaims, which are like Barons in some Countries; and Timariots, who may be compar'd to the Decumani among the Romans. Those of the second Sort, paid out of the Grand Signor's Treasury, are Spahi's Janizaries, Gebegi or Armourers, Topzi or Gunners, Sea Soldiers call'd Levans, who have no Pay for Life, or are Enroll'd amongst the Military Orders, but only make an Agreement for five or six Thousand Aspers for their Voyage; which being ended, they are Disbanded.

The Zaims, in all Expeditions of War, are oblig'd to serve with their Tents, which are to be furnish'd with Kirchins, Stables, and other Things suitable to their State and Quality; and for every 5000 Aspers of Rent receiv'd from the Grand Signor, they are to bring a Horseman into the Field, which is call'd Gebelu. The Timariots are oblig'd to serve with lesser Tents, and to bring 3 or 4 Baskets for every Man that attends them, for carrying of Earth and Stones, for making Batteries and Trenches, while the Janizaries are in the Skirmish with the Enemy. And for every 3000 Aspers Rent, the Timariots are sell'd in a Man and a Horse. Both Zaims and Timariots are dispos'd into Regiments, under Command of Colonels, call'd Alai-Begler; these again under the Command of the Bassa, and he under the Beglerbeg, which Force being united into one Body, repair to their Rendezvous appointed by the Seraskier, or General, who is either the Grand Signor, the Visier Azem, or some Eminent Person. No Excuse is allow'd in the time of the Grand Signor's Wars; if Sick, they are carry'd in Horse-Litters or Beds; if Infants, in Hampers or Baskets, and in the very Cradles, accusom'd to the Hardship, Hazard and Discipline of War. These Zaims and Timariots may (as Sir Paul Rycaut computes) be said to amount to in all above 83380, besides the Militia of Cairo, and other Orders of Soldiers. The standing Militia of the Kingdom of Egypt is 20000 Horse, besides which there is about 80000 Timariots. The Tartars of Crimaie are to send 100000 Men to the Grand Signor's Wars. The Princes of Moldavia, Walachia and Transilvania, 6 or 7000 Men apiece. The Spahi's are generally well Educated, Courteous and Refin'd Men, and serve on Horseback, to the Number of 12000. Besides whom there are, according to the aforesaid Author, four other sorts of Spahi's, who are rais'd according to the Necessity and Occasions of War. The Janizaries, who serve on Foot, were at first not above 6 or 7000, but are now above 20000; but were there a List taken of all who assume this Title, to be freed from Duties and Taxes, the Number would amount to above 100000. In former Times this Militia consisted only of the Sons of Christians, but that Politick is now disus'd.

As to the Naval Forces of the Turks, tho' they have much plenty of all Things fit for making a great Fleet, particularly Ports, Harbours and Docks, as at Constantinople (where no less than 130 Ships may be upon the Stocks at the same time) at Sinopolis, Midia and Anchiale, Cities on the Black-Sea; and abundance of Men to be employ'd in the Sea Service; yet for several Years, especially since the War in Candia, they have not been able to Equip a Fleet of much above 100 Sail of Gallies. The Pyrates of Barbary, the Towns of Tripoli, Tunis and Algier, us'd to be their Auxiliaries at Sea; but that is now in disuse. The Beyes of the Archipelago are bound, for certain Islands which are assign'd them in that Sea, to maintain 14 Gallies. The Chief Admiral is call'd the Captain Pashaw, his Lieutenant-General Ter-shana Kiabiassi, and the next Officer Terfane Emini, or Steward of the Arsenal. But for a more particular Account of these Matters, the Reader may, if he pleases, have recourse to such as have writ fully on the Subject, particularly the forecited Author.

C H A P. VIII.

Of the North Part of TURKEY in EUROPE, being the Provinces of WALACHIA and MOLDAVIA, Tributary to the Turks. Together with BESSERABIA and the OCZAKOW-TARTARY, Subject to the Turks.

HAVING taken a View of all the South-side of the Danube, and Travell'd thro' Transilvania, in our Passage from Hungary, we now come to the Countries on the North-side of that River, which was the Ancient DACIA, that comprehended these two Provinces with Transilvania, and so far of Hungary as to the River Theysse, and was divided into three Parts, viz. Ripensis, containing part of Hungary and Walachia, on the Banks of the Danube; Alpestris, part of Walachia and Moldavia; and Mediterranea, which was also nam'd Gepida, the present Transilvania. The Inhabitants were of Scythian Extract, Fierce and Barbarous, and were call'd Getæ, before the Romans gave 'em the Name of Daci. They had Kings of their own, till Trajan Conquer'd the Country, and made it a Province of the Empire. Afterwards the Sarmatians, Saxons, Getes and Huns, at several times, overrun these Countries. These Provinces now distinguish'd by two Names, were in the middle Ages both comprehended under the Name of Walachia, or Woloska Zemla in the Sarmatian Tongue, and the People Walachy. Divided into Major and Minor, whereof the former afterwards took the Name of Moldavia. The other, which in order as situated, we are first to speak of, retain'd the Name of

W A L A C H I A,

Which is extended in a Triangular Form, between the Danube on the South, Hungary on the West, Transilvania on the North-West, and Moldavia on the East, about 130 Miles broad, but in its greatest Extent near 200 Miles long. The Air is Temperate, and the Soil Fruitful, producing Corn and Wine, Fruits, Wood, Pasture, Oxen, Sheep and other Cattle; but especially Horses, for which this Country is Famous. The Earth also yields Mines of divers sorts of Metals, and the Forrests Venison. The chief Rivers are the Aluta or Olé, the Telsch, the Falonicza, and the Missowio, which rise in the upper part of the Province, and all run parallel, and fall into the Danube.

The Country is Govern'd by a Waywood, Elect-ed or Approv'd by the Grand Signior; he is styl'd Hespedar, that is, Chief General of the Militia, and pays a Tribute to the Turks of 70000 Ducats per Annum, and yet is at all Expence in the Government and Defence of his Country. This Tribute was often rais'd; and in the Year 1703. he was constrain'd to make a new Contract with the Port, whereby instead of 135000 Rix-Dollars, which he paid before, he is oblig'd to pay 250000 per Annum.

The Christian Religion, according to the Greek Church is profess'd in Walachia, and the Patriarch of Constantinople is their Metropolitan.

The Inhabitants fancy themselves to be the true Offspring of the Romans; and their Assertion seems to be confirm'd by the Idiom of their Language, which in many Words and Phrases comes nearer the ancient Latin, than the Modern Italians does, altho' now it is so corrupted with Russian, Sclavonian and Turkish, that it hardly deserves any of that Character.

In the Government the Waywood always exercis'd a Sovereign Authority. and as long as the Kingdom of Hungary stood, was wont to put himself under the Protection of that Monarch. In the Year 1391. the Turks Invaded this Province; and in 1415. compell'd the People, that had gallantly defended themselves in several Reinounters, to submit to the Ottoman Yoke, which the Waywood attempted to throw off 10 Years after; but being soon reduc'd to Extremity, was again oblig'd to swear Allegiance to the Grand Signior, and promise to assist the Turkish Forces in all their Expeditions against the Christians. And tho' in 1595. Sigismund Bathar, Prince of Transilvania, was able to secure this, as well as his own Principality, from the accustom'd Bondage, yet the Inhabitants were not able long to maintain their Liberty, but have since contentedly paid their Tribute without attempting another Revolt. The chief Towns are,

Tergowisch,	}	Rebnick,
Bucharest,		Alauth,
Braschow,		Pedt.

Tergowisch, Terwisch or Tarvis, the Capital City of Walachia, wherein the Waywood keeps his Court, is seated on the River Launiza, in a Marshy Ground, 60 Miles North from the Danube, and as many East from the Confines of Transilvania.

Bucharest, the second chief City, stands on the River Dombrowicen, 25 Miles South from Tergowisch, and 35 North from the Danube:

Braschow, Bracslow or Brasgow, is seated in the North part near the Confines of Moldavia and Transilvania, 50 Miles from Tergowisch. It is a considerable City, and the See of a Bishop, Suffragan to the Metropolis of Colocza.

Rebnick stands upon the River Alauta, near the Confines of Transilvania, 40 Miles East from Tergowisch.

Alauth

Alamb stands on the same River 30 Miles below Rebnick.

Polt is seated on the Danube, on the very Limits of this Province towards Hungary, 130 Miles West from Bucharest, and 90 East from Belgrade.

MOLDAVIA

Lies on the North-East of Walachia, bounded on the North by the River Neister, or Tarla, which divides it from the Ukrain, on the South with Walachia and the Danube, on the East with Besserabia, and on the West by Transilvania: Its Extent is much greater than Walachia, being 240 Miles from North to South, and 130 from East to West. The AIR is very Healthy, and the SOIL fruitful, producing all Necessaries, as Corn, Cattle, and excellent Horses. The Land is diversify'd into Mountains and Plains, and water'd with divers Rivers, the Chief whereof are the Moldavo (whence the Country has its Modern Name) the Pruth, the Sereth, the Bardalach, &c.

Moldavia, says Sir Paul Rycaut in his present State of the Ottoman Empire, was first made Tributary to the Turks by Mahomet the Great, but under the small Tribute of 2000 Crowns per Annum; afterwards Begdinus, Waywood thereof, A. 1585. fearing to become absolute Vassal to the Turk, being assisted by Poland, took up Arms against Solyman II. by whom being driven out of his Country, John, a Moldavian Born, but one who had embrac'd the Mahometan Religion, was prefer'd by Solyman to that Principality; but as soon as he was in it, he return'd to his former Religion, which made the Turks set upon him too; and John losing his Life in the Quarrel, the Province fell to the Power of the Turks. in the Year 1574. who appoint the Waywood, and impose an Annual Tribute, which at that time amounted to 80000 Dollars; but now (that is, when he wrote his Book) it is reduc'd to 66000 Dollars in Money, near 40000 Pounds of Wax, as much Honey, and a vast quantity of Tallow for the Arsenal. But besides the Annual Tribute, this Author says, That there were so many accidental Expences, Pretensions and Arts of the Turks to squeeze Money out of this oppressed People, as did sometimes double the Charge of their Yearly Tribute. To which may be added, the Price paid to the Grand Signior and others for the Principality, which amounts to 110000 Dollars. In the Year 1686. the Polanders overrun this Country, took the chief Cities, and oblig'd the Inhabitants to put themselves under the Protection of the Empire. But at the Treaty of Carlowitz, it was agreed, that the Poles should retire, and leave this Principality in its former State; and accordingly it is still Tributary to the Turks. The chief Towns are,

Jassy ,	{	Moldadania ,
Soczow ,		Vasloje ,
Targorod ,		Romani-Wivar ,
Chotzyn ,		Braila .

Jassy, or Jazy, a considerable City, and formerly the Seat of the Prince, is seated on the River Pruth, in the North part of the Province, about 30 Miles from the Confines of Poland, in the Latitude of 47. 30. Longitude 46 Deg. Bandand says it was probably the ancient Augusta of Dacia.

Chotzyn, on the River Neister near Poland, 90 Miles North-West from Jassy, and 25 South-East from Caminiec, is a strong Town, and the chief Magazine of the Country, Famous for a great Victory there obtain'd over the Turks, by John Sobiesky, late King of Poland.

Zochow, Soczow or Czukaw, is a large and strong City, ityl'd the Capital of the Province, because the Prince usually resides there. It is seated on the River Sereth, 50 Miles West from Jassy, 70 South from Caminiec, and 30 East from the Confines of Transilvania, and guarded with a Castle.

Targorod, or Trescott, stands on the Confluence of the Rivers Molda and Sereth, 50 Miles from Soczow.

Moldadania, on the River Molda, is about 20 Miles distant from Soczow to the South.

Vasloje stands on the River Bardalach, 60 Miles East from Targorod.

Romani-Wivar stands on the River Sereth, on the Confines of Walachia, and not far from the Danube.

Braila stands at the Mouth of the same River into the Danube, 35 Miles South East from Romani-Wivar.

BESSERABIA,

By some reckon'd part of Moldavia, but more properly a separate Province, lies on the East of Moldavia, between that and the Black-Sea, and between the Rivers Danube on the South, and Neister on the North. It is partly Mountainous, and partly a Marshy Country, inhabited by the Budjack-Tartars; the Extent of it is about 150 Miles from East to West, and 60, or more, in the West part, from North to South. The chief Towns that lie on the Banks of the River are,

Tekin ,	{	Kilia Nova ,
Bialogrod ,		Kilia Vecchia .

Tekin, Tegina, or Beuder, is a large City, the Capital of the Province, seated on the River Neister, near the Confines of Moldavia, 100 Miles from the Black-Sea to the West, 60 from the Danube to the North, and 100 Miles from Jassy to the East. It is guarded with a Castle, and reckon'd a strong Frontier.

Bialogrod, otherwise call'd Akieman, is a strong Fortress seated near the Black-Sea, at the Mouth of the Neister. Some take this to be the ancient Tyras, which Ptolomy places at the Mouth of the Neister, and which Herberstein and others call Moncastro: But it is suppos'd, the old Tyras being quite destroy'd, this Town sprung up near it.

Kilia Nova, is a strong Town, seated on the Northern Branch of the Danube near its Mouth into the Black-Sea, over against

Kilia

Kilia Vecchia, or Vetus, which stands in the Island made by two Branches of the Danube, to which it gives Name:

Of the Mid-Land of this Country thus speaks Beauplan.

BUDZIAK, which gives Name to a Clan of Tartars, is a Plain of 12 German Leagues in Length, and 5 or 6 Leagues in Breadth, lying between Bialogrod and Kilia, whither the mutinous Tartars, who own neither the Cham nor the Turk, retire. There are about 80 or 90 Villages of those Libertines, who daily run into the Neighbouring Plains to steal Christians and sell them to the Gallies, for they live upon Rapine. They sometimes break into the Ukrain and Podolia, but make no stay, being not above 5000 strong. Their Villages are moveable, for their Houses are built on Wheels, and carry'd from one Place to another, as the Pasture fails or abounds.

The OCZACOW-TARTARY

Lies on the North-East of Besserabia, on the other side the Neister, surrounded by Podolia, or the Ukrain, except on the East, where it is bounded by the Black-Sea, and the Mouth of the Boristhenes; and on the South where the Neister parts it from Besserabia. Its Extent is not above 80 Miles, and is divided by the River Bog, which rising in Poland, here discharges itself into the Sea; other Rivers water it, and the Ingulet or Mali is its Eastern Boundary. The chief Towns are, Bilchowskie, } } Koczubi.

Oczakow, }

Oczakow, or Ocziakow, otherwise call'd Dziarkhmenda, is seated at the Mouth of the River Boristhenes, or Nieper, into the Black-Sea, 60 Miles North-East from Bialogrod, and near the Mouth of the River Bog. It is a strong Town with a Castle, Founded by Vitolaus, Duke of Lithuania, and first peopled by his Subjects; afterwards possess'd by the Tartars, who had a Denomination from this Place, and were powerful Enemies of Poland. But the Poles gave them a notable Overthrow in the Year 1644. At present it is garrison'd by the Turks, tho' the Inhabitants be Tartars.

Bilchowskie is seated on the Boristhenes, where the River Ingulet or Mali falls into it on the extreme East part of this Province towards the Crim-Tartary, 20 Miles North-East from Oczakow.

Koczubi is seated on the Black-Sea, 30 Miles West from Oczakow.

CHAP. IX.

Of TARTARY-MINOR, and the CRIM-TARTARY, Allies to the Turks.

THE Tartars were always a Roving People that usurp'd upon their Neighbours on every side. Of their Conquests in Muscovy we have spoken, and shall have occasion to shew that China and Indostan are at this Day subject, to Princes of that Race. Persia, and a great part of the Turkish Empire in Asia, was for a long time their Prey: And these Provinces of Europe last mention'd, as well as Hungary, were at several times overrun by them. But upon the Change of Fate in War, they were as often beaten back. At last, about 300 Years ago, they settled themselves in the Peninsula, between the Black-Sea and the Palus Mæotis, formerly nam'd Taurica Chersonesus, wherein at that time the Genoueses had Footing, and in the adjacent Country Northward to the Frontiers of Muscovy, which from them has been since nam'd Tartaria Minor. And tho' at first they own'd a Subjection to the Grand Cham, yet having strengthen'd themselves sufficiently, they threw off that Obedience, and acknowledg'd for their Prince one of their Great Men, who being descended from the Royal Family, took upon himself the Royal Authority with the Title of Han, which in their Language signifies King. This Honour is Elective, but always conferr'd on one of the Family, if not the Son of the Predecessor, and is confirm'd by the Grand Signior, with whom they are always in Alliance, and so far in Subjection to, that the Sultan assumes the Power of Deposing the Father, and setting up the Son, upon default of the usual Assistance or Duty. By ancient Compact between the Turk and the Tartar, it is agreed, That whenever the Grand Signior goes in Person to the Wars, the Han is to accompany him with an Army of 100000 Men; but if the Visier, or some other Officer commands the Turks Army, he only sends his Son, or some principal Officer with an Army of 50000 Men. The Turk hath been us'd to hold the Son of the Han as Hostage for the Performance of this Agreement; and as Sir Paul Rycaut tells us, the present Han, Mahomet Ghirei, was detain'd during his Father's Life, first at Jamboli, and then at Rhodes; and before he mounted the Throne swore Fealty to the Grand Signior at Constantinople: But the Treatment he met with there so sour'd him, that he has refus'd that part of the Subjection, as being dishonourable to so powerful a People: but has nevertheless assisted the Turk in the Wars, according to his Treaty. The Tartarian Army have no Pay, but are allow'd the Plunder they take, which consists chiefly in Slaves, whereof they carry away great Numbers, and sell to great Profit. In the Year 1663.

1663. they so pillag'd and wast'd Hungary, Moravia and Silesia, that Sir Paul Rycaut tells us, they carry'd away in one Year 160000 miserable Creatures into Captivity. Such of the Slaves as are Wounded or Sick, and unable to Travel, they kill; the rest they carry home, and sell to the Turks, especially the young Boys and Girls, which is the best Traffick the Tartars pretend to.

By Contract on the Turkish side, it is agreed, That in case of Failure of the Ottoman Line, that Empire is to devolve to these Tartars, which is the great Knot of this Confederacy. The Han receives a sort of Pay from the Grand Signior, and is oblig'd not only to assist him in War, but also not to engage in any War, except against the Muscovite, without his Consent.

The Kingdom consists of two Parts, TARTARIA MINOR, and the TAURICA CHERSONESUS, or Crim-Tartary.

Chersonesus, the Greek Name for a Peninsula, and Taurica, because first inhabited by Scythians, of Mount Taurus.

In the Crim-Tartary there are Towns inhabited, and Palaces wherein the Han resides; but in Tartaria Minor, tho' it be a fertile rich Soil, and was anciently well Cultivated by several Colonies of Greeks, there is now no such thing as a City or Town, the Inhabitants being a fierce wild People, that live in the open Air in Tents, which they set up and remove as their Fancies or Occasions invite them. In February they are invited by the Cham to Till the Ground, which some do; but the greatest part neglect, esteeming it beneath them. Their ordinary Food is Raw Flesh, laid for some time between their Saddle and Horse's Back, which they Eat (tho' dead of Sickness, or Putrify'd) without Bread or Salt; so that the greatest part of the Country, especially that towards Muscovy, lies wast, and is thereby nothing but Woods, Lakes and unpassable Marshes. The Han with his chief Officers and Courtiers live in the Crim-Tartary, in Palaces and Towns, and have Lands, Herds and Wealth, as other People. The Han has large Revenues arising by Tributes and Aids paid by his Subjects, and is able to bring into the Field a very large Army, even 300000 Horse, but no Foot; for Horses here are so exceeding plenty, that not only every Man is mounted, but has also one or two spare Horses.

TARTARIA-MINOR, otherwise call'd Nabaisky, or the Nagayan Tartary, is a very large Tract lying on the South of Muscovy, between the Frontiers of that Empire and the Black Sea. The Mouth of the River Don, or Tanais, being its Eastern Boundary, and the River Nieper, or Boristhenes the Western; so that its Length may be reckon'd 300 Miles from East to West, but the Breadth not proportionate. This Country is, as we have said, a kind of wild Desert, the People roving about in Herds or Multitudes with their Tents, Cattle, Wives and Children, and never fix in any certain Place. The only Towns mention'd by Geographers being Strelnicza, at the Mouth of the Boristhenes, and Kasikermant a little above it, on the Western Coast; and Azoph on the Eastern, at the Mouth of the Don.

The Taurica Chersonesus, now call'd the CRIM-TARTARY, from the City Crim; and also PRZECOP-TARTARY, from another Town; is, as we have said, a Peninsula between the Black Sea and the Palus Meotis, of about 35 Leagues in Length, from East to West, (Sir John Chardin says 61 Leagues) and about 35 Leagues broad, from North to South; it is joyn'd to the Land by a very narrow Isthmus, in the North part, not above a Mile over, thro' which also the Tartars have cut a Ditch.

The Country towards the South is Mountainous, and well water'd with Rivers; the rest is Champaign, but wants fresh Water, except the deep Wells which are dug.

The Taurica Chersonesus was Conquer'd by the Romans; and upon the declining of that Empire, the best part of it became subject to the Genouese, who maintain'd a considerable Traffick there, before the Tartars Invaded it. The Turks have also at several times Attack'd it, and still possess some of its Towns; so that between one and the other, the Genouese have been expell'd these 200 Years. The chief Towns are,

Przecop,	{ Crim,
Sackingeri,	{ Sidagoy,
Ingermen,	{ Caffa,
Sarigermen,	{ Kerky,
Balacawa,	{ Pontico,
Mangut.	{ Kiderleri,
Cercissegermen,	{ Taman,
Baccassaray,	{ Karasu,
Alnasaray,	{ Araber.

Przecop, call'd Or by the Tartars, Antiq. Taphros & Taphra, is seated upon the Dike, in the narrowest part of the Isthmus. It hath a Castle, wherein resides a Palatine of the Han's, who Commands the Guards on the Boristhenes and Tanais, and the Tartars in the Plains: And examines all Strangers that pass.

Sackingeri, not far from it, on the Black-Sea, is a Town of 2000 Houses, and a place of good Traffick.

Balacawa or Balacley, stands on the South-West Coast, sometime possess'd by the Genouese, and then call'd Zamboli, from the store of Fish in the neighbouring Sea. It is a very pleasant Town of 120 Houses, with a safe and excellent Port, surrounded by high Mountains, possess'd by the Turks, who here build their Ships and Gallies.

Topetarkan or Sarigermen, anciently call'd Chersonesus and Corfuna, and was the noblest City of all the Peninsula. Whereof the Ruins are still extant on the West Coast; but the Place is hardly Inhabited.

Ingermen, on the South-West Cape, anciently a great Town, whereof many Ruins and Greek Incriptions remain; but it is now only a small Town, with a Castle, possess'd by the Turks.

Mangut or Mancuso, an inland Town, once a Magnificent City, now only a Tower and a kind of Castle on a Hill with some few Houses, inhabited by Jews.

Cercissegermen, a Fort of the Turks, not far from Mangut.

Caffa or Theodosia, the chief City of the Peninsula, stands on the South Coast over against the Isthmus, and is a Place of great Trade, begun by the Genouese, from whom the Turks took it in 1574. The Magnitude is commonly represented as consisting of 5 or 6000 Houses; but Sir John Chardin tells us there are 4000 Houses, whereof 3200 Turks, and 800 Christians. The City is govern'd by a Sangiack, and is distant from Constantinople about 2 Days Sail, provided the Wind serve right, else 7 or 8, as Sir John Chardin experienc'd. In the Town are 12 Greek Churches, 32 for the Armenians, and 1 for the Roman Catholicks. This City Trades to all Parts as well within the Black-Sea as throughout all the Archipelago and Mediterranean. (Beuplan.) Q q q Kerkey, Kerkey, Cimmerium, is a little Town of the Tartars, seated on the East Coast, on the Straight denominated from it, and anciently call'd Bosphorus Cimmerus. It contains about 100 Houses.

Pontica, olim Panticapæum, was formerly the chief City of all this Country; it stands on the Mouth of the same Straight.

Kiderleri is also on that Straight.

Bassaffaray, which may be esteem'd the chief City, being the Seat of the Hans, stands 20 Miles South from the Isthmus, and about 15 from the Western Sea-Coast: It is a Town of 2000 Houses, (2000 Inhabitants, says Beauplan) besides the Palace of the Hans, surrounded with a pleasant Country for Hunting, and (according to some Authors) is nobly adorn'd with Gardens, Orchards, Baths, &c. Here is also a Mosque, wherein are many Sepulchres of the Hans.

Almasaray is another Palace of the Hans, with a small Town.

Crim, whence the Country and People are denominated, is a strong Castle, wherein is kept the Mint. It hath a small Town to it, which is chiefly inhabited by Turks.

Sidagoy or Sudacum, was a very noble and strong City, seated in the Mountains, Famous for the Wines growing near it, formerly possess'd by the Gen-u-se, from whom it was taken after a long Siege by the Turks.

Karatsu, 20 Miles West from Caffa, is a Town of 2000 Houses, belonging to the Cham.

Arabet or Orbete, stands near the Palus Meotis, 20 Miles North from Kerkey, on a Peninsula about half a quarter of a League over, which is Palisado'd from Sea to Sea; it hath 2 Castles for its Defence, and is the Place where the Han keeps his Stud of Horses, which are reckon'd to be about 70000 in Number.

Other Towns mention'd by Beauplan are,

Crusla, where the Salt-pits are; it is a Town of about 80 Houses.

Combas, a large Place, having 2000 Houses.

Ackmecery, of about 150 Houses.

The Straight between the Continent, on which stands Arabet above-mention'd, is call'd Turkawoda; it is but 200 Paces over, and fordable in dry Weather.

From Balacrawa to Caffa the Sea Coast is very high and steep; but all the rest is low.

From the Mountains of Balacrawa spring 7 Rivers, which water all the Peninsula. The River Kabats produces Vines; and on the River Sagre are abundance of Gardens and much Fruit.

The Straight of KERKEY or KAFFA, which is the East Boundary, is not above 4 Leagues over; and on the East Bank of it, in the Circass-Tartary, is Taman, a small Town and Castle belonging to the Turk, wherein a Garrison of about 30 Soldiers are kept.

In the very East part of the Continent of Tartaria Minor, on the Banks of the Don or Tanais, between its Mouth and the Mouth of the Doniec, stand several Towns, among which is

AZOPH, Azow or Azek, a strong Fortrefs, seated on the Mouth of the Don or Tanais, into the Palus Meotis, in the Latitude of 47 Deg. Longitude 59 Deg. Taken from the Tartars by Mahomet II. and possess'd by the Turks till the late War, when in the Year 1694. it was taken by the present Czar of Muscovy, and still held by him: Being a Post of that Importance, that he absolutely refus'd Peace with the Turk, unless he might keep it. We have spoken of the State of this Place, since the Czar has possess'd it, when we were treating of Muscovy.

Kasikermert, at the Mouth of the River Nieper, is another Fortrefs of great Importance, taken by the same Prince, and still held by him. It stands in Latitude 46. Longitude 58 Deg. 30 Min. and gives Passage into the Black-Sea:

The Situation of both these Places is seen in our Map of Muscovy.

With which we should finish our Account of Europe, and proceed to that of Asia, but that it is necessary to speak a little of the Palus Meotis.

The PALUS MÆOTIS, or the Sea of Zabache, is call'd Limen Mare by the Russians, Gnilen Morze by the Poles, and Mare del Tana by the Italians. It was anciently call'd by divers Names, viz. Palus Sarmatiae, Cimmeriae Paludes, Scythica Stagna, and Pontici Euxini Mater, Teste Bumo. The Modern Name of Zabache is deriv'd from a certain Fish taken there, at certain times of the Year. It is a large Sea, lying from South-West to North East 130 Leagues in Length, according to the Maps: But Dionysius makes its Extent from the Taurica Chersonesus, to the Mouth of the Tanais, 300 Miles. It is bounded on the North and West by the Lesser Tartary, on the South-West by the Tauric Chersonese, and on the East and South-East by Sarmatia Asiatica, now Circass Tartary. The River Don or Tanais, which is the Boundary of Europe, falls into its Eastern Bay. And the Lake Sura Morzi on the West, issues from it, and makes the Precop-Isthmus so narrow. On the South it has Communication with the Black Sea, thro' the Straight of Kerkey or Caffa, which was the ancient Bosphorus Cimmerus.

We have now survey'd all the Provinces of the Turkish Empire in Europe, and shall next take a View of the Countries of Asia, subject to this Monarch, which are Many Islands lying near its Coasts.

Natolia, or Asia Minor.

Turcomania, part of Georgia, Tributary to the Turk. Affyria, or Diarbeck, Comprehending part of the Ancient Affyria, with Mesopotamia, and Chaldea.

Syria at large, containing Syria Proper, Phenicia and Judea.

And a great part of Arabia.

A large part of Africa is also under the Turkish Dominion, viz.

The Kingdom of Egypt, and Barca, on the Mediterranean. And

The Coasts of Abex on the Red-Sea, with part of The Upper Aethiopia on the same Sea.

Also the Kingdoms of Tripoli, Tunis and Algiers are Tributary.

All which vast Empire is subject to the Absolute Dominion of the Ottoman Emperor, (usually styl'd by us Europeans) the Grand Signior and is govern'd by a great Number of Vice-Roys call'd Beglerbegs, with Subordinate Governors nam'd Sangiacks. And a lesser Order, stil'd Bassas. Accordingly the Empire is divided into large Provinces, call'd Beglerbegships, and those sub-divided into Sangiates. The particular Number whereof is unnecessary to be set down here, but will be observ'd in our Descriptions of these Countries, which will be the Subject of the Second Part of this Work.

To the READER.

THE only Objection against the former Edition of this Work, was, That the Accounts there given of these three Parts of the World, were not Large and Satisfactory, proportionate to that of Europe; the Reason why it was then so Defective, we have given in our Preface, and have there also shewn the Reader, whence we have extracted the ample Descriptions here exhibited of all the Parts of these Remote Countries.

We can truly assure the Reader, that the Books there mention'd, have not only been Consulted, but even the full Substance of every one of 'em, so far as concerns Geography, is faithfully introduc'd into this Work, whereby an intimate View is given of these distant Lands, and the true present State of them is shewn.

The former Writers on this Subject have contented themselves with Transcribing those that went before, and the Errors of a Hundred Years standing, have stood in Modern Books Uncorrected: But in this Work we have not only Consulted those that have been upon the Spot, but even those too have not been lightly credited in any wonderful thing; where a Thing appear'd Incredible, a single Testimony has not been taken; and where different Authors have spoken differently of the same place, we have chosen to give the Reader both their Reports, and let him judge for himself. And in General have taken the greatest Pains in making the most diligent Search after Truth: And trust we have not egregiously mis'd it in any one Instance.

Redemption of Mankind, and dispense the glorious Light of the Gospel, for our Eternal direction to Salvation. And altho' this alone were Honour enough, and what must always render this Land Venerable, yet the Worldly Advantages were as notably Superior; for the Earth produces not only all the common Necessaries for Life in great Plenty, but gives us over, and above all those Delicacies, which serve for Delight and Luxury; such as the brightest B Gems.

Gems, the most Aromatick Spices, the most Balsamick and Salubrious Drugs, the finest Silks, and the richest Metals; besides Fruits and other Plants of more Delicious Kinds, than the other Parts of the World are acquainted with. And as this was the most delightful Habitation, it has been the Seat of the greatest Monarchies that ever appeared in the World.

But much of its ancient Glory is lost, for the Turkish Rudeness has render'd that part of it, which was the most Polite, a wild uncultivated Land. And at this time Asia is only considerable for the rich Commodities it affords, and on which Account it is continually visited by our Merchants.

ASIA is Situated on the East of Europe, commencing at the 45th. Degree of Longitude (the first Meridian being laid on the West side of Ferre Island) and extends to the 150th. Degree, which may be reckon'd 6000 Miles. In its Latitude it possesses all the Temperate, the greatest part of the Torrid, and part of the Frigid Zones; so that it enjoys the whole 24 Climates, and its longest Days, are from 12 to 24 Hours.

Its Boundaries are, On the West, the Mediterranean, the Red, and the Black-Seas, the Mountains which bound the Muscovien Tartary, and the River Ob. The Northern Ocean is its general Boundary on the North; as the Indian and Eastern Oceans, are on the South and East.

In so vast an extent of Land, the Soil must to be sure be various, but in general it may be declared (some Parts of Arabia and Tartary excepted) a Rich and Fruitful Country.

The Inhabitants are reckon'd to be of Effeminate Natures, but we ought to remember, that those we converse with are of the most Southern Parts, which we know produces not so robust Natures as the North; and therefore we may suppose the Northern Inhabitants to be equal to us, at least 'tis certain those of them that have appeared in the South; I mean the Turks and Tartars, are Men of as much Force and Courage as any. Those of the Southern Parts excel in Ingenuity, and send us curious pieces of Workmanship, which our most Polite Mechanics can sooner envy than imitate. Whether the remark, that they are sordid Admirers of Monarchy be just, we cannot judge, for the mighty Powers of the Princes, has always kept them in Slavery, and they have never had an Opportunity of exerting the Love of Liberty, which certainly must be as innate to them, as it is to the rest of Mankind.

In Religion they are very stupid, as will be readily granted, when 'tis consider'd that the Mahometan is the best and most rational among 'em. That Opinion prevails over all Turkey, Arabia, and part of Tartary and India; and the Sect of it who own Haly for their Head in Persia. But in that part of India where Mahometism is not receiv'd, as also in China, Japan, &c. they are stupid Idolaters, and Exercise most extravagant, and even most cruel Rites in their Worship of Thousands of Images.

Our Blessed Lord having revealed himself in this part of the World, it was the Theatre of the first Promulgation of the Gospel; which spread so successfully, that even in the Apostolick Age it was taught so far off as India. But as the unworthiness of Christians produced that Denunciation reveal'd to St. John, the Churches in the Asia-Minor were abandon'd to Persecutions, and by the Barbarisms of the Sarazins, Tartars, and Turks, in fine, utterly Destroy'd. And altho' the pure

Light of the Gospel could never be extinguish'd, but a large Number have always been found in every Part of Asia, who profess the Christian Faith, y^t thro' the Rudeness of their Governors, the Church has for many Ages been in a Servile State.

To omit the many scrupulous Niceties of Sects and others in the Division of Asia, we shall consider it under the several Dominions it is now subject to, which naturally enough divides it into Five Great Parts, namely, TURKEY, PERSIA, INDIA, CHINA and TARTARY, besides the Islands, many whereof will not come into any of these Classes, and tho' it may be objected, that Tartary is not under one Government, and that India extra Gangem is dependant of the Great-Mogul, as also that the greatest of Arabia is exempt from the Turk; and therefore each of those should be divided into its respective Parts; yet in this Place, it is less necessary to clogg the Reader's Memory too much, but rather give him those Distinctions, when we come to speak of those Particular Parts.

A View of the Whole.

TURKEY in Asia.	Western Turkey.	ASIA MINOR, SYRIA and Palestine, ARABIA partly under the Turk.	Lying from North to South.
	Eastern Turkey.	DIABECK, i. e. Affric, Chala and Mesopotamia. TURCOMANIA, or the Ancient Armenia major.
		GEORGIA, MENGRELIA, partly subject to the Turk, and partly to the Persians.

Smaller Parts adjoining, subject to their own Princes, with some Dependance on either the Turk or Persian, are;

Imeritia, Circassia, Caramania, &c.

On the East of Turkey, lies PERSIA, comprehending Media, Persia, Parthia, &c.

More Eastward, MOGULLISTAN or INDOSTAN, consisting of 39 Provinces or Kingdoms.

INDIA intra Gangem, which may be consider'd in four great Parts, lying South of Mogulistan. Decan, Malabar, Coromandel, Golconda, Part (sub) to the Mogul.

On the East of those lies,

INDIA extra Gangem, or the Kingdoms of PEGU, SIAM, TONQUIN. Each contain many small Kingdoms.

And farthest Eastward lies CHINA, comprehending 15 large Provinces.

On the North of all these lies,

TARTARY, commonly consider'd in four Parts, Usbeg in the South, Dofat in the North, Turkestan Midland, Cathay in the East.

Thus much for the Continent.

TURKEY in ASIA.

3

The ISLANDS of Asia may be consider'd in three Classes, viz.

I. The Islands on the Coast of Asia, in the Mediterranean-Sea.

Cyprus,
Rhodes,
Lesbos or Meteline,
Chios or Scio,
Samos,
Cos or Lango, &c.

II. Those in the Indian-Ocean

Ceylon,
The Maldivé-Islands,
The Sunda-Islands, Sumatra Java,
Borneo, &c.
The Spice-Islands, Banda, &c.
The Molucca-Islands, Ternate,
Tidor, &c.
Amboyne, Ceram, Gilolo, &c.

III. Those in the Eastern Ocean.

The Philippine-Islands,
The Japonese-Islands,
The Ladrones-Islands.

We shall now Proceed to the particular Descriptions of each part, beginning with Anatolia as being the nearest to Europe, thence passing thro' Syria, Palestine, Arabia, Diarbeck, Georgia, &c. proceed to Persia, and having survey'd all that Kingdom, go thro' Tartary into India, view all that Continent and the Islands adjacent: Then pass into China and Japon.

A SIA, as it was the largest Part of the Old World, so it was on many Accounts the Principal and most Celebrated. For it was there the Almighty Creator was pleased, not only to Plant the Paradise for the first Man Adam, and afford his Presence in a signal degree to his first elected People; but it was there so that his Son our Lord was pleased to Work the

Smaller Parts adjoining, subject to their own Princes, with some Dependance on either the Turk or Persian, are;

Imeritia, Circassia, Comamia, &c.

On the East of Turky, lies PERSIA, comprehending Media, Persia, Parthia, &c.

More Eastward, MOGULLISTAN or INDOSTAN, consisting of 39 Provinces or Kingdoms.

INDIA intra Gangem, which may be consider'd in four great Parts, lying South of Mogulistan. Decan, Malabar, Coromandel, Golconda, } Partly subject to the Mogul.

On the East of those lies,

INDIA extra Gangem, or the Kingdoms of PEGU, SIAM, TONQUIN. } Each containing many small Kingdoms.

And farthest Eastward lies CHINA, comprehending 15 large Provinces.

On the North of all these lies,

TARTARY, commonly consider'd in four Parts, Usbeg in the South, Desart in the North, Turchestan Midland, Cathay in the East.

Thus much for the Continent.

The

The ISLANDS of Asia may be consider'd in three Classes, viz.

I. The Islands on the Coast of Asia, in the Mediterranean-Sea.

Cyprus,
Rhodes,
Lesbos or Meteline,
Chios or Scio,
Samos,
Coos or Lango, &c.

II. Those in the Indian-Ocean

Ceylon,
The Maldive-Islands,
The Sunda-Islands, Sumatra Java,
Borneo, &c.
The Spice-Islands, Banda, &c.
The Molucca-Islands, Ternate,
Tidor, &c.
Amboyne, Ceram, Gilolo, &c.

III. Those in the Eastern Ocean.

The Philippine-Islands,
The Japonese-Islands,
The Ladrones-Islands.

We shall now Proceed to the particular Descriptions of each part, beginning with Anatolia as being the nearest to Europe, thence passing thro' Syria, Palestine, Arabia, Diarbeck, Georgia, &c. proceed to Persia, and having survey'd all that Kingdom, go thro' Tartary into India, view all that Continent and the Islands adjacent: Then pass into China and Japon.

Of TURKEY in ASIA.

CHAP. I.

NATOLIA or ASIA-MINOR.

Natolia or Anatolia, called Nadeli by the Turks, and by the ancient Greeks Ἀσία ἡ ἐλάττω, by reason of its Eastern Situation from Europe, and on the same account called also the Levant by Europeans, had anciently the Name of Asia simply, by way of Excellency, as being the best Part of Asia, for in it were seated very many Noble Cities and Considerable States: But since distinguish'd by the Epithet Minor.

It is a large Peninsula of about 300 Miles Broad, and 600 Long, bounded on the North by the Euxine or Black-Sea.

On the West by the Thracian Bosphorus, the Propontis, and the Archipelago.

On the South by the Eastern Part of the Mediterranean-Sea.

And on the East by Georgia, the River Euphrates, which divides it from Turcomania; and by the Confines of Syria.

It extends from the 36th. to the 41th. Degree of Latitude; and from the 48th. to the 60th. Degree of Longitude.

Nature has given this Country a very Healthful Climate, and Fruitful Soil, but the Turkish Tyranny has render'd it almost Desert: Our English Merchants Travelling thither on account of Trade, have frequently the Curiosity to visit the Antiquities of this once Famous Country, but see nothing but Ruins, and can only lament its Misfortunes. Nay, even the Fields are uncultivated, and the Grounds that would produce the best Grains and Fruits, are covered with Brambles and Weeds. Where it is cultivated, it affords excellent Corn, Fruits, most delicious Grapes, the fairest Olives; Cotton, Rhubarb, Opium, Galls, and other valuable Drugs; which with Silk, Grogram Yarn, and some few Tapestries and Carpets, are sent to Europe.

Natolia taken at large, comprehends the ancient Regions of Galaria, Paphlagonia, Bythinia, Pontus, Myie, Phrygia, Lydia and Mania, Æolis, Ionis, Caria, Doris, Pamphilia, Psidia, Capadocia, Lycia, Psidia, Lycania, and Cilicia.

Its present Division according to Geographers, is into Four Parts, viz. 1. Natolia properly so called, the Western Part. 2. Caramania, the Southern Part. 3. Asadike, the East Part, and 4. Amasia, the North Part. By the Turks the whole is divided into Five Parts, under the Government of Five Beglerbegs who reside at Corycum, Tocat, Trabezond, Maofc, and Iconion. These are subdivided into lesser Governments called Sangiackates, denominated from the City or Town where the Sangiack resides.

NATOLIA propria, containing Bythinia, Phrygia, Mysia, Æolis, Jonia, Caria, Doris, Lydia, Galatia and Paphlagonia, is the most Western Part of all Asia, and nearest to Europe. It extends from the Coast of the Bosphorus, Propontis and Ægean-Sea in the West, to the 64th. Degree of Longitude in the East, where it is bounded by the two Governments of Amasia and Aladulia. And from the Coast of the Black-Sea in the North, to the Government of Caramania in the South; so that this one Beglerbegate, takes up above the moiety of the whole Asia-Minor.

In our Peregrination thro' this Government, we shall begin with BYTHINIA now Becsangil, as lying next to Europe, the small Strait of Constantinople, called anciently the Thracian Bosphorus, being all that intervenes; and that too so narrow, that Scutari on the Asian Shore, is reckon'd but a Suburb to Constantinople, as we have already said in our account of that City. The Land is naturally a very good Soil, but little cultivated at present.

The Chief Towns are,

Chalcedon, altho' it be quite Ruin'd, yet its Situation lying first in our Way, and its former State deserving remembrance, we must speak of before we pass forwards. It was in its time, a flourishing and very considerable City, honoured with the Session of the Fourth General Council of the Church, and stood two Miles from where Scutari now stands, but is now intirely destroy'd, and some Ruins only, retain the Memory of it; nay, Segnior Gimelli says he found nothing to prove there had been such a City.

Nicomedia,

Nicomedia, Turc. İznik or İsmiz, seated on the Side of a Hill, in the midst of a delightful Plain, at the bottom of a Bay of the Propontis, named İnus Aftacenus, 80 Miles South-east from Coſtaſtaen; was anciently a very Wealthy and Populous City, frequently honour'd with the Presence of the Roman Emperors, and is still Large and Populous, containing as Mr. Tavernier informs us, 30000 Inhabitants who Trade in Silks, Cotton, Fruits, Earthen and Glass-Wares, and hath many Greek Churches, fair Mosques, and several Inns and neat Bazars in it.

Nice, Turc. İznik or Nichor, lies to the South east of Nicomedia, near the Aſcania Palus, or Lake of Aſia; formerly reckon'd the Metropolis of this Country, and then a very considerable City; it was made Famous by being the Seat of the first General Council assembled by the Emperor Conſtantine against the Arrian Hereſie; and by the Residence of the Greek Emperors for some time, after the Year 1200. when Conſtantinople was taken by the Latins. It has a convenient Haven, and the Country about it is excellent for Hunting, and affords very good Fruits and Wine, which made Sultan Amurath build a Seraglio in the highest Part of the Town, where the Turkiſh Emperors have ſometimes reſided. The present City is pretty large, and contains about 10000 Inhabitants, Greeks, Jews and Turks, who Trade in Corn, Fruit, Cotton, Fine-Cloth, &c. The Streets are neat; and many Vestigia of ancient Noble Structures are seen about it.

Prusa or Prusa ad Olympiam, Turc. Burſa, is seated on the ascent of a Hill, about 40 Miles South from Nice, having a pleasant Plain before it, and the Mountain Olympus behind it, both cover'd with Trees. It was the Seat of the Turkiſh Kings, from A.D. 1326. till the taking of Conſtantinople, and is still a very flourishing City, well inhabited and enjoys a good Trade, being one of the Stages of the Caravans, that pass from Alepp and Persia to Conſtantinople. Tavernier tells us, a Caravan goes every two Months from hence to Persia, and both he and Sir George Wheeler, tell us the Turks live here in better Splendor, with respect to their Houses and Furniture, than in other Places. The Length of this City according to Tavernier, is half a French League, in the midst whereof stands a Castle upon a Hill, which commands the Town, and is exceeding strong says Tavernier; but Gimelli says, it is little frequented and goes to Ruin: This was the Grand Seignior's Palace. The hot Baths in this City, are much praised for their Virtue by Tavernier, and Gimelli describes a very handsome one, at a little distance out of Town.

Libiſſus, seated about the mid-way between Calcedon and Nicomedia, is memorable for the Death of Heracles, who here made away with himself, rather than be delivered up to the Romans, as the treacherous King of Byzantium intended.

MYSIA and PHRYGIA minor, adjoin on the South-west to Byzantium, having the Propontis for the Northern bounds, the Helleſpont on the West, Pangia Major on the East, and the Archipelago and Lydia on the South. The River Granicus, Famous for the first Battle between Alexander and Darius fought on its Banks, rises in the Mountainous part of this Country and after a short course of 50 or 60 Miles from South to North falls into the Propontis. Also, Mount Ida whereon the Poets say, Paris gave Judgment between the Goddesses, is seated here.

The Chief Towns are,

Cyzicus or Clizico, by others named Spiga, or Spinga, and by others Pala-mi. In the Roman times, it was the Metropolis of the Consular Helleſpont, and was then a most Beautiful and Strong City. Among its many Noble Buildings, the chief Temple was signally notable for its Pompous Structure. The first Ruin of this Place began by an Earthquake, and the fallen Marbles were carried off to embellish Conſtantinople, which hindered its Re-structure, and it is at this time but an ordinary Place. It stands on an Island joined to the Continent by Bridges, on the South-east Coast of the Propontis, 60 Miles West from Nice, and South-west from Nicomedia.

To the Westward of Cyzicus in the Propontis, lies the Island Præneſſus, at a little distance from the North Coast of Myſia; it is about 20 Miles in Circuit, and affords so great a quantity of Marble that it has thence receiv'd its Modern Name, and from it the whole Propontis is call'd the Sea of Marmora.

Parium, call'd Ad eſtea by Homer, stands about 20 Miles within Land, and is mentioned in Antiquity for the Colony of Romans settled there.

Lampsacus, seated on the Propontis, at the Mouth of the Helleſpont over against Gallipoli, Famous only for being infamous enough to deserve Destruction, which when Alexander had resolv'd on, he was hindered by a Wife; for when the Ambassadors came to him to obtain Favour, he before Hand swore he would deny their Request, which gave them an Opportunity to save their City, by desiring him to destroy it.

Abydus or Avido, the Castle opposite to Sestos, stands at the Mouth of the Helleſpont; made memorable by the Poetical Story of Hero and Leander; but more memorable for the notable Resistance it made to Philip of Macedon, and the Heroick Behaviour of destroying themselves, when no longer able to resist. It was taken by the Turks thro' the Treachery of the Governor's Daughter, about the Year 1330. and is still one of their Castles of the Dardanelles; so named from Dardanus a small Town, which stands on the Coast a little more to the South.

To proceed, without regard to the Bounds of Myſia, and the Phrygia parva, which are long since broken down; passing forward to the South, you enter the Region of Troas, where stood the City.

Troy or Ilium, seated on the River Scamander, a few Miles from the Sea-Coast, having the Advantage of a very commodious Haven, made by the Island Tenedos, which lay along its Coasts at two or three Leagues distance. It was in its time a considerable Place, at least Homer and Virgil have render'd it such in their inimitable Poems, on the Wars of the Greeks against it. The ten Years Siege, and the glorious Acts of the Heroes on both sides, is so much the Subject of every Bodies talk, that 'tis needless to repeat that Story. Travellers inform us, that there are still to be seen the Ruins of its Walls, and Vestigia of its ancient Grandeur, which is some answer to those who look upon that Story as wholly fabulous. At present the Haven is choak'd up with Sand, and not at all frequented.

Troas Alexandria, Built by Lysimachus, in Honour of Alexander the Great, stood some few Miles to the South. This is supposed to be the Place meant by the Apostle, Acts 20. 6. it being at that time the Metropolis of the Province, but now in Ruins, and call'd by the Turks Eski-Stamboul.

Scamandria

Scamandria was a strong Fortrefs, surprized by Ottoman I. and ever since possessed by the Turks: but it is slighted, and now not remarkable.

Affos, mentioned by the Apostle, Acts 20. 13. stands on the South Coast of this Province, about 20 Miles South-east from Troas Alexand. Farther to the East stand Palescepsis, Antandros, otherwise call'd St. Dimitri, Andrimittum or Endromit; all seated upon the Shoar of the Bay, which takes its Name from this last Town. They are Sees of Christian Bishops, as is also Pitana, seated on a River of the same Name 30 Miles more to the South. East from which, about 20 Miles distant stands Pergamus, seated in a fair Plain near the Banks of the River Caicus; famous in its time for being the Seat of a Race of Kings, the first whereof was Phileteus an Eunuch, Servant to Antigonus, one of Alexander's Captains, who by the means of a great Wealth of his Master's, which he seized on in his Castle, set up for a King, and left it to his Brother, who being succeeded by Sons and Nephews for about 250 Years, Attalus the last King bequeathed it to the Romans. This City was Honoured by the Birth of Galen, the famous Physician, and noted by being one of those Seven Churches, against whom God's Wrath is denounced by St. John. Parchment was invented here, and retains its Name to this Day. Also Tapestry Hangings were invented by King Attalus, and first made here. It was also famous for the Noble Library erected by its Kings, wherein 20000 Volumes written on Parchment were placed. Its Ruins described by Dr. Smith, testify its ancient Grandeur: But in its present State, 'tis but an ordinary Place, inhabited by Turks, whose Mosque is an ancient large and handsom Christian Church, and a few Christians who have a Church.

ÆOLIS with IONIA, adjoyn on the South to Phrygia-minor, running Southward in a narrow Tract along the Sea-Coast, to the 37th. Degree of Latitude. It constituted the Proconsular Asia under the Romans. In Æolis stood these Towns, Elea, at the mouth of the River Caicus, the Port to Pergamus, and the Birth-place of Zeno the Philosopher. Myrina called afterwards Sebastopolis. Cuma that gave Name to one of the Sybils, it was the Capital of Æolis, and stands on the Sea-Coast. As doth also Phocæa or Foggia, seated more to the South; the Inhabitants of this City, are said to have been the Founders of Marseilles in France, for being driven from their Country, by the Severity of the Persians, they rambled till they settled there: It is now a small Place, altho' the See of a Bishop. About 10 Miles from it to the West, stands another little Port-Town of the same Name, but distinguished with the adjunct of Neus, which is a neat Place, with a good Harbour and Castle. All these Towns lie over against the Island Lesbos.

In Ionis, which stretches along the Sea-Coast Southward from Æolis, are these Towns.

Smirna, Turc. Ismyr, seated in Lat. 38 Deg. 40 Min. on the Isthmus of the Ionian Peninsula, near the Gulph of the Ægean-Sea, to which it gives Name, and the River Meles which here falls into the Hermus, and both into the Bay, on the side of a Hill in a healthful temperate Air, and a fruitful Soil. It was eminent under the Romans, and was the Seat of one of the seven Churches of Christians; and has for many Ages been a very considerable Place on account of Trade, which makes it resorted to by Merchants of all Countries, Turks, Greeks, Armenians, Persians, and Jews, besides European Nations; especially English, many of our Merchants constantly residing there, and having a Consul for their Protection. The Town has suffered divers Convulsions by Earthquakes, especially one in our Days, namely, June 30. 1688. about Noon a most Dreadful one broke out, which immediately overthrew the greatest Part of the Houses, the Castle was swallowed up in a Chasm that opened under it, and the whole Town was very rudely shattered: 5000 Persons perished, and an immense Wealth was swallow'd up. To add to their Misery, a few Hours after a Fire broke out, which consumed almost all that was left. But it is since Rebuilt, and the Merchants who had retir'd to the Island Chio near adjacent are return'd. This was one of the Seven Cities that claim'd to have given Birth to Homer, which they were so proud of, that they built a Sumptuous Temple to his Honour. Sir George Wheeler and Mr. Tavernier, who saw it in its flourishing State, describe it as a beautiful Place, built like an Amphitheatre on the side of a Hill, which open'd to the South-east: But Dr. Smith who was there in 1670. places the Modern Town in the Plain near the Heaven; and says, the many stately Ruins on the ascent of the Hill, shew that the old City stood there. The Castle was old and ruinous, says Dr. Smith, it commanded the Gulph for 3 or 4 Leagues distance says Tavernier. The Haven is encompassed with Rocks, except at its opening on the West, says Smith; and 'tis well guarded by two Castles says Thevenot. It was reckon'd by these Travellers, to contain 90000 Inhabitants, and to be one of the most considerable Cities of all the Levant for Trade. Seignior Gimelli was there since the Earthquake, in the Year 1693. whose Account of the State of it is thus. 'The Compass of the Modern City is about four Miles, its shape irregular, somewhat drawing to a Triangle, whose side next the Mountains is longest. There is no Beauty in the Buildings, for they are little Hovels after the Turkish fashion, very low with mud Walls, rebuilt since the Earthquake. But the Xans or Caravanseras for lodging Strangers, are very large and well built; the Streets are large, and the whole City a continued Bazar or Fair, where nothing that can be wish'd for is wanting, either for Cloathing, Sustenance or Pleasure, because all the best Commodities of Europe and Asia, are brought hither and sold at cheap Rates. The Consuls of England, France, and Holland, live great in stately Houses near the Sea. The Country about this Town, is very Fertile and Pleasant, abounding (says Thevenot) with Olive Trees, Vines, and Gardening, and the Wine is excellent. The Soap-Earth near this City, is reckoned a Rarity, 'tis a fatness boiling out of the Earth, which being boiled up with Oil, becomes excellent Soap. Among the ancient Ruins, there are the remains of a Roman Circus and a Theatre.

Clazomene, now Urla or Vourla, the Birth-place of Anaxagoras. Ærythraea, memorable for the Habitation of one of the Sybils. Troas, the Birth-place of Anacreon, and Lebidus, are all small Sea-Ports round about the Ionian Peninsula.

Colophon, another of the Cities that claim Homer, whose Inhabitants were so Famous anciently for their Skill in Horsemanship, that they always brought Victory to the Sides they took, so that Colophonem addere became a Proverb, to express a good end of any Business, stands 30 Miles South from Smirna.

Ephesus

Ephesus or Efeso, Turc. Ajasalouch, altho' now but a small Village, was heretofore a most noble City. It stands about 50 Miles South from Smyrna, near the Mouth of the River Caistrus, and the Shore of the Icarian-See, which is a Bay of the Aegean. Its Situation was delightful on the side of a Hill, and a pleasant Rivulet, with a fine Haven at some distance; it was under the Romans the Metropolis of Asia, and the Seat of the Primate of that Diocese. Christianity was early planted in it, and Timothy was its first Bishop. St. Paul wrote one of his Epistles to this People, which is still a part of our Canon of Scripture: St. John the Apostle was Buried here; and the Third General Council of the Church was held in this City. In its more early State, it was famous for the Temple erected in it to Diana, of so beautiful and magnificent Structure, that it was reckoned the Wonder of the World: It was 425 Foot long, and 220 Foot broad, supported by 127 Marble Pillars (27 whereof were very curiously carved,) of 70 Foot in height; the old Accounts say it was 200 Years in Building, but sooner Destroyed by the Villanous Ambition of Herostatus, who to make his Name memorable set it on Fire, on the same Night that Alexander the Great was Born. An ancient Christian Church, now a Turkish Mosque is still standing, as also the Ruins of several others; there are still to be seen the Vestigia of a Roman Theatre, Circus and Aqueduct, as also heaps of stately Ruins, which some suppose to be the Remains of Diana's Temple: But with little Probability I think, for the City was in a flourishing State, so long after the Destruction of that Temple, that 'tis unlikely the Stones of it should not have been remov'd. At present Epheso is the Habitation of 40 or 50 Families only.

Priene, the Birth-place of Bias, one of the Wise Men of Greece, stood in the limits of this Country. As did also Magnesia where Theomistocles died in Exile.

The next Province to the South of Ionis, was CARIA with DORIS, now Aidinelly; surrounded by the Sea on the West and South, and the River Meander on the North.

The Chief Towns in it are,

Miletus, now Palaschia, formerly one of the biggest Cities, but at present a Place of small account, stands on the South side of the River Meander; near the Sea-Coast; the Birth-place of Thales, and sometime the Seat of an Oracle of Apollo, to whom they built a Magnificent Temple. This is the Place mentioned, Acts 20. Sir George Wheeler tells us, there are still large Ruins to be seen, but the Town consists only of a few Shepherds Cottages. Near Miletus stood the Mountain Latmus; where, as the Poets feigned, the Moon made her visits to Endymion, on whom she was enamour'd. Heraclea ad Latmum, at the foot of that Mountain towards the Sea-Coast. Borgyis, mentioned in Antiquity for its Temple erected to Diana, stands 40 Miles South from Heraclea. Myleffa, 20 Miles East from Borgyis, was famous for two Temples of Jupiter; and a Noble one built to the Honour of Augustus Caesar, the Ruins whereof are still seen, as also the Remains of a Column called the Pillar of Meander, and of a little Temple. These three are Bishops Sees, as are also Amyzon, Alabanda, Stratonice, and Alynda; all seated in the Limits of this Province, but none of them considerable enough to deserve Description.

DORIS constitutes the Southern part of Caria, and has these Towns.

Myndus, a Sea-Port on a Small Bay named Jasiscus Sinus, formerly a small Town, whose Inhabitants in Vanity had built so large Gates to it, that Diogenes had them take care the Town did not run out at the Gates. At present 'tis the Chief Town in these Parts, as being the Seat of the Turkish Sangiack.

Halicarnassus, Turc. Nesi, stands more to the South, an uninhabited heap of Ruins (says Sir George Wheeler) at this time, altho' so Famous formerly; 'twas the Royal Seat of Caria, and by Queen Artemisia was adorn'd with a Tomb, in Honour of her Husband Mausoleus, of so Noble and Artificial Structure, that it was numbered among the Nine Wonders of the World. This City had the Honour to give Birth to those two celebrated Historians Herodotus and Dionysius.

Ceramus and Cnydus on the West, and Cressa on the Eastern Coasts, in the Southern Part of this Province, have been notable Havens in their times, but at present of no Fame.

Thus we have passed from North to South, thro' those Provinces that compose the Western Part of Natolia propria, we shall now return thro' the Midland Provinces, and give you a view of the rest of it.

LYDIA so named, as 'tis said from Lud the Son of Shem, otherwise named MOENIA, was in its time a very considerable Kingdom, and comprehended also both Eolis and Ionis abovementioned; its strict Limits lie between Eolis on the South-west, Mysia on the North-west, Caria on the South, and Phrygia-major on the East. It was a fruitful Country, being watered by four considerable Rivers, viz. the Caicus, Hermus, Caistrus and Meander, all which run quite thro' the Country from East to West; the last of them thro' its many Turnings, became a Proverb; together with the Pactolus a smaller Stream, but more fam'd by Poets on account of its Golden Sand. It has divers Mountains, but those too are not unfruitful, especially Tmolus, which is cover'd with Saffron; this was the Country of King Crasus, who was so famed for Wealth.

The Chief Towns were,

Sardis, the Regal Seat, now a poor Village, it stood on the River Pactolus, at the foot of Mount Tmolus, about 70 Miles distant from Smyrna to the East; in Christianity, it was the Seat of one of the Seven Churches of Asia, and still gives Title to a Bishop. It was overthrown by an Earthquake, and there are now the Remains of some stately Architecture and imperfect Inscriptions to be seen.

Philadelphia, formerly the Second City, and another of the Seven Churches, dignified afterwards with the Title of Metropolitan. Sir George Wheeler tells us, 'tis now but a poor Place, and thinly inhabited, but Dr. Smith and others, mention it as remarkable for the Number of Christian Inhabitants, viz. 2000. who have four Churches. 'Twas the last Place in these Parts that Surrender'd to the Turks, and that too not till after six Years Siege. The Greeks retain its old Name, but the Turks call it Al-lach-Sheyer, or as it is corruptly written in the Maps Alakars. It stands on the North side of Tmolus in a fruitful Plain, where are still to be seen many Marks of its ancient Magnificence.

Thystris

Thyatira, about 30 Miles to the North-west, now called Aklisar, and sometimes Thira, seated in a spacious and delightful Plain, near the South Bank of Hermus, was another of the Seven Churches, and still gives Title to a Bishop. The Ruins of ancient Marble Structures testify its former Grandeur, but at present the Houses are but of Turf: it is a Place of some Trade for Corn and Cotton, and inhabited by about 5000 Turks.

Tralles, seated near the Meander was a famous City, and a Bishops See in the beginning of Christianity; but now in Ruins and called Sultan-Hisar.

Magnesie, Turc. Guzethisar, seated on the River Meander, about 50 Miles South from Sardis, was a very considerable City in its ancient State, as the Ruins of many great Buildings demonstrate, and is still a large well built Wall'd Town, holding a good Trade with Smyrna for Cotton-Yarn.

Laodicea, another of the Seven Churches, stood on the Eastern limits of this Province, and sometimes reckon'd to be in Phrygia, because by Constantine laid into that Province: is by the Turks called Eski-Hisar, and at present a heap of Ruins of very large extent, among which are seen three Theatres of White Marble very intire, and a stately Circus, but quite deserted and inhabited only by Beasts. (Dr. Smith.)

Dingislev, a very large and handsome Turkish Town, stands four Miles South from Laodicea.

PHRYGIA major, at present known by the Name of Germian, is a Country of somewhat larger extent than those we have been speaking of, but its In-land Situation made it abound with considerable Towns, even so early as Q. Curtius's time. It lies between Pamphylia on the South, Myssia on the West, Bythinia on the North, and Galatia on the East, and was a fruitful pleasant Country, watered by the Rivers Sangarius, Hermus, Meander, (which all spring here) and Marsias, which took its Name as the Poets say, from the Musician Marsias, who contended with Apollo. In this Province stand Cotacum, now Chiutaia, the Seat of the Turkish Beglerbeg or Vice-Roy, who Governs all the Countries we have mentioned, and the rest of Natolia propria; it is a considerable City, seated on the River Ayala, Lat. 40 D. 40 M. 80 Miles South-east from Bursa.

Gordium and Midcum, the former the Seat of Gordius King of Phrygia, who tied such a Knot in Apollo's Temple, that the Monarchy of the World was promised to him that untied it, which Alexander cut to evade the Oracle. And the latter denominated from his Son Midas, famous in the Poetical Story for his Golden Wish and his Asses Ears, stood in the Northern Limits. Apamia, toward the Southern Confines, seated on the Banks of the Meander, near its Conflux with the Marsias, formerly a Place of great Trade, but now in Decay. Colosse now Chonos, on the South side of the Meander, to the People whereof St. Paul wrote that Epistle, which is part of our Canon. Hierapolis, Turc. Bambouk-kale, seated more to the West on the Frontiers of Lydia; altho' now deserted, its Ruines appear so Magnificent, that Dr. Smith believes it to have been one of the most Glorious Cities of the World: A hot Spring rises here, which was in great Repute for its healing Virtues. Synnada, noted for its Marble. Pemnesia near the head of the River Sangarius; and Tiberiopolis, near the Mountain Sipylus; are the Places of the chiefeſt note in Phrygia.

GALATIA, now named Chiagare, lies next to Phrygia on the East, having Paphlagonia on the North and Pamphilia on the South, and had its Name Galatia, from a Colony of Gaul's, who passing thro' Greece into Asia, settled first in Phrygia-minor and Myssia, but being driven thence by Attalus King of Pergamus, they removed hither; it was also called Gallo-Græcia, from the mixture of Greeks with them. 'Twas a fruitful pleasant Country, and was the Place where the Stone Amythyst said to protect Men from Drunkenness was found.

The Chief Towns in it were,

Pessinus on the River Sangarus, notable in Poetic Story for the Goddess Cybele, whose Residence was supposed to be here; at the Request of the Romans, her Image was removed from hence to their City, but it seems, not willing to go there, the Ship that carried it stopt in the Tyber, and could not be brought forward, till a Vestal Virgin to clear her Chastity prevail'd upon the Goddess, and by the strength of her Girdle, the Ship was haled up. Germa now Germaste on the same River, a Bishop's See. Therma, so named from its hot Baths, mentioned by both Ptolemy and Strabo. Ancyra, Turc. Angouri on the River Midas, formerly the chief Town of the Tectosagi, and famous for the Victories of Pompey over Mithridates, and Tamerlain over Bajazet; a Town of good Trade at this time, which consists chiefly in Chamlers; and the Seat of a Sangiack. Lastly Amurium or Chiongon, a Bishop's See stands on the same River Melas near its head.

PONTUS and PAPHLAGONIA lay next, on the North of Galatia, divided on the East from Cappadocia by the River Halys, notable for its swift Current. On the West by the River Parthemius, from the Metapontus or Pontus propria; which last extended Westward to the River Sangarius; and were both bounded on the North by the Euxine-Sea. The Name Pontus extended far, even to all the Coast of the Euxine-Sea, under some distinctions. This before us, is but a small Part of it cut off from the rest by Paphlagonia, so that we shall consider them together.

The Chief Towns whereof were,

In PONTUS now Genech.] Heraclea Pontica now Penderachi, a Sea-Port on the North-west Cape of this Land, sometime famous for the Residence of a Branch of the Imperial Family Comneni. Amastris, now Semaſtro, another Sea-Port at the mouth of the River Parthemius, formerly of great Strength. Claudiopolis, otherwise called Bithynium, and now Castromena, seated within Land, formerly a Place of Strength, and still a Bishop's See.

In PAPHLAGONIA, now Roni or Bolli.] Teuthramia, now Tripoli, a Port-Town at the bottom of a small Bay. Synope, now Sinabe, a large Town with a very convenient Haven in the Mouth of a River, to which it gives Name, is seated on the North-east Promontory; it is a Place of good Trade, and maintains a profitable Fishery. Mithridates the famous King of Pontus, had here both his Birth and Burial, it being for some time the Metropolis of that Kingdom. Amisus or Simiso, seated on the Coast in the extream East part of this Province. Pompeopolis seated within Land, near the Southern Confines. Gangara or Zagy'a, which stands more Northward, was notable formerly for a Council held held in it, and is still a Bishoprick. Ionopolis now Ginepoli.

Having now Travell'd thro' and survey'd all the Provinces of Nacolia strictly so call'd, we shall proceed thro' the other three Parts, which we told you Nacolia or Asia-minor taken at large, was divided into.

And here AMASIA, or the Beglerbegates of Sebastian and Treziende, lies next on the East to Paphlagonia, whence we last came; and comprehends the rest of PONTUS, under the various denominations of Pontus-Galaticus, Pontus-Poleminiacus, and Pontus-Cappadocius.

Pontus-Galaticus so called, because it was by the Romans laid to Galatia: Lies on the North-east of Galatia, from the Frontiers of Cappadocia in the South, to the Banks of the Euxine-Sea in the North, extending Eastward to the River Tbermodon, near the mouth whereof stands the Promontory or Cape Herecleum now Cabo di Limen. The chief Towns of it are, Amasia or Amanasan, seated among Mountains on the Banks of the River Iris or Casalmach, or rather at a Leagues distance from that River; for Tavernier says, there is a Trench cut out of a hard Rock a League in length, to bring fresh Water to the Town. It is a large place, the Capital of this Country and sometimes the Seat of the Beglerbeg, the River which about 60 Miles below, falls into the Euxine-Sea, is so large that Ships of Burthen can come up near the Town; but it enjoys not however much Trade, nor are the Buildings at all Beautiful. It is so defended by craggy Mountains, and the Castle that is inaccessible, except on one side. It has been customary for the Eldest Son of the Grand-Segnior to reside here till he is call'd to the Throne. In its ancient State, this City was the Seat of the Kings of Cappadocia, and some marks of its Grandeur still appear, in the Ruins of very Magnificent Structures. It is the See of an Archbishop, and had the Honour to give birth to Strabo the Geographer. Themiscyra, now Fenagoria or Leie, seated on the Sea-Coast 60 Miles North-east from Amasia, is a Bishop's See, and may have been formerly considerable, being always nam'd among the chief Cities, but at present 'tis but in ill State. Cemana, for distinction call'd Pontica, seated in the South Borders, about 70 Miles from Themiscyra and about 80 from Amasia to the East, is another Bishop's See, and the next in Rank of the Cities of this Province, but now not very considerable.

Pontus-Poleminiacus lies next on the East. The Chief Towns here are, Naxosaria now Tocat the Metropolis of this Country, and the Seat of the Beglerbeg, it is a City of large extent, and well built, at the foot of a hill, (or on a Rock as Tavernier,) near the Northern Bank of the River Ceranus, near 100 Miles East from Amasia, with a Castle for its Defence; it is the See of an Archbishop, and according to Tavernier's account, the Christians are so numerous as to have 12 Churches here: He also tells us this City is well inhabited, and is one of the most remarkable thoroughfares in the East, for the Caravans to and from Diarbeck, Persia, Constantinople, Smyrna, &c. here are several Mosques, and one of late Structure is especially notable for its Magnificence. The best blue Turkey Leather is made here. The Land round about this City abounds with Saffron, which is a very valuable Commodity farther Eastward.

Sebastia or Cabyra, now Sivas, a considerable Place of great Strength, stands about 40 Miles South from Tocat. The Beglerbeg sometimes resides here, and his Government is denominated from this City as frequently as from Tocat.

This is supposed to be the Country of the Amazons or the Feminine Monarchy, who admitted no Men among them, and yet were eminent in Warlike Bravery. They were originally the Wives of a Scythian Army that broke into these Parts, whose Husbands being all kill'd by Treachery, the Women reveng'd their Death, and maintained the Country for some Ages.

Pontus-Cappadocius, the most Eastern part of Pontus, extends to the Frontiers of Georgia, having the Armenia-minor and the upper Stream of the Euphrates for its Southern bounds. The chief Towns are Pharnacia, Ischopolis, Ceraufus, all on the Sea-Coast in the Western part. And Trabezond or Trapezus in the Eastern part, seated also near the Coast of the Black-Sea, in the 43d. Degree of Latitude. A notable Place for Trade to Constantinople, Cassa, and other Places on that Sea. The City and Suburbs contain 20000 Inhabitants says Gimelli, but having suffer'd often by Wars, particularly in 1617. when the Russians burnt it, the buildings are not considerable. Two small Citadels guard the Town, but neither of them very strong. This City was famous in the middle Ages for the Court of the Greek Emperors of the Family of Comneni, held in it when the Latines had taken Constantinople. Alexius Comnenus first began to reign here, An. 1204. and David Comnenus the Eleventh in Succession was conquered, and with his Seven Sons kill'd by Mehomet the Great, An. 1461. it is still the Seat of the Government of this Countrey, being the Residence of the Beglerbeg. Other Places are nam'd by ancient Geographers, but none very considerable at present.

ALADULIA, or the Beglerbegate of Metit or Marusch, adjoins to that of Trabezond on the South, extending Eastward to the River Euphrates; it comprehends Cappadocia and Armenia-minor.

CAPPADOCIA, is a large and fruitful Country, producing Wines and Fruit in great Plenty, and in the Mountains (whereof a large Ridge named Anti-Taurus runs quite cross the Country,) are found Mines of Silver, Copper, Iron and Allum; this Country is also noted for its excellent breed of Horses. The People were anciently of a very Vicious Nature, but under Christianity were so reform'd as to produce Martyrs, Fathers and Saints in the Church, Gregory Nazianzen, Gregory Nyssen, and St. Basil were all of this Country, as was also (according to the common Opinion) that great Champion of the Faith, St. George Patron of our Order of the Garter. The great River Melas which rises in the Western limits of Galatia, passes thro' the Southern Borders of this Province and Armenia, and falls into the Euphrates. The River Halis mentioned as the Western Boundary of Pontus, and the Iris which also falls into the Euxine-Sea in Pontus-Galaticus, have both their Fountains here. The chief Towns are,

Casaria or Mazaca, now Caissa, which was the Capital of Cappadocia under the Romans, and the See of St. Basil, stands about 40 Miles South from Sivas, near the North Bank of the River Melas or Cabacquet. Tavernier informs us 'tis a good fair and populous ious City built round a Rock, at the top whereof stands a Castle well Garrison'd : It is the Stage of all the Caravans from the East, who hence disperse to the several Countries. Nissa and Nazianzum the Sees of the two Gregory's, and several other Cities of Cappadocia are mentioned in Antiquity as considerable, but none of them are now observable. The Capital of the Turkish Government stands in the Armenia-minor; namely,

Mosch or Mars, Antiq. Mesena and Metita, situate near the Banks of the River Euphrates, in the South-east limits of this Government, is a large and well built City, the Seat of the Beglerbeg, who has four Sangiacks under his Jurisdiction; and was the chief Town built by the Aladules, a fierce Nation which anciently inhabited this Country.

The remaining Part of Asia-minor, is the Diocese or Beglerbegate of CARAMANIA (so named from a Race of Kings descended from Caraman) which is all the Southern Part, and comprehends the ancient Lycia, Pamphylia, Pisidia, Lycania and Cilicia.

LYCIA, now Menteseli, is a small Province lying on the Coast of the Mediterranean-Sea, bounded on the North by Phrygia-major and Pamphylia, and on the West by Caria. The Mountains which are Branches of Taurus, surround it on three sides, and the Sea on the fourth; it was a pleasant and flourishing Country in ancient times, but now not considerable. These were the Chief Towns, Telmessus seated on a noted Bay in the Western limits, whose Inhabitants are said to have been the first Pretenders to interpretation of Dreams. Patara, more Eastward, a little Town seated on a Hill, formerly celebrated for a Temple and Oracle of Apollo, almost equal to that of Delphos. Xanthus, more within Land on a River of the same Name. Myra, the Metropolis, seated on a high Hill at some distance from the Coast, mentioned Acts 27. 5. the See of a Bishop. Phaselis, formerly a notable Nest of Pyrates, now a small Village nam'd Fionda, and Olympus also give Titles to Bishops, as do likewise Pinaria, Tlos, Limyra and Rhodia in the Up-land.

PAMPHTLIA, lies next to Lycia on the East, having the Mediterranean-Sea for its Southern bounds, and Pisidia on the North; it is a very Mountainous Country, in the Up-land, but fruitful and pleasant on the Coast, neither are the Mountains unprofitable, for great Herds of Goats that feed on them, whose Hair makes excellent Chamlets. The chief Towns are, Attalia or Satalia, Turc. Satalyah, a Port-town conveniently seated on a Bay, which makes a good Harbour, but of dangerous entrance, with a Castle reckon'd among the principal in this Country, is a Place of good Trade. Perga, more Eastward, near the Mouth of the River C-strius famous in ancient times for a Temple to Diana: Both these Towns are mention'd Acts 14. 25. Syde or Syda, Turc. Canda, another Port-town, seated more to the East. Aspendus, more within Land, between Perga and Syde, strongly situated and the Metropolis of the Country under the Romans.

PISIDIA, lies on the North of Pamphylia, a small Province, but fruitful Land, being a Plain amidst Mountains. The chief Towns were, Sagalassus in the Western Confines, mentioned by Livy for the Fertility of its Fields. Antiochia-Pisidia, the Metropolis when under the Romans, mentioned Acts 17. 19. Termessus strongly seated in a Straight between Mountains.

LYCANIA with ISAURIA, adjoined on the North to Pisidia, a Champaign Country of no large extent, wherein these Towns were of chiefest note, Lystra, on the Western limits where Paul and Barnabas having cured a Cripple, the Priests would have offer'd Sacrifice to them as Gods, Acts 14. Derbe, on the South limits, where the same Apostle Preached. Isauria, which gave Name to that part of the Country, is long since destroyed. And Iconium, now Cogni, the Metropolis of Lycania formerly, and of Caramania now; a large well built and very populous City, wherein the Beglerbeg resides; seated in the midst of the Province, in the 40th. Degree of Latitude, near a fresh Water Lake, stiled Trogilis Palus 100 Miles North from the Sea-Coast. The Situation being pleasant and secure, it was chosen by the Turkish Sultans, descended from Cutlu Moses for their Regal Seat, and continued so from 1072. till 1261. when in that Excursion of the Tartars under Haelon, the City was taken and that Royalty pull'd down. But Haelon returning Home to succeed his Brother Mango and Aladine, II. being dead without Issue, it gave Opportunity to Caraman Alifinus, a Nobleman of the Country, to seize the City, and erect a new Monarchy, which comprehended these Provinces from him call'd Caramania. At this Place St. Paul Preached, and it is now an Archbishopsrick.

Lastly, CILICIA on the East of Pamphylia, extends along the Coasts of the Mediterranean-Sea, to the Confines of Syria, near 250 Miles from East to West, but hardly 50 in breadth; the Land is in some Parts very Fertile, but in others very Stoney. The Northern and Eastern Borders are very Mountainous, and the Passages between them very narrow; which Straights being possessed by the Persians to oppose Alexander, occasioned the Battle of Issus, where the Persians were the second time Defeated. The Chief Towns here are, Silenus or Istnos, seated on a River to which it gives Name, near the Sea-Coast in the Western Confines, a Place not notable at this time, except for being a Bishop's See, as is also Jocope over against it on the right side of the same River. Selucia-Trachea, seated on the River Calycadnus more Eastward, is an Archbishop's See. Philadelphia and Flaviopolis more Northward, give Titles also to Bishops, as do also Lamus, on the River Laramus; and Sole, afterwards Pompeopolis, seated near the mouth of the same River, noted anciently for a Colony of Greeks who in process of time, spoke their own Language so corruptly, that from them any preposterous Expression was call'd a Solecism. Tarsus, the Metropolis of this Province, and the See of an Archbishop, stands on the River Cydus, near its Mouth into the Rbegma-Lake, in the Lat. 36. 50. m. near the middle of the Province: The River having passed thro' the Lake, flows forward in a good large Stream into the Sea, which makes it a good Haven, and renders the City a place of Trade; 'tis now called Tberassa, and sometimes by the Turks Hemsa, and was the Birth-place of St. Paul. Adena, seated more to the Eastward, in a fruitful Soil both for Wine and Corn, and therefore resorted to by Travellers for Provisions to carry them over the Mountains. Mopsuestia, near the Sea-Coast, anciently a Place of good account; and on the extreme Eastern Frontiers, Issus, now Aiazso or Lajazso, seated on a Gulph to which it gives Name, is a neat Town, with a good Haven: Famous in its time for the Battle fought near it, between Alexander and

Darius, wherein the former with the loss of 100 Men, defeated the mighty Army of the latter, and kill'd above 100000 of his Men, as the Writers of this Prince's Life declare. Several In-land Cities are mentioned by ancient Authors as considerable; but they are declined, and at present unknown, so we must pass them over, and here finish our Account of ASIA-MINOR.

CHAP. II.

The ISLANDS on the Coast of ASIA-MINOR.

THESE Islands were in the flourishing Times of Greece and Rome very considerable, but since the Turks have been Masters of them, they are very much declined; they lie distributed on the Coast from North to South in this Order.

TENEDOS, called Bosceda by the Turks, lies at the mouth of the Hellepont, over against Tross or Phrygia-minor, not above two Leagues from the Shoar, and made the Haven to Troy, which is now choak'd up with Sand. The Island is 50 Miles in circuit, and contains many Villages, and one large Town of the same Name, with a Castle which defends the Port; the Coast is Rocky, but the Mid-land is good Soil, and produces Muscadine Wine. The Greeks retir'd behind this Island, when they pretended to quit the Siege of Troy, and lay by till their Plot took effect, and then in the Night return'd.

LESBOS, now Metelino of much larger extent, lies more to the South over against the Coast of Lydia; it is near 60 Miles long, and reckoned 160 in circuit; the Soil in some parts Rocky, in others very Fruitful, producing excellent Corn and Wine. Meteline, the chief Town stands on the North side on a Rocky Promontory, which makes two several Ports, which are both defended by a Castle on the Hill, and a Fort at the Foot of it, the Castle is well Garrison'd, and is an Arsenal of Stores for the Gallies that Cruise against Pirates; this was formerly a City of beautiful Structure, but at present consists only of ordinary low built Houses: The Venetians were long time Masters of this Island.

CHIOS or Scio, Turc. Sakisedaci, lies on the South of Lesbos, over against the Promontory of Ionis, in the same Latitude with Smyrna, of 100 Miles (80 says Thevenot.) in circuit; it is a fruitful Soil, producing Corn, Oil, Honey, most delicious Wine, Silk, and especially the Gum-Mastick out of the Lentisk-Tree in very great quantity, which yields a vast profit to the Inhabitants; the Land is Hilly and Stony, and wants Water, having few Springs and very little Rain which checks the Fertility of it; the People are remarkably Merry and Gay, and the Women very handsome. The Chief Town Scio, is pleasantly seated on the East side of the Island, and had a good Haven, fortified by a strong Castle, but the Haven is in decay, and the Town of very ordinary Structure, altho' formerly a good City, which claim'd Homer, and pretended to shew his School near it. The Genoese were Masters of this Place till outed by the Turks; the present Inhabitants, are chiefly their Offspring and Greeks, who occupy 30 small Towns and Villages, (or 60 according to Thevenot.) under the Government of a Turkish Garrison residing in the Castle. The Venetians took this Island in the late War, An. 1694. but lost it again the Year following.

SAMOS, lies on the South-east of Chios, over against the Coast of Ionis, in the Latitude of Ephesus, not above 2 Leagues separated from the Coast, and about 80 Miles in compass; it is surrounded with Rocks, but the Mid-land is fruitful in Corn, Oil, and Fruits. The chief Town, Samo stands on the South-east part, near a fair and commodious Haven, but now little frequented by reason of the Pirates, who so much infest it, that the Town from a Populous and well Inhabited City, is become a sorry Village. It was an eminent Free-state, and the Birth-place of Pythagoras.

ICARIA, now Nicaria, lies on the west of Samos of much smaller extent, and not at all considerable, being destitute of a Haven, and therefore not visited by Traders. The Inhabitants are about 3000 in number, are Poor and maintain themselves by diving for Sponge, with which they pay their Tribute and carry on a Commerce. (Thevenot.)

PATHMOS, now Palmosa, lies on the South of Icaria a great distance from the main Land; it is a mountainous and woody Soil. The chief Town stands on a Mountain, with a Haven at its Foot, where Ships arrive with Provisions, which the Island does not sufficiently produce, and where the Venetian Fleet used to Winter during the Siege of Candia. The sterility of the Soil, made it always a place of little resort, and therefore it was used by the Romans as a place of Banishment, under which Punishment St. John resided here and wrote his Revelation.

LERIA or Lero, and CLAROS, not far from it, lie both to the South of Pathmos; the former is the larger, and has two Havens; the latter has a very high Mountain, but neither of them afford any thing worth mentioning.

COOS or COS, now Lango, or Isola-Lango by the Italians, and Strinco or Stanchio by the Greeks and Turks, is of larger extent, being about 80 Miles in Compass, lies North and South over against the Coast of Doris, in the Lat. 36. It is a pleasant and fruitful Land, lying in a declivity from the higher Grounds in the East, which affords a beautiful Prospect, and produces rich Wines, the Turpentine-tree, and other useful Plants, with Woods of Cypress-trees, well preserv'd by the Turks. The chief Town of the same Name seated on the Eastern Coast, is large and fortified with a Castle, having a Haven secured by a good Mole, and well guarded from Pirates by Gallies. The Ships from Egypt to Constantinople commonly touch here: This was the Birth-place of Hippocrates the Physician, and Apelles the Painter, and was celebrated in Antiquity, for a rich Temple of Asclepius.

ASTYPALÆ.

ASTYPALÆA, now Stampala, lies on the South-west of Cos, more out to Sea; it is an Island of about 60 Miles in circuit, and has a Town of the same Name in the South-Coast, and two good Havens.

CARPATHUS, now Scarpanto, lies far out to Sea on the South of Doris, about the same magnitude with the former, but not at all considerable, being a Mountainous and Rocky Soil, and but poorly inhabited. The chief Town of the same Name, lies on a Haven in the West-Coast.

Divers small Islands lie dispers'd on the Coast, but are not considerable enough to deserve notice.

RHODES, an Island of great Fame in former Days, and still as considerable as the Turkish Tyranny permits any Place to be, lies on the Coast of Caria and Lycia from the 35th. to the 36th. Degree of Latitude 100 Miles in circuit. It is a most fruitful Soil, producing (at least formerly) the richest Wine and all sorts of delicious Fruits: And for the Serenity of its Climate, (being daily Sun-shine) said to be beloved by Apollo, to whose Honour a vast Colossus was erected, which was one of the Wonders of the World: It was the Statue of Apollo in Brass 70 Cubits high, which stood astride over the Haven, so high that the Ships sail'd between his Legs. It was 12 Years in making by Chares its Architect, and after 66 Years standing was overthrown by an Earthquake. Rhodes the chief Town, stands on the East side of the Island; it was formerly a Place of great note, and still not contemptible, being pleasantly seated on the side of a Hill, three Miles in circumference, and well Fortified with a treeble Wall and a good Castle, the Streets are wide, straight and well paved; the Houses of squared Stone, after the Italian manner, and the Bazars or Markets are well furnished. Its chief Haven is Commodious and Safe, and very strongly Fortified; on one side of it, stands an old Castle built by the Knights, and on the other side a square Tower built by the Turks; which altho' 50 Foot asunder, stand on the two Places where the two Feet of the Colossus stood. Besides this, there are two other Ports for Gallies, which are also well secured by Cannon. (Thevenot) In the middle Ages, this City and Island were possessed by the Religious Knights of St. John of Jerusalem, many of whom were notable Champions in the Holy-War: And very especially renowned for the brave Defence, they made when the City was besieged by the Turks, first in the Year 1480, when after three Months vigorous Attack, they were forced to retire; and during the second Siege in 1522. wherein Solyman, II. in Person, with a Fleet of 400 Ships, and 200000 Men, were so well resisted, that they were ready to depart; if a Traytor in the Town had not inform'd him of its Weakness, and encourag'd him to another Attack, wherein he succeeded, and the Island has ever since been subject to the Turks. The Knights who were denominated from this Island, removed to Malta, which was granted to them by the Emperor Charles V. and the Succession of them continues there to this Day.

CYPRUS, an Island exceedingly larger than any we have mentioned, lies extended from East to West near 200 Miles along the Coast of Asia, at the distance of about 10 Leagues. It was formerly a rich and flourishing Country, producing Wine, Oil, Corn, Sugar, Cotton, Honey, Wool, Metals, and many other useful Commodities; Govern'd by its own Kings, of whom there were no less than Nine when Cyrus first Conquer'd it. Afterwards it was Subjected by the Ptolomy's of Egypt, and again by the Romans, in whose Succession it was possessed by the Constantinopolitan Emperors. Our King Richard I. being provok'd by the ill treatment of the Inhabitants, at his arrival here in his way to the Holy-Land, set upon and Conquer'd the Island, and conferr'd the Royalty of it on Guy de Lusignan, Anno 1191. whose Posterity reigned Kings of it for 17 Generations. After these the Venerians were for some time its Masters. But Lastly, Selymus II. Conquer'd it, An. 1571. and ever since it has been possessed by the Turks.

The Island was by the ancient Geographers divided into four Parts, viz. Paphia to the West, Amathusia, to the South. Lapytha to the North. And Salimena on the East. Under the Lusignan Kings, it was divided into twelve Counties denominated from the twelve chief Towns, which were, Nicosia, Famagusta, Paphos, Audima, Limissa, Masorum, Salines, Messoria, Crusocus, Pentalia, Carpassus, and Cerines: Besides which there were no less than 800 Villages; 'tis still so considerable as to be the Government of a Beglerbeg, who has 7 Sangiacks under him. Its chief Towns at present are, Paphos or Baffo, seated near where the old Paphia stood, on the Western-Coast. Amathus now Lymisso on the Southern-Coast, the chief Port in the Island. Nicosia or Leucosia, the Metropolis seated in the middle of the Island, the Seat of the Kings anciently, and of the Beglerbeg now, a large and populous City; it was formerly 9 Miles in circumference, but at present but 3 Miles round, as we are told by Tavernier; the Walls are Terraced, and in a good posture of Defence: The City was adorn'd by the Venetians, with many fair Palaces, but the Turks pull them down as they decay; the noble ancient Cathedral of St. Sophia, is now a Mosque; the Greeks have four Churches here, the Latines two, and the Armenians one; it is the See of an Archbishop, who has 3 Suffragan Bishops, at Paphos, Larneza, and Cerenes. Famagusta or Hamacostos, seated on the Eastern-Coast, on an excellent Harbour, is a Town of good Trade, and two Miles in circuit; it was notable for its good Defence against the Turks, and is still the Bulwark of the Island, having good Walls kept in repair, and a very strong Citadel for its Defence; the Turks have turn'd all the Churches to Mosques, and permit no Christians to inhabit the Town. (Tavernier) The old Salamis, out of whose Ruins Famagusta was built in the middle Ages, stood a little on the Northeast, and its Ruins bear the Name of Porto Constanzo, for the Town was sometime called Constantia. Lastly, Cerenes, a Bishop's See is a small City destitute of Walls, but has a Fortrefs by the Sea side, with a Garrison in it.

CHAPTER III.

Of SYRIA in General, Ancient and Modern, and of SYRIA and PHOENICIA in particular.

SYRIA, another large Part of the Turkish Empire in Asia, lies next to Natalia on the South-east, under which general Name are comprehended not only Syria properly so called, but also Phœnicia and Palestine or the Holy-Land. And thus understood, its Boundaries are, on the West the Mediterranean-Sea; on the East, the River Euphrates, which parts it from Mesopotamia or Diasbeck, and Arabia-Deserta; on the North, Mount Amanus and a Branch of Mount Taurus, which divides it from Cilicia and Armenia-minor; and on the South Arabia Petrea; in which extent it is reckoned 420 Miles from North to South, and 180 from East to West.

Syria, otherwise call'd Sourie and Souristan, and by the ancient Hebrews Aram or Charam is the Northern Part, denominat'd as it is said from the City Tyre, or otherwise written Tsur, and melted into Sur. The Hebrew Name was derived from Aram, the Son of Sem, who is supposed to have first Peopled it; the Air is Healthful and very Temperate, being seated in the Fifth Climate, between the 33d. and the 36th. Degree of Latitude; and the Soil deep, level, and fruitful, producing Corn, Grapes, Figs, Oranges, Lemons, Dates, Medicinal-Herbs, Silk, and other valuable Commodities.

Syria was a Kingdom governed by its own Princes in the time of David King of Judea, as we find in Holy Scripture in the Relation of his Wars; a Race of those Kings succeeded till A. M. 3210. when Tig-lath Pileser took Damascus, and slew Rezin their King; after which it became part of the great Monarchy of the Assyrians; and upon the Persian Acquisition of that Monarchy, became subject to Cyrus and his Successors, with the rest of Darius's Dominions Conquer'd by Alexander, and after his Death made a separate Kingdom by Seleucus Nicanor, about A. M. 3633. - A. ante Chr. 317. whose Posterity wore the Regal Dignity 250 Years, after which it was Conquer'd by the Romans about A. M. 3865. under whom Phœnicia and Syria were thus divided, viz.

Syria, divided into, 1. Celestria or Syria-Cava, because a hollow Valley between the Mountains. 2. Antiochene call'd also Seleucia, from the two Cities of that Name, seated towards the Sea Coast and the Borders of Phœnicia. And 3. Comagena on the North of Celestria towards the River Euphrates. In the limits of Celestria stood the famous City Palmyra, whose Ruins visited a few Years ago, and described by Dr. Hallifax, Chaplain of the Factory of Aleppo, testify its ancient Grandeur; it was the Capital of a Country to which it gave Name. Berea, the Modern Aleppo, stands also within its Bounds. The Antiochene had its Name from the famous City Antioch, Metropolis of the Roman Dominions in these Parts. Seleucia, Ladicea, and Alexandretta, now Scanderon, were also seated in its limits. Comagena, the most Northern Part of Syria between Cilicia and Euphrates, had Somafeta for its Capital, seated on the River, which together with Germanina on Mount Amanus and Singa, were its chief Cities.

Phœnicia, was divided into Phœnicia propria vel Meritima, and Pœnicia Libani; the former was the West Part on the Sea-Coast, where the famous Cities of Tyre and Sidon were seated; the latter more to the East, between the Mountains Libanus and Anti-Libanus, whose Metropolis was Damascus, and in its limits stood Heliopolis, now vulgarly call'd Balbec; whose magnificent Ruins were lately view'd and described by the very ingenious Mr. Manderill, Chaplain to the English Factory at Aleppo; to whose printed Relation we refer the Reader, for an ample Account of the present State of it and Damascus, and several other very judicious Notitia of these Parts.

The Ancient State of Palestine, we shall speak to more particularly anon.

This Country is famous for its Mountains, whereof a Chain runs cross it on the North, viz. the Amanus on the Frontiers of Cilicia, and a Branch of Taurus which divides Comagena from Armenia-minor; and more to the South, Libanus, famous for its Cedar-Trees, Frankincense and Honey, a high Ridge of 150 Miles in length from the Sea-Coast Eastward, Craggy and in some Parts so high, as to be always cover'd with Snow. Anti-Libanus, bending to the South-east, is divided from the former by a small Valley only, and may justly enough be reckon'd part of the same. Carmel and the other single Mounts frequent here, we shall mention in their Places. Rivers, here are few, the Orontes, Singas or Marsias, Eleutherius and Jordan, are the chief, and those of no very long Course.

Upon the decline of the Roman and Constantinopolitan Empires, Syria became the Prey of the Sarazens; who under Haumar their third Caliphi seized this Country, A. C. 636. Afterwards it was partly Conquer'd by Cutlu Meses, the Turk, and a Race of Turkish Kings possessed the Land, and kept their Regal Seat at Damascus, till Conquer'd by the Tartars, who were oured by the Mamaluks, which last, altho' expell'd by Tamcen, recovered and held it till 1516. when Selimus the Turk by the Conquest of Camsen Gaurus, gain'd Damascus and all the Country, which has been ever since subject to the Ottoman-Port.

In its present State, Syria is but sorrily cultivated, altho' its natural Fertility, produce excellent Fruits, among which Figs in perfection. The Cotton-Tree is also plenty here, and affords a great Profit to the Inhabitants. Their Sheep are remarkable for their monstrous Tails, which are both broad and long, so as to drag on the Ground, and weigh near 30 Pound. And the Silk-worm gives the Merchant a great Profit. These, besides Corn of all sorts, Herbs and various Plants; among which, that which bears the Galls used in Dying, the Alces, Opium, &c. are the natural nal Products of this Country. But the Turkish Tyranny hinders its being sufficiently Peopled; and therefore many Places where anciently famous Cities stood, are now but ruinous Desarts.

In its Government, Syria is divided into Two

Beglerbegates, viz. of Aleppo and Tripoli; and Palestine another, viz. the Beglerbegate of Damascus. That of Aleppo being subdivided into Nine Sangiacks, that of Tripoli into Four, and that of Damascus into Ten.

TO proceed in our Travelling Method, we will begin with Comagena, which is the most Northern Part of Syria, and adjoyns to Cilicia, whence we last came; whose chief Towns are, Somasata, now Scempfat, seated in the very North limits near the Euphrates, once the Capital of this Country, but now in poor State, the Birth-place of Lucian, and Paulus the Heretick. Germanica, on the Western limits a Roman Colony, nam'd in Honour of Germanicus by Augustus, the Birth-place of Nestorius the Heretick.

Aleppo, the Capital of all this part of Syria, and the Seat of the Beglerbeg, is a most flourishing large and populous City, reckon'd the best of all Turkey, Turky, next to Constantinople and Grand-Cairo. It is seated upon four small Hills, in the midst of a pleasant Plain, on the Banks of the River Singus, in the Latitude of 36. D. Long. 58. 45. the first Meridian being placed in Ferro Insl. about 80 Miles (28 or 30 Leagues, says Thevenot) West from the River Euphrates, and 60 (22 Leagues, Thevenot) East from the Coasts of the Syrian-Sea, and about 70 Miles South from Mount Taurus, and the limits of Armenia-minor. By reason of its convenient Situation, it was long since made the Staple of Trade; for by the Gulph of Ormus, and the Euphrates. The Persians, Indians, Arabians, Armenians, &c. brought hither all the rich Jewels, Silks, Drugs, and other Commodities of India, Persia, Armenia, Assyria, &c. which before the Discovery of Navigation to the East-Indies, render'd this Trade vastly richer than it is now: however it is still the Market for the richest Commodities of Europe, brought hither by the English, Dutch, French, Venetians, Genueses, &c. by the Mediterranean-Sea and the Port of Scandercon, and hence vended to Persia, and divers Parts of Turkey; also the best Goods of those Countries, such as Raw-Silk, Cotton, Grogram-Yarn, Galls, divers sorts of Drugs, &c. sent thence to Europe. The English Merchants have a Consul here as at Smyrna and are always treated civilly, the English Cloth being a Commodity of great Esteem among the Turks. The French, Dutch, and other Nations have also their Consuls, who have free access to the Government, to make Complaints of any Injuries or Grievances. The Description of the City according to Tavernier is thus. Aleppo is built upon four Hills, upon the highest whereof stands the Castle, which is large but not strong; the City is surrounded with Walls of Free-stone, which are three Miles in Circuit, in the Walls are ten Gates; and beyond the Walls are large Suburbs which are very Populous. A Rivulet runs by the City, which waters the Gardens, wherein grow abundance of Fruit, Pistaches, Figs, Pomgranates, &c. besides which the City is supplied with Water from two Fountains at a distance. The Buildings either Publick or Private appear not handsome, but are well adorn'd within side with Marble of divers Colours, fretwork Cielings, and golden Inscriptions. The Streets are Pav'd except the Bazars, where the Merchants and Mechanics have their Shops; and are narrow, with a Horse Road in the middle, and Foot Causeys on each side. In the City are 26 Mosques, whereof some are very Magnificent; and three Colleges with Learned Men, to whom Salaries are allow'd to teach Grammar, Philosophy, &c. but there are few Students. The chief Manufactures of this Town is Weaving of Silk and Chamlet. The Suburbs are very well Peopled and Inhabited chiefly by Christians, of whom there are Greeks about 15 or 16000 Souls who have an Archbishop, Armenians about 12000 with a Bishop, Maronites 1200 depending on the Pope; and the Roman-Catholicks have three Churches, serv'd by Capuchins, Carmelites and Jesuites. And in the whole 'tis commonly reckon'd, that in City and Suburbs, there are not less than 250000. A vast Trade is carried on here in all European Commodities, and in Silks, Chamlets, Galls, Rhubarb, Galbanum, Opoponax, Stryax, Scammony, and other Drugs, &c. The City is governed by a Beys, who has a Guard of 300 Men, there is also an Aga with 400 Men, who Commands without as well as within the City, a Governour with 100 Musketeers, who have the Care of the Cannon in the Castle, which are 38 pieces, an Aga or Captain of the City commanding 300 Harquebutiers, and a Soubasha under him. For the Civil Administration, here are a Cadi or Judge, a Teshtedar or Treasurer, a Mufti, and a Cheik or Doctor of the Law; here is also a College or Monastery of Dervises. To supply what he has omitted, take the following Account from Thevenot; Aleppo is a large City of Oval Figure surrounded with Walls, which are a large Hours Walk in circuit; they are built on a Rock, but not very strong, and are in some parts encumber'd with Buildings. The Castle in the middle of the City, is also of Oval Form. The Buildings are better than usual in Turkey, the Publick have generally Dome-Roofs, and the private Houses are of white Stone (whereof they have large Quarries near the Town) with flat Terras-Roofs, and are beautiful within side, having large Halls with Fountains in the midst, and Rooms very well adorned. Among many fair Mosques the great one is especially remarkable for its fine Structure, and large Court surrounding it, enclosed by an arched Gallery; this was formerly the Church of St. John Damascene, whose Pulpit still remains. Here are many fair Khans or large Inns for Strangers; in the chief whereof the Consuls of England and France reside, which is a very good large Building, with a Court before it shut up with two great Iron Gates. Near the City grow excellent Grapes, whereof the Franks and others make a rich Wine, bringing the Grapes home and Press them in their own Houses. The Air is thin and wholesome, but exceeding hot in the Summer Months, during which time there is not only no Rain, but even no Dew in the Night, so that they sleep on the Terrasses in the open Air; Provisions are very plenty, and the Place pleasant to dwell in: Thus far Thevenot. Concerning the natural Products, take a word or two from Dr. Rauwolf: altho' Aleppo be surrounded with rocky Hills and chalky Valleys, there grows plenty of Wheat and Barley, the Harvest beginning in April or May, but there is few Oats and less Grass, the Soil being too dry and sandy; the Valleys are full of Olive-Trees, and Capers grow very common; in the Gardens and Orchards, grow much Fruit of delicate kinds, as Almonds, Pistaches, Figs, Oranges, Lemons, Citrons, Pomgranates, &c. but Apples, Pears, Cherries, Goosberries, and other Fruits of our Gardens are not common there. In the Kitchen-Garden, they have various Sallading of our sorts, Colly-flowers, Hartichokes, Turnips, Radish, Garlick, Onion, Muskmelons, Water-Melons, Kidney-Beans and other Pulses, with many other edible Herbs and Fruits.

Scandercon, Antiq. Alexandretta, is a Port-Town seated on the Sea-Coast, at the bottom of the Gulf Leiazza or Sinus Issicus, near the foot of Mount Amanus, and at the mouth of the River Soldrat about 60 Miles West from Aleppo; it was founded by Alexander the Great, in Memory of his Victory at Issus mentioned in our Account of Cilicia, but it is seated in a Marshy-Soil, and most unwholesome Air; which has render'd it of a good Traded Town, a poor sorry Village with a Stone-House, where the Officer resides that receives Custom for the Goods landed here from Europe for Aleppo, and a few ordinary Houses where some Factors reside, to give advice to the Merchants of Aleppo of the arrival of Ships, and to land the Goods. The Method of Advice is singular, namely by Pidgeons; who being bred at Aleppo and and brought hither, fly back without stopping, and so a Letter being tied to their Leg, is very safely conveyed. In former times, the European Ships used to Import at Tripoli, the Goods for Aleppo, but the length of the Journey, subjecting the Caravans to Robberies from the Arabians; all the Shipping now come to Scandercon.

Hence travelling Southward, we enter the SYRIA Propria, where stands

Antioch surnamed the Great, by the ancient Greeks named Epidaphne, from the Grove and Oracle of Apollo, called Daphne adjoining to it, 'tis still call'd Antachia by the Turks; and now but a poor Town, seated on the River Haf olim Orontes. In its ancient State, 'twas the Seat of the Kings of Syria, and a large Populous and well Fortified City, the Place where the Disciples were first named Christians, afterwards the Seat of a Patriarch of great Reputation: Honoured sometimes with the presence of the Roman Emperors, and the constant Seat of the Præfectus Prætorio Orientis. Taken by the Turks, as also by the Mamelukes, recovered by the Christians, An. 1098. and governed by Bohemund Prince of Torrentum and his Successors, till An. 1120. afterwards made part of the Kingdom of Jerusalem. But finally taken by the Turks in 1188, who have ever since possessed it, and permitted its Glory to pass away, so as at this time to shew only the Ruins of its ancient Grandeur. The other chief Towns of this part of Syria, are Selucia, now call'd Peria, founded by Seleucus Nicator, and formerly a considerable City, and stands more to the South of Aleppo. Ladicea or Latichea, of the same founder, stands on a flat fruitful Ground near the Sea-Coast, with a Capacious Haven; 'It was anciently a place of great Magnificence, but in the general Calamities which have befallen this Country, it was reduced to a very low Condition, and so remain'd for a long time; but of late Years it has been rebuilt, and become one of the most flourishing Places on the Coast, being cherished and put in a way of Trade by Coplan Aga, a Man of great Wealth and Authority in these Parts, and much addicted to Merchandize,' Mr. Manderil, p. 11. At no great distance from Latichea, on the Sea-Coast also stands Jebike, Antiq. Gabala, a City formerly of Note, as the Remains of a Magnificent Theatre, and other costly Structures mentioned by Mr. Manderil testify, but at present in mean Estate. And at about four Hours more on the same Coast, lies the Remains of Bureas or Balnea, whose uninhabited Ruins shew it to have been a well built City. Apamea, founded also by Selucus and named in Honour of his Wife, now called Damant seated within land on the River Orontes, in a fruitful and pleasant Country. Emesa, now Hemse, seated on the same River more to the South; it is a pretty Town (says Thevenot) with Walls of Stone, and 26 Towers on them, six Gates and five Churches: The Seat of a Sangiack.

Farther on to the East towards the Desert, stand the Ruins of the famous Palmyra or Tadmor, now Fayd or Tamos: A City of great Reputation in ancient times, mentioned in Holy Writ, 1 Kings. 9. 17. to have been built by King David. The City and adjacent Territory constituted a Kingdom, which valiantly resisted the Romans, especially under the Warlike Queen Zenobia, a Lady of most Noble Accomplishments, and rare Knowledge; for besides Perfections in the Arts of Government and War, she was Mistress of the Liberal Arts, and of the the Greek, Egyptian, and Latin Tongues: But the Glory of this incomparable Lady, serv'd but to increase the Triumphs of the Emperor Aurelian, by whom she was Conquer'd and led Captive to Rome, and by the same Emperor's Commands, the City was finally destroyed. Its Ruins were visited in the Year 1695. by the Chaplain (Dr. Hallifax) and some Gentlemen of the Factory of Aleppo, and a Description of their Magnificence sent in a Letter to Dr. Barnard, and afterwards printed in the Philos. Transactions, (Dec. 1695.) which shew it to have been a Place of great Splendor and Magnificence; but at present inhabited by 30 or 40 Families only, in little sorry Huts. The lofty Rows of large Columns still standing, the many broken Architraves and Cornishes, and remains of stately Walls with the Inscriptions, are all described in that Letter, but too long to be transcribed here.

On the South of Syria Propria lies the ancient PHOENICIA, at present part of the Beglerbegate of Tripoli, to which Syria propria also belongs; it is a narrow Maritime Tract of Land, famous in former times for the Activity and Ingenuity of its Inhabitants, to whom are attributed the invention of Letters, the Arts of Navigation, Astronomy, and making Glass. In Navigation especially they were very great Proficients, and by the great Trade they carried on, became exceeding Wealthy and Famous, and established Colonies in many remote Parts. Places of chiefest Note here are, Tripoli, call'd Tripoli Syria for distinction, seated about two Miles from the Sea-Coast, in the Lat. 34. D. with a Haven which comes up to within half a mile of the Town on the West side of it, and hath Ware-houses on each side for the Merchants Goods; encompassed with a Wall and fortified with Seven Towers. The City is in a flourishing State as ever, being large and populous, adorned with Gardens, planted with Mulberry-Trees, for breeding Silk-Worms, whence the Inhabitants draw a great Profit; the Streets are mostly narrow, and the Houses low: On the South side stands a strong Castle, Garrison'd by 200 Fanizaries; wherein resides the Beglerbeg: On all which account 'tis reckoned the Metropolis of Phœnicia; the City stands near the foot of Mount Libanus, whence a pleasant Stream falling runs thro' the Town, and affords an excellent watering to their Gardens. Round about the Town lies a rich and delightful Plain, which afforded to the Christian Lords of it a Revenue of 200000 Crowns: This City was famous in the time of the Holy-War, being one of the four Capital Cities the Christians possessed in these Parts. Tripoli is seated about half an Hour from the Sea; the major part of the City lies between two Hills, one on the East, on which stands the Castle commanding the Town, another on the West between the City and the Sea; this last is said to have been at first rais'd, and to be still increas'd by the daily accession of Sand blown to it from the Shore. The Port is an open Sea rather than an enclosed Harbour, however 'tis in part defended by two small Islands, about two Leagues from the Shoar. [Mr. Manderil.] For security against Pirates there are six square Castles or Towers, built upon the Shoar at convenient distances. G'belletto, seated on the Sea-Coast about 20 Miles South from Tripolis. Baruti or Barnat about the same distance more Southward, seated also on the Sea, is the ancient Berytus, which was re-edified by the Romans, honoured with many Favours and Privileges by Augustus, adorned adorned by Herod and Agrippa; and in the Christian times an Episcopal See; and it is still a Place of Trade, and a Stage of the Caravans to Grand Cairo, feared as Mr. Manderil tells us, on the Sea side in a Soil fertile and delightful, raised only so high above the Salt-Water, as to be secure from its overflowings, and the other noxious and unwholesome effects of that Element. It has the Benefit of good fresh Springs, flowing down to it from the adjacent Hills, and dispersed all over the City, in convenient and not unhandsome Fountains: But besides the advantages in Situation, it has at present nothing to boast of. The Palace and Gardens of the former Emir of this Country, have been surprizing Curiosities, considering its magnificence and beauty in the midst of a Country, where no such sort of Structures are found, nor since his expulsion by the Turks, is even this preserved, being now all decayed, and the fine Walks of Orange-Trees made no better use of than a common Meadow. Sidon or Sayd, the ancientest City of Phœnicia, seated in a fertile and delightful Soil, between the Sea on one side and Mount Libanus, on the other in the Latitude of 33 D. formerly a Town of vast Trade, whose Inhabitants were curious Masters in all manual Arts, and said to be the Inventors of Glass; Solemn had his best Workmen hence to build the Temple, as had also Zerobabel at its Re-structure. The Sarazens took it in 636. the Christians gained it in 1103. and it was afterwards Rebuilt and strongly Fortified; at present 'tis in a decayed State; the Haven tho' large is unsafe, and the Walls and Castle old and impair'd; however here is a Cane or Inn for Merchants, in good State, together with a fair Mosque and Bagnio. This City gives Title to an Emir or Prince, and by the Pope's Grant to an Archbishop. Tyre call'd Sur by the Turks, stands about 20 Miles more to the South in a rocky Island, at about 70 Paces from the main Land, famous in its ancient State for Wealth and Trade, and the Purple-dye; and then a City of beautiful Structure and mighty strength: Destroy'd however first by Nebuchadnezzar, afterwards by Alexander the Great, yet again recover'd it self, and was a powerful Ally to the Romans; taken by the Sarazens in 636. by the Christians in 1124. and by them made the Metropolitan See of Phœnicia, finally taken by the Turks in 1289. and ever since subject to them; but reduc'd to a small and ruinous Town, and little frequented altho' its Haven still be capacious and fair. ' Mr. Manderil's Account of the modern State of Tyre runs thus, ' This City standing in the Sea upon a Peninsula, ' promises at a distance something very Magnificent: ' But when you come to it, you find no similitude of ' that Glory, for which it was so renowned in ancient times. On the North side it has an old Turkish ungarrison'd Castle, besides which, you see ' nothing here but a meer Babel of broken Walls, ' Pillars, Vaults, &c. there being not so much as ' one entire House left. Its present Inhabitants are ' only a few poor Wretches harbouring themselves ' in Vaults, and subsisting chiefly upon Fishing. In ' the midst of the Ruins stands the east end of a ' great Church, probably the ancient Cathedral. ' The Island of Tyre (which was joined to the Continent by Alexander) in its natural State seems to ' have been of circular Figure, containing no more ' than forty Acres of Ground, round which are the remains of an ancient Wall. Travelling still Southward on the Sea-Coast, we arrive at

Acce or Acem, named Ptolemais from Ptolemy I. King of Egypt who re-edified it, and so known in Latin Writers, but in vulgar speech retaining its old Name, called by the French St. Jean d'Acre, because of the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem who resided here, and defended the City against the Sarazens. Often taken and retaken by the Christians and Turks in the Holy-War, before our valiant King Richard I. regain'd Anno 1191. and gave it to the Knights of St. John abovenam'd, who kept it an hundred Years, when by the force of an Army of 15000 English it was finally taken, and its strong Fortifications razed to the Ground. King Edward I. then Prince, in his Expedition to the Holy-Land, received a wound at this City, with a poyson'd Dagger, which his Wife cured by Sucking out the Poyson: In its flourishing State, it was a large and very strong built City, of Triangular form, two sides whereof were washed by the Sea, and the third open'd to a Champaign, which was very strongly Fortified: In the midst of the Town, stood a very high Tower, whereon a light was always kept for a guide to Mariners; but as Mr. Manderil tells us, when the Turks after a long Siege had taken it, they ruin'd it in so barbarous a manner, as if they resolv'd to take full revenge of the Blood it had cost them, and from which it has never been able to redeem it self, being at this time in so low estate, that except a large Kane or Inn, in which the French Factors reside, a Mosque and a few poor Cottages; you see nothing here but vast Ruins. In Situation, on the North and East it is compassed with a spacious fertile Plain, on the West it is washed by the Mediterranean-Sea, and on the South by a large Bay extending as far as Mount Carmel. In the same Latitude with Sidon, about 40 Miles to the East, on the North side of Mount Libanus, stands the City Damascus, upon a River anciently named Chrysorrheas now Barrady, surrounded with a most fruitful Countrey where the Vines yield the richest Wine, and bear fruit all the Year long, which with the other excellent Fruits, Flowers, Corn, &c. render the Place so exceeding delightful, that Mahomet would not venture himself into it, least the Pleasures should too much affect him: This was the Seat of the Race of the Syrian Kings 300 Years, before Tiglath Pileser King of Assyria slew Rezin the last King, and added Damascus to his Dominion; with that Monarchy, it passed to the Persian and Græcian, and so downwards with the rest of Syria, as already mentioned; till the Sarazens took it and made it their Regal Seat, before Bagdad was built; under whom it had a strong Castle for its Defence, and was a most flourishing and rich Place. It was a separate Kingdom under the Turkish Princes, of the Selzuccian Family for near 200 Years; which was terminated in 1262. by the Conquest of the City, and Death of the last Prince, by the Hands of Hæsen the Tartar. Conquer'd afterwards by the Mamalukes, and again by Tamerlain, recover'd by the Mamalukes; and finally A. D. 1516. surrendered to the Turks, who have ever since possessed it. The City was much destroyed by Tamerlain, but repaired by the Mamalukes and Turks, and in its present State is a Town of pretty large extent, and reasonably Populous, being the Seat of the Beglerbeg, whose Government extends all over Judea: The Houses as Mr. Manderil tells us, are but ordinary, the Walls being Mud, and the Structure low, but well furnished with Gardens, which makes the place still Pleasant; the view especially at a distance off the Mountains is very delightful ; the River falling from the neighbouring Mountains, affords a large and quick Stream, supplying not only their Houses, but Gardens too with Water in plenty : The Art of making the Linnens and Silks, which we call Damasks came from hence ; and the Place is still much resorted to for its wrought and raw Silks, Wine, Pruans, Dates, Oyl, Cotton, Drugs, and other valuable Commodities, not only of the Native Product, but also brought hither from Persia and other Parts ; for this City is a Stage of the Caravans from Persia, Aleppo, and Constantinople to Mecca. Memorable to us Christians for the Conversion of St. Paul, and still the See of the Greek Patriarch, and the Habitation of many Christians, of the various Sects found in these Countries, each whereof have their separate Churches, and the Roman-Catholicks two or three Colleges. ' The City ' (says Mr. Manderil) is of a long straight figure, its ends pointing near North-east and South-west. It is very slender in the middle but swells bigger at each end, especially at that to the North-east ; in its length as far as I could guess by my Eye, it may extend near two Miles. It is thick set with Mosques and Steeples the usual Ornaments of the Turkish Cities, and is encompassed with Gardens extending no less, according to common estimation than 30 Miles round, which makes it look like a noble City in a vast Wood. The Gardens are thick set with Fruit Trees of all kinds, kept fresh and verdant by the ' Waters of Barrady. You discover in them many ' Turrets, and Steeples, and Summer-houses, frequently peeping out from amidst the green Boughs, which may be conceived to add no small beauty to the Prospect.

At some distance from Damascus to the South-east stands Balbec, Antiq. Heliopolis, i. e. City of the Sun, a Town at present of about a Mile and halfs Circumference, and of no great account : But the stately Remains of a Building on the South side, which was a Temple dedicated to the Sun, is a Curiosity that attracts a Travellers Eye, and accordingly was visited by Mr. Manderil, in his return from Jerusalem to Aleppo : to whose account of the Magnificence of this Building, we must refer our Reader, as being too large to be particulariz'd here. And can only transcribe from him this general Character, ' That it ' strikes the Mind with an Air of greatness beyond any thing extant, and is an eminent Proof of the Magnificence of the ancient Architecture.

Thus have we passed thro' Syria and Phœnicia, and given our Reader as ample an Account of the Cities and Places of note, as the intended brevity of this Work permits, or indeed as can be expected in a general Geography. We shall now proceed into Palestine, which being the place of Action of almost all the History of the Old Testament, we shall be obliged to be more particular in its Description. And besides an account of its present State shew the Situations of the Tribes of Israel, and the Cities and Places where the Acts of the Old Testament were perform'd.

C H A P. IV.

The Modern State of J U D Æ A.

Palestine, Judea or the Holy-Land, under all which Names 'tis known; Palestine from the Nation of Philistines, who possessed a great part of it, called also in Scripture the Land of Canaan from the Canaanites, who possessed another great part; Judea from the Tribe of Judah; and the Holy-Land by us Christians, because the place of Birth and Preaching of our Blessed Saviour: Is seated on the South of Syria and Phœnicia, between the most Eastern part of the Mediterranean-Sea, and the Desarts of Arabia. Extend about 200 Miles from North to South, and hardly 80 from East to West. The Soil and Climate were incomparably fruitful and pleasant, as we are abundantly informed in Holy-Writ, but at present 'tis so ill Cultivated, that except a few Figs, Pomegranates, Palm-trees, Oranges, and some Vines which grow in the Valleys; there remains none of that ancient Plenty. The Rivers are but small Streams, and deserve mention only, because so often spoke of in Holy-Writ; and therefore will be more properly referred to the account of ancient Judea, which we shall do in a Chapter by it self. Of Mountains it is very abundant, Libanus and Anti-libanus are its Boundaries on the North, as Hermon is on the East, these are continued Chains; besides which, many single Hills rise in the Midland, of which I must here mention

Mount Carmel, because seated just in our way on the South bounds of Phœnicia, and by Ptolemy placed to that Country; it is of steep ascent and indifferent height, fruitful in Olives, Vines, and Herbs; and remarkable on account of the retreat of Elias the Prophet to it from the fury of Jezebel; and of later times, for the Order of Carmelite Fryars begun here by some Hermits, in Memory of the Prophet (Anno 1121.) and thence dispers'd into all parts of Christendom.

This Country is now governed by a Beglerbeg under the Grand Seignior, whose Seat as we have said is at Damascus, and under him by Ten Sangiacks, which is all the Division we can assign in its present State. The chief Places now left are, Thoron, a strong Town built by the Christians on the Hills near Tyre, to secure the City against the Turks. Belfort, another place of strength, on a Hill near the River Eleutherus now Naar. Montfort and Mont-Royal of the same kind, all mentioned in the History of the Holy-War, but now not considerable. Nazareth or Nazra, a ruinous Town tho' formerly a good City, seated on a Hill about 30 Miles South from Acon, the Capital of a Territory containing 25 Villages; and famous for the Residence of the blessed Virgin, whose House that stood here (according to the Roman Legends) was removed by Angels, and carried from Place to Place by four several removals, till at last fix'd at where it now stands, near Ancona in Naples. Divers Ruins on the side of the Hill, shew the limits of the old City. Tiberias, on the Banks of the Galilean Sea, once a famous City, built and named thus by Herod, in Honour of the Emperor Tiberius, now in ruinous State and called Saffer. Bethsan now Elhesan, at present a Castle only seated on the West Bank of the River Jordan a little below the Sea of Galilee. Naplosa a Town risen out of the Ruins of Samaria, or rather in the Place of Sichem, is seated in a Valley between two Hills Gerizim and Ebal, in the Mid-land between the Sea and the River Jordan; it is the Seat of a Sangiack, and the Capital of a Territory of 100 Villages. 'It is (says Manderil) in 'poor condition in comparison of what it is represented to have been anciently; consisting of two 'Streets only, lying parallel under Mount Gerizim; 'but is full of People, and the Seat of a Bassa. 'Just without the City stands a small Mosque said, 'to have been built over the Sepulchre purchased by 'Jacob, in which Joseph's Bones lie interr'd: And 'at an Hour's distance they shew Jacob's Well, 'where our Saviour had the Conference with the 'Woman of Samaria, over which St. Helena built 'a Church, but is now destroyed. Sebaste, as the ancient Samaria was afterwards named, is now in Ruins. Joppa or Jaffa, seated on the Sea-Coast, and reckoned the Haven to Jerusalem, stands 40 miles South-west from Samaria, and 30 North-west from Jerusalem; the Haven is defended on the South and West by Rocks, but open on the North, and at present much choak'd up with Sands; some small Traffick is still carried on here, and some Inns maintained for reception of Travellers coming from Europe to Jerusalem.

JERUSALEM, Lat. Hierosolyma, Turc. Cudsembarich and Coudschrerif, the ancient Capital of this Land, and formerly one of the most sumptuous and populous Cities of the World, is at present a poor thinly inhabited Town of about three Miles Circumference, seated on a rocky Mountain, with very steep ascents on all sides except the North, and surrounded with deep Valleys, which are again encompassed with Hills; the Soil stony, but affording nevertheless Corn and Olives where cultivated, but at distance from the Town, there grows little else but Grass and other spontaneous Herbs which run up to Seed uncut. Jerusalem stands in the 32 D. Lat. and 78 D. Longit. about 30 Miles East from the Sea-Coast, about 100 South from Protonais or Acon, 25 West from the River Jordan, and 60 North from the Mountains of Seir, which part Judea from Arabia. The various Calamities of this City before the Birth of our Saviour, we shall not mention here, as being fitter to be told with the ancient State hereafter: But its Fate since, is in short thus, According to our Lord's Prediction, it was destroyed by the Romans, under the Conduct of Titus Vespasian, A. C. 71. at which time 1100000 Jews died, by Famine, Sword, and civil discord. Destroy'd a second time, and totally razed to the Ground by Elius Adrianus, A. 134. and in its place a new City built, which he call'd Elia Capitolia; and in opposition to the Jews, the Christians were permitted to inhabit it, who possessed it 500 Years; in midst of which time, it was re-edified and adorned with many stately Structures by St. Helena, Mother of the Emperor Constantine the Great, and Daughter of a Britain, whose Piety leading her hither to view the Theatre of that great Transaction, the Redemption

Redemption of Mankind, she caused the Filth and Rubbish which had been thrown upon the Place of our Lord's Passion and Burial, to be removed; and as the Story goes, found the Cross on which he suffered, together with the two others of the two Thieves, the right one of which was distinguished by a miraculous Cure of a sick Woman, which the other two being laid on her, affected not. Having removed all the Rubbish from Mount Calvary, and other sacred Places, she built a noble and magnificent Church including them all, which Church is still standing and in good Repair, the Walls of Stone, the Roof of Cedar; the East end including Mount Calvary, and the West the Sepulchre; the West part is circular and cover'd with a stately Cupola, standing upon 16 Massy Columns, (which were crusted with Marble,) whose centre is open at top directly over the Sepulchre; the East end is also crown'd with a Cupola over the great Altar, and the Nave of the Church constitutes the Choir; in the side Isles are shewn the place where Joseph of Arimathea anointed our Lord's Body, the place where the Virgin Mary stood at the time of the Crucifixion, the Tombs of Godfrey and Baldwin, the two first Christian Kings of Jerusalem, these on the South side; on the North, the Place where Christ appeared to Mary Magdalen, the Pillar he was fixt to when Scourged, and at the North-east corner, the Prison he was kept in; on the South-east side of the Choir, they shew the Place where he was crown'd with Thorns and derided, and from thence is the ascent by 22 steps to Mount Calvary, where in a small Chapel, they shew the Place where he was nail'd to the Cross, and finally where the Cross it self was erected: Here is a sumptuous Altar, whereon stand three Crosses, and before it 46 Lamps are kept continually burning, adjoining to it is another small Chapel, both which Front and open to the Church: The Sepulchre in the West part, is also a sort of a Chapel, into which form the Rock is hewn and adorn'd with a Lanthorn at top supported by Pillars of Porphyry. The Cloister round the Sepulchre is divided into many Chapels, appropriated to the several Sects of Christians that reside here, as Jacobites, Armenians, Maronites, Copts, Abyssines, Georgians; and on the North-west of it, the Apartments of the Latins. These constantly reside here, for the Turk keeps the Keys of the Church, and they have not the Liberty of coming out, but receive their Provisions and Necessaries at a Wicket. At Easter the Pilgrims paying a Fee are admitted, and after the Ceremony over, let out again, of these there are constantly great numbers, who go in the Evening before Good-Friday, and return the Morrow after Easter-Day: In which time they view all the Sacred Places, and assist at the ceremonious Rites, wherein the several parts of our Lord's Passion, are acted with more Mimeckry than agree with so Sacred a matter. 'Tis this Church that is the support of the Town, the whole Trade of it consisting in accommodating the Pilgrims with conveniences; and the Fee they pay to the Government for Liberty to go into it, is a very considerable Revenue, for which reason a Sangiack resides here with his Officers and Soldiers, who besides the usual dues, frequently extorts Money of the Franciscans, whose Convent is the general Receptacle of Pilgrims, for which they are largely allowed by the Pope and other Princes, and besides receive Presents from the Pilgrims at their Departure. St. Helena built divers Churches and Chapels in the City and near it, over the Ground where the sacred Acts were perform'd; as where the last Supper was eaten (which being destroyed has now a Mosque in its Place); where the Palace of Caiphas stood, because our Saviour was there buffered, (the old one destroyed, a less stands now in its Place): at the Sepulchre of the Blessed Virgin: at Bethlem, &c. There is to be seen in the South-east part of the City upon Mount Moria, a building commonly call'd Solomon's Temple, standing indeed in the Place where that stood, but as the Temple was totally destroyed by the Romans, by whom this was built is uncertain: It is entered at the East under an eight square Building, with Cup la Roof and Lantern, and forward on to the Westward, is a fair direct Isle like a Church; the whole surrounded with a large square Court walled on every side. The Magnitude of this according to Mr. Manderil, is 570 common Paces long, and 370 broad: In the midst whereof on the same Ground, where stood the Sanctum Sanctorum, there now stands a Turkish Mosque. The Area on which the Temple stood, was a Plain cut by vast Labour out of the rocky Mount: Near this Temple stands the House of the Sangiack, formerly the Palace of Pilate, and suppos'd to be the Castle Antonia built by Herod: Here they shew the Stairs our Saviour ascended, (at least Stairs instead of them, for the Scala Sancta is pretended to be at Rome;) the Window where he was shewn to the People by Pilate, the way he passed to his Crucifixion, called the Dolorous Way, wherein they shew the Places where he fell with the weight of his Cross, where they met Simon of Cyrene, where the Blessed Virgin swooned at the sight, (in which a Church was built, but is now ruinous,) the Place where wiping his Face with a Napkin, he left the Print of it on the Cloath, &c. Innumerable are the Antiquities they shew Strangers in this City and about it, as the Valley of Jebosopbat, the Valley of Gehinnon, the Aceldema, the Garden of Mount Olivet, the Place where our Saviour prayed in his Agony, the Place where the Apostles hid themselves, the Place where St. Peter denied Christ, and where he wept. Mount Olivet not far from the City on the East side, reckoned near a Mile in height, on the Summit whereof stands a Chapel built over the Place of the Ascension; in the Floor (which is the natural Rock) they shew the impression of a Foot, said to be our Lord's; the Chapel is small not above 12 Foot wide, of round form with a Cupola supported by Columns of white Marble still in good repair, built by St. Helena, together with a stately Temple over it, and a Monastery, but those in Ruins. 'T would be too much to describe all the Antiquities they shew, he that desires the particulars, will find them excellently set forth by Mr. Sandys, and what he omitted by Mr. Manderil, to which we must refer him. The City is walled round, and has an old Castle on the West side, but is of no great Strength at this time, however famous formerly for its Defence. It was taken by the Sarazens in Anno 636. recover'd by Godfrey of Bulloign, in 1099. possessed by him and his Successors Kings of Jerusalem, till in 1187. it was taken by Saladine Sultan of Ægypt, and by his Successors held till Anno 1517. when Selimus the Turk having Conquer'd both Ægypt and the Holy-Land, became Master of the City, and his Successors have ever since held it. The Circuit of this City as measured by Mr. Manderil without the Walls, is 4167 Yards or two Miles and a half.

Bethlem,

Bethlem, seated on a Hill in a pleasant Soil, about seven Miles South from Jerusalem, was in its ancient State a good City, now a sorry Village; resorted to by Pilgrims to view the Place of our Lord's Nativity, over which St. Helena erected a noble Temple, whose Roof is Cedar, supported by four Rows of white Marble Pillars, ten in a Row, and the Wall faced with the same Stone. The Chancel constitutes the upper end of a Cross, and is cover'd with a stately Cupola; under the Church in a Cave hewn out of the Rock, is the Chapel of the Nativity, where they shew the Manger our Saviour was laid in, cut also out of the Rock and now crusted with Marble; an Altar with the representation of the Nativity is erected here, and Lamps are kept burning before it; adjoining to the Church, stands a Monastery of Franciscans who have the care of it, but neither Monastery nor Temple are in right good estate, bearing the face of Poverty and neglect. Near the Town they shew a Valley wherein Jacob fed his Flock, and where the Angels appeared to the Shepherds to declare the Birth of Christ. The pious Empress we have so often named, built here also a Church now in Ruins; not far off stands a Village, which they say was the Habitation of the Shepherds; they also pretend to shew the Place, a Cave, where Joseph hid Mary and the Child, till he could flee as the Angel had directed, also the place where he lay, when the Angel gave him that Command.

Hebron, now named Elkabil, the ancient Seat of David before he took Jerusalem from the Jebusites, stands on a Ridge of Mountains which overlook a most delicious Valley, 25 Miles south from Jerusalem; the old City is ruined, but near it in a Village is a goodly Temple, built by Helena over a Cave where the old Patriarchs lie buried; it is now turned into a Mosque, and is visited in Devotion by the Turks. It is the Capital of a District of about 15 Villages, called the Territory of the Friend of God.

On the Sea-Coast stand Achbaron and Azotus, now in Ruins. And Ascalon more to the South call'd Scalana, famous heretofore for the Temple of Dagon, now a small Town, with a Turkish Garrison of no note. Gaza or Gazara, seated also on the Sea-Coast, in the Lat. 31. 20. once an eminent City of the Philistines, famous for the Acts of Sampson, stands upon a Hill environ'd with Valleys, and again with Hills planted with delicious Fruits: the Town is at present of but indifferent Structure and sorry Habitation: But retaining many marks of its ancient Beauty by broken Marbles, and Ruins of Arches and other stately Building. It has an old Castle, wherein resides a Sangiack who has the Government of a Territory containing 300 Villages. This Town is not above 20 Miles from the Frontiers of Ægypt, and no considerable Place lying beyond it, we shall here close our account of Modern Judea.

CHAP. V.

Of the Ancient State of JUDÆA.

JUDÆA or the Land of Canaan, had its Name as we have said, from the Royal Tribe of Judah, and from the Nation of the Canaanites, descended from Canaan the Son of Cham, who possessed the Land when Abraham first entered it. The Philistines a powerful Nation, who possessed the Maritime Country gave the Name of Palestine to their Part, which by Seneca's Geography was applied to the whole by the Greeks and Romans, and so handed down to us. It is seated in the fourth and fifth Climates, between the 31 D. and the 34 D. 30 m. of North Latitude, the longest Day being about 14 Hours and a quarter. Enjoying therefore a Temperate Air, and an exceeding fruitful SOIL, producing Corn, Wine, Oil, Honey, delicious Fruits, the famous Balm, and other Medicinal Rarities, besides Flowers, Grass, and Herbage in very great Plenty. And tho' the present ill Estate of this Country, might give room to doubt it, the Testimony of Moses, Deut. 8. and of even the Emperor Julian, who in his Epistles speaks of the perpetuity as well as fecundity of the Fruits of Judea answer all exceptions. Figs, Oranges, Pomegranates, the Apple of Paradise, Dates, are still found here, but the ancient Balm is lost, and they have no Pears, Plumbs, Cherries or Nuts, but what are brought from Damascus.

The chief Rivers are, Jordan so named from two little Streams Jor and Dan, which rise at the Foot of the Anti-Libanus, and after a course of about 20 miles uniting, compose its Stream; it is not a River of either length, depth, or breadth equal to its fame, its whole course till it falls into the Dead-Sea, being not above 150 Miles, its breadth not above 20 Yards, and its depth not sufficient for Navigation; in its Passage it makes two Lakes, the first call'd Merom, of small extent and dry in Summer, the second called the Sea of Galilee, or the Lake of Tiberias, or Lake of Gennazareth of 100 Furlongs in length, and 40 in Breadth. The Dead-Sea as it is call'd by a false Opinion, that it kill'd even the Birds that flew over it, is by experience to deserve no such terrible Name; it is indeed extream Salt, and the Water thereby so strong, that it will hardly admit a humane Body to sink, and has a bituminous Stanch: 'Tis said to entertain no Fish or other living Creature, but in regard that Fish-shells are found on its Shoar, and that too as Mr. Manderil observes, at two Hours distance from the mouth of Jordan, there is reason to doubt the truth of that opinion. Its extent is 70 miles from North to South, and 16 from East to West, and was formerly a Plain wherein stood the Cities of Sodom, Gomorrhah, Adama and Seboim, destroyed by Fire from Heaven. The other Rivers are Cedron, Chison, and some other small Streams which fall into the Mediterranean-Sea, Jaboc and Armon, &c. which fall into Jordan and the Dead-Sea.

The chief Mountains are Libanus and Anti-Libanus, already mentioned in speaking of Syria. Mount Hermos, a long Ridge beginning in the North, at the East point of Anti-Libanus, and running South to the Coasts of Arabia, constitutes the Eastern limits of Judea: Thus this Land is wonderfully fortified by Nature; for Libanus and Anti-Libanus secure it on the North, Mount Hermos on the East, the Mediterranean-Sea on the West, and the Mountains of Seir, with the Desert of Paran on the South.

Other Eminences are Mount Galaad, a short Ridge on the East of Galilee-Sea, Mount Giboa another ridge on the West of Jordan. Mount Gerizim, Mount Tabor, the Mountains of Serom, (which stretch with intermixt Valleys from the Sea of Galilee, to the Mediterranean, and end in a white Cliff called Cap: Blanco by Seamen.) The Mountains of Basan. Mounts Pisgah, Nebo, Phegor, &c. Mount Moriab and Mount Sion in Jerusalem, (on the former stood the Temple, and on the latter the Palace of David.) Mount Celvary, Mount Olivet, and many others, which will be spoke to in their proper Places.

The Antiquities of this Country do more require our consideration than any other whatsoever, because this was the Place where it pleased the Almighty to Reveal himself to Mankind, to Promulgate his Holy Law and Gospel, and to work many Miracles for the Conviction of Infidels; all which being particularly related in the Holy Scriptures, and the History of the Inhabitants of this Country necessarily intermixt. Our Readers Curiosity will undoubtedly expect a more distinct account of this Land than others; accordingly we shall set forth the several States of Judea, as particularly as our purposed brevity will admit.

It was first Peopled by Canaan the Son of Cham, who with his eleven Sons came hither from Babel, five of them settled in Phœnicia and Syria, and the other seven; viz. Heth, Jebuseus, Amoreus, Gergesbi, Heti, Sene, together with Canaan their Father, were Founders of so many Nations. The Hethites or Hittites inhabited about Hebron to Be-Sheba, and the Brook Beser, reckoned by Moses the South limits of Canaan. The Jebusites or Sons of Jebus, dwelt next to them on the North as far as Jebus, afterwards Jerusalem. The Amorites of Amoreus, possessed the Country on the East side of Jordan, between the River Arnon on the South-east, and Mount Galaad on the North: Afterwards the Seat of the Tribes of Reuben and Gad. Gergesbi was Father of the Gergesites, whose Land lay next above the Amorites, on the East side of the Galilean-Sea, where afterwards the half Tribe of Manasseh dwelt. And from Heti descended the Hetites, who dwelt more to the Northward under Mount Libanus. Where the Sons of Sene planted is less known, but the Wilderness Sin and Mount Sinai are supposed to be denominated from them; and by Dr. Herlin's Conjecture, the Perizzites were of that Origin, because it makes one of the seven Nations of Canaanites, that God commanded the Israelites to destroy; these dwelt on the West Banks of Jordan, and the Canaanites next to them in the mid-land of all.

These and some smaller Nations possessed the Land when God commanded Abraham to remove from Uram where he then dwelt, to separate himself from that idolatrous People, and to Travel into a Land, which he promised to give to him and his posterity. Accordingly Abraham with his Brothers and their Wives, Servants, Cattle, &c.

by the guidance of God Almighty, arrived safe here; And he came to Sichem unto the Plain of Mores, (says the Text) which is supposed to be in that part afterward possessed by Iffachar; here God shewed him the Land, and assured him of his Seeds possessing it: Abraham removing Southward planted his Tents at Bethel and Hai, [in the Tribe of Benjamin] whence proceeding Southward, he at length passed into Ægypt to avoid Famine, and being returned to Bethel, determined to abide there; but a strife arising between his Servants and those of his Nephew Lot, they divided, and Abraham dwelt about where Hebron afterwards was built, and Lot dwelt near Sodom, on the Banks of the River Jordan. This in general was the Country of the first Patriarchs, before Israel departed into Ægypt.

We must now speak of the most considerable of the neighbouring Nations.

The AMMONITES, possessed a large Country on the East side of the River Arnon, adjoining to the Amorites, by whom they were often insulted.

The MAIDIANITES, descended from Madian the Son of Abraham by Keturah, lay next to Ammon on the South.

The MOABITES, descended from Moab the Son of Lot, possessed the Country upon the lower part of the River Arnon, and extended Southward along the Coast of the Dead-Sea, dispossessed of half their Country, and confined more to the South by the Amorites.

The EDOMITES, or Children of Esau, possessed the Country on the South of Judea, beyond the Mountains of Seir towards Arabia Petrea.

BASHAN, the Country of King Og, lay on the North-east between Mount Hermos and Galaad, and adjoining on the South to the Country of the Amorites.

ZOBAB, lay next above it on the North, and HAMATH, next on the North-west towards the Confines of Syria.

This is a general View of the Pristine State of Canaan.

Proceed we next to the Division of the Land, among the Twelve Tribes of the Children of Israel.

After the forty Years Peregrination in the Wilderness, the Israelites being denied passage thro' Edom or Idumæa by the King, to whom Moses sent a Civil Embassy, he passed thro' the Wilderness by the Borders of Moab, to the Banks of the River Arnon; hence Moses sent an Embassy to Sihon King of the Amorites, desiring passage thro' his Land, but Sihon refusing and opposing him with an Army, Moses permitted and encouraged the Israelites to fight them, which with great Alacrity they undertook, and in the Battle totally defeated the Amorites, and slew their King; immediately they entered the Country, which they found to be a most rich and fruitful Land, and slaying all before them, became entire Masters of it. Og the King of Bashan being a Friend and Confederate of Sihon marched to his Assistance, but was also defeated and slain, and his whole Country made subject to the victorious Israelites. Balaam King of Moab observing the Progress of the Israelites, and desirous to stop them, sent for Balaam a Prophet, or rather Sorcerer, who lived at a great distance beyond the River Euphrates, to come to him to Curse them, but his intended Curses were turned into Blessings, as is told at large in the 23 Numb. so that he could do them no harm, but by his wicked Counsel Counsel of sending the Midianite Women to allure the Men of Israel, and tempt them to Sin and Idolatry, which had its intended effect, and was the occasion of much Disorder and the Death of 24000 Israelites, as is related Numb. 25. To Revenge which, and punish that Idolatrous People, Moses levied an Army of 1000 out of every Tribe, which under the Command of Phineas invaded Midian and overcame them, and slew their Kings, and brought off a vast Plunder. Having thus conquered a large Country, and defeated their Enemies on every side, the two Tribes of Reuben and Dan, with half the Tribe of Manasses requested of Moses, that the Country of the Amorites and Basban, might be given them for their Portion. Accordingly those Tribes had their Seat on the East side of the River Jordan, and all the rest of Israel possessed the Countries on the other side, between Mount Libanus on the North, and the Mountains of Seir or Desert of Paran on the South, except some part of the Sea-Coast, possessed by the Philistines, and another part possessed by the Phœnicians.

The Distribution of this Land after the Conquest, and utter extirpation of the Canaanites was thus: In the North from the foot of Mount Libanus, to the Sea of Galilee on the Banks of Jordan, the Tribe of NAPHTHALI had their Portion. Adjoining to them on the West to the Frontiers of Phœnicia, lay the Lands of the Tribe of ASHER. On the South of both these between the Sea of Galilee, and the Rivers Jeptael on the North, and Chison on the South, the Tribe of ZABULON were seated. And next to him on the South lay the Territory of ISSACHAR, extending from the River Jordan to the Sea-Coast. As did also the Lands of the other half Tribe of MANASSES adjoining to Issachar. And the Tribe of EPHRAIM on the South of Manasseh. Next to them lay the Portion of BENJAMIN, but extending but half way from Jordan to the Sea, the rest not possessed by the Philistine, belonging to the Tribe of DAN, whose Country extended also Southward by side the Tribe of JUDAH, whose Land was of large extent along the whole Coast of the Dead-Sea, to the Mountains of Seir. Lastly between the Southern part of Judah and the Sea-Coast lay the Tribe of SIMEON, who possessed the extreme South parts to Beersheba, and the other Land beyond it to the Brook Sichor. The Tribe of LEVI had for their Portion particular Cities assigned to them, not all together, but in every Province some, that so there might be in all parts of the Land, some present to perform the Divine Offices.

We have one more general Division of this Country to mark out, and then we shall proceed to the description of the chief Towns. Namely, the Division set out by the Romans, which was into Six Parts; viz.

GALILEE, TRACHONITIS, SAMARIA, PERÆA, JUDÆA, and IDUMÆA.

GALILEE was the North-west part, extending from Mount Libanus on the North, to the River Chison on the South; between the Mediterranean-Sea on the West, and the River Jordan with the Galilean-Sea on the East. And comprehended the Lands of the Tribes of ASHER, NAPHTHALI, ZABULON and ISSACHAR. It was divided into the Upper and Lower.

The Upper Galilee, which was the Northern part, called also Galilee of the Gentiles, and under that Name mentioned by St. Matth. c. 4. v. 15. comprehended Asher and Naphtali, and the Lower, Zabulon and Issachar. Also within the limits of Galilee as above set forth, is comprised the Territory of Decapolis, or the Country of the ten Cities mentioned Mat. 4. and Mar. 7. lying on the Banks of Jordan and the Lake.

Those Cities were Tiberias, Totopata, Bethsaida, Capernaum, Corazain, Bethsan or Scythopolis, Cæsaria-Philippi, Sêphet, Afor, and Kadesch-Naphtali.

TRACHONITIS, otherwise called ITURÆA, if it may not rather be divided into two Parts, whereof Trachonitis was the Northern part, and Ituræa the Southern. The whole was the Country lying on the East side of Jordan, from Mount Libanus to the Frontiers of Peræa, and comprehended the Territory of the half Tribe of Manasses beyond Jordan.

SAMARIA, lay on the West side of Jordan, between that River and the Mediterranean, and the Frontiers of Galilee on the North, and those of Judæa on the South. Containing the Lands of the other half Tribe of Manasses, and the Tribe of Ephraim.

JUDÆA was the Country lying between the Dead-Sea and the Mediterranean-Sea, and contained the Territories of the Tribes of Benjamin, Judah, Dan and Simeon.

On the East side of the lower Channel of Jordan and the Dead-Sea, lay the Province PERÆA, which had for its Eastern limits, the Mountains of Arnon; on the North, the South limits of Trachonitis; and on the South, it extended into Arabia Petrea, containing the Territory of Gad and Reuben, and the Countries of the Ammonites, Midianites, and the Moabites.

Lastly, IDUMÆA was the Land of Edom or the Country of the Edomites, it lay beyond the limits of Palestine; for its Boundaries, were Judæa on the North, Arabia-Petrea on the East and South, and the Mediterranean-Sea on the West. It is the Country where dwelt the Posterity of Esau, who was also called Edom, Gen. 36. 1.

Thus

Thus having set forth the limits of the several Partitions of this Country, and given you a view of the whole in one Table; we shall now proceed to the particular descriptions of every part, and the chief Towns seated therein. To continue our travelling Method, we shall decline Priority of Dignity, and begin with the North part, which adjoins to Syria whence we last came, and pass on Southward on both sides of Jordan.

Galilee therefore first presents, and therein the Tribes of Asher, Napthali, Zebulon, and Issachar. A Country of great Fertility except in the Northern part, affording excellent Fruits with little Cultivation, and in its flourishing State full of Towns and Villages; so extremely Populous, that Josephus tells us, the least contained 15000 Inhabitants, but there is room to doubt that either the Transcriber has err'd, or that he spoke hyperbolically. Certain it is, that Galilee was a rich and populous Country, the People of a Warlike disposition, and strict Zeal in the Jewish Religion.

The Tribe of ASHER had their Seat on the Coast of the Mediterranean-Sea, from the Territories of Sidon on the North, to Acon or Ptolemais on the South, near 50 Miles in length; and from the Sea-Coast (the Territories of Tyre, Sidon and Ptolemais excepted,) half way to Jordan, which was about 20 Miles in breadth; a Land of great Fertility in Wine, Oil, Corn and Balms. In the North Tract lay the Land Maspha, and that of Cabul near the Tyrian Mountains, where stood the 20 Cities given to David by Hiram King of Tyre. And in the South part the Valley of Asher or Fat-Valley, so named for its exceeding Fertility; since call'd the Vally of St. George, from a Castle in it dedicated to that Saint. The chief Cities of the Tribe of Asher were, Elkath or Alkath, a City of the Levites seated on the Northern limits. Cana (called Cana the greater, to distinguish it from a lesser more Southward) seated near the River Eleutherius. Roob but a few Miles distant from the same River, a City of good note, belonging to the Levites. Gabala, seated more Southward, rebuilt by Herod. Aphek, memorable for the slaughter of the Syrians, by the Israelites under Abah, of whom 100000 fell in Battle and 27000 by the fall of a Wall, 1 Kings 20. 29, 30. Haeze, a City of the Levites, stood six Miles South-west from Aphek. Giscala, about the same distance to the South-east, a City of great Strength, burnt by the Tyrians at the time of the Siege of Jerusalem, rebuilt by Josephus then Governor of Galilee, and afterwards surrendered to the Romans. Cabul or Chabul, on the Frontiers of Napthali. Abdon a City of the Levites. Bethemeth and Bethlagan, both seated on the Frontiers of Zabulon; and Messel a City of the Levites, seated near the Sea-Coasts, the furthest Place South of this Tribe; were all rich and populous Cities. Acon or Ptolemais, which lay on the Coast of this Tribe, we have spoken of already in our Account of Phœnicia.

Next to Asher the Tribe of NAPHTHALI, had their Seat along the Western Shoar of Jordan, from Mount Libanus down to the Sea of Galilee, or Lake of Gennasretic, having the Tribe of Asher for its Western Bounds. The Soil and Climate here was the same with that of Asher, which we told you was exceeding Fertile.

In the North part of this Country, the two Springs Jor and Dan have their rise, which after a short course uniting, compose the River Jordan.

Near the union of the two Streams, lay a little Tract of Land belonging to the Tribe of Dan, who conquer'd Leshem as we are told, Josh. 19. 47. to which Town they gave the Name of Dan, which being the extrem North part of the Land of Israel gave occasion to the saying, From Dan to Beisheba, to express the whole extent of Judea; it was remarkable for the Golden Calf erected in it by King Jeroboam. In the latter Days when taken by the Romans, it was by them named Paneas, and being given to Herod, his Son Philip re-edified it, and gave it the Name of Cæsaria Philippi. The Woman who was cured of the Flux by the touch of our Saviour's Garment was of this Town, and in memory of it erected his Statue, with her own bueling before him, which stood till Julian the Apostate destroyed it. In the Christian times it was a Bishop's See, and for ought appears, still retains the Dignity. Near this City between the two Spring-heads, stood a sumptuous Temple, built in honour of Augustus Cæsar. The Regions of Beirim, Arbelis and Emath, lay within the limits of this Tribe; as did also the City Heliopolis now Balbec, mentioned in our Account of Syria, but never subjected to them. The chief Cities of Napthali were,

Affedim near Mount Libanus. Emath or Hamath, situate near the Spring-head of Eleutherius River a Place of Strength, and reckon'd the Entrance or Gate of Judea. Num. 8. 34. Jos. 13. 5, &c. Amathdon, Ser, and Cariatthaim, Cities of the Levites. Reblata a noted City near the Fountain of Daphnis, and the Lake Meron. Aroseth, at the South-end of the Lake, called Haroseth of the Gentiles, (Judg. 4.) the City of Sisera. Afor or Hasor the Regal City of the Canaanites, where 24 of their Kings came out against Joshua, and particularly the Seat of King Jabin, who 20 Years afflicted Israel, and was at last overcome by Deborah and Barak, Jud. 4. Not above a Mile or two from it, stood the Tent of Heber the Kenite, where Jael slew Sisera, Jud. 4. Mascatoth seated more to the East, was a strong Town mentioned in the Maccabean War. Arbelis not far from it, the Capital of a Territory. Magdadel, a strong Place seated a few Miles more to the South. Kadesb-Napthali, Seated on a high Hill, a Regal Seat of the Canaanites, conquer'd by Joshua and made a City of Refuge, and given to the Levites; it was the Birth-place of Barak, and one of the ten Cities of Decapolis under the Romans. Sephet another of the Decapolis, seated also on a Hill, a Place of almost impregnable Strength. Bethsemeth, on the Western Frontiers mention'd, Jos. 19. 38. Carthan, a City of the Levites, stood in the Midway between Kadus and Cephet. Hamon, another City of the Levites stood more to the West. Between Carthan and the Sea of Galilee, and near it stands the Mount called Mons Christi, where our Saviour often resorted and there elected his Apostles. Capharnaum or Capernaum, stood on the River Jordan, where it falls into the Sea of Galilee: It was the Metropolis of Galilee in our Saviour's time, and a City of Opulency and Trade, often mentioned by the Evangelists, on account of our Lord's frequenting it, but now a poor Fisher Town only. Several other Cities stood in this Territory but less considerable.

Crossing the River Jordan, we enter the Territory of Half the Tribe of MANASSE. These as we have said, desired their Portion after the Conquest of Og, and before they passed the River, accordingly their Land lay between the Desert of A- rabia on the East, from which it was parted by Mounts Hermion and Mount Gilead, and the River Jordan on the West, Mount Hermion and the Country of Damascus on the East, and Southward it extended to the Brook Jaboc or near it, where began the Territory of Gad, comprehending the Territories of Gilead and Beniamin, or the Kingdom of Baschan. Or as it was afterwards termed by the Romans, Gaulanitis, Trachonitis, Batanea, and Auranitis. It was the ancient Habitation of the Hivites and the Gergesites. And afterwards of a Giganrick Race of Men, whence it was call'd the Land of Raphaim or Giants. The Soil of the middle part was fruitful and afforded excellent Pasture, which fed numerous Herds of Fat Oxen, but the Skirts Barren and ill inhabited. The whole extent from North to South was about 70 Miles, but its breadth not answerable being hardly 20 Miles. The chief Towns were

On the extreame North Part stood Seifcha, at the foot of the Mountains, the North Boundary of Baschan. Besra, a City of the Levites, and afterwards a Bishoprick, stood more to the East on the Frontiers of the Desert, and was a strong Fortified Town. Argob, the Capital of a Territory of the same Name. Auran or Cauran mentioned Ezekiel 47. whence the Country about it was named Auranitis. Gessur, the Capital of a large Region, spoken of by Moses as the North Bound of this Tribe, Deut. 4. Machari, supposed to be the Machba mentioned 1 Chr. 19. 6. Gerson, in the mid-way between the last mentioned. All these possessed by Foreigners. Astaroth, a large Town of the Levites, the Seat of the Raphaims or Giants in ancient times, from whom Og descended. Adrech, seated on a Hill more to the East, gave name to a Bishoprick in the Christian times. Gaulon, a City of the Levites and of Refuge, a fair City, and by the Romans, made the Capital of a Country to which it gave Name. The Tents of Kedar often mentioned in Scripture, stood at a little distance from this Town to the West, in very fruitful and pleasant Fields, wherein a Fair was held at certain times. Succa a noted Town, stood more to the West near the River Jordan. Gemala, a Town and Castle seated on a Hill like a Camel's back, gave Name to a neighbouring Country. Kedar, a neat Town seated on a Hill. Edrai, the Regal Seat of Og King of Baschan. Galaad or Gilead, near the Mountains to which it gave Name, the Birth-place of Jephtha. Pella, a Town of more modern date, being built by Seleucus Nicator King of Syria, and destroyed by Alexander Jannæus King of the Jews, restored by Pompey, and retired to by the Christians of Jerusalem, as commanded by a Vow from Heaven, to avoid the Destruction coming upon that City. Abela or Abel-beth-machba, a few Miles from it to the South, where Sheba the Rebel being retired, the Citizens beheaded him, and threw it over the Wall to Jacob for Peace, 2 Sam. 20. Jabesh-Gilead, seated on a Hill near the Mountains of Gilead, mentioned in Scripture for the Siege of it by the Ammonites raised by Saul, and the Gratitude of the Men of that Town, in fetching the Bodies of Saul and his Sons from Bethsan (where they were exposed by the Philistines) and burying them. On the Coast of Jordan and the Lake stood Corazim, at the mouth of Jordan into the Lake, famous for the Miracles wrought in it by our Saviour. Julias, built by Philip the Tetrach, and named in Honour of Julia the Wife of Tiberias. The Desert of Bethsaida, (altho' the Town which gave name to it stood on the other side of the Lake) lay near this Town; where our Saviour fed 5000 with the five Barley Loaves and two small Fishes. A little more to the South stands Gerasa or Gergesa upon a high Hill, where our Saviour casting out the Devil, permitted him to enter into the Swine: This was the chief City of the Gergesites, Hippus, the Station of a Garrison of Horse placed there by Herod. Ephraim a strong City.

Returning cross the River Jordan, we enter the lower Galilee, wherein lay the Territories of the Tribes of Zabulon and Issachar.

The Tribe of ZABULON lay between Asber and Naphali on the North, and Issachar on the South, the Mediterranean-Sea on the West, and the Sea of Galilee on the East. A fruitful and populous Country, whose chief Cities were,

Bethsaida, situate on the Sea of Galilee or Lake of Gennesareth in a small Island, was one of the ten Cities of Decapolis, the Birth-place of the Apostles Peter, Andrew and Philip: And renowned for the Miracles wrought by our Saviour in it. The adjacent Country bore the Name of the Land of Gennesar or Gennesareth, and was very fruitful. Magdala on the same Sea Shoar, a little distant on the South, was a strong Fortrefs. Torapata, situate near the same Shoar, was also a very strong Hold founded on a Rock accessible but on one side, notable for the Defence made in it by Josephus the Historian against the Romans, who at last took it and him Prisoner. Toph, another strong Fortrefs stood a few Miles off to the West. Tiberias built by Herod, where formerly stood the Town Cennereth, and by him named Tiberias in Honour of Tiberius Caesar: It was a large and noble City adorned with an Accademy, seated on the Coast of the Sea of Galilee, which from this City was named the Lake or Sea of Tiberias; 'tis not improbable too, that the other name of Gennesareth, by which this Lake was called, had its origine from the old name of this Place: In this City our Saviour called St. Matthew, and near it he raised the Daughter of Jairus. Cartha, a City of the Levites, stood about eight Miles West from Tiberias. Bethulia, 10 Miles to the North of Cartha, was a very strong Town seated on a high Hill, mention'd in the Story of Judith and Holofernes. Remmon, a City of the Levites stood a few Miles West from Bethsaida. Dothaim or Dothan, a populous Town notable for its Plenty of Vineyards Figs and Olives; it was the Place where Joseph found his Brethren feeding their Flocks, when they sold him into Egypt. Damna, seven or eight Miles to the West was a City of the Levites. A few Miles off stood Semerom, a Potent and Royal City. Tabor, a City of the Levites, stands near the Mount of that Name, famous for the Transfiguration of our Lord upon it; in memory whereof, the Empress Helena built a sumptuous Chapel at the top, says Mr. Sandys, but Mr. Manderil takes no notice of that Chapel. It is a very steep high Mountain, beset with Olive-Trees, Vines, and other Fruits, with a flat Oval Area at top, of two Furlongs long and one broad, of most fertile and delicious Soil, surrounded with Trees; from which you have a view of Mount Hermion and Gilboa, the Valleys of Esdracelon and Jezrael; the Towns of Nazareth, Naim, Endor, &c. At the foot of this Mountain runs the Brook Kison. [Manderil.] Saffa or Sephoris, a City of the Levites, the habitation of Joachim and Anna the Parents of the Blessed Virgin; was a wealthy, large, and well fortified fortified Town, walled by Herod and made the Metropolis of the lower Galilee; under the Turks it has been the Seat of a Sangiack. Nazareth was a neat Town seated upon a Hill five or six Miles from the Brook Chifon. Where the Blessed Virgin lived, and where our Saviour was Conceived and Educated, and spent a great part of his Life, whence he and his Disciples were called Nazarites: The Chamber wherein the Virgin received the Annunciation, was removed hence by Angels (according to the Romish Legends) and is now shewn at Loretto in the Kingdom of Naples. Cana called Cana of Galilee, and Cana-minor, memorable for the Miracle of our Saviour, in turning Water into Wine at the Marriage there; it was seated on the Brook Faptael. Jeconam, the Seat of a Cananitish King slain by Joshua, and the City given to the Levites, it stood on the Brook Chifon. Zabulon, near it was a stately City till burnt by the Romans. Sicamirum, otherwise called Ephra, was a Port Town seated on the Mediterranean-Sea.

The Territory of the Tribe of ISSACHAR, had for its Northern Bounds the Brook Chifon, which divided it from Zabulon, the half Tribe of Manasses on the South, the Mediterranean-Sea on the West, and the River Jordan on the East. The Land was reasonably fruitful, but the Cities of it not so numerous as in the other parts of Galilee. Within the limits above mentioned, stood the Mounts Carmel and Gilboa.

Carmel, was a high Mountain seated in a neck of Land, between the mouth of the Brook Chifon and the Mediterranean-Sea, in the extream North part of this Province happy in a fruitful Soil cover'd with Groves of Olive-Trees, Vines, and divers other Fruit-Trees, as also fragrant Herbs and Flowers: Famous on account of the Habitation of the Prophet Elijah on it, and for the Order of Carmelite Monks, instituted in Honour of him as we have already elsewhere told you. And adjoining to it lay the Land of Naid.

The Mountains of Gilboa was a continued Ridge, beginning at the Town of Jezebel, and running along the Southern bounds of this Tribe, and into that of Manasses Eastward to the River Jordan. Upon this Mountain King Saul and his Sons were killed by the Philistines.

Within the limits of this Tribe lay the Valley of Jezebel, remarkable for several Battles fought in it: As also the Field of Magiddo, otherwise called the Plain of Galilee, and now named the Plain of Saba from a Castle near it: notable for its fertility in Corn, Wine and Oil. The chief Cities of the Tribe of Issachar were,

Tarichea, on the Bank of the Lake about eight Miles South from Tiberias, a place of great Strength and notable for its resistance against Vespasian. Cefion, a City of the Levites, seated on the Brook Chifo. Issachar, seated on the mid-way between Cefion and the Lake. Ramoth, a City of Levites, ten Miles South from Issachar, stands on a Hill which is the beginning of the Mountains of Gilboa. Engannim, a few Miles more East, another City of Levites. Dabereth, on the Brook Chifon, also a City of Levites and a City of Refuge. Rabboth, a few Miles distant on the South-east. Cedes, a City of Levites. Jezebel, the Regal Seat of King Ahab, seated on the West foot of Mount Gilboa, near the Frontiers of Manasses, and by Adrichomius placed to that Tribe; where Naboth was stoned, and Jezebel thrown out at Window, and her Car-kass eaten by Dogs: it gave name to the neighbouring Plains, wherein many Battles were fought. Adjoining to the City on the North-east side, lay the Vineyard of Naboth. Aphac, a Royal City stood six Miles North-west from Jezebel. Enbadde, near the Mount Gilboa, where Saul being overcome by the Philistines slew himself. Suna, Shuna or Shuncm, where Elijah sojourn'd with the Widow, and wrought the Miracles of increasing her Oil, and restoring her Son to Life. Endor, near the Brook Chifon, notable for Saul's consulting the Witch there, and for Gideon's Victory over the Midianites supported from Psal. 83. 10. to have been near it. Naim, seated also near Chifon River six or seven Miles more to the West, at the Gate whereof our Lord restored the Widow's Son to Life. Bethshemesh, seated at equal distance from Jezebel and Endor, and towards the foot of Mount Carmel. Esdreim, near the Frontier of Manasses, in a spacious Plain to which it gave Name. On the Sea-Coast about seven or eight Miles West from Bethshemesh stood the Castum Peregrinorum, built in the Christian times for the security of Travellers to the Holy Land.

We have now Travelled through GALILEE, and shall proceed to SAMARIA, or the Territories of the two Tribes of Manasses and Ephraim. A Country of variable Soil, but generally Fruitful, Rich, and Populous.

The Inhabitants were the Posterity of the Assyrians sent hither by Salmanazar, when he had carried away the Israelites into Captivity, who being Idolaters, were devoured by Lions sent among them by God; to avoid which Plague, they begg'd of Salmanazar for Priests to instruct them in the true Religion, who were accordingly sent as is declared at large in the 17. Chap. of 2d. Book of Kings. But altho' they were at last brought to the Worship of the true God, yet they always maintained a Schism, and would not go up to Jerusalem to worship as the Law commanded. And therefore built a Temple of their own at Mount Geraizim near Samaria, which tho' destroyed by the Maccabees, they continued their Schism; for this reason hated by the Jews, and as we find in the Gospel at our Saviour's time esteemed an abominable People, with whom they would hold no converse, John 4. 9. As on the other hand, so neither would a Samaritan come near a Jew, or if he had, esteemed himself defiled.

The Land of the Half Tribe of MANASSES was the North part of Samaria, stretched out from the River Jordan in the East, to the Mediterranean-Sea on the West; having the Tribe of Ephraim on the South. The Countrey was pleasant to the sight by reason of the admirable variety of the Plains, Mountains, Hills, Valleys and Springs, besides the fertility of the Soil, and the great number of Inhabitants and stately Cities. Of these the Chief were,

Bethsan, seated on the River Jordan in a little skirt of Land, which run into the Tribe of Issachar. Its Name implied the House of an Enemy, given it by the Children of Manasses, because they could never drive the Natives out of it; in later Days taken and rebuilt by the Scythians, and therefore named Scythopolis by the Greeks: Memorable under the name of Bethsan, for the dead Bodies of Saul and Jonathan hanged on its Walls; and under the Name of Scythopolis, for being one of the ten Cities of Decapolis, and afterwards the See of a Christian Archbishop. In its flourishing State a noble City, as the many Marble Ruins still remaining testify. Salem, near the

the Banks of Jordan, in the North-east corner of this Province, supposed to have been the same that was the Royal-Seat of Melchisedek. Aner, a City of the Levites. Bezek near Jordan, seven Miles East from Aner was the City of Adoni-Bezek, who being conquered by the Israelites, had his Thumbs and great Toes cut off, as he had served 70 Kings before, Jud. 1. Abimelech, a noted Town stood more to the South, as did Castrum Alexandrium of more modern Structure, being built by Alexander the Son of Antiochus against the Romans. Ephra, still more South and near the Banks of Jordan, in which Gideon dwelt. Terza or Tersa, the Royal Seat of Israel before the building of Samarina. Accolata, the Capital of a Territory, which was afterwards made a Terna city. Thebes or Thebez, a Town of good note where Abimelech was knock'd on the Head, by a Millstone thrown by a Woman as he besieged the Tower thereof, Jud. 9. 50. Tana: or Thana:, a large and potent City in the Frontiers of Issachar. Gethseman a City of Levites, as was also Macoth near it. A little distant from Gethseman, stood the Mountain and Cave where Obadiah the Steward of Aliah, hid the hundred Prophets from Jezabel's fury, 1 King. 18. Ennon where St. John Baptiz'd the People. Magiddo, a noble City near which King Jesiah was wounded in his Battle against Pharaoh Neco, 2 Cor. 36. 22. It gave name to the Valley of Magiddo already mentioned in Issachar. Galgai, the royal City of a Prince slain by Jeshua. Jeban a strong Fortrefs. And Narblea, which gave name to a Toparchate, stood in a triangle with Magiddo. On the Sea-Coast were seated, Dora a strong and powerful City, seized by Tryphon after the Murther of Jonathan Maccabeus, who was there besieged by the King of Syria, taken and slain. Casarea Palestina, anciently the Tower of Seraton a King of the Sidonians, stood a few Miles from Dora to the South, re-edified by Herod, and made a stately and sumptuous Place, as described by Josephus, lib. 15. c. 13. 'Twas here St. Paul appear'd before Festus, and 'twas here that Herod Agrippa was smitten by God and devoured of Worms for his Arrogance. This was for some time the Roman Metropolis of Palestine. Antipatris, built by Herod in the Place where stood the ancient Captaraisma, near to which Judas Maccabeus overthrew Nicanor's Army; it was encompassed with a Grove, and a very fine Champion, reckoned the richest spot of ground in all Palestine.

The Territory of the Tribe of EPHRAIM took up the South of SAMARIA, and adjoined to that of the half Tribe of Manasses we came last from, extending as that does, from the River Jordan to the Mediterranean-Sea, and bounded on the South by the Tribe of Benjamin, and a small part of the Tribe of Dan. The Country is Mountainous but the Soil however, Fat and Luxuriant. The chief Cities here were,

Sarona, a Royal City conquer'd by Jeshua, seated on a Hill 10 Miles South-west from Antipatris, and about as far from the Sea Shore; the adjacent Valley to which it gave Name, was a most fruitful Land. Lidda, about 15 Miles South from Sarona, where St. Peter cur'd Anas of a Palsie, Act. 9. 33. It was by the Gentiles called Diocopolis, and by the Christians in the Holy-War, denominated from St. George by reason of a splendid Temple built there by Justinian in honour of that Saint, and from an Opinion that he was Martyr'd there; it was a Bishop's See. Helon, a few Miles from Sarona and Ramatha, as little distant from Lidda were Cities of Levites; the latter is supposed to have been otherwise call'd Aramathea, and so the City of Joseph who buried our Lord. Bethoron, another City of Levites, stood on a high Hill more to the North, beautified by Solomon, and notable for the Defeat of Lysias by Judas Maccabeus. Gazer or Gasera, also a City of Levites stood near the South Borders. Thamna or Thamnafara 10 Miles East from Gazer, Jeshua's Patrimony, and given by him to the Israelites, where he was Buried, it afterwards gave name to a Jurisdiction called the Toparchia Thamnitica. A few Miles more to the North, stood the strong Castle Hircanum. Pharaton, seated on Mount Amalek to the North-west of Hircanum, the City of Abdon Judge of Israel. Siehem, 10 Miles East from Hircanum, otherwise called Sicher, stood in a Valley between Mount Gerazim on the South, and Mount Ebal on the North at the foot of the former, the City of Siehem the Father of Hamor, who deflower'd Dinah the Daughter of Jacob, several times ruined and rebuilt; and in our Saviour's time in good estate, honoured with his Presence, where he converted many; it was a City of Refuge given to the Levites, and near it stood the Well of Jacob, and the Sepulchre of Joseph: in its latter State it was by the Gracians nam'd Neapolis, and by the Emperor Vespasian, who placed a Colony there. Flavia Casaria, it is now called Naplusa, and is still the chief City in these Parts and the Seat of a Sangiack; but however in poor condition as we have already said in our account of Modern Judea. Near this City towards Samarina stood Mount Gerazim, where by the Law, Deut. 11. 29. the Blessings were to be read, as on the contrary, at Mount Ebal over against it the Curses. On Gerazim the Samaritan Temple was built by Sanballat one of their Princes, who ruled at the same time that Nehemiah rebuilt the Walls of Jerusalem; where they held the Schismatical Worship, in opposition to the Temple at Jerusalem; and to this day there is a small Temple wherein the few remains of that Sect, perform their Rites at certain times of the Year.

Samarina, The Capital of this Country, and the Seat of the Kings of Israel, after Omri Father of Ahab had built and removed the Court to it from Terza, stood on Mount Scimon in the borders of Manasses, a stately and magnificent City before the Affyrians destroyed it. Afterwards repaired and destroyed in the Jewish Wars, re-edified and made more stately by King Herod and named Sebaste, under which name 'tis now known; the broken Marbles and stately Columns still seen here, are testimonies of its then beautiful State, but at present it is in Ruins. This was the Metropolis of the Palestina Secunda under the Romans, an Archbishoprick in Christianity, and the burial Place of St. John Baptist. This great City is now wholly converted into Gardens, and all the tokens that remain to testify that there has been such a Place, are only on the North side a large square Piazza, encompassed with Pillars, and on the East some remains of a great Church, said to have been built by the Empress Helena, over the Place where St. John Baptist was beheaded; in the Body of the Church, you go down a Stair-case into the very Dungeon where the Holy Blood shed was. The Turks hold this Dungeon in great Veneration. Mr. Manderil, p. 58

Jeckmen, a City of Levites, stood 20 Miles South-east from Sannaria. Taphna, a Royal City stood near Jordan. A few Miles from this City to the South-east, stands the Mountains of Ephraim, out of which flows the Brook Cherith, where Elijah retiring, was fed by the Ravens, 1 King. 17. Dech, called Dagon by Josephus, a strong Fortrelis on a steep Hill with a delightful Prospect, stood near these Mountains. Gethremmon, a City of Levites. Naioth, where Saul Prophesied: both stood to the South, as did also Atachmus, now called Byna a large City, the Habitation of Jonathan Macab. Silo or Shilo, a Town seated on a very high Hill still more Southward, in a slip of Land surrounded by Benjamin; famous on account of the Tabernacle of the Covenant there erected, and the Ark of God kept in it, before the Philistines took it, 1 Sam. 4.

Having now Travell'd through Galilee and Samarina, we shall cross the River Jordan, and view the Territories of the Tribes of Gad and Reuben, which took up that Country to which the Romans gave the name of PER Æ A. Or rather part of Peræa, for that extended Southward to Petra, the chief Town of Arabia Petraea; whereas the Southern limit of the Israelites was the River Arnon, which springing in the Mountains of Arnon runs Southward, and divides the Land of Reuben from Arabia, and turning Westward, falls into the Dead-Sea in the Lat. 31. 50. an Hundred Miles short of the Southern extent of Peræa. That Countrey which these Two Tribes possessed, had been the Regions of the AMORITES, the MIDIANITES, the AMMONITES and the MOABITES, who being entirely vanquished by the Israelites, as is at large declared in the Book of Numbers, the two Tribes of Gad and Reuben upon their Request to Moses, and promise of assisting their Brethren in the Conquest of the Canaanites, had this Land assigned to them.

The Territory of the Tribe of GAD, lay between the half Tribe of Manasseh on the North, from which it was divided by the River Jabbok, and the Tribe of Reuben on the South, the River Jordan on the West, which separated it from the Lands of the other half Tribe of Manasseh, and those of the Tribe of Ephraim, and on the East the Mountains of Arnon and Arabia; in extent about 40 Miles from North to South, and 25 from East to West. This comprehended the best part of the Land of Gilead, denominated from the neighbouring Mountains; and the Land of Thob or Teb, subject to the Ammonites, where Jephtha dwelt when thrust out of his Fathers House by his Brethren, Jud. 11. The Soil was fruitful and pleasant; and the most remarkable Cities and Towns were,

Mahanaim, on the North limits beyond the River Jaboc, the Place where Jacob in his return to Canaan, was met by the Angels of God as an Army to defend him, wherefore he called the Place Mahanaim, i. e. The Camps; Gen. 32. It was a City of great Strength and Repute, and therefore resorted to by the Kings; Abner here set up Ishbosheth the Son of Saul to be King against David, and David retired hither during the Rebellion of his Son Absalom. Penuel or Phannuel, the Place where Jacob wrestled with the Angel, where a Town was built, seated near the River Jabok, and was grown considerable in Gideon's time; for we find he craved relief of it against the Midianites, which being refused, and he returning Victorious, beat down their Tower, and slew the Inhabitants, Jud. 8. Succoth, i. e. The Tabernacles or Tents, where Jacob met his Brother Esau, and was reconciled to him, stood near the River Jordan, a few Miles West from Penuel. The Inhabitants of this City having refused relief to Gideon, he tortured them at his return, tearing their Flesh with Thorns and Briars, Jud. 8. Maspha or Mizpeh, the Place where Jephtha resided in his exile, stood in the North-east limits of this Province, and was a City of the Levites. Rabba or Rabbath, which stood 12 Miles North from Mizpeh on the Banks of the Jabbok which almost surrounded it, and therefore called the City of Waters, 2 Sam. 12. 27. was the Capital and Regal Seat of the Ammonites, taken by Og King of Bashan, but deserted upon the approach of Moses, who there found Og's Iron Bed nine Cubits long, and four broad; memorable afterwards for the Death of Uriah, slain at the Siege of it by David's direction. In later times, the adjacent part of Arabia being conquered by Ptolemy Philadelphus King of Ægypt, he re-edified this City and gave it the name of Philadelphæ. Ramoth Gilead, a City of Refuge belonging to the Levites, stood about five Miles South from the River Jabbok, and 10 Miles South-east from Penuel, it is often mentioned in Scripture, particularly on account of the reconciliation between Jacob and Laban; the Death of Ahab King of Israel, who deluded by false Prophets, went to the Siege of it when possessed by the Syrians, 1 King. 17. and for the anointing Jehu King over Israel, 2 King. 9. Rogaim, the Town of Bazillei the Gileadite, who entertained David in his retreat from Absalom, stood near the East Frontier 15 Miles South-east from Ramoth Gilead. Thesh, the Birth-place of the Prophet Elijah, stood near the River Jordan; near which Town on the North lay the Forest of Ephraim, in a Wood whereof Absalom was caught in a Tree by the Hair of the Head, and slain by Joab. Mageth, a City of large extent. Arnon, at the foot of the Mountain of Arnon, and a little above the head of the Brook Arnon. Jazer or Jabzor, one of the Regal Seats of Og King of Bashan, was seated on the Brook Arnon, which soon after spreads out into a Lake, which takes name from the Town: Taken by Moses, and given to the Levites; afterwards recover'd by the Moabites, then by the Ammonites, and at last taken by Judas Maccabeus, 1 Mcc. 5. Aroer, seated on the same River Arnon in the South-east Frontier, was a noted City and reckoned the Capital of this Tribe. Dibon, on the South Frontier more towards Jordan, was a Town of note in Jeshuch's time. Lastly, Beth-heram, seated also near Jordan mentioned by Joshuah in his Terrar of this Tribe.

The Tribe of REUBEN lay on the South of that of Gad, over against the Tribe of Benjamin, between the River Jordan and some part of the Dead-Sea on the West, and the River Arnon with Arabia Petraea on the East and South. Extending about 40 Miles from North to South, and about 25 m. from East to West. And containing many fruitful and well cultivated Valleys amidst the high and craggy Mountains, wherewith the Land is also invested; among which last Pisgab or Phasga, whence Moses had a view of the Promised Land. Nebo, another head of the same Ridge, if not the same; for tho' the Maps distinguish them, Moses in the last Chapter of Deut. mentions both synonymously, and says he had a view of the Land and died there. Phogor to the Top of which Balaak carried Balaam to curse the the Israelites; are especially remarkable. The Moabites, and after them the Amorites possessed this Country before the Israelites conquered it; and this was the Country they first possessed in their entrance of the Promised Land, and hence passed over Jordan into Canaan. The chief Cities of the Reubenites were,

Heshbon or Eshbon, the Royal Seat of Sihon King of the Amorites, afterwards a City of Levites, stood on a Hill in the Northern Frontiers of this Tribe. Jasa a City of Levites, stood about 15 Miles South-west from Eshbon, and gave Name to a neighbouring Desert. Bamoth-Baal, i. e. High-Baal, so named from a Temple to Baal seated on a high Hill, whither also, Balaak brought Balaam to curse the Israelites. Beer-sheva, noted for the Adoration there to a Maschicist Idol, stood between Bamoth-Baal and Mount Phogor. Maana, seated on the River Arnon, was sometime the Capital of the Ammonites, famous for the Defeat of the Syrians by Josh, 1 Chron. 19. Megiddo, seated also on the Arnon more Southward, was mentioned in the History of the Maccabean War wherein it was burnt, and the Inhabitants put to the Sword. Abila, a City in the Plain Country of Moab, which yielded great store of Palm-Trees, stood six or seven Miles East from the River Jordan, and as many South from Jasa abovementioned. Etam or Adam, seated near the Banks of Jordan, where the Israelites passed over dry foot to Gilgal; near these two last named Towns it was, that Elijah was taken up to Heaven in a fiery Chariot. Sethim or Sizim, where the Israelites committed Fornication with the Daughters of Midian and Moab; and notable for the Wood whereof the Ark was made, supposed to be named from this Town. Beerthabara, on the River Jordan where St. John Baptiz'd, and near which Moses made his exhortation to the Israelites. Livias, seated also on Jordan more Southward, was of more modern date, being built by Herod, and so named in honour of Livia the Mother of Tiberius. Maribus, a very strong Fortrefs built by Alexander Jannaeus King of the Jews, stood on a high Hill on the North Shoar of the Dead-Sea: Some Authors say, it was here that St. John Baptist was Imprisoned and Beheaded, altho' the Turks as we have said shewed the Place at Samarra. Beer or Beera, a City of Refuge given to the Levites, stood a few Miles from Maacherus, and six Miles North from the Shoar of the Dead-Sea. Lasa or Lestha mentioned Gen. 10. 19. in later Days named Caserta: by the Greeks, from the fair Fountains issuing from the neighbouring Mountains, and the Salubrious Springs both hot and cold, which made an excellent Bath of great Virtue in Convulsive Distempers. And lastly Kedemosh, otherwise named Jezzen, a City of the Levites, seated near the River Arnon; whence Moses sent his Embassy to Sihon King of the Amorites.

Now crossing the River back again we shall survey the remaining part of the Holy-Land, namely Judea propria or that part named Judea by the Romans.

JUDEA, was bounded by the Mediterranean-Sea on the West, the River Jordan and the Dead-Sea on the East. The Country of the Tribe of Ephraim on the North, and Lumasa on the South. The Soil very Fertile, but diversified with variety of Hills and Valleys, and pleasant Streams of small Ravines. In this Extent, it comprehended the Lands that were possessed by the Tribes of Benjamin, Judah, Dan and Simeon.

The Territory of the Tribe of BENJAMIN, border'd on the North upon that of Ephraim, on the South upon the Tribe of Judah, on the East it was bounded by the River Jordan, and on the West Philistia and part of the Tribe of Dan, lay between it and the Mediterranean-Sea. The chief Places were,

Nobe, the farthest City to the West of this Tribe. Nobe or Nob, a City of Levites where the Ark sometime resided, after Silch was taken by the Philistines, where David obtained of Abimilech the Priest, hallowed Bread, and received the Sword of Goliath, 1 Sam. 21. Gibeon or Gabeon, as it is written by Aldrichomius, stood about five Miles West from Nob, the Capital of the Gibeonites, who by a Wile got Peace and Protection from Jeshuah, in whose Defence fighting against the five Amoritic Kings; he by his Prayer made the Sun stand still a whole Day, till they were utterly Defeated, Josh. 9. These People therefore dwelt among the Israelites performing servile Works, and because of Jeshuah's Oath, God inflicted Famine on the Land, in Punishment for Saul's destroying them, 2 Sam. 21. Gibeah or Gabas, a City of Levites, the Birth-place of King Saul, stood 10 or 12 Miles North-west from Gibeon: Memorable for the Story of the abuse committed by the Benjamites on the Levites Concubine, to revenge which, all Israel rose in Arms and destroyed 25000 Men of the Tribe of Benjamin, besides all the Women and Children, the particulars see in the 19, 20, and 21. Judg. Berbel, before named Luz, but changed by the Patriarch Jacob who gave it this Name, which signifies the House of God, in Memory of his Vision of Angels ascending and descending, Gen. 18. Infamous afterwards for the Golden Calf set up in it by King Jeroboam: It was sometime part of the Kingdom of Israel, but conquer'd by King Abijah, it became subject to the King of Judah, and was strongly fortified by King Asa. Hai or Hi, a Royal City of the Canaanites taken by Jeshuah, memorable on account of the Defeat of the Israelites at their first attacking it, by God's Punishment on Achan's Sin, Josh. 7. Gilgal or Galgala, near the Banks of Jordan where the Israelites passed over in their entrance to Canaan, the Place where they first pitched their Tents, where Jeshuah set up twelve Stones for a Memorial of the Waters dividing for their easie passage, Josh. 4. and where Agag was hewed in pieces by Samuel, 1 Sam. 15. This was one of the Seats of Justice instituted by Samuel, 1 Sam. 7. The other two were Berbel and Mizpah, or Maspha, which stood in the limits of this Tribe also, a few Miles West from Nobe. Anathoth a City of Levites, the Birth-place of Jeremiah the Prophet, stood in the mid-way between Gilgal and Jerusalem.

Jericho, a large populous and Royal City abounding with Groves of Palm-trees; which being besieged by Jeshuah, the Lord wrought a Miracle in their Favour, and upon the sounding of the Ram's-horn Trumpets, the Walls of the City fell down, Josh. 6. It was destroyed by Jeshuah with a Curse upon the Rebuilder, however in the Days of King Ahab, Hiel a Berbelite rebuilt it, but Jeshuah's Curse had such effect at that distance of time, that he lost two of his Sons for it, 1 King. 16. 34. Since Christianity, it was taken and ruined by Vespasian, and re-edified by Adrian, but visited by Tiberius, and

And Mr. Manderil in our Days, appears a sorry Village of 30 or 40 Houses; it is seated on a little Rivulet with which the Jordan forms a little Island, 10 Miles South from Gilgal and 20 East from Jerusalem. Almeth near Jericho, was a City of Levites.

JERUSALEM, or Hierosalem, the Capital of all the Land, stood in the South-east limits of this Tribe, so near Judah, that part of the City stood within their Territory. When possessed by the Jebusites it was called Salem, whence we may suppose its Name was derived, Jebusalem, q. d. Salem of the Jebusites, melted afterwards into Jerusalem. Being taken by King David, he immediately set to Work to re-edifie and adorn it, and in effect he and his Son after him, made it one of the most magnificent Cities of the World. In its most flourishing State it consisted of four Parts, which were separated by Walls; viz. 1. The old City of the Jebusites which stood on Mount Zion, where the Prophets dwelt, and where David built a strong and Magnificent Castle, the Palace of himself and his Successors; wherefore this was afterwards called the City of David. The Pallace was encreased and most sumptuously beautified by King Herod, and inscribed to Agrippa and Cesar. 2. The lower City because partly seated in a Valley, called also the Daughter of Zion, being built after it; wherein stood Solomon's Palace, the Palace he built for his Wife, the Palace of the Maccabean Princes, Hercules's magnificent and splendid Theatre and Amphitheatre, the latter capable of receiving 80000 People, the Citadel built by the Syrian King Antiochus to overtop the Temple; for which reason razed by Simon Maccabeus, and the Citadel built by Herod on a craggy rock, which he named Antonias in honour of Marc Antony. 3. The new City inhabited by the Mechanics And 4. Mount Moriab where Abraham attempted to Sacrifice Isaac, and where afterwards the Temple was built by Solomon, whose sumptuous Structure is so particularly described in the 6 and 7. h. Chap. 2 King. that we need not enlarge on it here. The Destruction of it by the Babylonians under Nebuchadnezzar, 2 King. 24. 2 Chr. 36. and the Re-structure after the Captivity by Zerubbabel and the Priests, Ezra. 3. are also so well known that we need only mention it: But Herod's Re-structure we are less acquainted with, that Prince pulled down the old Building, and erecting it wholly new with as much Magnificence as Solomon had done, endeavouring if possible to exceed it. The building was of white Marble, each Stone whereof was 25 Cubits long, 8 Cubits high, and 12 Cubits broad, Josephus, Antiq. lib. 15. c. 14. It was built in most Princely manner, the middle part rising high above the side Isles, and exceeding the former Temple 20 Cubits in height, the whole adorn'd with Columns, Carvings and Gildings in most splendid manner; it was also surrounded with the four Courts as Solomon's had been, and appeared so Magnificent and truly Glorious, that Titus the Roman General laboured all that in him lay to prevent its Destruction, merely for its beauty sake; but the Jews being retired thither when the Roman Soldiers entered by Storm, the disorder was so great that 'twas impossible for him to prevent their firing it: So that it stood not above 85 Years. The Fates of this City and Temple were thus, David and Solomon built and adorn'd it, A. M. 2900 to 2934. Nebuchadnezzar took it and destroyed both the City and Temple about 3362. After 70 Years Captivity, the Jews being released by Cyrus in the first Year of his Reign, returned to Judea and Rebuilt the City. Herod who was made King of Judea, A. M. 3913. Adorned the City with many splendid buildings, particularly that part which had been called before the lower City or Daughter of Zion, insomuch that that part obtained afterwards the name of Herod's City; and rebuilt the Temple as abovesaid. Herod possessed Jerusalem 37 Years before the Birth of Christ, and A. C. 71. Jerusalem was taken and destroyed by the Romans under Titus Vespasian. The following States of it we have already told in our account of Modern Judea, and so we shall here conclude this Subject.

These Places near Jerusalem being often mentioned in Scripture, must not pass without notice, viz.

Mount Olivet, which took its name from the great number of Olives growing on it, stands on the East side of the City, and was fertile in divers Fruits and agreeable Plants, as Myrtles, Pines, Palms, &c. From its highest Sommet our Saviour ascended into Heaven, in memory whereof the Empress Helena built a Chapel there, as we have elsewhere shewn.

The Valley of Jehosaphat lay between the City and Mount Olivet, being water'd and made fruitful by the Brook Kedron which run through it. In this Valley are shewn the Well of Nehemiah; the Pool of Siloam; the Fountain of the Blessed Virgin, the Pillar of Solomon, the Tombs of Jehosaphat and Zachary, and the Tomb of the Blessed Virgin. Also in this Valley at the foot of Mount Olivet stood the Village Gethsamane, adjoining to which was the Garden where our Saviour was betrayed. At the end of the Valley of Jehosaphat towards the City lies,

The Valley of Hinnom, on the West side of which lies the Potters-field, called the Field of Blood, and made a burying Place; it is a Plat of about 30 Yards long and 15 broad, the Earth of which is reported to consume the Corps put into it exceeding soon, which is believed by Mr. Sandy's, but contradicted by Mr. Manderil.

Mount Calvary where our Saviour was Crucified, stood on the West side of the City without the Walls, but by the Emperor Constantine it was taken in, and the noble Temple built upon it, which we have described in our account of the modern State of this City.

Mount Gion or Gihon, where Solomon was anointed King, stood also on the West at a farther distance.

The Valley of Raphaim or of Giants, which was very fertile in Oil, Wine, Corn and all sorts of Fruits, lay also on the West side the City.

The Valley of Tophet, called also the Valley of the Sons of Hinnom, lay on the South-east at the foot of the Mount of Offence, and was full of green Plats, Gardens and Groves, and water'd with the Brook Kedron.

Lastly, Bethany, a small Village on the Road that leads to Jericho, was made famous by our Saviour's raising Lazarus from the dead there.

The Territory of the Tribe of JUDAH lay next to Benjamin on the South, extending to the Mountains Seir and Frontiers of Idumea, in length 60 Miles; bounded on the East by the Dead-Sea, and on the West by the Tribes of Dan and Simcon. It was reckoned the largest and most populous Province of the whole Country, and the Inhabitants were esteemed the most Valiant, which with its being the Royal Tribe, rendered it famous above the rest, and made its name be communicated to the whole Country. The Land was beautified with a very pleatant variety of Hills, Vallcys, Plains, Rivulets, and abounded with Pastures and Vineyards: Except toward the Southern part, where the neighbouring Sand and Rocks of Idumæa, communicated its Soil, and rendered it partly Desert. The Canaanites strictly so called dwelt here, and the Patriarch Abraham had his Seat and Sepulchre in this Province. The chief Places in Judah, were Libna, a strong City seated in a narrow neck of Land part of this Tribe, which runs out Northward between Benjamin and Dan; it revolted from King Jeram, and became a Free State. Maceda or Mekkedæ, a Royal City where the five Amorite Kings lay hid in the Cave, Josh. 10. 15. Ashtach, where God rained down great Hailstones upon the Ammonites to destroy them, Josh. 9. 11. it was a well fortified City, and stood also in a North-west corner near Libna and Mekkedæ, in the Valley of Teberintch, and revolted also at the same time with Libna. Near these Cities was the place where David killed Goliath. Bethsur or Beth-sura, i. e. House on a Rock, being a strong Fortress seated on a Rocky Hill six or seven Miles South from Jerusalem: First fortified by King Rehoboam, and afterwards made impregnable by the Maccabees. Emaus, a Village seven Miles and half distant from Jerusalem to the South-west, famous for our Lord's shewing himself after his Resurrection to Thomas and the other Disciple, Luk. 24. and selected to for the Hot Baths near it, mentioned by Strabo as Miraculous, and by Josephus as natural. This Town was afterwards called Nicopolis, when re-edified by the Romans after the destruction of Jerusalem. Bezek the Royal Seat of King Adoni-zedek, who stirred the four other Kings to come with him in Battle against the Israelites, Josh. 10. Beth-lehem surnamed of Judah, to distinguish it from Beth-lehem of Zabulon, otherwise named Ephrata, built by the Jehusites, the Birth-place of King David, whence it was also called the City of David, stood five or six Miles South from Jerusalem: Famous to all Eternity for being honoured with the Birth-place of our Blessed Lord Jesus Christ, and for the Slaughter of innocent Babes by Herod, wherein a Son of his own was killed: The Town justly respected by the Primitive Christians, and beautified with a stately Temple over the Place of the Birth, built by the Empress Helenæ as we have already told our Reader in the account of Modern Judæa. Thecoa or Tecoa, was seated on a Hill a few Miles distant from Beth-lehem, surrounded with excellent Pastures, the Birth-place of the Prophet Amos, and of the Woman that perswaded David to recal Jonathan. In the Wilderness near it the Meabites, &c. who came against Jeroboam to battle, were upon his Prayer, confounded by God and destroyed one another, 2 Chr. 20. Zoar Tiker, or Sego, formerly called Bela, stood 15 Miles South from Jericho, near the Coasts of the Dead-Sea, one of the Pentapolis or five Cities doomed to Destruction, (the other four being Sodom, Gomorrhah, Seboim and Adama) but preserv'd by Lot's entreaty, Gen. 19. 22. Engaddi before call'd Asafonthamar, i. e. the City of Balm-Trees, built upon a high and steep Rock on the Bank of the Dead-Sea, in a Country noted for its quantity of Balm-Trees, and other fragrant Plants. It gave name to the neighbouring Mountains, and near it was the Cave that Lot and his Daughters retired to from the Fire of Sodom.

David retired into the Wilderness of Engaddi, and hid himself in a Cave, where being followed by Saul, he cut off the Skirt of his Raiment in the Night, to shew him next Day that his Life was in his Power. Odalla, a Royal City taken by Joshuah. Keila or Ceila, a small City which David rescued with great Slaughter of Philistines, 1 Sam. 23. Hebron, before called Arba and Kirjath-Arba, a most ancient City of Canaan, bought by Abraham for a Burying Place; near it lay the Plains of Mamre, where Abraham's Tent and the Oak stood, under which he entertained the Angels: After the Egyptian Captivity this Town was given to Caleb, and made a City of Refuge; when David came to the Crown he made this his Royal Seat till he took and rebuilt Jerusalem: It stood on a Hill 24 Miles South from Jerusalem. Jerber, a City of Levites. Jeremoth and Tapena, two Royal Cities conquered by Joshuah, stood near one another in the Western Borders. Kirjath-jearim, where the Ark of the Covenant abode for 20 Years after it was recovered from the Philistines, stood on a Hill in the Borders of Dan, to which Tribe it is placed by some, but being declared Josh. 18. 14. to be of Judah, we ought not to place it elsewhere. Jezrael, the Birth-place of Amesab, the General of Absalom's Forces stood five Miles South from Hebron. Ziph, which gave name to the Neighbouring Wilderness, wherein David hid himself from Saul, stood on a Hill 15 Miles South from Hebron; 'twas in this Wilderness that David with Ahisai came into Saul's Camp by Night, and carried away his Cup and his Spear from his Bed-side, which he shewed next Day as a Testimony, that it was in his Power again to have slain him. Maon, which stood a few Miles more to the South, in a Desert Country full of Groves, Caves and Dens, afforded also a Place of Refuge to David. Holon or Olon, a City of Levites, stood six Miles East from Maon. Gozen, near it gave name to a Territory. Mount Carmel, different from that Elisba frequented, which as we have already said stood far North, was the Place where Churlish Nabal dwelt. Southward from hence stood Gelo, the Birth-place of Achitophel. Capsoel, on the extream South Point of the Dead-Sea, and Hasor or Chatfor, a Frontier towards Idumæa. In the limits of this Tribe, near the Coasts of the Dead-Sea a few Miles South from Engaddi, stood the strong Fortress of Masfada, often mention'd by Josephus as impregnable, built by Judas Maccabeus, and by Herod much enlarged, improved, and beautified, who also built a Palace in it, the Walls were seven Furlongs in circuit, and the Town stood on a high Hill called Cellis Ac M'e, whereon were Fields yielding Corn to supply a Garrison. And such was its Strength, that it held out the longest of any against the Romans.

Adjoining to the Tribe of Judah on the West, lay the Tribes of Dan and Simeon; and beyond them on the Sea-Coasts, lay the Country possessed by the PHILISTINES, who were at first Masters of all the Coast, from the Borders of Phœnicia to the Frontiers of Idumæa, but Joppa and all Northward the Israelites had recovered; so that what they held during the flourishing State of Israel, consisted of the six Towns, Gath, Acaron, Azotus, Ascalon, Gaza, and Majuma, and the Land adjoining. Of which we will now speak before we enter Dan.

These

These were all Strong and Populous, and afforded Potent Armies, which being always assisted and increased by the Edomites, gave the Israelites as great disturbance as any of their Enemies whatsoever. They were an Idolatrous People Worshipping Dagon, Belzebub, and other Idols; they were also of strong and Gigantick Stature, descended from Casubim and Caphorim of the Race of Mizraim, and conquered this Country before the time of Abraham, whose King always bore the name of Abimelech, as those of Egypt did the name of Pharaoh for many Ages. They were cruel Enemies to the Israelites for many Ages; Sampson first broke their Force; David overthrew them in many Battles, and took Gath; Ozias defeated them; Hezekiah chastiz'd them; and the Maccabees finally destroyed them.

Gath or Gith, stood on the Coast of the Mediterranean-Sea in the Lat. of 32. 12. about 25 Miles West from Jerusalem, it was the Birth-place of Goliath and many other Giants, a strong and populous City, taken by David and dismantled, rebuilt by Rehoboam, and again demolished by Uzziah, and afterwards by Hazael King of Syria; all which so effectually suppressed its ancient Grandeur, that it became of little note. In the Christian times, Fulk King of Jerusalem built a Castle on its Ruins.

Accaron, stood about 15 Miles South of Gath, and two or three Miles from the Sea-Coast; it was a strong and wealthy City, the Seat of their Idol Belzebub, and often mentioned in Scripture.

Ashtod or Ashtod, where stood the Temple of Dagon, into which the Ark of the Covenant being brought when it was taken at Siloh, the Idol fell down and broke to pieces; the City stood near the Sea-Coast 17 or 18 Miles South from Accaron, and was for a long time in very flourishing State; Jonathan Maccabeus took it, put the People to the Sword, burnt the Temple and Idol of Dagon, and therewith a great number of the Inhabitants who had fled to it for shelter; the Romans rebuilt it, and in the time the Christians possessed this Country, it was an Episcopal See, now a sorry Village.

Ascalon, seated also on the Sea-Coast, at about the same distance more South from Azor as that was from Accaron; was reckoned the strongest of all the Philistine Cities, and therefore we hear less of its fate in Scripture than of the other Cities, being we suppose seldom attackt. In Christianity it was a Bishop's See, and in the Holy War was beautified with a new Wall and many fair Buildings by our King Richard I. A Temple built here in Honour to Dirceta the Mother of Semiramis, who by the Poets was feigned to be turned into a Fish in the neighbouring Lake, express'd by Ovid in his Metamorph. l. 6. was resorted to by the Ethnicks, as also another of Apollo.

Gaza, of like distance more South, stood also near the Sea-Coast on a Hill environed with Valleys, and those again with Hills, planted with all sorts of delicious Fruit, and was a large and strong City: Taken by Caius, but recovered by the Philistines; notable on account of Sampson, who tore the Gates open, when they attempted to confine him in the City, and carried them away on his Shoulder to the top of a neighbouring Hill. Alexander the Great destroyed it, but 'twas rebuilt and made great resistance against the Maccabees, yet taken at last.

And Lastly, Majama, a few Miles South from Gaza seated on the Sea-Coast, and the mouth of the Rivulet Befor, was a Town of less note than the former, and chiefly remarkable by being the Port to Gaza.

The Territory of the Tribe of DAN, was bounded on the North by Ephraim; on the South by the Land of the Tribe of Simeon; on the East by those of Benjamin and Judah, and on the West by the Mediterranean-Sea, and the Country of the Philistines. Its extream length from North to South was about 45 Miles, but then in the Northern part it was very narrow, and in the Southern not exceeding 25 Miles in Breadth. The chief Towns were,

Joppa, hodie Jaffa, a very ancient Sea Port Town, built on a Rock on the Banks of the Mediterranean-Sea, in the extream North part of this Tribe, and in the Latitude 32. 20. Famous in those times for its Haven the only one of Judea; the Place where Jonah took shipping, when he fled from the Presence of God; where Peter raised Dorcas to life, and where in a Vision he was exhorted to Convert the Gentiles. By the Ethnicks said to be the Place where Andromeda, was rescued from the Sea Monster by Perseus, notable in the time of the Maccabees, for the burning of the Syrian Fleet before it; taken and destroyed by the Romans, rebuilt in the Holy War by King Lewis of France, Anno 1250. and now decayed and but a sorry Town. Jamnia, a few Miles South from Joppa, stood also on the Sea-Coast, in a pleasant Champion Country: it is often mentioned in the Maccabean War; and in Christianity was a Bishop's See. Casphin, a fortified Town seated on a small Lake six Miles East of Jamnia. Gethiemon, a City of Levites stood six or seven Miles South from Casphin. Thamna or Tammate, where Judah thore his Sheep, and where Sampson slew a Lion. Bethseles, near the Sea-Coast six or seven Miles South from Gath, a City of Levites, whither the Ark was brought by the Yoke of Kine loosed by the Philistines, and where a great number of the Inhabitants were slain by God, for having looked into it, 1 Sam. 6. Ajalon, on the Frontiers of Judah, a City of the Levites, where 'tis said the Moon stood still at the Prayers of Joshuah, as the Sun did at Gibeon's Lachis, notable for the Death of Amaziah King of Judah. Modin, seated on a Hill, the Place of Birth and Sepulchre of the Maccabee Princes, whose Tombs of white Marble were built so high as to be a Land Mark for Seamen. Eltece, a City of Levites; near this City stood Lehi or the Ramoth-Lehi of Sampson, where he slew 1000 Philistines with the Jaw-bone of an Ass. Gibbethon or Gabathon, a City of Levites, but some time possessed by the Philistines, at the Siege whereof Nadab the Son of Jeroboam was slain by Baasha, 1 King. 15. Saara or Zora, a neat Town in a Plain, remarkable for the Birth of Sampson: Near it is the Fountain called Fons Æthyopis, said to be that wherein Philip Baptized the Eunuch. Nehol-Eshcol, i. e. the Torrent and Valley of the Cluster, where the Israelite Spies, cut a Bunch of Grapes so big as to be carried between two Men, and Pomegranates and Figs, to carry back to Moses; was in the South limits of this Tribe.

The Tribe of SIMEON possessed the rest of Judea, extending from the Frontiers of Dan, to the extream Southern limits of Judea, where it was bounded by the Brook Sichor or River of Egypt, which parted it from Idumea. A Country which in its South Parts was very Rocky and Barren, and therefore the Rivulet Befor may be reckoned its Boundary, beyond which they had few or no Towns, and being shut up between the two Rivulets on North and South, the Tribe of Judah on the East, and the Philistines on the West; they had so little room, and so much disturbance from the Philistines and Edomites, that they were forced to disperse themselves among all the Tribes, in the Office of Scribes and Notaries. Their chief Towns were,

Ziglag or Siceleg, a Town formerly possessed by the Philistines, which Achish King of Gath gave to David, for a Refuge against Saul. Hain or Aen, a City of Levites. Harna or Horma, a Royal City subdued by Joshuah. Debir, before called Kiriath-Sepher, i. e. City of Learning, said to be the University of Judea, at first possessed by the Sons of Anak of Gigantick Stature, taken by Othniel and given to the Levites. Gerar or Gerara, a Royal City the Boundary of the Canaanites, and the Seat of the two Abimelechs, in the times of Abraham and Isaac. Beer-sheba or Bersheba, named from the Well and the Oath between Abraham and Abimelech, Gen. 21. stood near the Brook Besor in the most South limits of Judea, and on that account often mentioned in Scripture, memorable for the Grove there planted by Abraham, and the wandrings of Hagar and her Son Ismael, when turned out of Abraham's House; where also the Prophet Elijah retired. Beyond this is a sandy Desert uninhabitable; except on the Sea-Coast, where stands two Towns, Antbedon, a small Port-Town destroyed by Alexander King of the Jews, re-edified by Herod and named Agrippias. And Rhinocorura hodie Pharamica, in the very extrem South, at the River Sicchor, or River of Ægypt: which Town was sometime possessed by the Ægyptians; in the Holy War it was strongly fortified, to oppose the Turks Auxiliaries coming from Ægypt.

We have now Travelled through all the Country, possessed by the Twelve Tribes of Israel. To which we must add IDUMÆA before we close this Chapter; for that was the Country of the Posterity of the other Son of Isaac, namely Esau, and was subjected to Judab by King David; 'tis true in the wicked Reign of Jebooram, they revolted and made themselves a King, as we are told 2 Chron. 21. and continued a separate People always at Enmity with the Israelites for many Ages, yet at last being conquer'd, and the Inhabitants Circumcised by Hircanus about 170 Years before Christ; it was justly enough esteemed part of Palestina by the Romans, and so made the sixth Part in their Division, as we have elsewhere shewn.

IDUMÆA, lay on the South of Judab, between the Mediterranean-Sea on the West, and Arabia Petraea on the East and South. It is a Country of a dry sandy Soil, destitute of Water, except in Wells here and there Dug by the Inhabitants, and therefore no wonder it was always partly Desert. On the North runs a long Ridge of Rocky Mountains, named the Mountains of Seir, denominated from Esau, for the Word signified Hairy, alluding to the Hairyness of Esau. Towards the Sea-Coast the Earth is Prolifick enough, and yields Palm-trees in abundance; the famous Balm grew plentifully here in old times, but at present there is none to be found. As to the State of this Country, now and for many Ages past, little can be said; for the Natives are of the Arabian kind, a wild roving People, with whom none of our European Nations have ever conversed, and from whom, altho' we had communication, 'tis not probable any thing could be learnt, since they are so far from Polite, that 'tis to be doubted whether they have any kind of Literature among them; so that we can tell the Reader nothing of Cities or Towns seated here at present, and might pass it over without further notice, if the frequent mention in Scripture of the Edomites, did not require an account of its ancient State.

To speak therefore of this Countrey so far as is necessary for the better understanding the Scripture, we must tell you; the first Inhabitants were the Horites, as we are told Gen. 14. whom Esau subjected, when he retreated into Mount Seir, to leave room for his Brother Jacob in Canaan. From Esau, who is also Edom, as it is over and over expressed in Scripture, the People were called Edomites, under which name we find them very often mention'd in the Wars of Judab and Israel; called also Idumæa, either by Latinizing Edom, or from the Idumæans a People of Arabia Felix, who are said to have forsok their own Country and Planted here. They were a Rude and Barbarous People, Governed for some time by Kings, a List of eight of which is set down by Moses, Gen. 36. who reigned before any King or Government was established in Israel: But the Succession was broke, and the Government was sometimes Patriarchal in their several Tribes, and sometimes Regal over all. When Moses led the Israelites out of Ægypt, we may suppose it in this last State, for 'twas to the King of Edom, that he sent to desire Passage thro' the Land, (Num. 20.) The churlish answer of whom, to the civil Entreaties and Declarations of Moses, is an instance of the Rudeness of that People. Tho' protected by God at that time, (Deut. 2.) yet they were conquer'd afterwards by King David, (2 Sam. 8.) and govern'd by his and his Successors Vice-Roys for about 160 Years; at the end of which, taking advantage of the loose Reign of Jebooram, Son of Jeboasaphat King of Judab, they threw off the Yoke and resumed their own Government, and were never afterwards Reduced till the Maccabean times, when Joannes Hyrcanus conquered the Edomites, and made them receive Circumcision and the Law of Moses, (Josephus Antiq. Lib. 13. Ch. 14.) With the rest of Judea, afterward conquered by the Romans, and since by the Turks, but it does not appear these maintain any Government here, except on the Sea-Coast for securing the Road from Ægypt to Judea, where stood some Castles and a few scatter'd Villages, among which mentioned by Travellers, are Larissa or Arissa, as 'tis named by Sandys, seated not far from the Frontiers of Judea, and two Miles from the Sea, a Castle with a Garrison of 100 Soldiers, surrounded by a few ordinary Houses, and furnished with good Water. Salbia, where a Bassa resides standing more towards the Frontiers of Ægypt. Tina, a Town upon the Sea-Shoar, and Catio a Castle with a small Garrison, where Toll is exacted of Merchants and Travellers, stands in a Desert, and is forced to send to Tina for Water and Sustenance. To which we must add Torr, a small Sea-Port Town and Castle seated near the Straights of Suez, or Division of Ægypt and Arabia, where an Aga is Governor, and keeps a Garrison; near it is a fair and spacious Convent of Greek Monks, who treated Mr. Thevenot, (as I suppose they do other Travellers,) very kindly.

The chief Places mentioned in ancient Authors are, Dinbabath, the Seat of Bela the first King of Edom. Pan, the Seat of Hadad, the last of the Kings mentioned by Moses. Anith, the Royal City of Hadad, another of those Kings. Caparosa, Gamararis and Elasa, are noted by Ptolemy as chief Cities, but they are not mentioned in History.

In the later accounts of Idumæa, they reckoned all that part of the Tribe of Simeon, South of the Rivulet Beja, and even Gaza and the other Philistine Cities, within its bounds, whereby Rhinocorura, Anthedon, and even Beerſheba, which we have spoken of as part of Simeon, because conquered by them, altho' formerly indeed subject to the Edomites, to be part of Idumæa: And Cluverius names Gaza as its Capital City.

Before we quit Idumæa, we must not forget to mention, that it was here on the Hill Cassius, that the Great Pompey received his Death and Sepulchre, murdered by Command of Ptolemy, to whom he fled for Succour, and buried by an honest private Soldier, where afterwards the Emperor Adrian erected a Monument to his Memory.

A R A B I A.

ADjoining to the Countries we have passed thro' lies ARABIA, a Land of vast extent, namely 20 Degrees or 1200 Miles from North to South, and 23 Degrees from East to West: But not proportionately Populous, being a Sandy Barren Soil, and affording but little Subsistence to either Man or Beast.

The Boundaries of Arabia are, on the North Judæa, Syria, and the River Euphrates; on the South the Ocean; on the East the River Euphrates, dividing it from Diarbeck, and the Gulphs of Bassora and Ormuz, which part it from Persia; and on the West Palestine, some part of Egypt and the Red-Sea; extending from the 15th. to the 35th Degree of Latitude, and therein possessing the Third, Fourth and Fifth Climates, and lying partly in the Torrid-Zone, the Tropick of Cancer passing over Arabia-Felix.

The AIR therefore is exceeding hot, and the SOIL in many Places so very rough, sandy, dry and barren, that tho' a little matter suffices Nature, yet the Earth produces not enough for its support. The Rivers are but few, and those shallow and small, and Rain is seldom seen there; so that they have only the Dew (which Nature affords them very plentifully) to Water the Land. The Sea-Coasts and Banks of Rivers afford indeed a better Soil; there the Ground yields Armatick Plants, and Delicious Fruits, as Aloes, Cassia, Spikenard, Cardamum, Cinnamon, Pepper, Dates, Oranges, Lemons, &c. Frankincense, Myrrh, and other valuable Gums. Honey and Wax, are also plentiful in this Country; and in their Seas, they Fish up the best Coral and Pearls. Among their Beasts, the Camel seems to be purposely created for this Soil, where sandy Deserts afford no Water in many Days Travel; this Creature is so supplied by Nature, with a Faculty of throwing up the Liquids of his Stomach into his Throat, and Perspires so little, that he requires not Water in three Days, and can well subsist 14 days without it; he carries a Burthen of 600 Pound weight, which need never be taken off his Back in the whole Journey, for he only kneels down to rest, and rises with his Loading on. These therefore are the carriage Beasts they use in their Trade Journeys, which are perform'd in Caravans, or very great Troops of Camels with Guards to defend from Robbery. Their Horses are small and ill shaped, but wondrous Fleet; these are used by the wild Arabians, who live upon Spoil and Robbery, and themselves as well as Horses are exceeding swift of Foot. They are fly and silent, upon you before you're aware, and gone before you can think of pursuing: And this leads me to speak of the Humane kind, for we can hardly call them Men.

The Inhabitants are of a Tawny Complexion, whence some derive the name of the Country, from the Hebrew Word Arab, which signifies Black: Others derive the name from Harabi, which in the same Language signifies a Thief or Robber, alluding to the nature of the Men who have in all Ages been so addicted to this Vice, that as Strabo del Rio observes, with the Jews it was so usual to call a Thief an Arabian, as a Merchant a Canaanite, and a Mathematician a Chaldean. They are of mean Stature, Raw-boned, Feminine Voices, swift as we have said of Foot, of no set dwellings, except on the Sea-Coasts, where Cities and Towns are filled with a more regular Generation, who exercise Trades and carry on Traffick: But all the Inland Country is void of settled Habitations, the Men roving from Place to Place, and sleeping under Tents pitched at Night, where their Convenience or Pleasure has led them. In the middle Ages the Inhabitants (at least those of Arabia Petraea) bore the name of Saracens, from Sarra Desert and Saken to inhabit, as some say; or more probably perhaps, from Sarak a Thief. So Scaliger in his Book de Emend. Temp. Saracenis, (says he) à vicinis dicuntur ab Elfarack, i. e. ἀπὸ γειττονικῶν, quod rapinis victitent. A People of whom Amianus Marcellinus (an Author of the fourth Century) thus Writes. 'The Saracens whom we are neither ' to wish for our Friends nor Enemies, are a Mar' tial People half naked, clad as far as the Groin
' with painted Cassocks, ranging up and down on ' Camels and swift Horses, as well in Peace as in ' troublesome times. Not used unto the Plough;
' to Plant Trees, or get their living by Tillage;
' they wander from one Place to another, without
' House or Home, or any constant Dwelling-Place,
' or the Use of Laws; nor can they long endure the ' same either Air or Soil; the manner of their liv' ing being always fixing like ravenous Kites, who ' snatch up a Prey in their flight, but never will ' tarry if time be required to carry it off. Their ' Food is chiefly Venison and Fowls which they ' catch, or Milk and the Herbs they can meet with,
' being ignorant of Corn and Wine. Their Wives
' they only hire for a time, who tho' for a shew of Matrimony,

Marrimony, present their Husbands with a Spear and a Tent, Part when they please. Both Sexes are most extreemly given to Carnal Lusts, the Women as rambling as the Men, Married in one Place and brought to bed in another, and leave their Children where they fall, without more Care of them. Thus far he, and for ought appears, this Character exactly suits them still, for all Travellers whose Occasions lead them within their reach find them a rapacious rude Rout, who come in Drove to Rob, catch what they can, and flee away, and as he says like Kites or Wolves, spare nothing that they can carry off, nor scruple murdering those that oppose them.

But having thus shewn the worst of their Character, we must to do them Justice however allow that among the Civiliz'd Arabians, have been found Men of most acute Parts, and profound Knowledge in Philosophy, Physick, Astronomy, and Mathematicks: And the common Arithmetical Characters used by us, are said to be of their Invention.

The Arabick Language is of large extent, for the Alphabets of Mahomet being written in it, has made it the learned Language of the Turks, and therefore taught in Schools throughout all their Dominions, and spoken as Latin with us, by all the Men of Fashion among them.

Christianity was Preached here by St. Paul, and propagated for some Ages; but upon the Rise and Progress of Mahomet's new Religion, it was utterly exterminated, and the whole Country now adheres to that.

Arabia was first Peopled by Chus the Son of Chem, whose Posterity spread themselves over Arabia-Petrea and Arabia-Felix, and erected many separate Governments. Afterwards, the Children of Madian, the Son of Keturah; the Children of Ismael the Son of Abraham by Hagar; the Children of Amalek the Grandson of Esau; grew up to considerable Nations, in the Arabia-Petrea.

The Madianites (who were a different Branch of the Family of Madian, from that spoken of in our account of Palestine) dwelt in that part of Arabia which joined to Aegypt, and had preserved the Worship of the true God, when Moses retired thither, and married the Daughter of Jethro their Priest; and therefore afforded the Israelites all assistance and friendship, when they passed thro' their Country in their flight from Aegypt. Of these the Kenites mentioned in Scripture were a Branch.

The Amalekites were a great and powerful Nation seated on the back of Idumaea, and shew'd themselves bitter Enemies to the Israelites; setting upon them at Rephidim in their passage to Canaan, where a remarkable Battle was fought, wherein while Moses held up his Hands to God, Israel prevailed; but when he let them fall Amalek prevailed; wherefore Aaron and Hur stayed up his Hands till the Evening, and the Amalekites were defeated, Exod. 17. For their Enmity to Israel, doomed to Desolation by God; and accordingly King Saul was by Samuel directed to go against the Amalekites; and utterly destroy them and their Children and Cattle; which he performed in part but brought their King Agag alive; with which the Lord was angry, and caused Samuel to hew him in pieces, the particulars whereof see, 1 Sam. 15.

The Ismaelites were a most populous Nation, or rather 12 populous Nations, descended from the 12 Sons of Ismael, which spread themselves all over Arabia. Some of whom were Merchants trading into Aegypt with Spices, Frankincense, Balm, and other rich Goods of Arabia; but most of them were Thieves and Robbers, the Ancestors of the Sarazens above mentioned, and like them, a Vagabond Race of Men, whose Hand was against every Man, and every Man's against them, according to the prediction concerning Ismael, Gen. 16. 12.

The Barrenness of that part of Arabia, which adjoined to their Neighbours, whether on the side of Aegypt and Idumaea, as on the side of Chaldea, may be a reason that it was never conquered, by those great Monarchies; for otherwise the Spices and Gums of Arabia-Felix, which they were all acquainted with, would undoubtedly have tempted them to possess it. Accordingly we find Alexander intended its Conquest, but was hindered by Death. And Augustus sent an Army thither out of Aegypt, but the heat of the Air, and the Drought of the Soil so incommoded them, that they were forced to return after the first Defeat. And so it stood under its own Government, divided into many Kingdoms and States when Mahomet first appear'd, and by broaching a new Religion, erected a new Monarchy.

Mahomet was a Person of obscure Birth and mean Fortune, but happening to get into the Service of a wealthy Merchant of Mecca, and after his Death, into the favour of his Mistress, so far as to be accepted her second Husband, he at once jump'd into a rich Estate, which for some Years he continued to employ in Trade: He was illiterate, but Master of a subtil Wit and aspiring Genius, and not satisfied with the good Fortune he had gain'd, would needs set himself at work to obtain Reputation by pretending himself at first to be a Prophet, which they say he was tempted to, by the Fits of the Falling Sickness he was subject to, these Fits he pretended to be Transports, wherein his Soul was carried to Heaven to converse with God. Sergius a Monk who had been banished his Country for the Nestorian Heresy, becoming intimate with Mahomet, and being Master of more Knowledge, was able somewhat to cultivate the very rude Enthusiasms which Mahomet threw forth, and both together formed a Religion, which consisted of Gentilism, Judaism, and Arrian Christianity blended together; for they taught that Moses was a Prophet sent by God, whom the Gentiles having not received, nor the Jews obeyed, he sent Jesus Christ the second and greater Prophet; but his Doctrine being not duly received, God had now sent his last and greatest Prophet Mahomet. By owning Moses, he gained the Jews, and by granting Jesus Christ to be a Prophet, which was almost as much as the Arrians allow'd, he gave them content, and without declaring peremptorily against Images, he pleased the Iconoclastes; which two Sects of Christians having been driven out of the Roman Empire, were pretty numerous in Arabia; and Lastly, by his Doctrine of Polygamy and Promises of sensual Delights in the future State, he captivated the Libertines, in so much that he soon found a greater number of Believers than he could have expected. His good Success thus far, led him to proceed farther, and therefore by another Doctrine he set up for Power, namely he enjoined all his Votaries to Propagate the Faith even by the Sword, and to all that lost their Lives in that Service, a Promise was made of especial Beatitude in the other World. The Magistrates of Mecca alarm'd at this bold Pretender, endeavour'd deavoured to seize him ; but escaping by flight he settled at Medina, and thence propogated his Doctrine, which spread most wonderfully. At the same time the Sarazens having served the Emperors in their Wars, and been ill rewarded were a disgusted People, and ready to joyn in any Project for Dominion ; these fell in with Mahomet, whose Religion pleased them ; and so made him Monarch of Arabia. His Government began A. C. 622. and he died Anno. 632. and was succeeded by Ububezer, who took the Title of Caliph, which signifies High-Priest as well as Prince, and reigned two Years ; succeeded by Humur or Omar, who added to his Dominion Persia, Aegypt, Palestine, and part of Syria and Mesopotamia. Osman who succeeded him added Barbary ; and brought the Empire to the highest State that it arrived at in that Succession : For they began to fall into Dissention. Haly the Kinsman of Mahomet claimed the Government, and in the end obtained it, but was murdered after a short Reign. Osman's Heirs got again into the Throne, and made some Additions to their Dominions ; so that Asia-Minor, Armenia and Mesopotamia, besides the Countries we have already mentioned, were all subjected to the Mahometan Sarazens within the space of one Hundred Years. A wonderful and swift Progress ! But such as it pleased God for the Sins of the Eastern Empire to permit.

Mahomet II. the twentieth Caliph about A. D. 760. removed the Seat of the Empire to Bagdat. And about an Hundred Years after, Aegypt set up a Caliph of its own, to whom the Arabians submitted. But that Race after having reigned for about 300 Years, were outed by the Turks, and those again by the Mama'lukes, who kept the Government about 250 Years ; till at last Aegypt and all the Dominions of that Caliph, was finally subjected to the Turkish Empire by Selimus I. Anno. 1517.

Concerning the Turks who have so long possessed all the Sarazen's Empire, we shall speak of them when we come to Turcomania, which was their original Country. 'Tis sufficient here to say, that they are exact Believers on Mahomet, and make their Pilgrimages out of a Religious Zeal to this Country, to visit at Medina the Tomb of that pretended Prophet, and pay their Devotions at Mecca his Birth-place.

ARABIA is divided in Ancient Geography into three large Parts, viz.

ARABIA DESERTA, which is the most Northern Part.

ARABIA PETRÆA, the Eastern Part, and ARABIA FOELIX, which was by much the largest Part, possessed all the South.

In its Present State the DESERTA, is little regarded by the Turks, but possessed by divers Princes paying Tribute to the Port : Of these the Chief are,

The Principality of Anna, which is the most North lying between the River Euphrates on the East, and Syria on the West and North.

The Principality of Argia, a Midland Country lying West from Bassora.

The Principality of Chavibeda, extending from the Mouth of Euphrates Westward near 300 Miles.

Arabia PETRÆA, is immediately under the Government of the Turks by a Beglerbeg, who resides at Bosra, whence 'tis call'd the Beglerbegate of Bosra or Busereth.

Arabia FOELIX, is divided into many Principalities, viz. The Principality of Mecca, which is sometimes reckoned part of the Petraea : And lies along the Coast of the Red-Sea.

The Principality of Saba, next adjoining to Mecca on the South, extending also on the same Sea-Coast.

The Principality of Mocha, possessing the Cape of Land, which makes the Strait of Babel-Mandel, at the Mouth of the Red-Sea.

The Principality of Xael or Hadramut, lying along the Coast of the Ocean or Arabian-Sea.

The Principality of Seger or Alibanali, upon the same Sea more Eastward.

The Principality of Femini on the same Sea-Coast to the Cape, and back into the Gulph of Ormuz.

Vodane Principality, lies on the Coast of the Gulph of Ormuz, and the Sinus Persicus.

The Principality of Mascalat, lies on the West of Vodane, along the Coast of the Gulf of Bassora or Sinus Persicus.

The Principality of Bahraim or Gerrhemma, possesses the rest of the Coast of the Persian Gulph.

These are the Countries that lie on the Coasts, and so are frequently visited by European Traders.

But the Within-Land Country, which comprehends many large Principalities, the Names of some whereof are Jamana, Higgiaz, Tehama, Oman and Fortachi ; are little known.

To Proceed now to the Particular Description of Arabia.

ARABIA DESERTA, called by the Turks Berii Arvistan or Beriara, is bounded on the East with Diarbeck or Mesopotamia; on the West, with Palestine and Arabia Petrea; on the North with Palmyrena or part of Syria; and on the South by Arabia Foelix.

It has its Name from the vast sandy Deserts whereof it consists, thro' which those that Travel must carry their Provisions, and be guided as at Sea by the Stars or Mariners Compass. A Countrey (saith Guilandinus Melchior, who Travelled thro' it;) where are found neither Men nor Beasts, Birds or Trees, Grass or Pasture, and nothing to be seen but rowling Sands or craggy Mountains: But the Land on the East, which lies along the Banks of the Euphrates is a better Soil, and affords Plants and Food to the Inhabitants of divers Towns seated in that Part.

This Country was first inhabited by the Posterity of Huz the Son of Nachor, and the Sons of Abraham by Keturah, 'twas the Country where Job dwelt, and the Land whence the Wise Men came to Worship Christ; the Proofs whereof would be too large to be put down here: Those that desire them, may consult Frid. Spanheim's History of Job, where it is largely shewn.

The Barrenness of the Ground is a Protection to the Princes of it; for the Grand Seignior sets no value upon these Deserts, and the Towns are but few. The Chief are,

Anna, a large well built Town, the Capital of this Part of Arabia, and formerly a famous Mart, now not much frequented; it stands on the River Euphrates, in a fruitful and pleasant Soil, in the North limits of this Province, and near the Frontiers of Diarbeck, Lat. 35. D. Mescheid-Ursin, 60 Miles South from Anna. Sumiscabac, seated more to the West near the Frontiers of Arabia Petrea, supposed by Melchior to be the ancient Saba, the City of the Sabaeans who pillaged Job, and who were the Descendants of Sheba, the Grandson of Abraham by Keturah. Tamma, on the South Frontiers of the Principality of Anna, in the Lat. 31. And in the Mid-land

Argia, which gives name to a Principality, is a small Town 70 Miles distant from the River Euphrates to the West, in or near the same Latitude with Balsora. Faara, stands within 60 Miles more West. Maaden or Noera, seated also 70 or 80 Miles more Westward. Tbanlabia, near the Mountains that divide Petrea from the Deserta. Aladi and Dhat-Aliamin, more South; are the chief Towns of this Principality.

Chavebeda, a small Town which also gives Name to a Prince, whose other chief Towns are Tangia, Megiara and Merah, all seated within Land, and so unknown but by Name; they all lie in the Latitudes of 28 to 30 D.

ARABIA PETRÆA, now called Dase-lik Arabistan, or Barraab and Bathalabab, but more generally the Beglerbegate of Bosra; hath for its Bounds on the East Arabia Deserta; on the West the Red-Sea, and the Isthmus of Egypt; on the North Palestine; and on the South Arabia Foelix.

The Soil too much like the former, but in some measure better cultivated and more Travelled thro' on account of Trade. The Deserts of Sin and Pharaan or Paran, wherein the Israelites wandered so long, lay within the limits of this Province. The chief Towns are,

Bosra or Bufferith, seated in Midland Lat. 32. in the back of Palestine, about 150 Miles East from the Lake of Galilee, it was repaired by Augustus Caesar, and made a Colony of Romans by Alexander Severus; an ancient City mentioned by Moses, Gen. 36. 33. Under the Turks, as it had been under the Romans, made the Metropolis of this Country, and the Seat of the Beglerbeg. Tibet, far more South, in the Lat. 30 D. Acra, about 100 Miles more to the West, and about 50 South from the Shoar of the Dead-Sea. And Hera which was the ancient Petra, the Capital of the Country, seated more Westward in Lat. 29. and 100 Miles direct South from Hebron, a City of great Note and Strength in former times, when it was called Sela and Jekheel and often mentioned in Scripture, particularly 2 Kings 14. when Amaziah took it. It long resisted the Romans, and for its impregnable Strength, used by the Soldans of Egypt, as the repository for their richest Treasures. Other Places mentioned in Scripture, supposed to be in this Province are Sur, near the Red-Sea, the first encampment of Israel. Madian, the City of Jeethra, whose Daughter Moses married. Rephaim, where the Amalekites were defeated. Kadesh-barnea, the Station of Israel when the Spies were sent to discover the Land of Canaan. There, where Achan, Dathan and Abiram mutinied and were punished by God. Lastly, the two Mounts Sinai and Horeb stood in the limits of this Province, in the West Part at the head of the Red-Sea.

Sinai, is extream high but of easie ascent, it is called by the Arabians Gibbel-Moufa, that is, Moses Mountain. At the Foot of it is a fair well built Convent surrounded with strong Walls, from whence the ascent was cut in Steps in the Rock, by the direction of the Empress Helen quite to the top. The Monks pretend to shew Pilgrims the very Place where Moses abode the 40 Days, and where he received the Tables of the Law. On the top of the Mountain are two Churches, one for the Greeks, and another for the Latins, and in the ascent many Cells and little Chapels, where formerly Monks and Hermits abode to the number of 14000, as report informed Torres, but when he was there they were empty, being driven thence by the Arabians: The Names of those Chapels are enumerated by that Author, who also tells us that the number of Steps which lead from the Convent to the top of the Mount, were 14000 before they were damag'd, many now being broken, but those that remain are well made and of easie ascent: From this number of Steps, a judgment may be made of the height of the Mount.

Horeb, where God appeared to Moses in a burning Bush, is but a little distant from Sinai, and not near so high, it has also a Church and Monastery upon it, whose Friars are Hospitable to Strangers, and shew where the Israelites worshipped the Golden-Calf.

ARABIA FOELIX, called Jemen or Hayaman by the Inhabitants, lies on the South of the two Arabia's Deserts and Petras, surrounded on all other sides by the Sea; that is to say, the Red-Sea on the West, the Gulf of Perse and Ormuz on the East, and the Ocean or Arabian-Sea on the South. A Country so vastly large, as to be reckoned 3000 Miles in circumference, extending from the 14th. to the 27th. Degree of Latitude.

Its Name implies a great Felicity, and by the Ancients it was represented as one of the most fertile and delicious Lands in the World; but either they took their Reports upon trust, or the Soil is wonderfully altered; for at this time none of that fecundity appears. The Mid-land being all Sandy, Mountains, Dry and Barren: So that near the Sea-Coasts, and on the Banks of the few Rivers only, can any Praise at all be bestowed on its Soil. 'Tis true 'tis by much the most fruitful part of Arabia, and so comparatively with the rest, it may be called Happy; and withal its Products are exceeding valuable, as Frankincense, peculiar to this Country, Myrrh, Odoriferous Plants of various kinds; which to the Ancients who knew not the way to India, might rightly enough endear this Countrey to them. And in such esteem it was, even so late as Strabo Marcellinus's time, that he gives us this delicious Character of it. 'The happy Arabians, so called 'because so rich in Corn as well as plentiful in Cattle, 'Vines, and odoriferous Spices of all kinds. So acquainted with all Blessings, which either Element can afford, 'well furnished with Roads and quiet Harbours for 'Shipping, the Towns of Trade and Merchandize 'standing very thick. Besides most wholesome Fountains of Medicinal Waters, they enjoy divers Brooks 'and Rivers very clear and pure, and a Temperature 'of Air exceeding healthy: But if the rest of his Character may be judged of by this last Article, what he says must go for nothing; the Air cannot have been other than what it is, and how any Man can applaud the temperature of the Air of this Country, of which two Third Parts lie within the Tropick, I do not understand. What he says of its Havens and Towns of Trade, might indeed be true then, but is not so now: the Red-Sea was very much frequented by Merchant Ships, before the Cape of Good-Hope and Passage that way to India was known; and Arabia was the Market where the Goods of India and China, and all the Eastern Islands were sold to the Merchants of Egypt and Barbary, who brought them over Land to Grand-Cairo, and other Ports in the Mediterranean, where the Italian, and other European Merchants used to buy them. But now that the Goods of India and Persia, are brought directly by Sea, and the Commodities of Arabia are less useful to us than formerly, European Traffick thither is but small.

Of this Part of Arabia the Grand-Seignior is not Master, some of the Princes indeed are Feudataries, but 'tis only some Cities and small Provinces that he is immediate Lord of.

We have mentioned the several Principalities already, we shall pass thro' them, and shew the Reader as many of the Cities and chief Towns, as we could get information of by consulting the best Travellers and Geographers.

MECCA, a Country of about 500 Miles extent along the Shoar of the Red-Sea, takes its name from the City Mecca, the Place where Abraham first broached his false Religion, and is govern'd by a Prince called the Emir of Mecca, And lies next adjoining to the Arabia Petraea, which we last came from, and whereof it is by some Geographers reckoned part. The chief Places are,

Mecca, seated in Latit. 23. about 60 Miles from the Coast of the Red-Sea, No Christian is permitted to come into it; but the Turks inform us, 'tis a most wealthy and populous City, being the grand Staple of Trade for the Commodities of this Country, Egypt, Persia, India, &c. Three Caravans arrive yearly from India, Damascus, and Grand-Cairo, with whom vast numbers of Pilgrims, constantly resort hither to pay their Devotions; every Musulman being bound once in his Life-time either by himself or Proxy, to Visit Mecca and Medina, especially Mecca to pay their Devotions at the Kiaaba or Bet-el-lab; i. e. House of God, which is a small square House 15 foot long, 12 foot broad and about 30 foot high, which stands in the middle of the Town, and is believed by the Turks to have been built by the Patriarch Patriarch Abraham, it is girt round with two Belts of Gold, one low and the other toward the top, the Door is of Silver, and a Golden Spout carries the Water off its top, the Walls are constantly cover'd with hangings of Silk, and a Court round it enclosed with Walls and beautified with Columns and Arches, serves for the performance of Devotions; the House it self being opened only on the Ramadan, and other solemn Festivals (Trevent). Notwithstanding the common Opinion that the Pilgrims, come into these Parts, chiefly to visit the Tomb of Mahomet. Mr. Trevent tells us that is a vulgar Error, for 'tis the Kiaabe that their Law obliges every Musulman to make his Devotions at once in his Life time, and many having performed their Devoirs there, return without visiting the Tomb. This contributes much to the Wealth of the Place, which contains about 6000 Families. It is not walled round, and therefore they say Christians are forbid to come within five Miles of it, least in the Crowd of Visitors, the Mosque be prophaned or its Wealth stolen; for in memory of their Prophet, who as we have said, lived and first broach'd his Religion here; there is a most Glorious Mosque erected, accounted the most stately in the World, its Roof rising in a lofty Cupola is richly gilded, and the two Towers at the ends, are of exceeding height and curious Architecture it is said to have an hundred Gates, and as many Windows, and is adorned within side with most costly Gildings, and the richest Tapestries. So Steril a Soil is this Countrey, even at no farther distance from the Sea, that they have no Water in Mecca, but what they catch of Rain, or fetch from other Places.

Medina, called Medina Talmabi, i. e. the City of the Prophet, the Place whither Mahomet retired when driven from Mecca by the Magistrates, and where he was buried, stands 240 Miles North from Mecca, about 80 Miles from the Coast of the Red-Sea, upon the River Laakic; formerly named Jatrib, by some supposed to be the Birth-place of Mahomet, and then a small Village, which he fortified and made his Seat, while he spread his Religion and Authority abroad. Now grown up into a large and wealthy City, whither Pilgrims resort from all parts of the Turks Dominions to view the Sepulchre of Mahomet, which, not hanging in an Iron Coffin, suspended by the force of a Magnet at top, as was of old times reported, stands within an Iron Grate, covered with a green Velvet Pall, sent annually by the Grand-Seignior, the old one being cut into small Shreds, and sold for Relicks, in a Mosque of most magnificent and sumptuous Structure, being supported by 400 Pillars, and enlghtened with 300 Silver Lamps continually burning. The Tomb has a rich embroidered Canopy over it, but is of its self of no Magnificence or Beauty. The Town stands in a Barren Plain, at some distance from two Mountains, namely Othon on the North, and Air on the South. Algjar or Egra, upon the Coasts of the Red-Sea, is the Port to Medina. Tarif, a populous Town 100 Miles distant from Medina to the East, seated upon Mount Ghazuan, which is the coolest Air and most fertile of Arabia, abounding with Fruits, and furnishes Medina with great part of its Sustenance.

Siddin. Ziden or Sidde Giotta, seated on the Red-Sea, about 60 Miles South-west from Mecca, is the Port to that City; and therefore a place of Trade and resort, Wealthy and well built.

Dhafar or Tasfeb, the Capital of that Division of Arabia, call'd TEHAMA in the old Maps, about 60 Miles from the Red-Sea, in the Mid-way between Siden and Zibet, Lat. 18 D. 30 m. near the mouth of the River Naugaren is also a Place of Trade; either this or Zibet was the ancient Sieba, for Authors differ, of which this Description is given by ancient Writers, namely, that it was seated on a Mountain, the most beautiful of all Arabia, rich in the excellencies of Nature, especially in Frankincense, a Gum peculiar to them only, and growing in a Wood of 100 Miles long in its Neighbourhood.

The Principality of ZIBET or SABA, supposed to be the Country of the Sabaeans, whose Queen came to visit Solomon, lies on the South of Mecca and Yehama, stretch'd along the Coasts of the Red-Sea above 400 Miles in length. A Country remarkably rich in Balm, Myrrh, Cassia, Manna, and especially Frankincense, the best whereof in the whole World, being here produced in a Wood of 100 Miles long, of almost only that Tree which yields it, gathered Spring and Autumn, and sold to all Nations. The chief Cities are,

ZIBET or SIBET, the Metropolis of the Principality to which it gives name, and a most rich and populous City seated in the 16 Degree of North Latitude about 50 Miles from the Banks of the Red-Sea. This is the greatest Mart in the World for Frankincense, Myrrh, and the other rich Drugs of this Land; and therefore aspired to by the Turks, who took it about 100 Years ago, but lost it again, and for ought appears, 'tis now subject to its own Prince.

The Kingdom of MOCHA, adjoins to Saba on the South; extending Southward to the Straights of Babel-mandel, which is the Mouth of the Red-Sea, and reaching Eastward along the Coasts of the Arabian-Sea about 350 Miles, comprising therein Aden and Lagbi. Wherein stand Zenan, seated 180 Miles North North-west from Mocha; a considerable City as large as Bristol (says Sir H. Middleton) the Place of Residence of the Turkish Bassa, and strongly built, but partly of Stone. The Wall about it is of Earth, but strengthened with Turrets in every part, and is a good Defence to the City. There are also two Castles, one to the North on a Hill which overlooks the Town, and defends it from the wild Arabians, and another on the East side, which is the Bassa's Palace, and enclosed with several Walls and Batteries. The City stands upon the Coast of the Red-Sea in a stony Valley, and has no fresh Water but what is fetched out of Wells, and withal, Wood is very scarce altho' the Winter be extream cold.

Damare, 40 Miles from Zenan, a well built Town of five different Parts which stand distinct, seated in a fruitful Plain, with Water and all sorts of Grain in good plenty; and is therefore a Store-house for all the neighbouring Places.

Tayes or Tees, a good City surrounded with a mud Wall, and guarded by a strong Castle on the top of a Hill. Eufra, a little Town where an Arabian Saint is buried, and is visited by great numbers of superstitious Pilgrims. Moufa, a Town not great but populous, about a Days Journey from Mocha; the Country about it yields Indico. All these Towns lie between Zenan and Mocha, and were passed thro' by Sir Hen. Middleton, in the Year 1610. who tells us, the Turks are Masters of the Maritime Towns and the flat Country, but the Arabians maintain their own Jurisdiction in the Hills.

MOCHA Mohz, or Melechla-Saberda, is a large and populous City seated at the entrance of the Red-Sea, in 13 Deg. and half North Latitude. About 150 Years ago, it was according to Baldus, no more than a Village inhabited by Fishermen; but so early as 1610. Sir Hen. Middleton describes it as a rich and populous Place, about a sixth Part so big as Zenan, which as we have said is equal to Bristol. It stands in a salt, sandy, barren Soil, close by the Sea side, destitute of Walls, but guarded by a Castle built of Stone by the Turks in 1612. on the Sea side. The Streets are large neat and clean; the Houses of Brick or Stone two Stories high, with flat Roofs and Terrasses at top, where they are refreshed in the Night, after the scorching Heat which commonly rages in the day-time: The Shops are well contrived and furnished with all useful Commodities, the Town being a Place of very great Trade, whereof Baldus in his Italian Travels gives us this account, taken from the reports of the Ships trading annually between India and Mocha; he says that numerous Caravans arrive here Annually from Turkey and Egypt, also the great Ship Manfouri sent by the Turkish Sultan, arrives yearly in September with a vast Cargo of the richest European Goods, and carries back the returns in Spices, Calico's, and other Indian Goods: The Ships from divers Parts of India, that used to unlade at Aden, do likewise come hither to meet the Caravans: All which must needs render the Place exceeding Populous, as in effect it is, at least one half of the Year, viz. from March to September, which is the time of Trade; and the number of Houses must also be much increased, so that we may believe Baldus, who calls it a large City, and one of the chiefest Places of Trade on all that Coast. Baudrand and other Geographers, reckon this City subject to its own King, and yet Sir Hen. Middleton in 1610. and Baldus in 1660. declare it subject to the Turk. The chief Commodity our Ships fetch hence is Coffee, which grows in the neighbouring Country, and no where else that we know of, except a bastard sort at the Cape. This Drug which is now so much in use, was unknown to the most learned Botanists that have written. Prosper Alpinius is the first that mentions and gives a Curt of it, but both he and Mr. Rey speak of it imperfectly: But those excellent Naturalists Dr. Sloane and Mr. Pettiver, have by the hands of Purser and Supergargo's of Ships trading thither, procured Specimens of the Plant it self; the former has a Branch of the Tree with the Berries and Leaf on it, and the latter has the Leaf and the Berry in its natural State. By these two Gentlemen, I am informed that that the Plant is a small Tree like a Bay, with a Leaf of that form, producing Berries which grow at the bottom of the Leaf upon a short Stalk, two or three in a Cluster, each coated with a Husk, which opened shews a double Kernel; for the Grain we see, is but the moiety of what grows in the same husk. The Tree is about seven or eight foot high, and grows plentifully in the Inland Country, in the Province called Jeman, which lies on the North-east of Mocha, vide Philos. Transact. N^o, 208.

Litry, seated on the Red-Sea, in the Lat. 14 D. 50 m. is a City fortified with four round Bastions, and adorned with three Temples. reckoned one of the chief Places of Trade in those Parts, as the English have found by Experience, says Baldus.

ADEN, seated on the Arabian-Sea, 70 Leagues East from the Straights of Bebel-mandel, Lat. 14 D. is a large and Populous City, said to contain 6000 Houses, or as others perhaps with more truth, 6000 Inhabitants. It has a large Haven, which is much frequented, and the City is reckoned the fairest of Arabia, well fortified both by Art and Nature, and a Place of very great Trade, being the Centre between the Persian-Gulf and the Red-Sea, but 'tis said the Trade is removed to Mocha. It was taken by the Turks in the Year 1538. but soon recovered by the Arabians, and put under the Protection of the King of Mocha. This is supposed to be the Madag of Ptolemy, or by others rather the famous Empory Arabia of the same Author. It was sometime the Capital of a Kingdom to which it gave Name, and the ancient Seat of the People Hemrite. Sir Hen. Middleton's account of Aden when he was there in 1610. is thus, The City stands in a bottom under the covert of a Mountain; 'tis encompassed with a Stone Wall defended in many Places with Forts and Bulwarks; it may seem indeed to lie open to the Seaward, being quite dry at low Water, but then Nature and Art have both concurred to keep out the Danger, for there are two vast Rocks, so craggy as not to be ascended but in one narrow Path, and round about them are erected Forts and Batteries of good Strength, and well furnished with Artillery and Ammunition. The City is supplied with Provisions, as well from the opposite Coasts of Africa, as from the neighbouring Country in Arabia, to which purpose they keep constant correspondence with the Town of Barlora on the African Coast over against it. The Latitude says he, I reckoned to be 12 D. 35 M. North, the variation of the Compass 12 Deg. 40 Min.

Lagbi, 100 Miles North-east from Aden, and a few Miles from the Sea-Coast, was (if not still) subject to its own Prince, and a Place of some Trade.

Xael, about 30 Leagues more to the East on the same Sea-Coast, gives name to another Principality.

Mascate, a Port-Town seated in the Chaps of the Golph of Ormuz just under the Tropic, 60 Leagues North-west from Cape Razigate, at the Foot of a Mountain, having three Rocks at the entrance of the Haven, which make its access difficult; it was chosen therefore by the Portuguese for a Station of Trade after the loss of Ormuz, who fortified it with a well built Castle, and made it the fourth Government under the Vice-Roy of Goa; and while they held it, they made a great Profit; but the neighbouring Arabian Princes beat them out and still possess it.

Sobar, the Capital of Oman or Vodane Principality, seated upon the same Coast about 25 Leagues from Mascate, to the North-west, was a Place of great Trade in ancient time, sending Ships as far as China, says the Nubian Geographer.

Elcatif, seated at the bottom of a small Bay, in the Western Shoar of the Persian Gulph in the 27 D. of North Latitude; gives name to a large Principality subject to the Turk, and is a Place of Trade. This was the Country of the Leantæ in Ptolemy.

Lassach or Labst, the Seat of the Turkish Beglerbeg, who Governs the Province of Babrain, stands 60 Miles South from Elcatif.

These

These are the chief Places on the Coast.

In the Mid-land.

Sanaa, the Capital of Tehama Principality, seated on a Hill, in the 20 Deg. Latit. 200 Miles East from the Coast of the Red-Sea, is one of the greatest and most populous Cities of Arabia, according to the Nubian Geographer, and blessed with a Fruitful Soil.

Thema or Thema: said to be a walled City of fifteen Miles square, but comprehending a great quantity of Ground for Tillage. And Sabatha or Sabota mention'd By Pliny, seated in the midst of the Country on a high Hill, anciently large and populous, having 60 Temples within its Walls; and strongly Fortified.

CHAP. VI.

DIARBECK at Large.

Comprehending DIARBECK, YERACK, and CURDISTAN ;

Which were the Ancient

MESOPOTAMIA, CHALDÆA, and ASSYRIA.

DIARBECK or Diar-Becbia, i. e. the Duke's Country, in the large Extent of its three Provinces, lies along the Banks of the Rivers Euphrates and Tigris, from North North-west to South-east; that is, from Mount Taurus which divides it from Turcomania, in the North, to the inmost recesses of the Persian Gulph in the South 600 Miles, and from East to West, that is, between Syria and Arabia-Deserta on one side, and Persia on the other, in some Parts 200 Miles, in others near 300, and in the lower or Southern hardly 150.

It is situate between the 30 and 40 Deg. of Latit. and so Possesses the fifth and Sixth Climates, whose longest Day is from 14 Hours and a quarter to 15 Hours, and consequently enjoys a good Temperature of Air, and the Soil also is Rich and Fruitful.

The two great Rivers Euphrates and Tigris, have almost their whole Course thro' this Country. For Euphrates, now called Frat, hath its Source in the Mountains in the North-east corner of Turcomania, running cross that Province directly West, turns down Southward at the foot of Mount Taurus, and making the West Boundary of Turcomania, passes along between Syria and Diarbeck, and by the limits of Part of Arabia-Deserta, continues its Current thro' the Middle of Yerack or Chaldæa, till it empties its self into the Persian Gulph at Balsora, dividing of ten into Branches which unite again.

The River Tigris, now Tigil, hath its rise also in Turcomania, in a Plain says Cluverius, in the Mountains Gordei, says Bauraud, runs thro' the Lake Arcthusa, and under Mount Taurus, and thro' another Lake Thespites, often sinking under Ground and rising again, in one Place passing unseen for 25 Miles, then continuing its Course Southward with a very rapid Stream, whence it hath its Name, Tigris signifying a Dart, is increased by many Rivers, passes between Assyria and Mesopotamia, and below Bagdad Branches out into a new Channel, which running cross, falls into the Euphrates, and makes an Island, the main Stream continuing its Southern Course, falls into the Euphrates, and the Conflux which bore the Name of Pasitigris, runs forward into the Persian Gulph.

These and several smaller Rivers effectually watering this Land, rendered it always so exceeding Fruitful, that among the Disputes and various Opinions, concerning the Situation of Paradise or the Garden of Eden. The most Judicious among the Learned are agreed upon it, that it was seated in the South part of this Country, between the two Rivers Tigris and Euphrates. Bishop Patrick, Dr. Heylin, P. Dan. Huetius, and Frid. Spanheim, are among those that Concur in this Opinion.

The First Great Monarchy of the World, was denominated and had its Regal Seat in this Country.

The Assyrian Monarchy began with Nimrod, and continued in two Races of Kings, above 1600 Years, that is to say, under the Successors of Nimrod and Ninus, above 1300 Years; and under the Chaldean Monarchs, from Phul Belochus to Belshassar, (who was slain by Cyrus, and the Monarchy conveyed to Persia), near 300 Years. During which time, not only these Countries, but also all the Asia-Minor, Syria, Palestine, and some Part of Arabia, were under its Dominion.

The ASSYRIA Propria, which is the present Curdistan, was the North-east Part, lying on the East side of the River Tigris, between Armenia on the North, and Babylonia on the South. Named from Assur the Son of Shem who first planted it, and was divided into ten Provinces. The chief Cities of it were, Nineve, Ctesiphon, Arbela and Larissa.

MESOPOTAMIA, which is the present Diarbeck Proper, lies between the two Rivers Euphrates and Tigris, having the Mountains of Armenia on the North, and the Euphrates with the Branch derived from the Tigris, and falling into it on the South. Called Mesopotamia from its thus Situation between Rivers, as the Name implied in their Language, and Aram-nabarem in Hebrew: called also Padan-Aram by the Israelites; where Leben dwelt, and whither Jacob fled from his Brother's Wrath. Padan signified Fruitful, and Aram was the general Name given to all Syria, as well as these Countries, so that the Hebrew Name of Padan, implied a great Fertility, which the Northern part is blessed with to a very high degree, yielding Corn and Wine, and all Necessaries for Life in abundance; wherefore Dr. Heylin will confine that Name to this Part only, the Southern being barren and desert. The chief Cities of it were, Seleucia, Nisibis, Edeffa, Charran and Chabira, supposed by Iossius, to be the Ur of the Chaldees.

CHALDÆA or Babylonia was the South part, the present Yerack which lies between, and on both sides the two Rivers and united Stream, between Arabia on the West, and Persia on the East, to the mouth of the Persian Gulph on the South. It was divided into four Provinces, and its chief Cities were, Babylon, Volgasa, Bersippa or Bersia, and Ur or Ourta, by others taken to be the Ur of the Chaldees where Abraham was born.

Of the present Diarbeck, we have this Account from Modern Travellers and Geographers, that it is a Country of natural Fertility, but thro' the Turkish Rudeness, neither well Cultivated, nor populously Inhabited. Being the Frontier towards Persia, 'tis indeed pretty well Guarded, but the many famous Cities so very much renowned for Magnitude and Opulency, are at present heaps of Ruins. Bagdat, Moussul, Cerebmet, and some few others are indeed Wealthy and Populous, but the rest are only sorry Towns.

It is by Geographers divided into three Parts, namely Diarbeck strictly taken, Yerack and Curdistan.

The first whereof is the North-west part between the two Rivers Euphrates and Tigris. The Third, the North-east Part toward Persia. And the Second, the South Part toward Arabia and the Persian Gulph.

In the Turkish Government, 'tis subject to these Beglerbeks, viz.

The Beglerbeg of Diarbequir, and under him 19 Sangiacks.

The Beglerbeg of Rika, and under him 7 Sangiacks.

The Beglerbeg of Moussul, and under him 5 Sangiacks.

The Beglerbeg of Chirazoul or Scherezul, and 20 Sangiacks.

The Beglerbeg of Bagdat, who has under him 221 Sangiacks.

The Beglerbeg of Bassora, and under him 126 Sangiacks, thus Sir Paul Ricaut; but the last ought to be placed elsewhere, for we are told by Travellers, that Bassora is now subject to its own Prince, and consequently the Turkish Governor must reside in some other Place.

To begin with Diarbeck proper, which as we have said, was the ancient Mesopotamia; under which Name and that of Padan-Aram, we find it remarkable in Scripture for the Births of Abraham and Lot, Rebekah, Rachel and Leah, the sojournment of Jacob, and the Thralldom of the Israelites there for eight Years, which was the first Bondage after the Possession of Canaan, and from which they were rescued by Orbniel, Judg. 3. Its Inhabitants wallowing in Sin and Idolatry when Abraham lived, that Holy Family was called thence by God.

Subject alternately to the Affyrian, Babylonian, Median and Persian Monarchs. Conquered by the Romans under Pompey, recovered in process of time by the Persians, Conquered by the Sarazens; and now subject to the Turks.

Christianity was planted here soon after the Ascension by S. Thaddæus, being sent by S. Thomas, pursuant to the invitation of Agherus King of Edeffa, who as Eusebius reports it from the Archives of the City, wrote a Letter to Our Saviour, desiring his Presence to heal him of a Sickness. A Story which passed uncontradicted for many Ages, but in our more illuminated times, has been opposed and even condemned. However, 'tis most certain our Holy Religion, was planted and flourished well in this Country, but its Purity was defiled in the beginning of the Sixth Century, by one Jacobus (called Syrius, because a Syrian by Birth) who revived an ancient Heresie that had been first broach'd by Eutyches, consisting of some Heterodox Opinions, among which, the denying of the two Natures of Christ, retaining Circumcision, affirming that Angels consist of Fire and Light, that the Souls of the deceased remain in Earth till Christ's coming; are the chief chief. From him the Sect are called Jacobites, and under that Name are often mentioned in History and Travels; whose Patriarch resides here, and has Jurisdiction over all their Sect in Syria as well as here, and thought to have near 100000 Families under his Obedience.

The Land as we have said, is exceeding Fertile in the Northern Part, but Southward it is Barren and Desert. The chief Cities are,

Edeffa, which is at present called Orfa, Orpha or Ourfa, seated in the 36 Deg. of Lat. about 60 Miles East from the River Euphrates, at the head of the River Suras, in a fruitful, well cultivated and pleasant Champion. A City so considerable as by some to be accounted the chief of the Province. Orpha (says Rauwolf) with its Castle, is situated very pleasantly on a Hill; the Town is pretty large and well provided with Fortifications; the Inhabitants deal in Tapistry of divers sorts, whereof some are made here; there is also a very good Factory of Trade from Aleppo, Damascus and Constantinople, for Carahmet, which is five Days Journey from it, and thence sold into Persia, India, &c. A plentiful Well near the Town is called Abraham's, and shewn to Strangers, as that to which Rebeckah came to Water her Flocks (Gen. 24.) and upon that belief, 'tis held in great Honour. Ourfa is the Capital of Mesopotamia, surrounded with Walls of Free-stone, provided with Battlements and Towers, seated in a good Soil, producing Wine and affords pleasant Gardens, which are watered by Channels brought by Art: The Houses in the Town are small ill built and so ruinous, that in some Places it looks more like a Desert than a Metropolis; the City is governed by a Basha, who has under him 150 Janizaries and 600 Spahis. Here is dressed great quantity of yellow Turkey-Leather, the Water of this Place giving it a particular Beauty. (Tavernier) Edeffa, was so ancient a Place, that in Isidor's time Nimrod was named as its Founder. Under the Romans 'twas the Capital of the Ostrobene, which was the Northern part of Mesopotamia. Subject to its own Prince in our Saviour's time, to whom as we have said he wrote a Letter declaring a Faith in him, and desiring his presence to cure him of a Disease he was afflicted with. The See of an Archbishop in Christianity, and in the Holy-War it was subject to the Christians, together with the Country round about it, which was erected into a County, and made one of their four Governments in the East, which was Conquered by the Turks, Anno 1142. By the Greeks this City was named Callirhoe, from the fair Fountains; by the Latines it was sometime called Justinopolis, from the Emperor Justin who re-edified it; by the Arabians 'tis called Rhoa and Orrabai. It is supposed by Dr. Heylin, to be the Charan or Haran whither Abraham with his Father and Family removed when they departed from Ur: But according to Goliut, Niger, and others, Charan which was the same called Charrha by the Romans, and notable for the Defeat and Death of Crassus by the Parthians, stood more to the North 40 Miles distant from hence. Edeffa is remembered in the Roman History, for the Death of the Emperor Caracalla by the hand of Macerinus. The first taking it by the Sarazens was in Anno 637. Prince Balawin Brother to Godfrey of Buloin got possession of it in 1097. and the Turks retook it as we have said in 1142.

Rauwolf mentions a town named Zibin, which he represents as a fine Place, but not very big, lying on an Ascent surrounded with good Walls and Ditches, and well supplied with fresh Springs and Fountains; this Town by his account must stand in the Mid-way between Orpha and Mausul; but is not seen in the Maps.

Bir or Elbir, called Berygeon by the Inhabitants, is seated on the Euphrates in the 37 Deg. of Lat. upon the side of a Hill, defended by one Castle on the Banks of the River, and another on the Land side, in which a Sangiack with 200 Janizaries, and 400 Spahis reside. It is neither big nor strong (says Rauwolf, who travelled thro' it) but pretty well defended by the Castle that stands upon a high Rock above the River. Bir (says Tavernier) is a large City built like an Amphitheatre, upon the brow of a very craggy Mountain, and has two Castles, one by the River under the Hill, and another in the highest part of the Town where the Governor resides. There is a pleasant and very fruitful Country round about it, which is well Till'd and Sow'd with Corn: More towards the East the Country is Hilly, and very Rough and Barren at top. The Euphrates at this Town is about a Mile broad, but its Current is not very swift, and therefore ordinarily failed over, which makes this Place a kind of Ferry from Syria. The River is continually muddy, wherefore the People of this and other Places who drink its Water, are forced to keep it in earthen Pots till it subsides (Rauwolf) This Town is judg'd by Dr. Heylin to be the Virta or Birtba of Ptolemy, which Alexander the great fortified and render'd so strong, that Sapores the Warlike Persian, who took the Emperor Valerian Prisoner, was obliged to quit its Siege without taking it.

Rika, Racka or Rix, the Capital of the Beglerbegate to which it gives Name, is seated on the Euphrates in the Latitude of 36. that is, about 60 Miles below Bir, between two Ascents, so as not to be seen till you are just upon it. The Town is pitifully built with sorry Walls, and a Castle old but pretty strong, wherein a Garrison of 1200 Spahis reside with the Beglerbeg; the present Town may be called the New, for upon the higher Ground, are seen the Ruins of an Old Town, which was Magnificent: A large and strong but ruinous Building whereof is still standing; which, says my Author (Rauwolf) seems to have been the Palace of a Prince. The Desolation he attributes to the Tartars who under their King Haalon took this City Anno. 1260.

Diarbekir as some Maps write it, but in the vulgar Language of the Place, 'tis nam'd Carahmet or Kar-Enit. By its Situation it should be the same which Sanfon calls Ascanusuf, standing on the Western Bank of the River Tigris, in the 38 Degr. of Latit. six Days Journey from Orpha; a famous City for Trade says Rauwolf. It is a large and populous City Fortified with a double Wall and 62 Towers, and is the Seat of a Beglerbeg who is a Vizier Bassa, and has great Power as well as large Dominion, being able to bring 20000 Men into the Field. So Populous, that of Christians only there 20000 Inhabitants, says Tavernier. This City has three Gates, two or three fair Piazza's and a magnificent Mosque. The dressing and tanning of the red Goat Skins, which we call Turkey-Leather, is the chief Trade of the Place. The Country about it is fruitful and pleasant, and abounds in Corn, Wine, and Cattel. Its ancient Name was Amida, called also for a short time Constantia, by Constantinus the Son of Constantine, who Repaired Repaired and much Beautified it. The Jacobite Patriarch resides here. Of Alancruis, Sanfon gives this Character, viz. 'tis the Metropolis of Diarbeck, a large City with several Suburbs and contains a vast number of Inhabitants.

I must not omit, that in some Maps, the Name Diarbekir is given to a Town situate in the Midland, about 50 Miles from Euphrates to the East, and North-East from Bis.

Nisibis now Nisbin, a Midland Town 35 Miles from the Tigris towards Cenbe, was heretofore a very considerable City called Antonia Mygdonia, from the River Mygdanius which runs thro' it; under the Romans, it was the Capital of Mesopotamia propria, well defended by its Bishop in Constantine time against the Persians, but taken by them afterwards in the Reign of Jermin. In its present State, 'tis the Seat of a Turkish Sangiack, stands on two small Hills, and makes a handsome view at a distance, but tho' a pretty large Town, has but sorry appearance when you come into it, being pitifully built. The Land about it is very fruitful and well cultivated, the Business of the Place being altogether Agriculture, which their good Soil renders very profitable to them, their Orchards and Corn-Fields, especially the former affording great Profit from the Pomegranates, Figs, Cubebs, &c. which they send to Foreign Parts: And so numerous are their Fruit-Trees, that you would take them for Woods of wild ones. (Rauwolf.)

On the East of Nisibis between it and Tigris, stood Ur of the Chaldees, where Abraham was born and lived, till by Divine Vocation, he remove to Charran, and thence to Canaan. 'Tis Disputed indeed, and others place it much more Southward in Chaldæa, but the Arguments on the side for this Place, are too forcible to be given up to meer Tradition, its being called of the Chaldees, not being sufficient to confine it uncontrollably to the limits of Chaldæa, as we understand its Bounds; for either that Name might be extended to more Country in those Days than it was afterward, or the Chaldeans may have made Excursions, and taken this and other Places beyond the limits of their own Country. The Place which Tradition named, was Ourta upon the Lakes, made by the Euphrates on its West side, in the Lat. of 32. the similitude of which Name, might perhaps be the reason: But it must be remembered that in Scripture, (Gen. 24.) it is said Terab dwelt on the other side the Flood, i. e. Euphrates; whereas their Ourta was seated on this side of it. And if from thence they had been to have travelled to Canaan, 'tis highly improbable they should have gone Northward so high as Charran, when the direct way and not far neither, lay cross Arabia. Besides 'tis observed by Criticks, that all his Ancestors from Phaleg downward, dwelt in the Northern Parts of Mesopotamia, and therefore there is little reason to believe that Terab should have separated himself so far from his Brethren.

Mouful, the Capital of a Beglerbegat, stands on the West Bank of the River Tigris, in the Lat. 36. d. It is a large City surrounded with Stone Walls, and has many fair Streets, but withal a great many lying waste. Tavernier speaks of it as a very ruin'd Place, that there are only two blind Markets and a sorry Castle, and yet he says it is much frequented by Merchants, and that its Bassa commands 3000 Men. Here is a Bridge of Boats over the Tigris, and the City is a thoroughfare from Persia to Syria, which makes it a Place of Trade, which is the more augmented by a constant Traffick from this Place to Bazdet. The Country on this side the River is Sandy and Barren, but overagainst it is exceeding Fruitful, and yields them very good Crops of Corn, and divers Fruits. This Town altho' subject to the Turks, and the Seat of a Bassa, is mostly inhabited by Nestorian Christians; a People (says Rauwolf) who tho' pretend to be Christians, are worse than Turks, for they practice many Villanies, and ordinarily Rob on the High-way. This is commonly called the Successor of Ninveh; it may indeed have been built out of its Ruines, but the Situation is different, for that City stood on the other side of the River in Assyria, of which we shall speak by and by.

Gezir or Gezira, stands in an Island of the River Tigris, 70 Miles above Mouful, in Lat. 37. 30. It is a small City, but rich by the Trade of Galls and Tobacco, which the Plains upon Mount Taurus plentifully produce, and by these People is gathered and brought hither. The City is subject to its own Prince, and here is a Bridge of Boats over the Tigris.

Merdin, seated within Land 60 Miles West from Girzir, is a little City well Walled, and has a Castle seated on the North side of the City on a rising Ground, whence flows an excellent fresh Spring, wherein (a Batha or rather) a Sangiack resides with a Garrison of 200 Spahi's and 400 Janisaries, says Tavernier. I am inclined to believe, this is the same Place that Rauwolf calls Zibin already mentioned, for it agrees in all its Characters: Whereas 'tis not likely so considerable a Place as he makes Zibin, should be wholly omitted in the Maps.

CHALDÆA or TERACK, lies on the South of Mesopotamia, between and on both sides the two Rivers Tigris and Euphrates, as we have already said. We are told by St. Jerom, that the Chaldei derived their Name from Chesed, the fourth Son of Nachor, the Brother of Abraham: But it seems by Scripture, to have been a Name of more Antiquity.

The Soil was anciently so Fertile, that according to Herodotus, it yielded 200 or 300 Fold; and it might still be so if regularly Mannured. The Pastures yield numerous Herds of Cattel, and thence great plenty of Milk and Butter.

This was the Part of the World which was Honoured with the first Presence of Man, the Paradise wherein God placed Adam, being as we said judged by the Learned of this Age, to have been seated here.

The Language of this Country was different from the Hebrew, which was the Language of Mesopotamia, but by the long continuance of the Jews among them, the Purity of both Languages was broken, and the Syrian which is still used here, produced.

The People were very early Proficients in the Knowledge of the Stars, whence judicial Astrology, and thence all sorts of Divinations and Southsaying became Rife among them. They have also the Reputation of being the first Idolaters in the World. And 'twas here that the Ambition of Man, so far exerted it self as to pretend to Vie with the Power of Heaven, in that bold Structure of the Tower of Babel.

Christianity 'tis supposed was first Preached here by St. Peter, who seems to Date his first Epistle from Babylon; but in regard that no mention is made elsewhere of his travelling so far, many are of Opinion that is not to be understood in a literal Sense, but interpreted interpreted Rome rather. But whoever Planted, the Holy Ghost propagated it; and so early as the Nice Council, we find the Bishop of Seleucia in great Honour; and in all future Assemblies, he had Place next the Patriarch of Jerusalem. The Christians are still numerous here, but not truly Orthodox; the two Heresies of Jacobus and Nestorius, together with several Heterodox Opinions and Customs prevailing among them. Of the Jacobites we have spoken already in Mesopotamia; and since the Nestorians are also much spoken of in Books of Travels in these Parts of the World, altho' it be a little Foreign to our purpose, we will give our Reader a general Idea of that Heresie.

Nestorius a Monk at Antioch in Syria, by his Piety and Preaching obtained such Reputation, that upon the Death of Sisinnius Archbishop of Constantinople, Anno 427. the Emperor caused him to be chosen to succeed him. But as he appeared exceeding Zealous against Heresie, 'tis no wonder that any new Opinion from him should cause indignation; it happened that a Priest named Anastatius whom he favoured, had expressed in his Sermon, That the Virgin Mary ought not to be called the Mother of God, for she was a Woman, and God could not be Born of a Woman. Which Proposition the Bishop defending, raised up so many Enemies against him, that he was soon expelled and died in Exile. This was the Origine of that Sect; which by opposition seems to have increased, for it spread it self very far, and its Proselytes became so numerous, that at this Day and for many Ages past, the greatest Part of the Christians of the Eastern Parts are of it; and so formidable are they, as to have a Patriarch of their own, who resides at Mousul, and has Jurisdiction over all their Bishops in Syria, Chaldæa, India, &c. Their Opinions which have been Condemned are, That there were two Persons as well as two Natures in our Saviour, but confess him to be both God and Man; and that Mary ought not to be called the Mother of God, altho' she may be called the Mother of the Son of God. In other Dogmes they differ only from the Church of Rome, as communicating in both kinds, allowing Marriage to Priests, denying auricular Confession, not praying to Crucifix's and Images, &c. And upon the whole, if the vain Fopperies used by them in Religion were retrenched, and their Morals reformed: they would not appear so odious as the Roman Church, who envies the Power of this Patriarch, represents them.

Before we enter upon an Account of the present Towns, 'tis necessary to speak of the Ancient Babylon and Seleucia, and the other Places most remarkable in Antiquity.

BABYLON, whence the whole Province and even Empire was sometime named, stood on both sides the River Euphrates, first built by Nimrod near the Tower of Babel, and made the Seat of his Empire. A City in its most flourishing State of that Extent and Magnificence, that as it was then reckoned among the Wonders of the World, so it still deserves some remembrance, we shall therefore from Diod. Siculus, give the Reader a short Account of it. Semiramis the Widow and Successor of Ninus, the third Monarch of this Empire, resolving to out-do her Husband, who had built Nineveh, Founded or at least Re-edified the City of Babylon; wherein says my Author. Two Millions of Men were employed, who in a Years time built the Walls which were as many Furlongs round as the Year had Days, (which makes near 46 Miles) the height 50 Ogys's or Fathom; that is 100 Yards, the breadth so large as to admit six Chariots on a breast. Or according to others, only 50 Cubits high and broad enough for two Chariots. The Wall was adorned and guarded by 250 large Turrets, and the Land round the City lay low, and in some part of it deep Morasses; all which must needs render the Place extream strong. The River ran thro' the middle of the City, and on each side of it stood a magnificent Palace, which were made communicable by a Vault under the River, as well as by a most stately Bridge over it. The Palace on the West side, was much the statelier of the two, the Walls of which were 60 Furlongs, or seven Miles and half round the outer Court, for it was divided into three; the second Court was 40 Furlongs, surrounded by a Wall of incredible thickness, namely 300 Bricks, and in height 100 Yards, upon which many Towers were erected much higher, whence the whole City might be surveyed; The third Court was thirty Furlongs in circuit, surrounded also with a Wall of still greater height. This was the Royal Apartment, and was adorn'd with Basso, Relievo's, Gildings, Paintings, and other Decorations suitable to a Structure of such Magnificence. She also built a Temple to Jupiter or Belus of mighty height, as may be judg'd by the Magnitude of the Statues set at top, which weighed 1000 Talents each, and were 40 foot high. Nbuchadnezzar did also in his time beautifie and improve this City so much, that in his Pride we find him vaunting, Dan. 4. Is not this the great Babylon which I have built? Lastly, To the Beauty of Babylon, the Horri Pensiles or hanging Gardens as they were called, added much, and are mostly talked of in Antiquity; these were Gardens raised by Arches above one another to an incredible height, wherein trees of vast Bulk and fruit of the most exquisite kinds, were cultivated and grew in the greatest Perfection. So Great was this City, that Aristotle says, it ought rather to be called a Country, and that when the Town was taken, it was three Days before the furthest Part of it had notice of it. Notwithstanding its Strength this City was taken by Cyrus and by Alexander, the former by Stratagem thus, he cut divers Trenches, by which he drew off the Water of the Euphrates, and so entred thro' the dry Channel. The latter having defeated the Persian Forces at Abela, was received with open Gates. As for the taking it by Darius Hystaspes, that does not deserve the name of a Conquest, for it was but a recovery from Rebellion, and that too obtained by a Treachery that will hardly ever be imitated, Zopyrus mangled and deformed himself for his Master's Service, but with that Loyalty he acted Treachery; which notwithstanding all counter Merit, must and always will be odious to a Man of true Virtue.

After Alexander's Death, which happen'd here, the Glories of this City daily declined; so that Diod. Siculus who lived in the time of Julius Cesar speaks of it as a decayed Place, Q. Curtius, in Vespasian's time, says, 'twas lessen'd to a fourth Part, in Pliny's time reduced to Desolation: And in St. Jerome's Days turned into a Park for the Kings of Persia to Hunt in it. Its present condition is thus represented by Rauwolf, the Village Elugo stands where formerly old Babylon stood, whereof at present there remains nothing but Foundations of great Buildings, to testifie this to be the very Place, together with some Pieces of the Arches of that so famous Bridge, which Arches are built of Brick, and wonderfully Strong: The River here is half a League broad, which renders the Structure of this Bridge the more admirable. Upon a Hill near the Village are seen the Ruins of the Castle, where some Vestigia of its Magnificence still appear. And at no great distance may be seen the Foundations of the Tower of Babel, which is half a League in Diameter; 'tis perfect Ruins and low almost to the Ground, and so filled with Vermin and Serpents, who have made themselves Dens in it, that 'tis unsafe approaching too near it; he tells us also that the Country hereabout is so dry and barren, that it cannot be tilled. A wonderful Change! The most Magnificent City that ever was reduced to so perfect Delolation, that not a Roof of any sort is left standing, and even the Land about it too, from a fertile Soil changed to a most sterile Desert.

The Tower of Babel as Scripture informs us, was began to be built soon after the Flood, with intention to carry it so high, that its top should be out of the reach of all future Inundations: But it pleased God to break their Design by confounding their Language. By ancient Tradition we have this Account of it, namely, that it was built of round form, the Ascent winding about the out-side in a large Road, fit for Carts, Horses, and other Cattle, with Lodgings and Convenience for both Man and Beast, which was already raised 5146 Paces from the Ground, before the confusion of Tongues. But this is only Tradition, and I must question the Truth of this last particular, at least if it be meant in perpendicular height; for 5146 Geometrical Paces, is above four Miles and three quarters, or if by Paces be meant Yards only, it will still be found vastly to exceed any Structure, nay even any Mountain or other Eminence on the whole Earth. 'Tis true if the Mensuration be reckoned spirally of the Journey up, it may come near a probable truth. But to proceed, Hackluit tells us, the Ruins of this Tower stand on the West side of Tigris, about eight Miles above Bagdat, and makes a kind of Mountain, that the Bricks whereof it was built, are half Yard thick and three quarters long, between every Course lies a Mat of Canes as sound as if newly laid. But this Situation not agreeing with that of Babylon, which was 60 Miles distant from the present Bagdat, 'twill be wiser to believe this the Ruins of Seleucia. The whole Plain between the two Rivers, is filled with the Ruins of great Buildings, among which that called Daniel's-Tower is the most perfect, and affords a Prospect from its top of the extent of this once Famous City.

Seleucia the Successor of Babylon, and by ancient Authors supposed to be the same Place; thus Stephanus speaking of Babylon, says it was also called Seleucia. But that he was mistaken, and even the modern Commentator upon him too, (Hollstenius) who makes Bagdat to have risen out of the Ruins of both, is apparent, from the Situation of the two Places; for Rauwolf cannot have been mistaken in the Ruins of Babylon, the Bridge over the Euphrates, whereof there is none other quite from Bir downwards, for so far he sail'd upon the River, being such a Characteristick as puts it out of doubt. And Bagdat which indeed arose from Seleucia, stands upon the Tigris at 60 or 70 Miles distance from that Bridge. Now that Bagdat rose out of the Ruins of Seleucia, is not disputed, or if it were, the mighty Ruins near it, mentioned by Hackluit as we have said above, is a Testimony that cannot easily be refuted: But this mistake of Authors, is a powerful evidence of the Grandeur of Seleucia, since a little City could never been called Babylon; as in effect it was in its time a large and populous Place, 500000 Inhabitants we are told, were brought from Babylon to it by Antiochus the Son of Seleucus Nicanor, who built or rather re-edified it; for according to Strabo, it was a very ancient City, named first Cocbe, and afterward Alexandria, and at last by Antiochus called Seleucia in Honour of his Father. In the Primitive Ages of Christianity, it was the See of an Archbishop. To proceed to the present State:

Bagdat, the Metropolis of this Country, is seated on the River Tigris in the 34 Deg. of Lat. It was built out of the Ruins of Seleucia by Mahomet II. Surnamed Bugiafar, Caliph of the Sarazens, who reigned in the middle of the eighth Century, and by him made the Seat of the Sarazen Empire. Its Name is derived from Gardens, wherewith it abounded, or from one Garden belonging to Dad a Wealthy Persian. The first Structure was on the Western Bank of the River, but in 1095. Caliph Mustahar built a new City on the other side, and united both by a Bridge of Boats. It grew up with great speed into a Wealthy and Populous City, and continued the Seat of the Sarazen Empire, till the middle of the thirteenth Century, when Haaton the Tartar put an end to it, by the Death of the Caliph and all his Family, and the Capture of the City, which he destroyed: But it recovered and is at this Day a large, rich and populous Place. Its Buildings however far short of what those old Accounts render them; which may be reasonably expected, from the many Revolutions of it, the Turk and the Persian having alternately possessed it divers times, till in 1638. the Turks finally recovered and have ever since possessed it. The present State of it is thus represented by Travellers; it consists of two Towns, that on the West side of the River open or unwall'd, that on the East side well Fortified with Walls and Ditches; between the two Towns is a Bridge of Boats chained together over the River, which is rapid and about as broad as the Rhine; the Streets are narrow, and the common Buildings mean; the Publick Buildings, namely the Bashaw's Pallace, the Bezisteen or Exchange, the Bazars and the Publick Baths are well built; it is a Place of great Trade for all the Commodities of Natolia, Syria, Constantinople, Damascus, Aleppo, Armenia, Persia and India, Goods being brought by Barges up the River from Balsora, as well as by Land in Caravans, and it is the Seat of a Bashaw or Beglerbeg, whose Authority is great. The Arabians call it Dar-Affulam, the City of Peace. By Hackluit we are told, 'twas about two Miles round in 1563. but very Populous, and of great Trade, being the Thoroughfare between Persia, Arabia and Syria. It is three Miles round says Tavernier, and of great Trade, but not so Wealthy since the Turks have possessed it, as when the Persians had it, however all Travellers represent it as a large and rich Place. The Garrison consists of 300 Janizaries commanded by an Aga, and the City is governed by a Bashaw, who is generally a Vizir, and has 600 or 700 Horse in Service; here is also an Aga commanding 3 or 400 Spahi's, besides all which, there is a Body of Horse called Giroguleler of 3000 in the City and neighbouring Towns under the Command of two Agas. (Tavernier.) Rauwolf supposes one Town to be the ancient Seleucia, and the other Ctesiphon, but his his Opinion is hardly allowable, because Ctesiphon according to the ancient Accounts of it, stood much farther from the River.

Ctesiphon, a large Town built by the Parthians, over against Seleucia, at some distance on the East side of the Tigris, adorned and fortified by Pacorus a Parthian King, who made it his Regal Seat, and rendered it a flourishing Place. The Romans often attacked it, and 'twas there that Julian the Apostate was slain and uttered that remarkable Blasphemy, Viciſſi tandem Galilee. But this City stood in the limits of Proper Assyria, and so should have been referred thither, if the Conjecture abovementioned had not led us to speak of it here. It is passed away, and at present is not remarked by Travellers.

Tract, seated between the two Rivers two Leagues from the Ruins of Babylon, in the Road to the City Bagdat, supposed by Rauwolf to be the ancient Apamia founded by Seneucus, is a very strong fortified Town, having a Wall and Ditch, and two Castles for its Defence, and reckoned the Key of Persia.

Gerno or Qorna, a considerable Fortrefs seated at the Confluence of the two Rivers Tigris and Euphrates, in the Lat. 31. where an Account is taken of Merchants Goods passing up the River.

Kufa, seated on the West side of the Euphrates, in the 32 Deg. Latit. below the Paludes Euphratis, and on the Frontiers of Arabia, was anciently a great and populous City, being the Residence of the Caliph for some time after the removal of the Regal-Seat from Damascus, and before the building of Bagdat. Hali the Persian Prophet was buried here, and therefore it used to be much resorted to by Pilgrims, but the Kings of Persia have hindred it, since the Turk has possessed this Country, because that Pilgrimage added much to the Wealth of the Town, and the Place is now become small and poor and almost desolate: says Tavernier.

Ourt or Ourché, which some suppose to be the Ur of Chaldaea, the Birth-place of Abraham, of which we have already spoken, stood hereabouts.

Bassora or Balsora, seated on the Western Bank of Pasitygris, or the united Stream of both Rivers Euphrates and Tygris, in the Lat. 30. D. 30 M. not many Leagues above its mouth into the Persian Gulph, whose Tide rises up hither and above it, as far as Gorno; is a rich and populous City, being a celebrated Mart, to which European as well as Indian and Persian Ships resort, and vend the Commodities of the respective Countries; 'tis reckoned the Port to Bagdat. for 'tis thither the Goods imported here are mostly sent. The Emir or Prince of Balsora, who is a Feudatory to the Grand-Seignior, made it a free Port, with a small Custom of four per Cent. in the Year 1652. which has raised its Trade to the degree it is now seen in, and very much enriched the Prince. The City is about a half League distant from the River, it is very large and populous, and is surrounded with a Brick Wall, and stands on the Frontiers of Arabia, to which it is by some Geographers referred. The Christians are numerous here, especially of the Sect called Sabaens, of whom Tavernier computes there were 25000 Families in his time, in the City and Villages near it.

ASSYRIA propria, or that Part of DIARBECK now called Curdistan, as Tavernier testifies, by others Arzerum, lies on the East side of the River Tigris towards Persia, 100 Miles broad in the middle Part, but not half that breadth in the South, extending in length from the 33. to the 40. Degree of Latitude; that is, from the Lake Wan on the Frontiers of Turcomania in the North, to the Frontiers of Chusistan a Province of Persia in the South, the Mountain Contras being its Eastern Boundary from Persia, and the River Tigris, the Western from Mesopotamia and Chaldaea.

It was called Assyria from Assur the Son of Shem, who first planted this Country. Curdistan from the Curteis, as Travellers vulgarly call them, or as anciently they were named Curduchi and Curdueni (according to Xenophon) the People that inhabit it. Arzerum, perhaps corruptly from Assyria, or else from the City Erzerum, but this very improbably for that City lies too far out of the limits of this Country to give Name to it. Dr. Heylin indeed names a City Arzeri of great strength and repute, seated within this Province, but where, he says not, nor do I find it in other Authors.

The Soil was represented in ancient Accounts as very fruitful, but it does not now deserve that Character, for Travellers find it quite otherwise. Dr. Rauwolf so often mentioned, travelled thro' it from Bagdat to the confines of Persia, and back to Mosul, and may therefore be allowed to have knowledge of it, and he talks of nothing but vast Deserts and barren Plains, except here and there near a Town, a little cultivated Land may appear. It must indeed be remembred, it was for several Ages a Field of Battle between the Romans and Parthians first, and the Turks and Persians since, which must have depopulated it, and where Hands and Industry are wanting, the best Soils are barren.

As to the People, they are mostly Nestorian Christians, except the Government, which is Turkish: But rude and ignorant Christians God knows, practising little what that Holy Profession enjoins. There are a Race of Curteis that infest the Roads in Mesopotamia in great Troops, and rob the Caravans as the wild Arabians do. The Cities or Towns of chief note here are.

Chirazoul or Schebreful, seated on the River Caprus, which falls into the Tigris, 60 Miles West from Mosul, and in the 36 Deg. of Latitude; 'tis but a small City and of ordinary Structure, and remarkable only by being the Seat of a Beglerbeg, who has 20 Sangiacks under his Jurisdiction. The City is cut out of a steep Rock (says Tavernier) for a quarter of a League, so that you must go up 10 or 15 Steps to every House; this is supposed to have risen out of the Ruins of the ancient Arbela, so famous in History for the Battle at Gangamela near it, which being but a small Village, this City was chosen by Historians to give name to the Battle between Alexander and Darius, which was the decisive Stroke for the Persian Empire; wherein with the loss of but 300 on his side, Alexander defeated Darius and an Army of 200000 Foot and 50000 Horse, killing 90000 on the Spot. The pleasant Plains of Arbela lie just beyond this Town and as described by Tavernier, are 15 Leagues in extent, watered with several Rivulets and full of Fruit-trees. On a Hill near it which is covered with the fairest Oaks, remain the Ruins of a Castle where they say Darius staid while the Battle was fought.

Harpel, seated more to the South upon that River named Gorgus by Ptolemy, is a pretty large Town and the Seat of a Sangiack, but of sorry Structure and surrounded with Mud-Walls. This is the account Rauwolf who passed thro' it gives us, and from this a Conjecture may be made, of the State of the rest of those Towns wherein Sangiacks reside, most of which are but sorry Villages, and many but small Castles only; and therefore if we mention no more of them, I suppose the Reader will not be displeased: But several ancient Towns seated in this Province will deserve notice, as

NINIVEH, built by Ninus or by Nimrod, and named in honour of Ninus his Son or Nephew, stood on the East Bank of the Tigris, overagainst where Meassul now stands. So enlarged by its Kings that it became bigger than Babylon, namely 480 Furlongs or 60 Miles in compals; the Wall 100 Foot high, and so thick as to admit three Chariots to go on it a breast, and adorned with 1150 Towers of 200 Foot high, which were so strong as to be thought impregnable; neither had Arbaces after his three Years Siege taken it, if the River by overflowing had not become its Enemy, and broke down 20 Furlongs of the Wall, thereby fulfilling an old Prophecy; and giving the Victor entrance. The effeminate Sardanapalus in the mean time retired into the Palace, and collecting all his Wealth, which Tradition tells us amounted to 20500 Millions of Pounds Sterling, set Fire to the Pile and threw himself into it; an act of Bravery at last, which ought to efface his former Character of Cowardice. To this City the Prophet Jonah was sent to denounce God's Judgment, but upon Repentance it was spared. Destroyed afterwards by Astyages, the eighth Median King from Arbaces, because of its frequent Rebellion: And laid so low in time, that St. Cyril of Alexandria, in the middle of the fifth Century, in his Comment upon the Prophets, says the Place where it stood was hardly to be discerned. And at this time nothing of it appears, except a heap of Rubbish a League in length. On a Hill not far from Meassul, the People shew the Monument of Jonah, which is in great Veneration, and has a Mosque built over it.

Sittace, a flourishing City in ancient times, which gave Name to the neighbouring Country, stood upon the Tigris. Calach, in the same District, one of the Cities built by Nimrod; and by Bochart, alledged to be the Halab, whither the Israelites were carried in their Captivity, 2 King. 17. 6. Rehoboth and Rhesen, two Cities built by Nimrod, the latter supposed to be the Larissa, commended by Xenophon as a City of great Strength and Extent, the Walls whereof were 100 Foot in height, and 25 in breadth; and so Strong that Cyrus was unable to take the Place, till an Eclipse of the Sun frightened the Defendants. Lastly,

Bertis seated in the North limits of this Province, near the South Shoar of the Lake Van, between two Mountains; is a strong Place subject to its own Prince, who it seems by the advantage of its Castle seated on a very steep Rock, is able to defend himself, and refuse Subjection to either Turk or Persian. (Tavernier.)

CHAP. VII.

TURCOMANIA.

Or the Ancient ARMENIA-MAJOR.

TURCOMANIA has for its Boundaries on the South Mesopotamia or Diarbeck proper; on the North Georgia; on the East Persia, and on the West that part of Natalia, which was the ancient Cappadocia, from which it is parted by the River Euphrates. Its extent is about 200 Miles; in Latitude from the 39th. to the 43d. Degree; the Climate Temperate; the Soil much taken up in Mountains, especially on the Frontiers, but in the Mid-land Valleys, Fertile and delightful, producing Fruits, Wine, Corn and Pasture liberally. The People are of strong Bodies and robust Natures, reasonably Industrious in Mechanick Arts as well as Agriculture, making Tapestries and some other Stuffs which they vend abroad, but they lie too much out of the way to have much Traffick at home. Their Language is peculiar to themselves, and spoken only here, and in the lesser Armenia or Cappadocia. The present Inhabitants are generally Christians; but the Government Turkish, under the Dominion of the two Beglerbegs of Erzerum and Van, the former whereof has under his Jurisdiction eleven Sangiacks, and the latter fourteen Sangiacks.

The Christianity of this Country is a particular Sect, holding no Communion with either Greek or Roman Churches. They deny Purgatory, Transubstantiation, Prayers for the Dead, and Celibacy of Priests. They allow but one Nature in Jesus Christ; abstain from unclean Beasts; Baptize with Fire, that is, hold the Infant over the Fire, to comply literally with the Expression of St. John Baptist; admit Infants to Communion; Fast on Christmas-day, &c. They have two Patriarchs of their own, one in Turcomania, and the other in Cilicia, and under them 30 Bishops, and at least 150000 Families.

Its Name Armenia is supposed to be derived from the Hebrew Word Aram, which was a Name they extended all over these Countries and Syria. Turcomania, is apparently from the Turks.

Besides the Rivers Euphrates and Tygris, which we have already told you have their Rise in this Country; the River Araxes, now called Arasse, has its Fountain here also, in the Mount Abos, it runs Eastward in a Serpentine Course, and falls into the Caspian-Sea, in the 41 Deg. Lat. after a Course of above 500 Miles, in which it is increased by divers smaller Rivers, and receives into it the large River Kur, which rises in Georgia.

Mountains,

Mountains, here are many, the most considerable are the Maschici, in the Northern limits bending Westward towards Cappadocia. Niphates out of which the Euphrates flows. The Montes Gordiani supposed by some to be the Mount Ararat where Noah's Ark rested.

The Mountain which the Armenians alledged to be Mount Ararat, Mr. Tavernier tells us begins about 3 Miles from Nackisvan, a Town in the East Borders of Armenia, and rises to a much greater height than the other Mountains, so as to be seen at five days Journey distance, called by the Inhabitants Messousal, i. e. The Mountain of the Ark, to which they pay a profound Veneration, and pretend to shew some part of the Ark still remaining.

Pariedrus now Chielder, a Mountain towards the Frontiers of Georgia, a part of which bears the name of Abos, whence flows the Araxes as already said. And finally in the south limits some Branches of Mount Taurus, divide Armenia from Mesopotamia.

The History of this Country in short seems to be thus, Hul or Chul the Son of Aram, and Mesech the Son of Japhet, were the first Planters; grown populous, it soon became a Kingdom, and continued for many Ages. In History we find that Tigranes their King, extended his Dominions on every side, Media, Syria, and Phœnicia being subjected to him, but with the Defeat of Tigranes by Lucullus in the Mithridatic War, the Armenians were again driven home, and Tigranes's Kingdom restrained to Armenia-major. Marc-Antony took Artavasdes King of Armenia Prisoner, and sent him in Golden Fetters to Rome. Trajan reduced Armenia into a Province: But it recovered its Liberty, and was governed by its own Kings in Constantine's time and afterwards, but Feudatories to the Emperors till A. D. 687. that the Sarazens invaded and subdued it. Those held it till the Irruption of the Turks out of Scythia, who possessed themselves of this Province, and gave it the Name of Turcoman, which happened as some say A. D. 755. or as others A. 844. The Turks employing themselves in other Conquests, gave the Armenians opportunity of setting up Kings of their own, who were again subdued by the Tartars, but not extirpated, there still remaining Armenian Kings, one of whom succeeded in the Throne of Persia, and made Armenia a Province of that Empire, A. D. 1472. But it was Conquer'd at last by the Sultan Selimus I. Anno 1515. and ever since subject to the Turks, except the Eastern Part, which the Persian still holds.

Having spoken of the Rise of the Sarazin Empire in Arabia, we will here give the Reader the same short view of the Rise of the Turkish Power.

To omit the many fabulous Stories about the origin of the TURKISH Nation, 'tis sufficient to say that the best conjecture is, that they were of Scythian extraction; and the Inhabitants of the Country lying between Mount Caucasus and the Palus Mæotis, along the Banks of the River Don or Tanais, spreading in the Sarmatia-Asiatica, to the Banks of the Caspian-Sea. Which Account agrees with Pliny and Pomp. Mela, who both mention a Nation in these Parts called Turæ; they were in nature like the Scythian Nomades, a roving Generation that lived in Tents upon Hunting, and changed their Quarters as their inclinations led them. Why they came more Southward is unknown, but 'tis related by Authors, that about the middle of the eighth Century, they made an inroad into Georgia, where they committed Plunder and Ravage and retired. About Ann. Dom. 844 (as all Authors agree) they brake in again and penetrated as far as Armenia-major, where they fixed and lived in their old poor manner, an obscure Nation, till a little after the Year 1000. when the Persian Sultan being pressed in his Wars against the Indians on one side, and the Caliph of Babylon on the other, invited the Turks into his Service. Three Thousand of them under the Command of Tangrolipix accordingly marched to his assistance, and overcame his Enemy: but the Sultan ungratefully refused to pay and dismiss them, with which disgusted they retired into a Wilderness, their passage Home being shut up by the Persians. From that Fastness, they made Excursions and pillaged the neighbouring Country; wherefore the Sultan sent 20000 Men against them, whom by surprize they entirely Defeated, and thereby so encreased their numbers, that soon after they encountered the Sultan himself at the head of his Army near Ispahan, and after a terrible Battle, wherein the Sultan Mahomet himself was killed, they obtained a second Victory. Tangrolipix hereby ascended the Throne of Persia, and turning Mahometan was unanimously accepted their King about A. D. 1030. Thus we see the Turkish Power already raised to a high Degree, but Tangrolipix stopped not here, for he soon made War upon the Caliph of Babylon; slew him and seized his Kingdom. He next attempted the Conquest of Arabia on one side, and Media on the other, but without success; he also invaded the lesser Asia, where by the means of the Dissentions at Constantinople, which left the Provinces neglected, his Son Axan and Nephew Cutlu Mese advanced with great success. The various progress of their Arms, and the several Defeats they suffered in the Holy-War, is too large a subject for us to enter upon here; 'tis sufficient to say that they possessed the Government of Persia till about Anno 1260. when the Tartars under Prince Haalon invaded that Kingdom, and with as hasty success as before the Turks had had, over-ran both Persia, Assyria and Asia-minor, and for that time levelled the Turkish Grandeur. But it pleased the Divine Providence to permit it to rise again; and in Place of a Tangrolipix, to raise up an Ottoman to be a Scourge to the mutinous Christians.

At the same time that Tangrolipix his Posterity were chief Sultans, there was another small Kingdom of Turks in a Part of Persia, under a Prince of another Family; for it seems there were two eminent Families, namely the Selzuccian whence Tangrolipix came, and the Ogyzian whence Ottoman descended. Solyman the Grandfather of Ottoman, Sultan of Machar, for that was his Title, seeing Cursumes (the last of the Selzuccian Family) and his Country become the Victim of the Tartar, had little hopes to escape his fury, by any other means than flight, accordingly he with as many of his Kindred and Friends as would follow him, retreated first towards Armenia, thence into Cappadocia and Syria, and afterwards endeavouring to return Home, had the misfortune to be drowned in the Euphrates. Ertogrul his Son the Father of Ottoman with his Carts and sorry Equipage, begged of his Country-man the Sultan of Iconium, a small tract of Land to reside in; and at the same time gave that Sultan so seasonable an Assistance with his small Army against the Tartar then at War with him, that an entire Victory was obtained, and thereby he effectually obtained his Favour, and had the grant of a piece of Land; where he fed his Flocks, and lived to an old Age, a petty Prince without regard. His Son Ottomari man prov'd a Man of an enterprizing Wife and Courageous Nature, who, from the taking of small Castles in his own Neighbourhood which he began with, proceeded to the attacking of great Cities; and in a little time Nice and Prusa, with a large part of Asia-minor, felt the Power of his Sword, and submitted to his good Fortune. In short Ottomen erected a new Kingdom of the Turks in Asia Minor, which continued to encrease with large Additions, till in the End Constantinople became the Seat of their Empire, as we have elsewhere shewn. This short view is sufficient to give the Reader a general Idea, of this Rise of the great Monarchy, which was all we Promised him, the particulars of every Action being not the purpose of this Work. But to proceed,

Erzerum, seated on the Euphrates near its Spring head, in the North limits towards Georgia, Latit. 41 Deg. a noted Town with a Castle and Suburbs, is the Capital of Turcomania, and the Seat of a Beglerbeg. The Town is not very large, and the Buildings of Timber, but the Castle is built of Stone and very strong. It stands at the end of a spacious Plain, which produces good Wheat and Barley, but no Vines; on the North and East, lie Ridges of Mountains, from whence a bleak Air falling upon the Town, makes it esteem'd a cold Place; it is a thoroughfare for the Eastern Caravans, and a Magazine for the Turkish Wars in Persia. (Sir John Chardin.) The River Euphrates has its Spring in the Mountain Aphet or Mingol, six Hours Journey from Erzerum. (Gemelli.)

Wan or Van, a large Town with a Castle seated on the side of a Lake to which it gives Name, near the Frontiers of Diarbeck, in the 40 Degree of Latitude, the Seat of a Beglerbeg and a populous Place. Tavernier passed thro' it in the Year 1664. and tells us it was a great City, having in it a strong Castle built on a Mountain, which was ineffectually besieged by the Persians in 1636. it is always well Garrisoned, as being an important Frontier.

The Lake of Van is of large extent being reckoned 50 Miles in compass, and is Navigated by small Ships, which makes Tadua a Village, seated on the South side by reason of its Harbour a remarkable Place.

Kars, seated 100 Miles North-East from Erzerum, within the limits of Georgia; but being subject to the Turks, whereas Georgia in general is subject to the Persians, we shall consider it here. It is a large Town and very strongly Fortified, abounding with all Necessaries of Life, yet not very populous, altho' the Grand-Seignior has often endeavoured to draw People to it; 'tis the Seat of a Beglerbeg, who has six Sangiacks under his Jurisdiction. Its two Walls are of Earth with small Towers, two Gates, and as many Bridges on the side of the River and Suburb.

the Fort which stands on a Rock is inaccessible, there is a good Garrison in it, and 40 Horse go out nightly to scour the Country. The Houses by reason of the thinness of Inhabitants, are mean and like Dens of Timber and Earth. (Gemelli.)

Ivan or Eriwan, a large City, but ill built and dirty, furnished with Gardens, which take up the greatest part of the Ground; is seated in a plentiful Champion Country, surrounded by Mountains; on the Eastern Frontiers of Turcomania in 41. D. 15 M. Lat. Two Rivers pass by it, namely the Zengui on the North-west, and the Querboulack on the South-west. The Houses and Walls are of Earth, the Suburbs better inhabited than the City, the Merchants, Artificers, and Armenian Christians living in them. In the City and Suburbs are divers Christian Churches, one whereof is Episcopal or Patriarchal, and the City is a great Market for Silk. On the North side of it at a Miles distance, stands upon the side of a craggy Rock a strong Fortrefs, which is surrounded with three Walls, and esteemed impregnable strong. This Fort is large, being four Miles round, and contains 800 Houses, wherein none but Natural Persians are allowed to inhabit; for this City is subject to the King of Persia. Ivan was often taken and retaken by the Turks and Persians, till finally in the Year 1635. it was united to Persia. (Tavernier and Chardin.)

Near Ivan is a notable Monastery described by Sir John Chardin, called Eci-miazim, built by the Armenian Christians in Memory of the Descent of Christ, who they pretend, came down hither from Heaven, to visit St. Gregory their Patron Saint; this Place is held in great Honour by them, and is a fair Church built over the Place St. Gregory stood when so visited, surrounded with a large Quadrangle, wherein are the Cells of the Monks. The Armenian Patriarch resides at Ivan or sometimes at this Monastery.

Nackisvan, subject also to the Persian, stands 21 Leagues South from Ivan; it is a very large but ruinous City, containing (when Sir John Chardin was there Anno 1672.) 2000 Houses, but daily encreasing, having had as the Persians reported, no less than 40000 Houses in it, together with a large Castle and divers Forts, which at that time were also in Ruins, the City having at several times been miserably harassed by the Turks and Persians. This may be the Naxuana of Ptolemy, or probably the Artaxata, built by the direction of Hanibal by Araxes, one of the Kings of Armenia, and memorable in the Roman History for the Battle between Lucullus and Mitbridates; for Tacitus places that City near the River Araxes, and this stands but 7 Leagues from it, says Sir John Chardin. Nackisvan signifies the Station of a Ship, whence the Armenians say it was built by Noah as soon as he came out of the Ark, and so named in memory of it.

Other Towns here are, but none so considerable as to deserve particular Description; we shall therefore here close our Account of the Turkish Dominions in Asia.

GEORGIA,

MENGRELIA, CIRCASSIA and COMANIA.

HAVING Travelled thro' all the Asiatick Turk.; we shall now before we enter Persia, take a view of the Country lying between the Euxine and the Caspian-Sea. A Land whose natural Fertility would render it happy, if the Industry of the Natives were not wanting: But altho' Christians be professed among them, the Men are of so rude and vicious a Nature, that they neither by Ingenuity and Labour perform any Mechanick Works, nor cultivate the Soil so as to produce any quantities of their Native Commodities, whereby to invite Strangers thither for Trade; nor indeed is it quite safe for a Stranger to Travel among them, which Sir John Chardin's relation of the Perils he underwent, notwithstanding he was protected by the King of Persia's Pass, give us too plain a Proof of.

The Chief Traffick of the Country is in Boys and Girls, a barbarous Trade! yet such an one as is generally practised here, especially in Mengrelia; the Parents sell their Children, the Masters their Servants, the Lords their Tenants, and in short every Man sells every Man they have or can obtain Power over, to the Turks and Persians; who make use of them in their Armies and Scraglio's, as Slaves, Mutes, Eunuchs, Soldiers or Statesmen, as the Capacities of their Persons, or the Favours of their Masters recommend them: But more of this hereafter. By this selling off their People, the Land is thin of Inhabitants, so you are not to expect many or great Cities here; what are spoken of by Travellers, we shall give you an Account of, in passing thro' these Four Countries; which lie thus.

GEORGIA, wherein the two petty Kingdoms of Carduelia and Gaguetia are comprehended, lies on the North of Turcomania; between the Caucasian Mountains on the North, and the Montes Moschisi on the South, Mengrelia on the West, and the Caspian-Sea on the East. The Country is Mountainous and Woody, which has protected it from absolute Conquest. The Soil produces necessaries for Life, and Wine in good plenty. Sir John Chardin speaks thus, Georgia is as fertile a Land as can be seen, the Bread is good as in any Part of the World, the Fruits are excellent and of divers sorts, no Place in Europe yields better Pears and Apples, nor no Place in Asia better Pomgranates; there are also abundance of Cattle, Venison and wild Fowl of all sorts; and the River Kur is well filled with Fish; the Wine is so rich that the King of Persia, has always of it for his own drinking; Silk also is here produced, but not half what Travellers report. The Inhabitants are Robust, Valiant, Merry, great lovers of Wine, and reputed very Trusty and Loyal, of good Natural Parts, but for want of Education very Vicious. The Women are generally very Fair and Comely, and such is their Beauty that it recommends them to the Court of the King of Persia, whose fairest Sultaneesses are Georgian Women. Nature has overspread the Women with Graces, no where else to be seen; 'tis impossible to see them and not love them: they are of full Stature, clean Limbs, small Waistes, Fair and very proportionate. (Chardin) Georgia is governed by its own Princes, subordinate to the King of Persia, and are of the Mahometan Religion, altho' the Subjects are generally Christians of the Greek Church.

The present Georgia, or Gurgien, and Gurgistan, was the ancient Iberia, whose Inhabitants are noted in History for their Valour; so called from the River Iberus, which runs thro' it. The Name Georgia, is supposed to be derived from St. George the Martyr, who is their tutelar Saint. It is divided as we have said, into two small Kingdoms, of Carthuel or Carduelia, the Western Part, whose chief Towns are Tefflis, Gory, Suram; and Caket or Gaguetia, the Eastern part, chief Town Zagan.

Tefflis or Tephlis, called Cala by the Persians, the Capital of all these Countries, lies in the Lat. 44. Long. 66. near the Confluence of the River Iberus, with the Cyrus or Kur, 160 Miles West from the Coasts of the Caspian-Sea, 250 Miles from the Euxine-Sea, and 240 North-east from Erzerum. The Persian Maps says Sir John Chardin, lay it down in Lat. 43. 5. Long. 83. but the Longitude being corrected in our Maps, as we told you at the beginning, we may be allowed to adhere to it, and say Tefflis lies in Long. 66. Sir John Chardin gives us this description of it; This City is one of the finest of Persia, (for he reckons it part of that Empire) altho' it be not very large. It is seated at the bottom of a Mountain, whose Foot on the East side, is washed by the River Kur, which River springs in the Mountains of Georgia, and falls into the Araxus. It is surrounded with good Walls, except on the River side where the Ground is firm Rock; on the South side on the declivity of the Mountain stands a large Castle, wherein natural Persians only are permitted to inhabit, and to such it is an Asylum or Refuge for all Criminals; this Castle lies upon the Road to Persia, and therefore the Prince of Georgia, when he receives Letters or Presents from that King, being obliged to go out of the Town to meet them, passes thro' it, but seldom without Terror, least some private Order be sent to the Governor to seize him. The City is very Populous, a Place of great Trade, and one shall no where see so many Strangers of different Nations; the Court of the Georgian Prince, who is but Vice-roy to the King of Persia, is Numerous and Magnificent, being attended by many Gentlemen of Distinction, he is a Mahometan by Profession, (but a Christian in his Heart) which he must adjure to obtain the Dignity. His Palace is a sumptuous Building, adorned with large State Rooms and fine Gardens, a large Volary with variety of Birds of Strange kinds, and the finest Falconry that can be seen; before the Palace is a large Square, with Strabling for 1000 Horse; and beyond it there is a long Bazar or Exchange with variety of Shops, which opens against the Palace-gate, and affords a very handsome prospect. There are no less than 14 Christian Churches in Tefflis, and not one Mosque, except in the Castle one has been lately built, the Inhabitants having always opposed in Tumults the building any in the City; the Cathedral is large and built of Stone, Ancient but in good Repair; its form is a Cross, with a large Dome in the middle. The Bishop's or Tibetle's (for so he is called) House adjoins to the Church; of the other Churches, Six are held by the Georgians, and the rest by the Armenians; the Roman-Catholic Missionaries have endeavoured to erect a Church here, but have found but little encouragement; the Armenians have also a Bishop here, who resides in a Monastery called Pechavara. The Publick Buildings are fine and built of Stone, as are the Bazars or Markets, and and the Caravansera's or Publick Inns. There are Hot-Baths in the Castle: And roundabout the Town many Houses of Pleasure and Gardens.

Gory, is a small City, situate in a Plain between two Mountains, on the Banks of the River Kur at the foot of an Eminence, upon the top whereof stands a Castle, which is guarded by natural Persians. It was built about 80 Years ago, by Rustan Can General of the Persian Armies, and is Garrison'd with 100 Soldiers. The Town tho' small is inhabited by rich Merchants, and well supplied with all Necessaries for Life.

Sarem, is a Town smaller than Gory, but the Castle which stands near it, is large and well built, and has also 100 Men in Garrison.

Zagzen, the Capital of the Principality of Caket or Geguentie, stands upon the River Kur, about 80 Miles South from Tefflis, a Place which is marked in the Maps, and named by Geographers as a Place of note, and yet I find not any particulars of it in Travellers or Authors. Sir John Chardin mentions a Village named Sogan-leu situate upon the Kur, but a small days Journey from Tefflis; but this does not agree either in Situation or Description with the Zagzen we look for. The same Gentleman mentions several Towns in his Passage from Tefflis to Ivan, among which Cupikent, notable for a stately Bridge over a River named Tabedi. Melikent or Royal Village. And Di'jan, a Village of 300 Houses near the Frontiers of Armenia.

Cachet, by some reckoned the Capital of that Country, is notable for a fair Church dedicated to St. George.

It must be noted that the ancient Albania, lay where is the present Geguentie, but extended farther into the Province of Persia, now called Scirvan to the Banks of the Caspian-Sea.

MENGRELIA, together with Imeritia, Gouria and Samsea, all formerly subject to one Monarch, form a Country of larger extent than Georgia, but by Travellers is reckoned into that Country, and the general Name of Georgia given to the whole.

Guria, Goury, or Guriel, is the South Part lying on the Coast of the Black-Sea, and extending within Land about 80 Miles.

Samsea, another small Province, if not rather a Part of Guriel, lies on the back of it on the East, extending to the Mountains which part it from Georgia. It is subject to its own Prince, a Tributary to the Turk, but has in it no City or Town of note, as Hirchang. Lambertus a Traveller in this Country tells us. It was formerly part of the lesser Armenia.

Imeritia, lies on the North of both these, between Mengrelia on the North-west, and Georgia on the East, extending to the Magnitude of both the last named Provinces.

Mengrelia, lies more Northward upon the North and East Coast of the Black-Sea, and within Land to the Mountain Caucasus.

Beyond these to the Westward on the Coast of the Black-Sea, live a Tartar Race of Men called the Abcas.

Altho' these all account themselves separate People, and have each had their separate Governments, yet One has usually prevailed, and keeps the others under, the King of Imeritia was and may still be esteemed chief, but not without paying Tribute to the Turks. The Government cannot be very constant, for both Turks and Tartars do frequently invade the Land, and the latter make horrid Devastation when they come.

MENGRELIA, is the ancient Colchos, under which Name 'tis memorable for the famous Voyage of the Argonauts, which Apolodorus and others have celebrated in their excellent Poems, the Poetical Story of the Golden-Fleece and the Dragon is well known: The truth whereof as far as can be collected from History is only thus,

In the Infant Age of Greece, before the States of Athens, Sparta, Corinth, &c. were renowned in the World, before the Siege of Troy, and before the Israelites were governed by Kings, (for this Expedition is applied to the 11th. Year of Gideon) about A. M. 2700. The Realm of Colchos was renowned for its Plenty, and Aetes the King of it famous for his excessive Wealth, which excited a set of young Heroes, that happened to live in Greece at that time, namely Jason, Orpheus, the two Brothers Castor and Pollux, Telamon and Peleus Sons of Aacus, and Fathers of Ajax and Achilles, Laertes the Father of Ulysses, Amphiarus the Southsayer, Hercules, Theseus and others, to shew their Bravery in an Expedition to this famous Country, not with pretence of Conquest, for their Number was too small, nor without pretence of Gain; and consequently upon no other Pretence but Plunder, but soft, least some Pedantick admirer of Antiquity hear. They embarked in a Ship named Argo, whence the Adventurers are called Argonauts, and passing thro' the Hellepont, Propontis, and Thracian-Bosphorus, valiantly launched out into the Euxine-Sea, and arrived at last at King Aetes Court, where they were kindly entertained; his Wealth, which is the Golden-Fleece so much talked of, they eyed with covetous desire of obtaining; but the Guards, which is the Dragon, were too watchful to be surprized. But what their Valour could not effect, Love performed; for Medea the Daughter of Aetes, charmed with the handsome mien of Jason became his Victim, and for his sake fell into their measures, and by her Art circumvented the Guards, and brought off the Wealth; with which which returning into Greece, gave the Poets occasion of dressing up that fine Story.

For the PRESENT STATE of this Country, we cannot better inform the Reader, than from the Account of Sir John Chardin, who was the last Traveller that way: He passed quite thro' it, and being a Gentleman of Integrity, an Abstract of him will undoubtedly be acceptable.

The COLCHIDE called Odische by the Orientals, lies at the End of the Black-Sea, bounded on the East by a small Kingdom, called Imeritia; on the South by the Black-Sea; on the West by the Abcas; and on the North by Mount Caucasus; the River Corax or Codours on the West separates it from the Abcas, [a Nation of rude People so called] and the River Phasus or Rione on the East and South, divides it from Imeritia and Gouriel. Its length is 110 Miles, and the breadth 60. Formerly it was well defended from the Abcas, by a Wall of 60 Miles in length, but that is long since destroyed, and the Forests are at present its best Defences. The Inhabitants of that part of Mount Caucasus which bounds upon Colchis, are the Alanes, the Suanes, the Gignes, and the Caracoles or Caraccherks, People more barbarous than their Names. These Caraccherks, that is to say Black Circassians, are the Southern Circassians, who altho' thus termed by the Turks, are nevertheless as fair People as any; and were formerly Christians, which appears by some things in their Behaviours, and some Ceremonies which they use, but at present they are without Religion. They live by Rapine, go almost quite naked, know nothing of Liberal Arts, and have almost nothing Humane but Speech.

The Ancient Kingdom of Colchos was of larger extent, reaching from the Frontiers of Iberia Westward, to the Palus Maotis. The chief City of the same name, to which the Argonauts sail'd, stood at the mouth of the River Phasis, where (say some Modern Geographers,) stands a City nam'd Faso in its Place; but this, says my Author, I can assure is false.

The Soil is unequal, Hills, Mountains, Valleys and Plains, overrun with Woods, and but here and there cultivated. The natural Produce is but small for want of Tillage, and tho' there are all the kinds of Fruits that are found in England; yet growing wild they have little Taste and breed Diseases. The Vine alone yields its Fruit to Perfection, altho' it be left to rear it self round the Bodies of Trees; and did the People understand the true Art of making Wine, that of this Country would be the best in the World; for as it is, with their rude ordering, 'tis pleasant to the Taste, good in the Stomach, and of a strong Body. Mengrelia abounds with Water, many Rivers falls down from Mount Caucasus, and passing thro' the Country, empty into the Black-Sea; the chief of which are the Corax or Cadours, the Socorn which is the Tersan of Arian, and the Thasys of Ptolemy, the Langur called Astolphe by the Ancients, the Kelmhel or Cobo, and the Rione or Phasus, which receives in its Course the Abaschia or Glaucus, and the Skeiniscari or Hyppus.

These render the Ground damp, which receives the Grain thrown loosely upon it into root immediately. But for their Gom, a sort of Pulse of much use with them, they make holds in the Ground and Plant it; of this Gom they make a Paste, which is used for Bread among the common People: Wheat and Barley; and some Rice grows here but in small quantities, and is only used by the better sort.

They have Beeves and Hogs in plenty, wild Boars, Stags, and other Venison excellently good, as also Partridge Pheasant, Quails, and other wild Fowl in Plenty; they have also Falcons, and even Eagles and Pelicans come hither from Mount Caucasus; whence also they are sometimes visited by Lions, Leopards, Tygres, Wolves, and Jaccalls. Here are Horses pretty good and in great number, every body has them, for they cost nothing the keeping; as soon as they alight, they unbridle and turn him loose to Graze.

There are no Cities nor Towns in Mengrelia, two Villages only on the Sea-Coast, but otherwhere, the Houses are dispersed in two's and three's together at every Mile's distance. There are 9 or 10 Castles, the Principal named Rues, wherein the Prince of Mengrelia retires, has Stone-walls, but sorry ones, and easie to be destroyed. The other Castles are but enclosures of Trees laid a cross, and filled up with Earth and Stones. The Houses are built of Timber, poor, incommodious, and very nasty; the ordinary People's of one Story only, without Chimney or Window, the Fire is made on the Ground in the middle of the House, and the Light comes in at the Door; and the better sort have but one upper Floor.

The People are very handsome, the Men generally well made, and the Women very beautiful. The People of Quality are very graceful, wear the Persian Habit, and appear with majestick Air and good Shape. The Women have such engaging looks that they command affection, they have Wit and good Address, but in their Heart are Proud, Cruel, Perfidious, Impudent, and in general Practice all the Tricks, Cheats and Coquettries that can be thought on. The Men are yet worse, for there is no sort of evil that they do not addict themselves to, Theft is what they are bred up in, 'tis their whole Study and Employment, and what they make their Glory; Murder, Incest, Whoredom, Adultery and Lying, are no Vices with them. They Marry their Aunt, Niece, or other Relations, and take two or three Wives if they please, and as many Concubines as they will. The Husbands live with great Liberty void of Jealousie, and upon the Fact of apparent Adultery, he only levies the small fine of a Hog upon the Gallant, which they eat together. They maintain the reasonableness of this Liberty, because, say they, it produces the more Children, which we can sell for Money or exchange for Necessaries: But what is worse than selling their Children, they have an evil custom of Murdering their young ones, and even burying them alive, when they are not able to nourish them.

The Gentlemen have absolute Power over their Vassals, extending to Life, Liberty, and Goods, so that they take their Wives and Children, and sell them at pleasure. Each Peasant furnishes his Lord with such a quantity of Grain, Cattle, Wine, &c. according to his Power; wherefore Wealth consists in the number of Peasants their Vassals. The Gentlemen maintain their Rights by the Sword, and so are always attended and attended; their Arms are a Lance, a Bow and Arrows, a Sabre and a Buckler, fire Arms being little used among them. Both Gentle and Simple are very nasty, they never have but one Shirt at a time which lasts a Year, and in that time is washed three or four times, but twice a Week they take it off to kill the Vermin. They Eat sitting upon a Carpet crossed-legg'd as the Persians, and the ordinary sort upon a Bench in that manner. The rich have a few Silver Vessels, but the common use is of Wooden ones; and 'tis the Custom here from the King to the Peasant, for the whole Family to eat together at the same Table. The Mengrelians and their Neighbours are great Drunkards, sit at it whole Days, and their Cup Conversation is chiefly taken up in bragging of their Thefts, Combats, sale of Slaves, and Debaucheries. The Children are bred up in Theft by the Father, and in Debauchery by the Mother, so the Vices are made hereditary. The Inhumanity of the Mengrelians in seeking all opportunities to trap even their best Friends, and sell them into Slavery, is incredible: This Trade has so diminished the number of Inhabitants, that of 80000 that were reckoned here 30 Years ago, there is now not above 20000. 'tis supposed that not less than 12000 are Yearly sold to the Turks and Persians. Besides this Commodity of Slaves, they export Honey, Wax, Ox-Hides, Castor, and Martin-Skins, Flax, Seed, Thred, Silk, and Linnen Cloath. Their Dealings consists chiefly in Barter, for there is very little Money among them, and notwithstanding the opinion of the Ancients, that a golden Sand was washed from the Mountains, and caught in the Fleeces they spread for it, neither Silver nor Gold is now found here.

The Prince of Mingrelia has a Revenue of about 20000 Crowns per Annum, arising by the Custom of Goods and by Oppressions. He has a Court of 200 Gentlemen at solemn Occasions, and ordinarily about 120; with a Train of 300 Servants and Guards.

Ecclesiastical History says, that a Christian Slave converted the King of Colebas, his Queen and Grandees in the time of the Emperor Constantine the Great, who sent thither Priests and Doctors to Baptize and Instruct them. Others say that Christianity was first Preach'd there by one Cyriel about A. D. 860. But tho' Christianity be professed the People know nothing of its Doctrine, having no Idea of Faith, Eternity, the Resurrection, &c. Nor are the Priests capable of instructing them, being themselves perfectly illiterate and ignorant of the Mysteries of Religion, the best of them can only read and say a Mass by Heart: Yet are rich and have many Vassals, whose Children they sell into Slavery without Scruple. The Church is governed by a Catholicos or Metropolitan who is appointed by the Prince, and has Dominion over all Mengrelia, Imeritia, Gouriel, Mount Caucasus and Abcassia. He is Rich having 400 Vassals who furnish him with all Necessaries and other Tributes. There are six Suffragan Bishops, who are also Rich and clad in Scarlet and Velvet, but are scandalously negligent of the Duties of their Office, seldom or never visiting their Dioceses, or correcting the Manners of the Priests: The Episcopal Churches are well enough in order, and adorned with many rich Images, the Oblations to which is their chief Religion; but the Parish Churches are most nasty; these too are full of Images to which the common People pay a most Servile and Idolatrous Worship. Their Service is according to the Greek Church, but all the Rites are so slovenly performed, and their Priests know so little of the Dogmata of Religion, that one can hardly say which Church they adhere to. Fasting and Abstinence from certain Meats is the chief part of their Religion; their Prayers are directed to Images. they offer Sacrifice upon the Tombs of their Relations, and make Libations every Day before they drink; they do not solemnize the Sabbath properly, hardly ever abstaining from their common work, but at the Festivals of Christmas and Easter. In short they have many extravagant Customs, wherein Judaism and Paganism are mixt in their Religion, and upon the whole hardly deserve the Name of Christians. Thus much for Mingrelia.

GURIEL with SAMSEA, resembles in all things Mengrelia, the Nature of the Soil, the Manners of the People, the Religion, Customs, and Vices are much the same.

IMERITIA, called by the Turks Paclatkue or Pocha-koutchkoue, i. e. little Prince, is 120 Miles in length, and 60 Miles in breadth; a Country Woody and Mountainous like Mengrelia but has more fine Valleys and delicious Plains; as also Bread, Pulse, and other Victuals; Money has its Course and is Coined; the Houses are built in Towns, and a general Commerce is maintained: But the Manners of the People are still much the same with those we have described. To the Commodities of Mengrelia, this Country of Imeritia adds Iron, whereof here are good Mines. The King of Imeritia had formerly Dominion over all these Countries; but in the last Age they revolted, and have ever since been at Wars. Those that are nearest the Turks craved his assistance, and had his Protection, but by that means the Grand-Seignior made them all Tributaries.

The King of Imeritia pays 80 Boys and Girls.

The Prince of Guriel pays 46 Children.

The Prince of Mengrelia 60000 fathom of Linnen-Cloath.

The Abcas have sometimes paid a Tribute, but do it not constantly.

The Turks are contented with Tribute rather than take the Country, because the Air is not very wholesome, Bread scarce, and the ordinary Food, Swines flesh with Wine, is what their Law forbids. However he keeps a Pacha at ikizike, a Castle and Town in Guriel, and possesses Cotatis the chief Town and Castle of Imeritia.

Akalzike upon the Frontiers of Georgia, and on the Mount Caucasus, is a strong Castle and a Town of about 400 Houses mostly new, and built since the Turks possessed it, there being nothing ancient but two Armenian Churches; the Town is Peopled with Turks, Armenians, Georgians, Greeks and Jews. The Houses are built of Wood, among which there is a handsome Caravanseray or Inn. The Christians have two Churches here, and the Jews a Synagogue.

Thus far I have borrow'd from Sir John Chardin, and have been more large than elsewhere, that I might give the Reader a true Idea of these Countries, which is so much the more necessary, as they differ so very much from the other Parts we have passed thro', and in regard that their evil Custom of selling Children, makes the Countrey talked of; and especially since that Custom gave Rise to a Nation, that for some Ages Bearded the Turks, and suppressed their Power in Agypt and some parts of Asia; I mean the MAMALUKES, who were no other than the Children bought here and carried to Agypt, where bred up in Arms and listed in Bands, they composed a Body like the Janizaries in Turky; excellent in Service, and therefore by the Caliph much esteemed, and their number encreased, till at last growing proud of their Honour, and sensible of their Power, they rebelled and slew their Master Melecksaleh, the seventh Turkish Caliph of Agypt, surrounded ounded his Son in a Castle and burnt it; and finally usurped the Throne. The History of that People does not belong to this Place, we shall have occasion to mention it when we come to speak of Egypt, to which we refer it, and shall now proceed.

Cotati, the chief City of Imeritia, where the Kings of Georgia formerly resided, stands upon the River Phasis in the 44 Deg. Lat. 'tis a small City with a Castle built upon a Rock at the Foot of a Mountain, as Archangelus Lambertus declares, who dwelt some Years in this Country.

Savutopoli, Sebestopolis, a City of Corchis mentioned by Proteny and Pliny, and by its modern name spoken of by Niger and others, and commonly set down in the Maps, as a notable Emporium on the Coast of the Euxine-Sea, in the Kingdom of Mengrelia; was swallow'd up by the overflowings of the Sea about 100 Years ago, as the same Lambertus tells us, and its Ruins only are now seen.

Several Cities are mentioned in ancient Authors, as seated in these Countries, but they are pass'd away and nothing of them remains; wherefore 'tis needless to name them.

The Two other Provinces propos'd to be spoke of in this Chapter, CIRCASSIA and COMANIA, lie on the North of Mengrelia. The former is a very large Country, extending from the River Don or Tanais, the boundary of Muscovy, to the Caspian-Sea; 'tis a Land of various Soil, having the high Ridge of the Mount Caucasus for its South boundary, and other Mountains in its North and Western Parts: But has pleasant Valleys and fruitful Plains, which afford Pasture, Cattle, Flowers, and Herbage in good plenty; but no Towns or Castles, only Villages of circular form, with a large space of Ground in the middle, as Tavernier tells us. The Inhabitants vulgarly called Cherkes, live by Robbery, invading their Neighbours, and carrying off their Cattle, Slaves, &c. and may in general be reckoned of the kind we spoke of in Mengrelia.

COMANIA, altho' another name, is for ought I can see but the Western part of Circassia, extending to the Straights of Cassa, and the Banks of the Black-Sea; a People of like Manners with the Circassians, and are called Kamouchs; commit Plunder like them, and fly into the Mountains for shelter, and commonly reside there.

DACHESTAN, a Province comprehended in the general name of Comania, is a more civilized Part, and governed by its own Princes; this Country lies between Georgia, Schirwan and the Caspian-Sea. Tarku is the principal City; and as Olearius tells us, contains 1000 Houses built after the Persian manner. On the Coast of the Caspian-Sea, in the 43 D. 23 m. Lat. 60 Leagues from Astracan by Sea, and 70 by Land, stands the City Tarki (different from Tarku;) which is the seat of a Tartar Prince, and furnished with a Garrison of 2000 Men. It is a good large Town, the Buildings whereof are all of Wood, and is the best Haven on the Caspian-Sea. (Olearius.) To what Province this Place ought to be assigned, I find not ascertained.

Having often mentioned Mount CAUCASUS, 'tis necessary to speak a few words of it before we pass forward. We have already told you in our general Account of Asia, that a vast Chain of Mountains passes quite thro' this Part of the Earth, which is variously denominated in its several Parts, the most remarkable and highest Parts are named, Caucasus, Imeus and Taurus. The first which is that which we are now to speak of, lies nearest to Euxine, between the Black and the Caspian Seas, with Muscovian-Tartary on the North, and Turkey, Georgia, &c. on the South.

It is the highest part of all this grand Ridge, and its Summit is always covered with Snow. Sir John Chardin, who travelled over it gives us this Account of it. Mount Caucasus is the highest and most difficult to pass that I have ever seen; it is full of Rocks and terrible Precipices, where with great Labour Paths are cut out of the Rock for convenience of Passage, which is nevertheless extream difficult thro' the steep declivity. In Winter (at which time this Author travelled) the Snow lies long, and adds much to the difficulty and danger of the Passage; which the better to provide against, the Guides wear a sort of Shoes with Soles as broad as a Racket and of that form, which preserves them from slipping into the Snow, and with which they slit along upon its Surface with great Celerity, and a kind of Peel, which they carry in their Hands, turn aside the Snow, and make a Path; a high Wind is at that time very dangerous, for the drifts of Snow will cover both Horse and Man: The Natives therefore fail not to make Prayers to their Images as they pass over. The Passage over it is about 36 short Leagues, but in the way there are divers Villages, and plenty of Provisions; for the Earth is in general very prolific, even to the top, and yields Corn and Wine, Fruits, Cattle, and Honey. The Wine is excellent and so exceeding plenty, that near 40 Gallons are sold for a Crown. They have also store of Poultry, Eggs and Pulse, and Fruit to excess. Here is also very good Plenty of Bread, which in Mengrelia is very scarce, and the Mountain is almost covered with Fir-trees. The Inhabitants are Christians, but subject to the Turk, of handsome form, and better conditioned than the Mengrelians: Thus much is sufficient for Mount Caucasus in general; its Branches and Extents, is more difficult to be told, in regard that as I said, a continued Ridge runs on Eastward, on which this name is by some extended farther, and by others contracted shorter, and therefore we shall forbear to set bounds to it.

Lastly, Before we pass forward to Persia, we shall take the liberty to entertain the Reader with a short Account of the Black-Sea, which is omitted hitherto, and cannot hereafter be so regularly brought in. And we shall do this the more acceptably we suppose, in taking it from Sir John Chardin who sailed the whole extent of it.

The EUXINE or Black-Sea lies direct East and West, near 200 Leagues in length, and its greatest breadth North and South, from the Bosphorus or Strait of Constantinople, to the Mouth of the River Nieper or Boristhenes; about three Degrees: But the other end of it is not near so broad. The Water of it is not so clear, green or salt as that of the Ocean, which may be attributed to the many fresh Rivers which empty into it; and its self being shut up from the Ocean except at the Bosphorus, may not improperly be accounted a Lake, as the Caspian-Sea by some is; it has no Islands upon it; and the Dominion of it belongs to the Grand-Seignior, who takes care to keep it from Pyrates, and hinders all Navigation there, but in his own Ships or such as are licensed by him. It is a rowling Sea, and abundantly subject to Tempests, whence 'tis called by the Turks Cara-Denguis, i. e. furious Sea, and in regard that Cara signifies also Black, it has obtained the Name of Black-Sea from Europeans; 'tis from this quality, and not from the Colour of the Waters that its name derived. The Reason of its turbulency may be from the narrow Bed of its Waters without egress, for the narrow aperture of the Bosphorus is next to none, whereby the Body of the Water when moved by the Winds, for want of Passage forward, rebounds from the Shoar, and rowls up in vast Waves, to the inconceivable Terror and damage of those that Sail on it.

PERSIA.

PERSIA, is so called say the Classicks, from Pe-seus the Son of Jupiter and Danaë; or as others, from the Province Perfis, which by Synecdoche, is extended to the whole, and had its name say the Antiquaries from Perfis an illustrious Lord, who for his great Merit, was exalted to the Government of the Country, and gave his name to it. Or according to others, it obtained the name from the word Paras, which signified Honour, because being commanded by Cyrus to practise Horse-manship, the Inhabitants became wonderfully expert in it. In Scripture, 'tis called Elam, which was the name this Country was known by to the Israelites, from Elam the Son of Sem, who first planted it after the Flood. The Greeks and Romans used the modern name, and all European Nations do the same, with some variation in the Termination, and the name Erjistan or Pharjistan as the Natives call it, is plainly of the same Radix: But the Turks call it Irak-ak.

Perfis, as it constituted the second of the four great Monarchies of the World, comprehended Affyria, Chaldea, Mesopotamia, Armenia, and the whole Asia-Minor, as well as the present Persia, and thereby extended from the Hellepont, to the Frontiers of India: But in its present extent, 'tis bounded on the West with the Countries we last came from, namely Georgia, Turcomania, Affyria and Chaldea; whence the Rivers Euphrates and Tigris, with the Mountains of Armenia divide it. On the East, the River Indus and the Mountains divide Persia from India; on the North the Caspian-Sea and the River Oxus, divide it from Tartary, and on the South the Persian-Gulph, the Gulph of Ormuz and the Arabian-Sea, are its Boundaries.

In which extent it comprehends no less than 15 Degrees in Latitude, and 25 Degrees in Longitude; That is, from the 25th. to the 40th. Degree of North Latitude, and in the North-west near 4 Degrees more; and from the 63d. to the 88th. Degree of Longitude; and its Mensuration from the Frontiers of Georgia in the North-west, to the Frontiers of India in the South-west, contains near 1500 Miles in length; and from the Frontiers of Tartary to the Sea-Coast, near 900 Miles in breadth.

It is seated under the Fourth, Fifth and Sixth Climates, whereby the longest Day in the North Part, is of 15 H. 48 M. and in the South Part 13 H. 48 M. enjoying therefore variety of Air, but except in the very South Part, the hot Weather and cold are of equal duration, and therefore very tolerable. Mr. Tavernier tells us that in Edzerbayan, it is very cold and very healthy; In Gilan and Tabaristan, which he calls Mazenderan, the Country by reason of its neighbourhood to the Caspian-Sea is Fenny, and therefore the Air very unwholesome; at Ispahan they have six Months of very hot, and as many of very cold Weather, wherein the Snows fall very thick, and render the ways unpassable.

The Soil cannot be much praised, for tho' some Parts be Fertile and produce excellent Fruits; other Parts are perfectly Steril, being Mountainous and Sandy; and withal here are but very few Rivers, so that they have only Rain and the dissolved Snow to Water the Land, which falling in small Rivulets from the Mountains make the Valleys fruitful; of the Products whereof Travellers give us this Account, namely, that their Corn ripens so expeditiously, that in some Parts they have frequently a threefold Crop in the Year. (Dr. Fryar.) They have at Ispahan, says Thevenot, all the kinds of Fruit found in France, but fairer and better, and by reason of the dryness of the Air keep the whole Year. The Melons of Persia are incomparable, says Tavernier, their Peaches large, and Apricots delicious; but their Apples, Pears, Oranges, Granates, Pruans, Cherries and Quinces are not so good as our's in Europe. They have Grapes of 9 or 10 sorts, and make a rich White-wine, but their Red-wine, except that made at Schiras which is very good, will not keep; nor have they any Casks to keep it in, for either they have not the Art of making them, or else, as they say, the Drought would make 'em leaky; and all their Wine is kept in Earthen Jars. They have very few Trees but what grow in their Gardens, and of those the Palm is carefully cultivated, and bears excellent Dates; if the Blossom of the Male-tree be inoculated into the Bud of the Female, without which they say the fruit will have no Pulp, and be only Stone and Skin. (Thevenot.) Their Date is so luscious a Food, that if eaten in the hot Season, it causes the Body to break out into Boils and Scabs. The common Herbs for Sallads, and Roots for Food, flourish in Persia, but they have no Pulse: Sparagus and Artichokes, before unknown, being brought from Europe by the Carmelite Fryars, are found to thrive here. (Tavernier.) Here are Plenty of Almonds, and in the Provinces of Gilan and Tabaristan, some Olives, Oranges, Lemons and Chestnuts.

In Persia are found Mines of Copper, Lead, Iron, whereof some so fine as to rise pure Steel. Here are also found Turquois Stones, both of the old and new Rock according to Gimelli, but Tavernier says, there have been none of the old Rock found of late. In the Gulph of Persia, are many Fisheries for Pearl, especially at the Island Baharen, where are found the richest and fairest in the World. And in some of the Provinces are Quarries of fine Marble, and some Veins of Lapis Lazuli; and about Gombrom the Earth is fit for Porcelain. Many Baths and Mineral Waters, but especially a Spring of Naptha are seen in Persia. Silk is exceeding Plenty, 19000 Bales being annually exported, besides what is wrought up at Home, and it yields a vast Manufacture and Traffick to the People; which with fine Carpets (the weaving whereof is the best and most curious Manufacture of the Nation) Cotton, Pearls, Bezoor-Stone, Lavi-Lazuli and some other Commodities they transport to other Countries, but have not enough of these to Ballance Trade, being forced to give Money to the English and Dutch, for a great part of the Goods they want from India and Europe.

Of Cattle, the Persians have excellent Horses, which tho' small, are strong and fleet, Mules, Camels, and two sorts of Asses, namely, the Persian for Burden, and the Arabian for Riding, being active and as valuable as Horses; and Tavernier mentions Oxen among their serviceable Beasts.

Of Wild Beasts here are Lions, Tygers, Bears, and wild Boars, which live in the Mountainous parts and are seldom seen by Travellers, or known to do much harm, but afford a noble Pastime to the King. There are also Porcupines, Deer of various sorts, wild Asses, Foxes, Hares, &c. The Ounce a small Creature of a spotted Skin, is of a most fierce Nature, and yet as tractable as a Dog, and used in hunting, being carried behind a Man on Horseback.

Horseback, and thrown on when the Game springs, will fetch down a Deer or a wild Goat.

Of tame Beasts they have Kine, which tho' small are well fed, Sheep, and Goats whose Skin yields a very beneficial Manufactory and Traffick, and their Kids delicious Food.

And of Fowl they have most of the sorts found in Europe, as also Cranes and other kinds. Their Falcons, Hawkes, and Lanerets are excellent in Game, for they will even fly at a wild Boar and peck out his Eyes, which renders him an easie Victim.

Persia has few large Rivers, Mr. Tavernier says none but the Araxes, (which rises in Armenia, and passing thro' Aiderbeiden, falls into the Caspian-Sea) is Navigable; the other Rivers of note are the Tigris, the Bendamis, the Caurea, and some few others.

Mountains here are many, but none very notable, except the high Peak, which being covered with Sulphur, seems to sparkle in the Night like Fire.

Of the Inhabitants.

The Persians are a People of good Address and excessively Complimental; of sufficient Understanding; addicted to Dissimulation; very Luxurious in their Habit and Diet; and abominably guilty of Venerie and Lasciviousness in Conversation. And tho' Wine be forbid, they will secretly be Drunk, and they take Opium, Tobacco, and Coffee to excess.

Signior Gimelli writes thus of them, viz. The Manners of the Persians, differ much from the Turks, for they are Civil, Meek, Peaceable, Modest, Grateful, Generous, Enemies to Fraud, and Lovers of Strangers. They are far from hating Christians as the Turks do, but are on the contrary, Courteous and Civil to them. In Complements, their Expressions are very Hyperbolic, and their Conversations are full of Flattery, which their natural Pride makes them greedily listen to. They wink at Injuries, but 'tis but for the better opportunity of full Revenge, which they are careful to execute. They have very few Diversions, Play is forbid by the Law, and Dancing, Walking, or Riding they are too lazy to affect. The only manly Diversions they do use, are Hunting and Hawking, which the King and Nobility frequently exercise, but then the Huntsmen are sent before to encompass the Place, and confine the Game. But they commonly spend their time in lolling upon their Sofa's (or Couch,) smoking Tobacco, drinking Coffee, and taking Opium. They are wonderfully Superstitious, and most servilely subject to Astrology, whereby the Professors of that Science have great Power over them, the King himself not excepted. Thus far Gimelli. They commonly Educate their Children in Literature, and have Academies for their Instruction, yet they are generally too lazy to be very Learned says Dr. Fryar. But Thevenot says, there are a great many in Persia, that understand the Mathematicks and Philosophy, and the common People are generally curious in Science; but their Ignorance makes their Curiosity impertinent, and the meanest thing not seen before is a sufficient subject of much admiration with them. Of their Learning, Olearius the Writer of the Ambassadors Travels gives us this Account, viz. The Learned Language of Persia is the Arabian, Hebrew, Greek, or Latin being unknown there. They have Universities, Colleges, and Professors at Isfahan, Aleppo, Taurus, Isfahan, Kem, Tifl, and Semna, wherein Youth are put to Study: For tho' the Sciences are far from being in Perfection there, yet the Gentry affect Learning. They study Philosophy, Astronomy, Astrology, Geometry, Arithmetick, Eloquence and Poetry, of which last they are great Lovers. They have Aristotle in Arabic and read him in their Universities, but their Knowledge is very shallow. Astronomy they disregard and bend all that part of their study to Judicial Astrology. Anatomy and Chimistry they are perfect Strangers to, and consequently but sorry Physicians. And their Law consisting of the Precepts in the Alchoran, and the Municipal Customs, is a study of no large extent. The Persian Year is both Solar and Lunar, Lunar in Ecclesiastical Matters, and Solar in secular Affairs: it begins with the vernal Equinox, and consists of 365 Days. Their Week begins with Saturday, and Friday is the Sabbath. The Persian Language participates of the Arabian, but has no Affinity with the Turkish. But the Turkish Language is studied as a Gentlemanlike Qualification, being frequently spoken at Court.

In Person, the Persians are of low Stature, strong Limb'd, Hawk-nosed, black Hair, of Olive colour'd Complexion; (says Olearius.) But according to others, by their Marriages with the fair Georgian Women, or chiefly by reason of the many Tatars settled there in these last Ages, they are become of a fairer Skin. They allow Polygamy, every Man being allowed four Wives, few are without three or two at least, and the richer sort ten or twelve. Divorces are very common, and the Women are Re-married without Scruple: But it is not lawful for a Man to re-marry his Divorc'd Wife, till she have been first Married to another and Divorc'd.

The present Inhabitants are a mixture of Tatars, Turks, Indians, Banians, Jews, and Gurs or the ancient Native Persians, which last are indeed the least in number; the Wars and Migrations, which at several times have happened, and subjected the Country to so many Masters of different Nations, having driven out the original Inhabitants and put Strangers in their Places.

The Predominant Religion of Persia is that of Mahomet, but the Mahometan Religion here is different from that in Turky, and the Schism between the Turks and Persians is so great, that they hate one another as bad as they do Christians. The Subject whereof is this, namely, upon the Death of Mahomet as we have already told you in our Account of Arabia, Osman succeeded in the Government, and to him Omar, and to him Osman: all whom say the Persians, were Usurpers in prejudice to the Right of Haly, the Nephew, Son-in-Law, and only lawful Successor of Mahomet, which Haly was unjustly slain by Osman; and therefore the Persians will not communicate with the Turks, who hold Osman to have been the lawful Caliph. And as they are thus at Enmity with the Turks, they have many Rites and Ceremonies different from them; which as it would be too tedious to enumerate, so neither is it necessary in a work of this Nature. But tho' Mahometan be the National Religion, a very large part of the People, perhaps the greater moiety are of contrary Faiths; for Conscience being free in Persia, the Christians, Jews, Indians, Pagans, and Gurs, exercise their own Religions undisturbed; and great numbers of each live here, especially Armenian Christians. These are not only allowed the Exercise of their Religion under their own Archbishop, and four Suffragan Bishops, but are also endowed with very considerable Privileges, on account of the profitable Traffick they they manage. The Indian Bannians or Merchants, are also numerous, as are likewise the Jews. The Gaurs or Guebres, which are the ancient Persian Race, noted in Antiquity for their Worship of Fire, are chiefly seated in the Southern Provinces, and profess a Religion different from all others. They believe in one Ebrahim-zer-Ateuch, as the chief Prophet under God, and pay him great Honours, but detest Idolatry, and profess their Honour to Fire, is only in memory of a Miraculous Deliverance of their Prophet from its Flames; and 'tis for that reason, that they keep a perpetual Fire, which they call Holy and Swear by. They allow Polygamy, and exercise some foolish Superstitions, but neither Circumcise nor abstain from Wine and Swines Flesh. On the contrary, they Baptize their Children, believe in and pray to the One God of Heaven and Earth, look for the Resurrection of the Dead, and observe with decent Piety certain Festivals in memory of their Saints. Gemelli with an over fondness to contradict Tavernier from whom we have taken our Account of these People, says, these Gaurs profess themselves the Descendants of Abraham, who is that chief Prophet they Adore; But in regard they neglect Circumcision, this is not likely. As to the Armenians, their Christianity consists too much in Externals, Fasting is esteemed very Meritorious with them, and the Breach of it on the appointed Days, is imputed as the greatest Crime. Their Churches are well adorned and illuminated with many Tapers at the times of officiating. In Celebrating the Eucharist, they dip the Bread in the Wine, which the Laity as well as their Priests receive. In Baptism they immerse the Infant in Water, and then anoint it with Oil; and in their Marriages and Burials, have many Superstitious Rites.

The Persian Garb is the loose long Robe of Calico, Silk or fine Cloath, over a Vest of sleeked Calico or Sattin, and a quilted Waistcoat of Cotton, with Drawers to the Ankle, and Stockings of Cloath, and neat Turky-Leather Slippers. All which are of different Colours, and exceeding neat and clean. Their Turban is a Cap with a white Sash, and over it a stript one of various Colours, and sometimes of Gold, which swells it out very large; it is worn of what Colours they fancy, as well by Christians as Mahometans, and oftentimes richly fringed with Gold. The Rings on their Fingers, altho' set with the richest Stones, are only of Silver, even to the King himself, and none but Women wear them of Gold. The Women never appear but in a thick Vail, which covers every thing of them but their Eyes: but at Home their Face and Breast are uncovered. Their Habit is very rich, but in form not much unlike the Men's, except that they wear their Hair long and loose, and a little Bonnet on their Heads, which rises high in a Spire, and is richly adorned with Jewels, they wear Rings in their Noses, as well as on their Fingers, which are set with fine Diamonds. They sit cross-legg'd as the Men do, and lie (as all the Orientals do) on a Matress and Carpet without Sheets, and covered with a quilted Carpet. In their Food the Persians are much more Luxurious than the Turks; it consists of Pilao or boil'd Rice, which is always served in, together with a Dish of Fish or Flesh with Broath all which they mix together, and eat very copiously at their Hazir or Evening Meal. They have also Ragou's and Artificial Dishes, together with Plenty of Fruit, whereof they eat to great excess. Mutton and Lamb, with Pullets, Capons, Partridges, Pheasants, and other Fowl; and their Pilao, Ragou's, and Fruit as abovesaid, is their ordinary Food, with which they grow very fat, and pride themselves much in it. Thus we are told by Tavernier and Dr. Fryar; but on the contrary, some other Travelers represent them as an abstemious People. They use no Knives, but tear the Meat to pieces, and scoop up the Rice with their Fingers, nor have Spoons of better material than Wood. Rice is a constant Food, serv'd up in all Meales, and used for Bread, but they have some Wheat, and so those that desire may have Wheaten Bread. The Common People drink nothing but Water, but the better sort correct it with Duschab, and sharpen it with Vinegar; and frequently drink Wine.

The Government of Persia is absolute Monarchy, the King's Will is Law in all Cases; he judges of the Lives and Fortunes of his Subjects, without regard to any other Justice or Law than his own Pleasure, and that often leads him to extravagant Severities, which the People submit to without the least repining. And as this Arbitrary way of Government, may be justly suspected to create him many private Enemies, the Ruling Prince always either puts to Death, Imprisons or Blinds, all his Male Relations, to prevent their heading any Rebellion. He has a great many Wives, of all whom he is so jealous, that 'tis Death for any Man to look upon them; wherefore when he Travels, notice is given to all Men to quit the Road, nay their very Houses, and retire to a great distance, which every Body must do if he values his Life; this they call Carouck. And in his Arbitrary way, the Carouck or Royal Interdict is often laid upon Victuals, insomuch that sometimes for a month together, no Food is to be bought but of the ordinarie kinds, the Sellers not daring to part with Poultry, Venison, and what else is mentioned in the Order, to any Body but the King's Officers.

The King is excessive Rich in Gold, Plate, and precious Stones, which is continually encreased by the Presents made to him by the Chans or great Lords, which they often repeat, especially every New-years-day. He has many Lands, which he Farms out at the Rent of one Fifth, Third or sometimes half the Produce. He has the Monopoly of Silk; large Subsidies from the several Companies of Tradesmen; and all Estates confiscated by Delinquency, occur to the Crown. These together with many smaller Taxes, raise his Revenue so high, that all Travelers represent him as a very powerful Prince; and therefore Dr. Heylin must be much mistaken, in summing his Revenue to no more than four or five Millions of Crowns, which is far short of what such a Prince may be supposed to have. Olearius makes it eight Millions of Gold; but as he mentions not the Specie, we are as much in the dark as to the Sum; but if he means Tomans, the Persian Denomination each of which is somewhat above three Pound Sterling, he may be supposed to be nearest the Truth; for this Princes constant Charge in his Army comes to near one Million of Tomans per Annum. And his Stables are so largely furnished with fine Horses, 1500 in number, some whereof eat out of golden Mangers, says Gemelli. His Court so large, his Equipage so sumptuous, his Attendants so numerous, his Gardens so surprizingly large and finely accommodated, his Wives so many, and in short, his Grandeur in all the parts of Pomp and Expense

Expence, so remarkable, as all Travellers represent it cannot be maintained with a less Revenue than the largest we have mentioned.

The Army consists of three sorts, viz. 1. The Coschi who are descended of ancient Turks, and live in the Country in Tents, of these about 25000 are in constant Service, and increased when occasion requires, their Pay is 12 to 15 Tomans per Annum, i. e. about 40 or 50 Pound of our Money; this is so considerable a Body of Men, that as Gimelli tells us, the Chans and great Officers are mostly chosen out of them, as being Men of larger Stature and finer Shapes than others. 2. The Goulams, who are slaves or the Sons of such, and chiefly renegado Georgians, they are about 14000 in number at the constant pay of six to eight Tomans per Annum, these two Orders carry Bows and Arrows, and serve on Horseback. 3. The Tufenki, who are Volunteers raised in the Villages, but are mostly renegado Armenians, and are about 8000 in number at the same Pay. Besides all these, the King has his Guard of Musketeers, the number whereof is at his own Pleasure, but are commonly 2000. These may be reckoned altogether to amount to about 50000 Men, which is the ordinary Guard in time of Peace; but in the Wars the Persian has had, with the Turk, the Tartar, or the Great-Mogul, which are the only Powers that can affect him, he has ordinarily brought into the Field an Army of 150000 Men, the greatest part whereof were well mounted, for the Persians cover to serve on Horseback. Note this great Monarch has no Naval Force at all, nor do the Persians exercise Navigation, contenting themselves to sell their Goods at Gembren, to the English and Dutch which come thither to fetch them.

The first Kings of the present Race affected the Title of Sophy, because Aider the first of them bore it: But it is now disused, and Sebach or Peschach, which signifies King or great Lord, is his Title. The Succession to the Crown is Hereditary in the Male Line, and in case of failure of Male Issue by his Wives, the Sons of his Concubines are admitted; and for want of both, the next of Kin to the last King succeeds.

The Principal Officers under the King, according to Trevenot, are

The Eatmed Doulet, or the King's Vice-gerent, like the Grand-Vizir in Turky.

The Serfer Salar or Generalissimo, an Officer created only in War time.

The Korougbi-Bassa, or General of the Coschi.

The Coular-Agasi, General of the Goulams.

The Nedab or Sedre, who is High-Priest and chief in Spirituals, as the Eatmed Doulet is in Temporals; this is an Office of so great Dignity and Wealth, that Gimelli says, his Revenue amounts to 14000 Tomans per Annum.

The Scheick-el Selim, or the Scheick of the Law, who judges Spirituals under the Sedre. And the Casi who is his Assistant.

The Nazer, or Overseer of the King's Goods, Furniture, &c.

The Melzer, first Gentleman of the Chamber and Chamberlain, who always attends the King in Person.

The Mirak-bar Bassa, or Master of the Horse.

The Vakannvierz, or Principal Secretary of State.

The Mirchikir Bassa, who is chief Huntsman.

The Ischik-Agasi Bassa, Master of the Ceremonies.

The Munidgin Bassa, chief of the Astrologers.

The Hakim Bassa who is the chief Physician.

Signior Gimelli adds much to this List in the Names of very many other Officers, but being of less Dignity, and only Servants in the King's Family, we omit them.

For the Administration of Justice, here are

The Divan-Beghi of Ispahan, who is Lord Chief Justice, and has a Check over all the Chans.

The Chans are the Governours of Provinces, or particular Districts, whereof Gimelli gives us a List of 81, besides 37 smaller Governments, whose Governours bear the Title of Vizir. These Chans are considerable Persons having great Power and large Revenues, viz. 7 or 8000 Tomans, as Gimelli tells us, every of them maintains a small Army of Soldiers for the King's extraordinary Service.

The Deroga, subordinate to the Divan-Beghi, is a Judge in small Districts, and not unlike our Justice of the Peace.

The Auzas performs the Office of our Constable.

In every Province and great Town, there is a Divan-Beghi or Judge, who is appointed by the King: And a Deroga, who is appointed by the Chan.

There is also in all great Towns, an Officer called Kelonter appointed by the King, whose business is like the Roman Tribunes, to defend the People from Oppression of Officers, and to represent their cause at Court: He has also the Care of the King's Revenues.

There is also in every great Town a Scheick or Casi, to Judge Ecclesiastical Causes: Appointed by the Sedre.

By all which it will appear, that altho' the King may act arbitrarily in judging his great Officers and Servants, yet that Justice is nevertheless well Administred among the Subjects.

By the Law of Persia, Estates are Hereditary, not forfeited to the Prince, as in Turky and India; the Sons being assigned two Thirds, and the Daughters one Third. But if a Christian turn Mahometan, the Estates of all his Christian Relations shall devolve upon him, in exclusion of their Children: But Christians to evade this Law, make over their Estates before their Death, and settle them in Trust to whom they please; which is winked at and allow'd by the Judges.

Murder is punished by the Friends of the deceased, to whom upon Conviction the Criminal is delivered, and by them sometimes very barbarously put to Death.

Robbery upon the High-way is Punished by very tormenting Death.

Theft is also punished by Death. And they have this remarkable Remedy to prevent Burglary in the Night, that the Watchmen, whereof a competent number is maintained in all Towns, are responsible for any Robbery committed during the time of their Watch.

Adultery is punishable to Death, and may be executed by the Husband; he may also kill the Adulterer if he takes him in the Fact.

The MONEYS of Persia as declared very particularly by Trevenot, are of the Species and Values as follows, viz. The most common Currant Coins, are the Abassi, Mahmoudi, Chair, and Casbeghi.

The

The value of the Abassi is 18 French Solz; that is, 16 Pence English; they are of the finest Silver and most certain value, and withal the most Currant Coin.

The Mahmondi is of the Value of half an Abassi.

The Chais or Schais, is the Fourth of an Abassi.

The Casbeghi, is the Tenth Part of a Schais.

The other Denominations and Species are;

The Piaſter, which is thirteen Schais, or better if full weight, i. e. about 4s. 6d.

The Bifti, of the value of 4 Casbeghis.

The Soquelle, worth 3 Abassi's.

The Toman, is a denomination rather than a Coin, it is of the value of 15 Piaſters or 50 Abassi's, which makes 3l. 6s. 8d. of our Money.

In WEIGHT, the Man of Iſpahan is 12 Pounds.

In Geometrical Measure. The Finger is fix Barley Corns breadth; that is three quarters of our Inch. 24 Fingers make the Cubit. 4000 Cubits the Mile. And 3 Miles the Farſang or Paraſang. The Perſian Geographers reckon 22 Pharſang, and one Seventh to a Degree.

Laſtly, The Common Buildings of Perſia are very ordinary, the Walls being of Mud intermixt with Bricks baked in the Sun, and arched over, but flat at top and Terras'd. The Gentry have the addition of Marble Columns, and build a ſort of Piazza, round an open Area, wherein are Fountains, Flowers, and Plants; on each ſide are ſmall Rooms, and beyond it a large entertaining Room, whoſe Roof riſes in a Cupola, and the Floor is cover'd with Carpets, and round about are Sofa's or riſing Banks furniſhed with Quilts and Pillows to loll on. The Palaces do not exceed two Stories in height, and have the arch'd Roofs adorn'd with Paintings. The Front is commonly Shops for Traders, wherefore the fineſt Streets in Iſpahan for Palaces, have alſo abundance of well furniſh'd Shops.

With which we finiſh our General Notitia of the preſent State of Perſia.

As to the HISTORY of it,

The various Revolutions of this Country, the Power of the Nations it formerly conſiſted of, and the Actions of their ſeveral Princes, have been conſiderable enough to deſerve an ample Declaration of them; But the Subject is too Copious for this Place, and therefore to ſatiſſie our Reader, who might perhaps be offended if we wholly paſſed it over, we can only give a ſhort hint of the State of it in former Ages, and refer him to the Hiſtorians for better information.

PERſIA in the Extent we now ſee it, comprehended beſides many ſmaller States, the three Potent Nations of Media, Perſia and Parthia.

Media, was the Weſtern Part adjoining to Aſſyria and Armenia, and may be ſaid to be the ſame Country where theſe Provinces are ſet down in our Map, namely Iran, Scirwan and Aidzerbayan: And perhaps too Gilan, and part of Erack: Denominated from Madaï the Son of Japhet, the firſt Planter of it. The ancient Inhabitants were great Warriors, and renowned in Story for their deſtroying the Babylonian Empire.

Perſia, ſtrictly taken was the Country now called Farſiſta, but extended Northward to the Frontiers of Tariary. Suſiana or Chuſiana, from Chus the Son of Han, whoſe Son Havilah planted it, the ſame with the Modern Chuſiſtan adjoining on the Weſt, and was part of Perſia, as were alſo Caramania, Aria, and other Provinces which lay on the Eaſt.

Parthia, was of ſmaller extent, ſeated in the Midland, and did not exceed the the bounds of the Modern Erack.

Beſides theſe three Nations, which are moſt frequently mentioned in Hiſtory, there were divers others, whoſe People bore a ſhare in the Wars, and other Tranſactions in theſe Parts; and therefore it may not be improper to give you a view of the ancient Perſia, compared with the Modern in its full extent, from Cluverius and others.

The preſent Perſia contains theſe ancient Countries, viz. Media, the limits whereof we have already ſet forth. It comprehended the Regions of Atropatia, Choromiterne, Sagrianica, Ragiana, Dariis, Zapavotene, Syromedia; wherein were theſe chief Cities, Ecbatana, Aſſacia, Cyropolis, Europus.

2. Suſiana, the Modern Chuſiſtan as we have ſaid, comprehended the Countries of Militene, Cabamene, Characene, Ciſſia, Chaltapitis, and the Campus Derius; whereof the chief Cities were Suſa and Tariana.

3. Perſis, or the preſent Farſiſtan, contained the Regions of Paratacene, Miſſia, Mardiene, Toacene. The chief Cities whereof were Perſepolis, Axima, Marafium, Toace.

4. Parthia or Erack, contained theſe Countries, Comiſene, Parthiene, Parauticene, Tabiene. The chief City Hecatompylus.

5. Hyrkania, lay on the North of Parthia, and the Banks of the Hyrceanian or Caspian-Sea, the ſame with the Province now called Mazanderan or Tebariſtan.

6. Aria, adjoining to Parthia on the Eaſt, and ſeems to have been part of the Province now named Choraffan. Chief Cities of it were Aria, Alexandria and Bitaxa.

7. Bactriana, lay next to the Eaſtward, and may be computed as the reſt of Choraffan. Chief Cities were Bactra, Ebuſſini, Maracanda, Charracharta.

8. Margiana, lay on the North of both theſe, extending to the River Oxus, which divided it from Scythia, and is at preſent named Eſtarabad. The chief Cities were Antiochia-Margiana, formerly called Alexandria, and afterwards Seleucia.

9. Paropamiſis, the Modern Sablufan, lies on the Eaſt of Bactriana, to the Frontiers of India. The chief Cities were Carura, otherwiſe called Ortoſpana and Naulibis.

10. Arachofia, the preſent Candahor, lies on the Frontiers of India, adjoining to Paropamiſis on the South-eaſt. The chief Cities were Arachottus and Alexandria.

11. Drangiana, lay on the South of theſe, and is at preſent named Sigiſtan. The chief Cities there were Ariaſpe and Prophthaſia.

12. Caramania, the ſame with Kherman, lies on the Eaſt of Perſis, on the Banks of the Arabian-Sea, to the Frontiers of India. Its chief Cities were Caramana, Samydate, Alexandria, Armuz. Laſtly,

13. Gedroſia, lay on the Eaſt of Caramania, and on the South of Drangiana and Arachofia, on the Banks of the Arabian-Sea, extending Eaſtward to the Frontiers of Guzarat in India; whereby it comprehended the Province mark'd in our Map by the name of Makeran, as alſo Tatta and Send, two ſmall Provinces of the Mogul's Empire. Its chief Cities were Perſis, Arbis and Cuni.

This was the Extent of Perſia, when the Kingdoms of Media and Perſia were united in the Perſon of Cyrus the Great, A. M. 3419. That Prince conquered quered Babylonia, erected the Third or Persian Monarchy upon the total Ruin of the Assyrian; and thereby extended the Persian Dominion thro' Assyria, Armenia, and all the Asia-Minor, to the Frontiers of Europe. But this Monarchy lasted no longer than 206 Years, in a Succession of 12 Emperors; the Third of whom, Darius Hystespes invaded Greece with an Army of 100000 Foot, and 10000 Horse. A Force sufficient to have over-run all that Country, if the Virtue and Bravery of the Grecians, had not exceeded what could possibly have been expected from Men. Of these no larger an Army than 10000 could be collected, who under the Conduct of Miltiades ventured to give the Persians Battle, in the Plains of Marathon near Athens, and with the loss of but 192, according to Herodotus, entirely defeated that vast Army. Alexis the Son and Successor of Darius renewed the Attempt against Greece, and after 10 Years preparation, invaded it with so vast an Army, that the whole Land was in a manner covered, and whole Rivers drank dry by them. But neither had this Expedition better effect; for after the Land-fight at the Straights of Thermopylae, and the Sea-fight at Salamis, Alexis was glad to retire, and leave his General Mardonius with 300000 Men to finish the War; which was indeed soon after ended, by the entire Rout of the Persian Army, in the famous Battle of Platæa. About 150 Years after this, Alexander King of Macedon invaded Asia, fought the numerous Persian Army, First, at the River Granicus in Phrygia, Secondly, at Iffus in Cilicia, and Thirdly, at Arbela in Assyria; in all which Battles he won entire Victories, and finally entered Babylon triumphantly. Hereby began the Third or Grecian Monarchy, which lasted only during that King's Life.

At the Grand Partition of Alexander's Dominions among his Captains, Persia was made part of the Syrian Kingdom of Seleucus Nicator. But it lasted not long so; for in the Reign of Antiochus Theos, the Grandson of Seleucus, the Parthians revolted under the Conduct of Artabanes a Nobleman of that Country, who persuaded the neighbouring Nations to join with him, and assumed the Title of King. He was succeeded by a Race of Princes who were Potent Monarchs, and opposed the Romans with greater Vigour than any other Nation. And this Kingdom remained thus under the Parthian Government from A. M. 3718. to A. C. 228. that is 470 Years, at the end of which Artaxerxes a Noble Persian having slain Artabanus III. and repelled the Romans ascended the Throne, and is reckoned to have restored the Ancient Persian Race. From him a new Dynasty or Race of Kings, in 28 Generations governed this Country 406 Years.

In the Year 634, the Sarazens under Haumar or Omar, the Successor of Mahomet, by the Defeat of Hormisdas II. put an end to that Kingdom, and Persia thence forward became a part of the Saracen Empire, and was governed by certain Deputies, with the Title of Sultans under the Grand Caliph. In process of time the Sultans of Persia, Babylon, &c. quarrelling among themselves, made divers Revolutions and Fluctuations of Power, which in the end brought in the Turks: The Occasion whereof we have already told in our Account of the Rise of the Turkish Power, when we were describing Turcomania. We there told you that Tangrolipix overcame the Sultan, A. D. 1030. and assumed the Government of Persia, he was succeeded by a Race of Turkish Princes for about 200 Years, and then a new Dynasty of Tartarian Princes gained the Government. Haalon the first of these, became King of Persia in the Year 1260. and was succeeded by 8 of his Posterity to the Year 1337. when Abulaid the last of that House being dead, the Kingdom became divided among Tartar Princes, till Tannerlain about the Year 1400 reduced the whole to his obedience, and left it to his Son Mirza-Charcek. But that Family, held it not long, for after continual Feuds among themselves in a Succession of Six Generations, Araxes the last of them, was defeated and slain by Ussum-Cassanes, who was at that time Governour of Turcomania; by the Victory He ascended the Throne of Persia in the Year 1472. and was succeeded by his Son Jacob in 1478 and he by his Kinsman Julavar in 1490; the next Successor was Baisinger who began to Reign in 1493. and after two Years left it to Ruslan. In his Reign the Ancestor of the present Race began to demand the Crown.

There was an ancient Noble Family in Media descended from Musa Cerdine the only Grandson of Haly, that escaped the fury of Osman's Successors who lived in a private Lordship with Honour and Respect. Guine the Heir of that Family, seeing his Country the continual Prey of Strangers, began to have thoughts of making himself Caliph, an Office which had been long time discontinued, but died without putting his Project in execution. His Son Aider or Socider, who was a Cicik or Lawyer ventured upon it, but was overcome and slain. The Man as Olearius writes, from the Accounts he received in Persia, had married the Daughter of Ussum-Cassanes, and thence as he intimates, claim'd the Crown; he was withal a Man of great Pretence to Piety and Purity in Religion, for which he was called Sophy or Religious, and thereby had gained much Estimation with the common People; and upon the whole, was able to raise Army enough to fight Ruslan: but that Prince, or rather Alamet his Successor, (who began to Reign 1498.) overcame and slew him. Hismael or Ismael Sophy, the Son of Aider when grown up renewed his Father's Pretensions and by the assistance of his Friends, reveng'd his Father's Death in the Slaughter of Alamet.

Thus began the new Dynasty of the present Kings of Persia, and here too began the new Religion; for Ismael being descended from Haly, declared him the true Successor of Mahomet, and himself the true Caliph. This Prince by his Virtue, Courage, and many Victories, acquir'd a very great Name, and was address'd to from all Parts: In revenge for the Turks having assisted Alamet against his Father, he invaded and conquered Assyria, Chaldea and Mesopotamia; and after a Reign of 20 Years left a large Kingdom to his Son.

Tamas, who was a weak Prince, he was vanquished by Solyman the Magnificent, and lost those Parts of the Turkish Dominions which his Father had conquer'd, and died May 11. 1576.

Aider, the second Son of Tamas (according to some Historians) succeeded, but his Cruelty being intolerable, he was put to Death after a Reign of 15 Days; and then Ismael II. who by Olearius is accounted the second Son of Tamas, but by others the eldest, succeeded and reigned one Year, or two according to others, and was slain for his Tyranny.

Mahomet Chodabende, i. e. Servant of God, a Title given him from his Religious Life, the third Son of Tamas succeeded. The Turks and Tartars taking advantage advantage from the mildness of his Temper, won from him Armenia, Media and Georgia, he reigned seven Years and died in 1585.

Emir Hemse, his eldest Son succeeded but was slain after a Reign of eight Months, nor had Ismael III. the second Son better Fate.

Schah Abas, the youngest Son of Mahomet, having taken off his elder Brother Mirza, ascended the Throne, and proved a brave Victorious Prince, he recovered what had been lost in his Fathers Reign, and was a Terror to both Turk and Tartar all his time. He extended his Kingdom by Conquest Eastward into India, and Southward thro' Lar to Ormus, whence he expelled the Portuguese, and thereby removed to his own Ports of Gombroon, (which is since from him named Bender-abassi) and Bender-congo: And finally he removed the Imperial Seat from Caswin to Isfahan. He was of a cruel Nature, and therefore it seems hated by his Subjects, who privately intimated to his Son Mirza Sophy, that if he would push for the Crown, he should not want assistance. But the young Prince being virtuously disposed, honestly reveal'd it to his Father, in hopes we may suppose, it might reclaim him, but it had so different an effect that out of jealousy he barbarously murder'd that Pious Son. And soon after died himself, A. D. 1628. in the 65th. Year of his Age, and the 45th. of his Reign.

Sophy or Sefi, the son of Mirza the injured Son of Schah Abas, was by his Grandfather's particular Will, and Direction declar'd his Successor, and by reason of his Youth, being then but 15 Years of Age, the King nominated a trusty Friend to assist and protect him, for repenting his Wickedness in the Murder of his Son, endeavour'd to atone for it by this care of his Issue. Accordingly Sophy reigned, but was a cruel and vicious Prince, he lost Bagdat to the Turks, and died after 13 Years Reign.

Schah Alias II. his Son, a Youth of 12 Years of Age succeeded. He was a Prince of Bravery and Generosity, but too swallow'd up in Drunkenness, that he became unactive and most cruel. He reigned about 21 Years, and was succeeded A. 1664 or 1666. by his Son.

Schah Sephy or Sophy II. who changed his name to Selim or Solyman III. of whom nothing considerable. He died in 1694. and was succeeded by his Son.

Seia Offen, who began to Reign the 6th. of August, 1694. being then 25 Years of Age, and is still living for ought appears. These latter Princes have lived in sloathful ease, and attempted no Wars on any side, which renders their History obscure.

Having given our Reader a general Account of the History of Persia to this time, and shewn him the natural Products, the Customs, Tempers, and Manners of the Inhabitants, as amply as could consist with the intended brevity of this Work. We shall now proceed to what is more particularly our Business, namely a Geographical and Topographical View of the Country, wherein we shall be as particular as the Authentick Accounts of Judicious Travellers will give us leave. And happily we are pretty well furnished with Materials, by Seignior Gimelli, Mr. Thevenot, Tavernier, Olearius, Sir Thomas Herbert, and Sir John Chardin, all whom we shall carefully consult and present the Reader with the Substance of all they say.

In entering Persia from Georgia, we pass thro' the Provinces of Schirwan and Aiderbajan or Aiderbetzan, a Country that is cold, but very healthy says Tavernier. SCHIRWAN says Olearius, is a Country of extraordinary fertile Soil, yielding Rice, Wheat, Barley, Hay, and even great store of Vines; the Land was all green when they were there, which was in November, and continued so to the middle of December. The chief Cities in this Part are,

Derbent, which signifies a Straight, called by the Turks Demir-can, or Iron-gate, being a Pass between the Mountains and the Caspian-Sea. It was always a Place of importance, and mentioned by Tacitus and other ancient Authors, under the Names of Caspia-Pyle or Caspia-Claustre, and it is still the Gate into Persia from Tartary, and therefore well Fortified. The City fills up the whole Defile between the Caspian-Sea, and the craggy Mountains on the Frontiers of Georgia, which is a League in length; and is surrounded with strong Walls, built of a sort of Plaister made out of powder'd Stone and Shells, which is of the consistence of Stone, and as firm as Marble. The Castle wherein the Governor resides, stands upon a Mountain, and has always a Guard of 500 Men in it; the City when possessed by the Turks, was well inhabited by Greek Merchants, but when King Emir Hemse, the Son of Mabomet Chodebende recovered it, he so ruined it, that that part of the Town towards the Sea side, has ever since been uninhabited and chiefly converted into Gardens; the Coast is all Rock, which renders it dangerous to Shipping; and on the whole, the City is only considerable on account of its Strength, and being the passage from Muscovy and Tartary into Persia. It is the utmost limit of Persia on the North-west, and is seated in the 41 D. and 50 Min. of Latit. [Ambassadors Travels.]

Gangea, a City seated on the Road between Iran and Scamachie, but hardly within the limits of this Province, since 'tis seated on the other side of the River Kur: But since omitted there, we shall speak of it here, as being too considerable to be omitted; for Father Atrill, who passed thro' it in the Year 1686. tells us, 'tis one of the best Cities in Persia, situate in a very pleasant Plain of 25 or 30 Leagues long, watered by the Conflux of many great Rivers, and so pleasantly surrounded with Groves of Trees, that the Persians call it the Garden of the Empire. Its Market-places are Spacious and Magnificent, surrounded with vaulted Ware-houses, filled with various sorts of Commodities, the City being a place of great Trade and Concourse. [Atrill.]

Scamachie, the Capital of Schirwan, a City says Father Atrill, that might formerly challenge Rank among the best and most populous of all Persia, before it was almost destroyed by a furious Earthquake, however it is still supposed to contain near 60000 Inhabitants, one half whereof are Armenians; and even the other half are mostly Strangers, whom the pleasantness of the Country, and Traffick have invited thither, thus far Atrill. This City stands on a River which falls into the Caspian-Sea, 40 German Leagues South from Derbent, Lat. 40 D. 50. M. (says Olearius) and is a Place of great Trade, the Streets narrow, and the Houses built of Earth and very low. Before it was destroyed by the Turks in the Reign of Shah-Abas, it contained (says he) above 5000 Houses, which shews that in his time, An. 1636. it was far short of what farther Atrill talks of; for in its then flourishing State, the 5000 Houses it consisted of, could not be supposed to contain 60000 Inhabitants. The Earthquake mentioned by Atrill, happened in the Year 1667, and the City was rebuilt in 1670. say Struys. Dr. Heylin from Cartwright, an English Traveller in these Parts, speaks of a notable Pillar of Men's Skulls, which says Olearius I sought for all over the City, but could hear no news of, Dr. Heylin must be excused, as being led into the error by Cartwright; but why his new Editor who quotes almost the same Page of Olearius, where 'tis contradicted, does not correct it I can't imagine.

Baku, seated near the Banks of the Caspian-Sea, on the River that flows by Scamachie is a noted Port, and gives a name to the Caspian-Sea.

AIDERBEITZAN, commonly called Aadibjon or Adarbigian by Europeans, the South part of Media, and called Media-major by the Ancients, is bounded on the North by Schirwan, whence 'tis separated by the Deserts of Mokan; on the West by the River Aras, which divides it from that part of Georgia called Iran or Karabag; on the East with Kylan or Gilan; and on the South with Curdistan or Affyria. A Country of prolifick Soil, and healthy tho' cold Climate. The chief Cities here are,

Tauris or Tabris, supposed to have risen out of the Ruins of the ancient Ecbatana, a City as ancient as Babylon, and sometime almost equal to it in Beauty and Magnificence. The Walls being reckoned in the Book of Judith, to be 70 Cubits high and 50 Cubits broad. It was the seat of the Monarchs of Media and Persia, whose Palace was of most sumptuous Structure. The present Tauris is one of the richest and most populous Cities of Persia says Olearius; it is seated in a fair Plain, environed with Mountains on all sides but the West, a little River named Springtcha runs thro' it, over which there are three Bridges; it is a large and well peopled City, as being the Mart between Turky, Muscovy, Armenia, and India, and has a great number of Merchants, and vast quantities of rich Goods, especially Silks. Provisions are cheap, and Money more plentiful than in any other part of Asia. The Houses are built of Sun-burnt Brick, not above one or two Stories high and vaulted at top; the Silk-Weavers here are excellent Artists, and the Shagreen Skins so valuable every where are dressed here. (Tavernier.) Tauris (says Sir John Chardin) is 51 Persian Leagues, of 5000 Paces each distant from Erivan, and 40 Leagues from the Caspian-Sea, Lat 38 Deg. seated in a Plain at the foot of a Mountain, which modern Authors suppose to be the Orontes or Barchtes of Polybius, Diodorus, and Ptolemy; in a cold but very healthy Air. It is in Rank, Magnitude, Riches, Commerce, and number of Inhabitants the Second City of Persia, but has neither Walls nor Fortifications, it contains 15000 Houses and 15000 Shops, for the Houses and Shops are built apart in Persia; the Shops compose Bazaars

Bazars or Markets, which are large, and long Streets vaulted over at 40 or 50 foot height; there are divers Bazars which take up the middle part of the City, and the Houses the outer part of it. The number of the Inhabitants are reckoned to be 500000, nay some affirm they are double that number. It is rendered the more Populous, by the great resort of Strangers from all the Parts of Turky, Muscovy, the Black-Sea, Tartary and India, for Trade, whence it comes to pass, that the Bazars are always extremely well furnished with all sorts of Foreign, as well as Home Commodities; and because of this great Concourse of Strangers, there are 300 Caravansera's or Inns, some whereof are capable of receiving 300 Lodgers. And yet notwithstanding this great conflux of People, Provisions are so plenty as to be exceeding cheap, for Bread costs not above a third part of a Penny, and Flesh but a Penny Half-penny the Pound, and the City abounds so well with all sorts of Necessaries for Life, that one lives here says he, assez délicieusement. Near the City are large Quarries of white Marble, one sort whereof is transparent. And not far from them are two Mines, one of Salt, and the other of Gold, but this last is exhausted and hardly now will yield the charge of digging. Here are also several Mineral Waters, mostly Sulphureous and some of them hot. My Author's (Sir John Chardin) disquisitions concerning the Origine and Fate of this City altho' curious enough, are too large to have Place here, it must be sufficient to say, that the Persian Historians unanimously agree, that the time of its Foundation was the 165th. Year of the Hegira, i. e. A. D. 787. In the Wars between the Turks and Persians, it was often taken and regained. The Turkish Sultans Selinus I. and Solyman the Magnificent took it in the Years 1514. and 1530. and again in 1530. the Turks took and sacked it, and throwing down the Walls, built a Citadel to curb it. At length in the Reign of Shah Abbas, Anno 1614. it was finally recovered and has ever since been subject to the Persian.

Ardebil or Ardevil, and by some called Ardonil, stands about 30 Miles East from Tauris in the Lat. 38 D. 5 M. in a fair and spacious Plain, environed with Mountains, which occasion a continual changeableness of Weather, from extremity of Heat to extremity of Cold, and renders the City subject to Epidemical Diseases. It claimeth Dignity among the best Cities in Persia, partly because it was honour'd with the Residence of several of their Kings, and partly because Scheich Soffi Aider, the Author of their Sect in Religion lived and died here, and Sophy Hissmael the first King of the present Race lies buried here. And withal it is a Place of great Trade, for Silk and other valuable Commodities. This City is about the same bigness as Scamachie, and destitute of Walls, the Houses are all furnished with Gardens, planted with Fruit-trees, which make a pleasant Shew at a distance: The small River Batachlu divided into two Branches waters the Town, one Branch runs thro' it, and the other encompasses it, and rejoining falls into the River Karasu; this small Stream is so encreased by the melted Snows, falling from the Mountains in Summer, that they are forced to dig Trenches to carry off the Water, which would otherwise do much damage in the Town. The Meidan or grand Market-place, is 300 Paces long and 150 broad, having Shops all round it fill'd with valuable Commodities; but the richest Goods, such as Jewels, Gold and Silver, Silks, &c. have another Market-house or Exchange, which is a square Building arch'd over, and opening at three Gates into three long Streets of well furnished Shops, and Caravansera's for Strangers, whereof a great number are always seen here. The Sepulchre of Scheick Sophi, is no small Addition to the City, being visited with great Devotion by Pilgrims, the Structures over it and adjoining to it, which have been at divers times built by Persian Kings compose a kind of Castle and consists of fair Courts, Cloister-Walks, large Rooms and arched Vaults, all which are exceeding richly adorned with Gold, Silver, Tapistry, Marble-Pavements, &c. especially the Tomb it self and the Chapels leading to it, where are seen Gates plated with Gold, Rails of massy Gold and Silver, &c. the particulars are worth Reading in Olearius. But what is most commendable, is the Kitchen of Soffi, which he himself endowed with 50 Crowns per diem, to provide Food for the Poor, which Endowment has been so encreased by several Kings, that now at least 1000 Persons are fed three times a Day out of it, divers of the Royal Family also lie Interred here. Thus much for Ardebil, which we have chosen to take out of the Ambassadors Travels, whose judicious Secretary Olearius, tells us what he saw in the Year 1637.

Sultania, a City built on the Ruins of Tigranocerta by King Mahomet Chodabende, who named it so from the Royal Title Sultan, and made his Residence in it; is seated in a very spacious Plain, which has a high Mountain on two sides in Lat. 36 D. 30 M. six days Journey from Tauris. There are many Magnificent remains of the old City, some whereof are at half a Leagues distance from the present Town, and shew how much larger that was than this. (Olearius.) It seems afar off a very neat well built Place, but does not appear so when you are within it, yet some of the Publick Buildings are remarkable for Structure and Magnificence. The City contains about 3000 Houses, and was for several Reigns honoured with the Kings Presence. The Persian Histories mention the old City, as the largest of the Kingdom, but the Turks and Tartars, especially Tamerlain, in a manner totally destroyed it. (Chardin.)

There are several other Cities, and a great number of very good Villages in this Province, but not equal to those mentioned, nor considerable enough to need Description.

The Province of KYLAN or GILAN with MAZANDERAN otherwise called TABARISTAN, is that large Tract of Land between the Caspian-Sea on the North, and a continued Chain of Mountains in form of a Crescent, which divide it from Parthia or Erack on the South; the Western part is Gilan; and the Eastern Mazanderan. The neighbourhood of the Caspian-Sea, renders the Earth Swampy and even Marshy in many Parts, which breeds innumerable swarms of Serpents and Insects, which together with the noisome Vapours, render the Air frequently unwholesome: But the Soil is Fertile, and this Province is famous for the good Silk it produces; and some Parts of it are so pleasant, that the Country about Ferabat is called the Garden of the Kingdom, says Olearius. Sir Thomas Herbert says, the Country is generally of good Soil and Climate, abounding in Corn, Grass, Fruit, Flowers and Wood; and in Husbandry, Building, and Civility, more resembling Europe than any other part of Asia; the Soil is improved by many Rivulets, which which spring from the Mountains, and run thro' the Country, into the Caspian-Sea. This is the ancient Hyrcania, whence the Sea which we call Caspian, (a name taken from the Caspii, an ancient Nation which inhabited these Parts.) is also called Hyrcanian in Latin Authors. How the two parts are divided, I dare not pretend to determine; for they are described conjunctly by most Travellers, and so we shall not meddle with the limits of either. The chief Cities are,

Gilan, which gives name to that Province, stands on the River Abiscirni in the 38 D. of Latitude, 250 Miles East from Tauris.

Mazenderen, which also gives name to that Province, stands more to the Sea-Coast, 100 Miles North-east from Gilan.

Eskeriff, Gserif, or Asbaroff, seated near the Sea-Coast, is a goodly City of 2000 Houses, famous in its time for the Residence of the King Shah-Abas, who built there a sumptuous Palace. Asbaroff, says Sir Thomas Herbert, who was there in 1626, is seated within two Miles of the Caspian-Sea, in a low Ground surrounded with many Salt Marshes, and but meanly water'd by only one Spring from the Mountains: The Bazar is but ordinary, and the Palace which was then newly built, is not large nor very regular but exceeding sumptuous in Decorations and Furniture.

Ferabat or Ferabbat, seated also near the Caspian-Sea, at about five Miles distance from its Shoar, is a City of 3000 Families, wherein the King Shah-Abas had also a Palace, adorn'd with noble Furniture and Paintings, and especially a delightful Garden. The Situation of the City is flat, the Soil rich, and full of Gardens. A fresh Water River of 40 Paces broad, which rises in the Mountains, passes by the Town, and falls into the Caspian-Sea: Instead of Walls, the Town is surrounded with Moats. The Houses in this Place are bevel Roofed as ours, not flat and terras'd as usual in Persia. Here are two Bazars, but they are but ordinary, and the chief Ornament of the Town is the King's Palace. (Herbert.)

Chocopora, 12 Miles distant from Ferabat seated near the Sea-side, is remarkable for a River whose Water is eleven Months fresh, and the twelfth Salt. (Herbert.)

Omael or Amoul, seated within Land near the Mountains, is a large Town of 3000 Houses, inhabited by such variety of Strangers, that all the Days of the Week except Wednesday, is by one Sect or other kept Sabbath. The Town stands on a large Level in a pleasant and fruitful Soil, and is guarded with a fair strong Castle moated round. In the chief Mosque are buried as they say 444 Princes and Prophets, which creates in the People a great veneration to it. (Herbert.)

Taberisten, mention'd by Dr. Fryer as a considerable City for the weaving and selling Silks and Velvets stands hereabouts, and by some Maps it is marked as only another name of Omael, which we are willing to acquiesce in, because Sir T. Herbert who travell'd this way, would not have omitted mentioning so notable a Place, as Dr. Fryer speaks that to be.

The Ridge of Mountains which lie on the South, and divide this Province from Parthia, is a branch of Mount Taurus, which runs on Eastward, and Northward to Tartary. The Passage thro' it in the Road from Isfahan is so narrow, that a certain Robber in Shah-Abas's time, with his Troop kept Possession of it a long time, in spite of the Force the King sent against him.

ERACK, YERAC, or HIERAC-AGEMI, as Tavernier writes it, or Erack-atzem as Olearius, [The word Ag-m signifies Persian, and serves to distinguish this Province from the other Yerack or Chaldeas;] the ancient PARTHIA, is reckoned the middle, and may be called the Royal Province of Persia, in regard the King always resides in it. It is a Country of most serene and healthy Air, but not of extraordinary fertile Soil, Surrounded with Mountains, and much shaded with Woods, which defends from the Heats 'twould be otherwise subject to; for the Soil is in great part a rowling Sand. There is however some good Land, which produces the necessaries for Life, but Isfahan is beholden to other Provinces for most of its Provisions. The chief Cities here are,

Casbin or Caswin, risen out of the Ruins of the ancient Asfatia, mentioned by Ptolemy, seated in a large sandy Plain in the 36 D. 15 M. Lat. It is a large City of six Miles Circumference and 12000 Houses, wherein are judged to inhabit 100000 Souls; and was for some time honour'd with the Kings Presence, but Shah-Abas as we have said, removed the Court to Isfahan. The Palace, which was built either by Ismael or Tamas, has a very good Garden behind it, and another opposite before it of half a League in circuit, the most delightful that can be, being adorn'd with spacious Walks, shaded with Cypress and other Trees, and extreamly furnished with variety of Fruit-trees. There are in this City two Meidans or large Market-places, well furnished with Shops and Ware houses of Merchandize: The Houses are of Brick, destitute of Ornaments without side, but well fitted and furnished within. They have no Water but what is brought in Pipes from Mount Eiwerd or Alauvent, as Chardin writes it, half a League distant. That Mountain runs Westward as far as Bagdat, and abounds with excellent Marble. In Casbin they have Vaults under their Houses, where they keep Ice and Snow, and find convenient Retirement in the Heats of Summer; as the Soil is sandy, you may believe 'tis troublesome walking in the Streets, when you are told they are not paved, thus far Olearius. This City has formerly been walled, but at present lies open, the Walls being ruin'd. A small Branch of the River Baronthe runs near the Town, but they dare not let in the whole Stream for fear of overflowings. This City is considerable on account of the King's Palace, and many Noblemens Houses in it, for as the Court comes hither sometimes, the great Men from Father to Son keep up their Houses. Meidan-Cha, i. e. Place Royal or Hippodrome, where they exercise Horsemanship and run Races, is 700 Paces long and 250 broad. The Caravanseras or publick Inns, are some of them very well built, among which the Royal one has 250 Chambers in it. The Royal Mosque is reckoned one of the fairest and largest of all Persia. This City is not so well furnished with Gardens as others, because of the sandy Soil and want of Water; lastly, the City is govern'd by a Deroga chosen annually, whose place is worth to him 600 Tomans. Sir John Chardin.)

Sawa or Sava, seated South-East from Casbin in a fertile Plain, in the midway between that City and Kom, is two Miles in Circumference, but so thinly inhabited, that except in the Heart of the Town, it runs to Ruin for want of People. The chief Trade of of the Place is in little grey Lamb-skins, with which the Persians line their Garments. (Tavernier, Chardin.) Not far from Sami, are seen the Ruins of a once famous City named Roy, of which the Persian Histories (says Chardin) speak as the largest next Babylon, of all Asia, and gives such monstrous Accounts of it that 'tis incredible. By the Account that Author sets down, it contain'd above 2000000 of Houses, besides 15000 Mosques, 6400 Colleges, 16600 Baths, &c. In the Wars between two Sects of Turks, one of which call'd in the Tartars, that City was destroyed before the 600th. Year of the Hijra.

Kom or Cem, a large and populous City, is seated in a Plain by a River side, in the 34 D. 30 Min. Lat. It is surrounded with a Moat and Wall, flank'd with Towers, but they are half ruin'd; and contain according to the report of the Inhabitants 15000 Houses, says Chardin. Here are fine large Bazaars, but the Commerce of the Place is not very considerable; it consists in Fruit dried and raw (especially Pomgranates,) Soap, Sword blades, and Pottery-ware: of all which they have the best in the Kingdom, their Pots are greatly esteem'd for a quality of cooling Water in Summer to admiration. Along the River side, there is a fair Quay the whole Length of the City, and at the East end a Bridge, beyond which on the other side the River lies a noble Garden, to which the Inhabitants resort for Pleasure, and indeed quite round the City lie fair and pleasant Gardens. The Houses in Kom have very deep Cellars, and herein Wells of fresh Water, which in the Summer time is as cool as Ice, a great Refreshment here where the Summer is excessive hot! Here are a great many fair Caravansera's, and several fine Mosques, but the most remarkable is that wherein the Princess Fatima Mahomet's Daughter, and two King's are interr'd; the Structure of this Mosque is Beautiful, and its Ornaments most Sumptuous, the access to it, is thro' four large stately Courts, the first whereof is a fine Garden, and the last is paved with transparent Marble, and surrounded with neat and beautiful Lodgings for the Priests; the Doors to the Mausoleum are plated with Silver, and the Tomb is enclosed in a massy Grate of the same Metall. On each side of it lie interr'd the two Kings, Abas II. and Sepbi I. at whose Tombs the Priests are continually employed in reading the Alchoran, nothing can be imagined richer, neater, and more magnificent than this Mosque, which by the Persians is call'd Mossama or pure, and in much Veneration. There is a Revenue of 3200 Tomans belongs to this Place, that is to say 1500 to the Tomb of Abas, 1000 to that of Sepbi, and 700 for that of Fatima. There are many other fair and sumptuous Buildings in Kom, and bating the heat in Summer, it is a pleasant Place to live in, and well supplied with Provisions of all sorts, and excellent Fruits; and withal the People are very tractable and civil. (Sir John Chardin.)

Hamedan, one of the richest and most considerable Cities of Persia, (says Tavernier.) stands at the foot of a Mount, where rise a great many Springs which Water the Country, and make it so abundant with Corn, as to be able to furnish the neighbouring Parts, it abounds also with Cattle, Butter, Cheese, Hides and Tobacco. It is a Stage of Caravans going to Mecca, for it lies on the Road to Bagdat about 100 Miles South East from Kom.

Cashan or Kashan, a populous and wealthy City, stands in a plain near a high Mountain, about 70 Miles North from Isfahan, Lat. 33 D. 51 Min. The City and Suburbs (says Chardin) contains 6500 Houses, as the Inhabitants report, 40 Mosques, 3 Colleges, and about 200 Sepulchres of the Descendants of Hali. The Houses are built of Earth and Brick, but not very handsome; but the Bazaars are well built and in good repair. The Trade of the Town consists in a Manufactory of Silks and Tissues, Velvets and Satins, whereof there is no City in Persia makes so much. There is no River at Cashan, but they are supplied with Water by Sulterranean Canals and deep Wells. The City is encompassed with a double Wall flank'd with round Towers, and hath five Gates. Fruit is so plenty here, that they serve Isfahan, especial with Melons, they have also plenty of Corn, but Cattle and wild Fowl are more scarce. (Chardin.) 'Tis a large City well Peopled, and furnished with all things necessary for Life, wherein and near it 1000 Families of Jews inhabit, who boast themselves to be of the Tribe of Judah. The Country hereabouts abounds with Scorpions, inso-much that the Scorpion of Cashan is become Proverbial in Persia, (Tavernier.) Cashan is but little less in compass than Kom, being three Miles in length, and the Buildings not far from it as there. The Bazaars are light and airy, the Streets are very good, and the Caravansera's large and well built. The King has a Palace and fine Gardens near this City. (Girrelli.)

ISPAHAN or Sperhawn, stands in the Place of the ancient Hecatompylis, so called from its Hundred Gates, whence its vast Magnitude may be conjectured, and as that was the Regal Seat of the Parthian Monarchs, so is this at present of the Persian, and therefore esteem'd the Capital of the Kingdom. It is seated in the 32 D. 40 Min. of Lat. and in the 72 D. of Longit. in a plain fruitful Soil, watered with Streams deduced from the River Sanderu. The old City had been so totally destroyed, that there only remained two small Villages, when the latter Race of the Persian Kings, extending their Dominion Eastward and Southward, caused the encrease of these two Villages, into a godly Town call'd at first Sipahan. Schah Abbas taking notice of its advantageous Situation, removed the Royal Seat to it, which before had been held at Sultania and Cashan, by which it grew up with great speed into a large and populous City, of 12 Miles Circumference, besides Zalfa and the other Suburbs, which extend it to 30 Miles extent. (Girrelli.) The City is encompassed with a Mud-Wall, wherein are ten Gates, and a shallow Ditch planted with Trees. The Streets are narrow, crooked, and dark, because generally cover'd over, and the Ground always dirty or dusty, being not paved; the Houses are built of Sun-burnt Brick and Mud intermix'd, growing narrower in height and Terraced at top, they do not exceed two Stories in height says one, rise to four Stories says another, and have generally two arched Rooms adorn'd with Paintings. The wholesomeness of the Air, and the Presence of the Court, tempt the Gentry to live there, which creates a very great Trade, and renders the Place very populous. The Persians call it half the World, for the diversity of Tongues spoken there, and because of its wealthy Bazaars and multitude of Shops of all sorts of Commodities. The most remarkable Places are, the

the Sciarback, the King's Palace, the King's Garden Azar-gerib, the Meidan, and the Mosque of the five Gates. The Sciar-back, i. e. four Gardens, so called from four Gardens of the King's which surround it, is a noble Street of two Miles long and a hundred Paces broad, says Tavernier, who continues it on to Azar-gerib, and so is in the right; altho Gimelli, who terminates it at the River, says 'tis one Mile long, and a Musquet-Shot broad; a Chanal of Water making four great square Pools lie in the middle, and on each side are planted double rows of Trees, where is a common Road for Horse and Carriage, and a foot Causey raised 4 foot above that Road. This Street terminates according to Gimelli's Account, at the River Sanderu, which runs cross it at the Miles end; over which River there lies a noble Stone Bridge of 35 Arches, whereof Tavernier gives us this Description, it is 300 Paces long and 20 broad, on each side instead of the Parapet, there are covered Galleries with Windows to the Water for Foot Passage, and over each a fair Platform with easie Steps up to them, whereby you may walk either in Shade or Sun, free from annoyance of Horse or Carriage, which are confined to the middle Passage. Beyond this Bridge, the Street continues for at least a Mile between Pleasure-Houses and Gardens, and at the end lie the King's Pleasure-Houses, and the great Garden called Azar-gerib, which is three Miles long and one broad: The Front is adorn'd with double rows of Balconies on the Street side, and excellent Paintings on the Garden side; at the four Angles are four fine Towers, which overlook the Garden, and shew delightful Cascades, plenty of Fruit-trees, Flowers, shady Walks, Fish-ponds, Summer-houses, and every thing that makes a Garden pleasant. And beyond this lies a Park stock'd with wild Beasts, among which are Lions and Tygers. To return into the City, the Meidan or great Square is the best Structure in Ispahan, 'twas built by Schah-Abas, and is a quarter of a Mile long, and half so much broad, surrounded with very good Houses, which have rows of Shops, under handsome Arches before them; but the upper Windows are fair, and have full view over the Shops into the Square, to see the Diversifements there frequently exercised by the King and Nobility. The Meidan is planted all round with Trees, and has also a pretty Canal carried round it in a Stone-trough. The King's Palace is entered from the Meidan, it consists of divers square Courts, surrounded with fair Buildings, wherein are large Halls and Chambers most richly furnished, and sumptuously adorned with Paintings, Gildings, &c. In the limits of the Palace (besides the King's Mosque which is very fine, and another less one in the same Court, which may be called his Family Chapel, to which belongs a Fountain and large Basin to wash in as they go to their Devotion;) stands the great Mosque called that of the five Gates, it is reckoned the finest in Persia having its Walls fac'd with Marble five Fathom high, above which they are painted, as is the noble Cupola which the Roof rises into, and richly gilded; this Mosque was founded by Schah-Abas, and finished by Schah-Sefi. The Palace is a Sanctuary, and which is strange the first Court is a kind of Market, for there are many Shops in it (Gimelli and Tavernier.) Ispahan is seated in a very fair Plain, (saith Olearius) surrounded with very high Mountains at about four Leagues distance, in Lat. 32 D. 26 M. The Mountain Demawend lies to the South and South-west, and the Mountain Ze- lak-Perjan to the North; the whole extent of the City and Suburbs is about eight German Leagues; the City is walled round and has 12 Gates, whereof nine only are open, and it contains about 18000 Houses, and at least 500000 Inhabitants; the River Sanderu arises in Mount Demawend, and before it reaches the City divides into two Channels, one whereof falls into the Park, and the other is conveyed by Subterranean Passages thro' the Royal Garden, and both together runs by the South and South-west sides of the City, and by Pipes the Water of it is convey'd into the Houses, which are also pretty well supplied by fresh Water Springs. The City abounds with Gardens, which the Persians are expensive in, and adorn them with fine shaded Walks, plenty of Fruit-trees and large Fountains, together with delightful Summer-Houses conveniently placed for taking the Air. The Bazar or Meidan is 700 Foot (Tavernier says common Paces) long and 250 broad, the Houses round it are all of Brick, and of equal height, the Shops vaulted. Before the Court stand 100 Pieces of Canon which were brought from Ormus, Gimelli calls them small Pieces, but Olearius says, they carry 36 to 38 Pound-Ball; and on the back side of the Palace, stands a Citadel called Tabrick-Kale, which is Fortified with a Rampart and several Bastions of Earth. The King's Stables are always filled with the best Horses, 1500 in number for the Service of himself and Family; some whereof as Gimelli tells us, are fed in Golden Mangers, are shod with Silver: Two Horses are continually kept ready Saddled for the King's use, in case of a sudden Exigence. Near the Stables stands the Pillar Kelemina or Mor..., which is a Pillar 80 Spans high and 40 in Compais, built of the Horns says Olearius, of the Skulls says Gimelli, of the Beasts killed in one Day's hunting by Schah-Tamas. For Trade Ispahan may be reckoned to equal, if not exceed any City in Persia, being resorted to by divers Nations, 12000 Indians inhabit here to sell the rich Commodities of their Country, and Turks, Jews, Tartars, &c. as also English, Dutch, French and Italians are seen here, with the Commodities of their respective Countries. For Provisions, this City is supplied with Sheep and Lambs from the Province of Kerman, with Rice from Kylan, with Wood and Charcoal from Mazanderan, and with Wheat and Barley from Schirwan. Thus have we given you an ample Account of Ispahan, and that too not by transcribing old Collectors, but from the Mouths of no less than four Travellers, who are all acknowledg'd to be Men of Credit and Judgment, we shall now proceed from the same Authors to speak of the Suburbs.

Zuipha or Tzulfa, altho' reckoned a Suburb may be call'd another very good City, for it contains no less than 3000 Houses, which may vie with the best in Ispahan; it is wholly inhabited by Armenians, who were transplanted thither by Schah-Abas, and endowed with very great Privileges. Altho' the Town be so large, its yearly Tribute is but 200 Tomans. (Olearius) Zulfa or Giolf (says Gimelli,) lies beyond the River Sanderu, two Miles and half from Ispahan, the interjacent Ground being filled up with Gardens and Pleasure-Houses; it is nine Miles round, and is inhabited by Armenians only, who settled there in the Reign of Schah-Abas, and by reason of the profitable Trade they manage, enjoy great Privileges, for they have peculiar Judges of their own Nation to decide Civil Causes, and in Ecclesiastical Government have an Archbishop, and four Suffragan Bishops; but in Criminal Causes, they are are subject to the Persian Judges. They are the richest Men in Persia, and are the chief Merchants in all valuable Commodities, especially Silk, and their Women are very beautiful. Lastly, the Streets of Zulja are larger and neater than those at Ispahan, having Canals in the middle, and rows of Trees on each side. The other Suburbs adjoining to Ispahan are, Tabrisabath, which was originally the Habitation of a Colony brought from Tabristan by Sha-Abas.

Hesenabath, which is inhabited by Georgian Christians, who are Wealthy Merchants.

Kebberbath, or the Town of the Kebbers or Guebres, who as we have said, are the ancient Persian Race that worship Fire. They are Infidels says Olearius, and having nothing Persian but the Language.

The Fields about Ispahan are low, and therefore easily overflowed in the Summer, and refreshed in the excessive Heat during June and July. The Air is very serene and healthy, the Heat and Cold of almost equal duration, and in the depth of Winter the Frost makes not an Ice of above half an Inch thick. There are (say's Olearius) 1460 Villages round about Ispahan, the Inhabitants whereof live chiefly upon the manufacturing Silk and Wooll.

Tesd, a large but ruinous Town 130 Miles distant from Ispahan to the East, stands in a sandy Plain not far from the Mountains, and is notable on account of the Colleges in it for Learning, and for a sort of good Wine which grows in its Neighbourhood; the Place is not very populous, but the Women are very beautiful, and the Employment of the Inhabitants is Silk-weaving.

On the South of Erak lie the two Provinces of CHUSISTAN, which was the ancient Susiana, and FARSISTAN, which is the ancient Persis. The limits of both on the South being the Sea called the Persian Gulph.

Altho' the extent of these two Countries be large, even no less than 400 Miles from East to West, yet the heat of the Air and the sandyness of the Soil, have made them so little resorted to, that we cannot give the Reader the same Accounts as we have done of the Provinces we have passed through.

CHUSISTAN, is bounded on the West by Chaldea and the River Passi-Tigris, on the East with Farsistan, on the North with Assyria and Parthia, and on the South with the Gulph of Bassora. The chief City, Suster or Schouster according to Tavernier, and Tufter by Golius, is the ancient Susa, which was the Winter Seat of the Persian Monarchs, as Eebatana was the Summer-Seat. It is a fair and large City seated near the Mountains on the River Tirtiri, or rather on Zeymare which falls into the Tirtiri, at the distance of 150 Miles from Ispahan to the South-west, and near 200 from the Persian-Gulph to the North, mentioned in Scripture by the name of Shushan, where Abasucrus kept his great Feast, and where he chose Hester Queen. It was so wealthy a Place, that Alexander found in it 50000 Talents of Gold, besides Silver and Jewels of inestimable value. Sir Tho. Herbert says 'tis now named Valdac, or Balda; and that it was destroyed in the Year 641. and is now in Ruines, he Names the River on which it stands Chaspes; but it must be noted he reports this on hear say not ocular Testimony.

Elymais, another City anciently so considerable as to bear the title of oppidum oppulentissimum in Sulp. Severus. Sela, Tarsiana, and Agra, were also Places of Note in former times, but now passed away.

Bender-Rik, and Bender-Rakel, two small Port Towns on the Gulf, are sometimes visited by our Mariners. The former as Tavernier tells us, is but a sorry Town of a few Fishers Huts, made of Hurdles, but is resorted to in the common Voyages from Bassora to Persia.

FARSISTAN, the Ancient Persis, lyes next on the East. The places of chiefest Note here are,

Sciras, one of the pleasantest Cities in Persia, seated on the N. W. side of a spacious Plain, inclosed by lofty Hills, near the Banks of a River, which Herbert names Kur, and the Maps Bendemir, in the 29 D. 20 m. Lat. The City is about 7 Miles in compass, walled in by Ussum Cassanes, in 1470. The Houses are built of Sun burnt Bricks, well provided with Gardens. There are 15 Mosques, which are adorned with fine Gildings and high Spires, and a Colledge, wherein is read Philosophy and the other Sciences, and is famous all over Persia. The Gardens are large and beautiful, abounding with shady Walks, Oranges, Lemons, Pomgranates and other delicious Fruits. The Country about produces excellent Vines, whence the Wine of Schiras is the best in Persia, being strong, delicious, and very good to the Stomach, (Herbert.) Sciras, is about two hours walk in Circumference, and has no Walls, but a sorry Ditch only for it's Defence, says Thevenot; The Streets are somewhat narrow, except a few fair ones, with Canals in the midst, of very clear running Water. There are a great many fair cover'd Bazars of Shops well filled with all sorts of Indian and Turkish, as well as Persian Commodities; and many large and well built Caravansera's. The Mosques are lovely; and in the Colledge there are Professors who have Salaries for teaching the Sciences, and says my Author (Thevenot) I was told there were above 500 Students in it. The chief pleasure of Schiras is the Gardens whereof there are many; the King has a very fine one here, wherein are the largest and best shaded Walks that can be seen, Fruit-Trees and Flowers of the finest kinds in great plenty, and Water in Canals, Cascades, Basons and other Fountains very Copious. The People of this Town are witty, and produce the best Poets in Persia, they are skilful in making Glass, and blow Bottles of very large size, even to 30 quarts, wherewith they furnish the whole Kingdom. Their Wine is strong enough to carry two thirds Water, without spoiling the Taste, it is sent to Ispahan and to India, in great quantities yearly. They have also Capers in plenty, which they pickle and send abroad; and Roses in abundance, whence they draw so much Rose-water, as to serve all India. In former times Schiras was govern'd by a Cham, who was the first in Dignity in Persia, and his Government reach'd as far as Lar, Bender, and Ormuz, and so Wealthy was this Cham in the Days of Shah-Abas, that the King sent to bid him spend a Mahmond per Diem less, that there might be some difference between them. But Shah-Sefi reduc'd that Grandure by the Death of all the Family, and at present a Vizier only commands here, and pays the King out of the profits of it 1000 Tomans per Annum. (Thevenot.) The most valuable things in Schiras, are Wine and Women, whose Beauty is so Transcendent, that it serves for a Portion. The Gardens are not less delightful to the Eye, for their long Rows of Cypress Trees, than to the taste for the variety and excellence of the Fruit. Thus the Mud Houses being hid by the Trees, it looks at a distance more like a Wood of 15 Miles Circumference, than a City whose Inhabitants, reckon'd 20000. need not so large a space of Land for Habitation. The King's Garden is of the best in Scirus's, but goes daily to Decay for want of due Reparation, a common fault in Persia. (Gimelli.)

About 30 Miles North-East from Schiras are seen the Ruins of the Ancient Persepolis, which in it's time was esteem'd the chief City of the East, and excelled all other Cities in Glory and Worldly Felicity, says Diodorus; the Wealth of it is evidenced in the great Plunder Alexander's Soldiers made when he had taken it, and given it up to Destruction in Revenge for the many Cities of Greece destroyed by the Persians; and by the Treasure he himself seized on, which amounted to 120 thousand Talents in Silver and Gold. The Citadel, which was the King's Palace, was a Structure of such surprizing Magnificence and Beauty, that perhaps no Building ever exceeded it. It stood, on a rocky Hill, and took up 50 Acres of Ground, and was surrounded, says Diod. Sicul. with a Triple Wall, the first whereof was 16 Cubits high, the second double that height, and the inner one 60 Cubits high, built of the strongest Marble, it was four square, and had on each side brazen Gates. On the East side stood a high Mount, wherein were the Sepulchres of the Persian Kings. The Halls and Apartments of this Palace, were profusely large and lofty, the Walls of them embellished with noble Carvings, some whereof still remain to testify its ancient Pomp, and the Cedar roofs shone with Gold, Silver, Ivory and Amber. The Kings Throne was of pure Gold, adorned with Pearls and precious Stones, and the Furniture of the Chambers so excessive rich, that nothing could exceed it, the Bedstead being of pure Gold, beset with Gems and every thing else proportionate. But its glory did but procure its Destruction, for at a great Feast which Alexander held in it, Themistocles the Athenian Courtisan propos'd it to the King, then heated with Wine, as a noble Exploit, to burn this fine Palace, which he readily agreed to, and led the way with a Firebrand, which was seconded by Themistocles, and followed by all the young Greeks, which soon reduced this pompous Palace to a heap of Ruins, as it has ever since continued; Thus fell Persepolis, which had for several Ages been the seat of the Persian Monarchs, giving Laws to many Nations, and being long the Terror of the Greeks. The Ruins of it (as very particularly Described by Sir Tho. Herbert, who visited it in the year, 1626. by Thevenot, in 1665. and by Gimelli in 1694.) do fully justify the ancient Accounts of it, for the little of it that is standing, shew what the rest must needs have been, the lofty Columns declare the height of the fallen Roof. The Stairs whose steps are 30 foot long, shew the Apartments it led to, were vastly greater than any thing we see now adays; In short, the Descriptions given by these three Authors will give an Idea of the Grandeur and Beauty of this Palace, to which we must refer our Reader, as not having room to be so particular. These Ruins are now called by the Persians, Tschetil-Minar, the River near it, which Diod. calls Araxe, is now called Bendamis, and a large Town which stands about, where the old City stood, is named Mirkas-Chan, says Thevenot.

The Dominions of LAR and Ormuz, are by some referred to this Province, and by others to Kerman.

They were anciently separate States, but now united to the Crown, the first together with Sciras, whose last Duke had conquer'd Lar, and the latter in 1622. by Shah-Abas.

LAR, is both a City and Province within three days Journey from the Persian Gulph. The Province is about 100 Pharangs over, and was for some time a Kingdom. The City is large, but has suffered by Earthquakes, wherein at some times 500 Houses, and at other times 3000 Houses have been overwhelmed. Here is a strong and stately Castle, built of Stone, which commands the Town and Neighbouring Country. It is usually well victualled, and has an Armoury sufficient for 3000 Men. In the Town the Bazar is a noble Building, of a white chalky Stone, covered over head, and filled with Shops. Here are many Mosques, in one whereof is buried a Prophet, whom they very much venerate. Altho' the Country hereabouts be of a sandy Soil, it yields variety of Fruits, and especially Dates; for the Palm tree will flourish in the dryest of their ground. Provisions here are good, but the Water is bad and scarce, for they have little else than Rain-water, which falling but seldom, and therefore kept long, putrifies and is unwholesome. The Inhabitants are a mixture of Jews and Mahometans, who are most of them blear-eyed, and troubled with sore Legs, from the badness of the Water, and heat of the Climate. (Herbert.) The City contains 4000 Houses, built of Brick, but has no Walls nor Gates, the way to the Castle is cut out of a Rock, and is so narrow, that scarce two Horses can go abreast. (Mandell.) The Jews here exercise a Silk Manufactory, and the Inhabitants make the best Musquet-barrells and Gunpowder. The Chan's or Governours House is a fine Building, and the Bazars are fair and large. (Tavernier.) The Guebres were Masters of Lar, when it was a separate Kingdom, but those being first Conquered by the Dukes of Schiras, and the Dukes of Schiras, being as we have said, reduced by Shah-Seff, (or as others by Shah-Abas) the Kingdom fell into the Crown, and composes a Province now called Ghermes, and is governed by a Chan who resides in the City. Signior Gimelli gives us a much different character of the Castle than the three other we have quoted, namely, that altho' it stands upon the Hill, and commands the Town, its Walls are very ruinous and destitute of Cannon. Lar, stands in the 29th Deg. of Lat. about 100 Miles S. E. from Schiras.

ORMUZ, an Island 30 Miles in circuit, lyes in the midst of the Persian Sea or Gulph, for on Persia it is but two Leagues from the Shore, and on the Arabian side but three or four Leagues from that Coast, and therefore absolutely commands the Trade into it. It is a rocky Soil, and destitute of all necessaries except Salt, wherefore it was possessed unenvied by its own Kings for many Ages, till the Portuguese having planted themselves in India, discovered the convenient Situation of this Island for Trade, and therefore by the force of their Fleets under the conduct of Albuquerque, took footing in it, and so fortified themselves, that it was not in the power of the King to expel them, so that he lived their Vassal, and swore Allegiance to the King of Portugal, and was allowed a small Custom for his Maintenance, which being a better Revenue than had had formerly belonged to that small Crown, * the Kings liv'd contented; and the Portuguese quietly possess'd it til. King Shah-Abas in the year 1622. sent an Army against them: and at the same time perswaded the English to assist him with their Shipping upon a promise of giving them the Fortres, together with very great immunities; with that help he made himself Master of their Fort, and quite dismantled it. The Reward he gave the English, was one half of the Customs of Gambroon, which for 50 years, yielded them 40000 l. per Annum, but in the Wars against the Great Mogul, the Company sold it, and reserving only 3000 l. per Annum. The Portuguese grew so Wealthy here, that they built most sumptuous Houses, and in that time the Town was one of the finest in Asia.

Gombroon, otherwise named, Bender-Abassi, i. e. Shah-Abas's Port, for Bender in Persian signifies Port, and Shah-Abas was the Person who by destroying Ormuz brought the Trade to it: is seated on the coast of Farsistan just over against Ormuz, in the narrow straight which that Island makes, and is a very convenient Haven, the best the Persian has, says Herbert. From a small Village as it was, before the reduction of Ormuz, it is grown so considerable, that Herbert tells us, it may be ranked with the best Towns of Persia: for tho' it be still but a small place, its convenient situation for Trade, brings a great resort of Ships and Caravans. There is one publick Gate, a Bazar the two Houses of the English and Dutch Merchants, with the Standards of each Nation always erected on them, of handsom Structure, and the Town is fortified with a small Fort on the Sea side, (Thevenot.) and two Castles besides that Redoubt says Herbert. The Climate is so hot, that they have neither Grass nor Herbs in the Summer time, which makes all Strangers fly it, and remain there only in Winter.

Nieuhoff, who was there in the year, 1662. gives us this account of Gambroon. It is seated in the 27 Deg. Nor. Lat. at the foot of a barren sandy Mountain, producing neither Grass nor Trees, having two Castles for its defence, and three stone Bastions on the Sea-side, but a single Wall only on the Land-side. The Houses are of ordinary Structure built of Loom, with square Turrets for the better receiving the Air, on which they sleep in the Summer time. The Streets are narrow and almost covered by the prominency of the Houses in their upper Stories. There is great scarcity of Water, but plenty of all other Provisions. The Air, from May till September, is very unwholsome thro' the excessive heat, occasioned as we may suppose, by the Towns lying on the South side of the barren Mountain, whence the Sun beams are reflected with double force, and the Winds sitting always West or South West, from March to September, do rather increase the heat, and make the Air so stifling, that it kills both Men and Beasts. The Trade is all Transacted in the Winter Months, during which time it is very great; for in October, Caravans consisting of many thousand Men and Beasts, arrive here from Turky, Bagdat and Persia, also very many Ships from India, which bring in hither the rich Goods of their respective Countries, all which, together with the Pearls taken at Baharen, are here bought and sold. The Palm-tree, being the only Plant that will flourish in this dry Soil, Dates are used instead of Bread by the Inhabitants: They have also plenty of Sheep and Goats, Hares, Pidgeons and Partridges. The Persian Governour residing here, lives in great Splendour.

Bender-Congo, seated on the same Coast 10 or 12 Leagues West from Gombroon, is also a notable Port; for the Ships from India, Bassora, Arabia-Felix, and other parts, arrive there with the Goods of their respective Countries, which makes the Trade of this place very great, and therefore the Town inhabited by rich Merchants. It is an open Village, and the Houses of Mudd Walls; wherein a Deroga resides, to Administer Justice, and an Officer called Sciabander to collect the Duties, who Farms the Customs of this Port, Gombroon and another small Port adjacent, at 20000 Tomans per Annum. After the surrender of Ormuz, the Portuguese so obstructed the Navigation of this Sea, by the Fleet they kept in it, that the Persian King was obliged to compound with them, and agreed to pay them half the Custom of this Port, and five Horses every year as a Tribute, and withal allow them to have a House here with their Standard on it, wherein an Officer resides to receive the said Tribute, and 11000 Tomans per Annum, which they have since agreed on, as an equivalent for the half Customs. Moreover, they were exempted from the Severities of the Mahometan Law, granted power over all Christians dwelling here, and other Priviledges. Altho' the Air is excessive hot, and they have no Water but what they save in Cisterns when it rains, yet Trade invites so many people hither, that according to Gimelli there are 10000 Inhabitants. One great Addition to the Trade of this Town is, that it is the Market for Pearls caught at the Island Baharen and other places in the Persian Gulph. (Gimelli.)

The Island BAHAREN lies near the North-East Coast of Arabia-Felix, in the mid-way between Bassora and Ormuz. The largest, brightest, roundest and most truly Oriental Pearls are found here. They Fish for them twice a year, that is, in the Months of August and September. Many Boats with Divers go out at that Season, and work every Day Eight or Ten Hours, in which time they fetch up abundance of Oysters, and in most of them Pearls. So great a quantity of Pearls are caught here, that Gimelli says, the Fishery yields 110000 Crowns per Annum. Nieuhoff says, the Profit is 500000 Ducats a year, besides what the Officers share; and that the Fishery begins in June, and ends with August.

Keckmishe, an Island of three Leagues in Circuit, about six Leagues distant from Ormuz, (or two Leagues in Circuit, and three Leagues from Ormuz, as Nieuhoff) is notable for its Fertility, bearing plenty of Wheat and Barley, with which it supplies Ormuz, and hath also a good Spring of Water. (Tavernier and Nieuhoff.)

Laraza, another small Island near Ormuz, altho' of sandy Soil, is well Inhabited, and has store of Deer on it.

* I am not unaware, that Nieuhoff declares this King to have been a most powerful and wealthy Prince, possessing not only this Island, but also a large part of both Persia and Arabia. But I am inclined to believe, that Author took it upon trust, for 'tis more probable, that Ormuz should be Subject to the Dukes of Lar, who as we have told you, were considerable Princes, than that the King of so small and barren an Island should be Master of Armies sufficient to conquer Lar, with other Provinces of Persia, which Nieuhoff makes part of his Dominions.

Before we proceed, it will not be improper to add a word or two concerning the PERSIAN GULPH, or Sea of Elcatif, as it has been sometime called, which is a large Bed of Water, lying between the Coasts of Persia and Arabia-Felix, about 50 Leagues wide in the middle part, but contracting narrow to a quarter of that breadth at the two ends. It commences in the West, in the 68 Deg. of Longitude, from the Gulph of Bassora, which is made by the influx of the two great Rivers Euphrates and Tigris United; and extends Eastward to the 75 Deg. Long. where Cape Muce, a promontory of the Province Udama in Arabia-Felix, by stretching forward into the Lat. 25. Deg. 30. M. shuts it up into a Mouth of not above 12 Leagues over, near the middle whereof as we have said the Island Ormuz is seated, and with the other two Islands abovementioned, intirely command the Passage. There are divers other Islands in it both on the Arabian and on the Persian Coast, but none of them, except those abovementioned, are considerable enough to need Description. But to return to Land.

The Province of KHERMAN or Caramania, lyes next to Farsistan on the East, having the Arabian Sea on the South, Sigistan on the East, and a Desert on the North. The Country is Mountainous, and the upper grounds Barren, but the Valleys are reasonably Fertile, and yield variety of odoriferous Flowers, especially Roses in great plenty, which affords a profitable employment to the Inhabitants, who Distill them, and sell the Water to Isfahan. Here is also found a Drug which is a Sovereign Antidote against Worms. The Province is large, but the greatest part of it is a barren Desert. (Olearius.) The Gaures or Ancient Persians, that adore Fire, inhabit this Province. Tavernier. The chief Places here are Kerman or Caramania, the Capital, is a good Town where Cloath of Gold is wove, and the best Scymitars are made. Tavernier. tells us the Sheep of this place bear the finest Wool in the World, which they shed after eating new Grass. An Earthen Ware is made here, hardly inferiour to the China porcelain.

Darabegerd, the ancient Passegarda, where was the Sepulchre of the Great Cyrus, is reckon'd one of the chief Cities.

Barmasir, Bisir, Bem, Choabis and Trizirest, are named by Olearius, as chief Cities of this Province, within the Limits whereof also stand Jesques, a small Port Town sometime possessed by the Portuguese, who built a Fort on it, but in 1623. the Englifo expelled them, and delivered it to the Persian. (Herbert.) And Guadel another small Port; as also Armuta, whence Ormuz is supposed to be denominated.

On the East of Kerman to the Mountains, which divide Persia from India, lyes the small Province of MAKERAN, part of the ancient Gedrosia; but is commonly included in Kerman, and the general Accounts of Travellers omit the Distinction; The Carra, or Imen River, which rises in the Mountains of Sigistan, passes thro' the middle of this Province, and falls into the Sea.

Pasir, which may be supposed to be the Bisir mentioned by Olearius, seems to be the chief City, altho' Maceran a small Town nearer to the Sea. gives name to the Land, and Gesi is by others, reckoned the Capital.

SIGISTAN, which is the ancient Drangiana, lyes on the North of Makeran, having Sablustan for its Northern Bounds; the Mountains of India on the East, and the Desert of Caramania on the West. It is a Mountainous Country, and no ways not able enough to invite Strangers into it. 'Tis true, the Road by Land from Persia to India, lyes thro' this Province, but the Country is so Barren, Mountainous and Sandy, that few Travellers care to venture it: but choose rather to go by Sea.

Sirizistan, the Capital City, is by some represented as a good Town, but no particular account of it is to be found among Travellers, and so we must pass it over. Phradeg, the ancient Prothefia, said by Amianus Marcellinus, to be a rich City, is by Dr. Hoylin supposed to be still considerable. Camultan, Kets, Fardan, Masurgian, Masmah and Haba, are set down by Geographers, as the names of chief Towns in this Province.

SABLUSTAN, the ancient Paropamissus, lyes next to Sigistan on the North, extending Eastward to the Frontiers of India. 'Tis a Country so covered with barren Mountains, and some of those so high, as to hide the Sun-light from the Valleys; and withal so little productive of any thing beneficial to Mankind, that it has always been a place of small Habitation, and very little visited. Places named, as chief Towns of this Province, are Bust, Becksabath, Asba and Savenaz.

On the East of Sablustan, lyes the Province of CANDAHAR, the greatest part of which is Subject to the Great Mogul. But the chief City, after divers Revolutions, hath for the last Hundred years been Subject to the King of Persia. The Province was a small Kingdom, and its Prince so wealthy, as to have all his Utensils of pure Gold, but the great Neighbours of Persia and India always contending for it, the last King was fain to surrender, and put himself under the Protection of the Persian, with condition however, that he and his Race should be perpetual Governours.

Candahar, the chief City of the Province to which it gives name, is a populous and wealthy Place, by reason of its being a staple of Trade between Persia and India, the Merchants of both Nations, and even those of Tartary and Turkey resorting hither, to vend their respective goods, but the Town it self affords no commodities of use or value. Being a Frontier, it is very well guarded, having a strong Castle, seated on a Rock, in the middle of the Town, and on the South and East, it is defended by a strong Wall, but on the West, it needs no better defence than Nature has given, to wit, mighty Rocks.

Sha-Abas, left to his Grandson Sha-Sefi, the peaceable possession of this City, but in his time, Alimerdan Ken, Son of the last King, being Governour, delivered it up to the Great Mogul. Sha-Abas, II. recovered it in 1650. and kept it, altho' Sha-Jehan, the great Mogul, with an Army of 300000 Men, attempted to regain it in 1651. Nor had the future Sieges better success, and the Persian still holds it. (Tavernier.)

CHORASSAN, the ancient Aria and Bactria, lyes on the North of Sablustan and Sigistan. This is a populous and fertile Country, and one of the most considerable in Persia, according to Olearius. It produces the best Manna in the World, and hath a Rock of the Turquois Stone, so excellent, sent that the King allows none to be sold but to himself. The chief Cities here are,

Herat or Erat, otherwise named Serbeni the Capital, is very strongly situated, being surrounded with a good Wall and deep Channels, or rather the River nigh which it stands, deduced and led quite round the City, the Work as 'tis said of Tennierlain; it is a Place of very good Trade, being resorted to by Indian Merchants. They make here excellent Tapistry, and abundance of Rose-Water, from the great quantity of Roses growing in the neighbourhood. (Olearius.) The City is very large, and even 13 Miles in Circumference as some report.

Mesched, Meschat or Mexet, called also Thus, seated at a good distance to the North-west from Herat, is surrounded with a noble Wall, whereon stand 300 Towers says Texeira. A City famous for the Monument of Iman-Rize, one of the 12 Persian Saints of the Family of Hay, which in Wealth and Beauty is said to equal that of Selsiel Sefi at Ardebil. Nichabour, a goodly City, near which the excellent Turquoise-Stones are found. Thum, Tuieskiliki, and Thabes-messinam are all considerable Towns, and eminent for the Silk Manufactory. (Olearius.) There are also in this Province many other Cities of good Trade and very Populous, but the particular State of them is not come to our knowledge.

ESTARADAD together with KHOEMUS, is the most North-east part of Persia, extending to the River Oxus or Fibun, which divides this Kingdom from Tartary. It is a Mountainous Country, and except near the Banks of the two Rivers Margab and Aras which run thro' it, the Soil is sandy and barren, but in that part 'tis plain Champain Land, Fertile and Pleasant, producing Grapes of a wonderful magnitude. The Inhabitants are a mixture of Persians and Tartars, whose chief Cities are, Tashat, Ferabat, or Farbar the Capital, seated in the North part of the Province, near the Banks of a fresh Water Lake named Sahacimber. Manuwe, seated on the other side of the same Lake. Indion, the ancient Alexandria-Margiana, by Dr. Heylin nam'd as the Capital of the Province. Zarbas, seated on the River Margab, Damkam and Amul.

With which we finish our Account of Persia; and having hereby brought you to the Frontiers of Tartary, we shall choose to survey that Great Country, before we enter India and China, which will be the more proper, in regard that both those Empires are govern'd by Princes who came from thence. But we must first take notice of the Caspian-Sea, which lies between Tartary and Persia.

The CASPIAN-SEA, so called as we have elsewhere said from the Caspia, a Nation dwelling near its Banks; or otherwise HYRCANIAN-SEA, denominated as we have also told you from the Province Hyrcania now Mazanderan, whose Shoar it washes, is a very large Bed of Waters quite surrounded with Land, and destitute of any known Efflux, and is therefore by some Writers stiled a Lake. Seated between the 39th. and the 46th. Deg. of North Latitude, and between the 69th. and 77th. D. of Longitude. It was formerly represented in the Maps as of Oval form, extending 200 Leagues from East to West, and 150 from North to South: But modern observations have discover'd that in Form, it nearer approaches an oblong Square: Whose longest side is from North to South; which according to Olearius is 120 German Leagues, and its breadth from East to West 90 of the same Leagues; on the West it is bounded by Circassia and Schirwan; on the East with Estarabad and the Usbeg-Tartary; on the North the Nagayan-Tartary; and on the South Gilan and Mazanderan, two Provinces of Persia. The Persians call this Sea Kulsum, or otherwise the Sea of Baku. It receives the great River Volga, which it self is like a Sea for largeness, and near 100 other Rivers into its Bosom, and yet is never encreased or diminish'd; nor is it observ'd to Ebb or Flow. This constant Plenitude has given rise to many Speculations, and Conjecturers imagine it must necessarily have Subterranean Communication with either the Black-Sea, altho' that be 120 Leagues distant, or with the Persian-Gulph, which is near 200 Leagues from it. For the last Opinion Father Avill a modern Traveller brings this Proof, namely, that near the Coast of Asian there is in the Caspian-Sea, a mighty Whirlpool which sucks every thing in that comes near it, and consequently a Cavity in the Earth there; and in the Persian-Gulph there are found to flow on the Waters, a great quantity of the Leaves of Willow-trees but no Willow-tree grows any thing near that Sea, and very many are seen on the Caspian; therefore they are carried by Subterranean passage from thence to that; it does not concern me to refute or confirm this Opinion, and therefore shall leave it as I find it, with this remark only; viz. Since the Opinion of the Caspian-Sea's communicating with some other, is taken up chiefly on the account of the continual equal fulness of its Waters, it will be worth while to consider more attentively the quantity of Vapour, that must be drawn up by the Sun in that hot Climate, which will be easily computed, if you consult the Discourse on this Subject, written by that very Judicious and Accurate Naturalist and Mathematician Mr. Edmund Halley, extant in the Philos. Transact. and then consider whether the influx of the Rivers be more than Tantamount. The Water of it is as salt as other Sea-Water, notwithstanding the old Opinion to the contrary, as Olearius assures us: Neither is it of a black Colour as some have represented. It has many Islands on it, but none large or inhabited, except one named Ensil near Ferabat, where a few Hutts only are built for the Fishermen that inhabit it. This Sea has various kinds of Fish, (notwithstanding the old Opinion that there was but one sort, and that of monstrous form) as we are assured by Olearius from Occular Testimony. Lastly, the best Havens in it are that near Turki, which is made by the Island Tzenzini and the Land of Circassia; that near Menkischlai in Tartary, and those of Baku in Schirwan, Lenkeran and Ferabat, both in Mazanderan or Tabaristan. This Sea is very little Navigated except by Cossack Rovers, who Pillage all they meet.

EASTERN TARTARY

TARTARY, called the Grand Tartary, to distinguish it from the lesser Tartary in Europe, of which we have spoken, is the Ancient SCYTHIA and SERICA. I do not reckon in the Sa maria here, altho' that be generally included in the bounds of Tartary, because we have already spoken of that part of Tartary, which it composed in treating of Muscovy, and the Dominions of the Czar to whom it is subject. In that part we carried our Reader beyond the great River Oby, which is generally reckon'd the Boundary of Europe; and having also there spoken of the Kingdom of Astrachan in the South: The limits of Tartary we are now to speak to, is reduced to a smaller extent than the common computations of Geographers make it. Moreover the mistake in the computation of Longitude, which we spoke of in the Preface, being now Corrected, the extent of Tartary Eastward is much contracted; for whereas the old Maps made the Coast of Tartary extend Eastward ward to the 180th. Deg. of Longitude, but if we comply with the Modern Corrections, it cannot be allowed to extend to above the 150th. or at a most the 160th. Deg. Longitude.

So that amidst the various and confus'd Accounts, the best we can agree with, as being most consonant to the Observations, is that which places Tartary between the 75th. Deg. and the 160th. Degree of Longitude, and between the 49th. Deg. and the 80th. Degree of Latitude, which makes about 4000 Miles in length, and 2400 in Breadth, and is agreeable to Cluverius, who makes it 1000 German Leagues long, and 600 broad. Dr. Hiclin indeed makes it 5400 Miles long, but then he goes so far Westward, as to include the lesser Tartary, which is part of Europe, and so not to be consider'd here.

The Soil of a Country so large cannot be told in a single Character, the Climate is so different, that to be sure the Products of the Earth must be various: But according to the best Accounts, the Southern parts of it would be fruitful if duly cultivated. 'Tis true even there the Land is much encumber'd with Mountains, and further upward much more, so that upon the whole we hear of no profitable Commodity brought from thence, but Rhubarb, which it seems grows very freely here.

The People are an off-spring of the Northern Scythians, who came down Southward about 500 Years ago, and like the Goths in Europe, and the Sarazens in Africa, carri'd all before them. They conquer'd Persia and a great part of Asia-Minor, as we have already told you, and tho' they were beaten thence, they forced their way Westward and established a Monarchy in the Taurica Chersonesus, which has continued above 300 Years. They are of short squall'd Statures, broad faced, fallow Complexion, and of most rude and barbarous Behaviour. They eat the Enemies they slay in Battle, and drink their Blood in Carousings; their common Food is the Flesh of Horse or other Beast eaten raw, and their best Drink Mare's-Milk. 'Tis said, the Cows here will not stand to be milked while they have Calves, and when they have none they are dry, which may be the reason of the Use of Mare's-Milk. They are strong of Body, swift of Foot, vigilant in time of Service, and patient under the Fatigues of Hunger and Cold. They scorn Agriculture, and laugh at Europeans for feeding on Corn, at the expence of so much Labour. Their Wealth consists in Cattle, and their Employment in Grazing. They so far condemn a fix'd Habitation, that 'tis a Curse with them. may you live in the same Place, till the Stench of your own Dung offend you: Wherefore they never build Towns, nor even repair those they gain in their Conquest; they exercise no Manufacture, nor maintain any Traffick except in Slaves and Horses, whereof they sell great numbers into Turky and Persia; and for that reason in Plundering an Enemy, they make most of the Children which they are sure to carry off, and in this Trade their Barbarity extends to the Sale of their own Children, and those of their Neighbours that they can steal. In Religion they were originally Pagans, as the Northern Inhabitants still are, but in their Incursions into Turky, they became Mahometans, and so a great part of them still are. Christianity was Planted in Schythia in the Apostolick Age, by St. Andrew and St. Philip, and had large footing there before the Tartars came down and overthrew it; there are still Christians among them, but very ignorant, and corrupted with the Heresie of Nestorius.

They Rove about in Hords or Clans with Carts for their Baggage, and Tents for their Habitations, which they pitch where they find a good spot of Pasture, and when that is eaten up remove to another.

Such a Generation you may suppose are not under very regular Government; but as the most rude Nations do for their own convenience submit to Governors, so here are some, but how many and with what Powers, we are not informed.

The Great Cham, whose Imperial Seat is said to be at Cambalu, has been much talk'd of as the Sovereign Lord of this vast Tract of Land, and to whom all the Inhabitants pay Tribute. The old Accounts represent him as a most Potent, Wealthy and Arbitrary Prince; who Prides himself so much in his own Grandeur, that when he has Dined the Trumpets sound, and a Herald proclaims that the other Princes of the World may set down to Meat: But where this Cambalu is seated is not well agreed on, for the old Accounts of Paulus Venetus seem to point at Pekin, beyond which there is no City known that will answer his Character of it. They all tell us 'tis the Capital of Cathay, which is that part of Tartary, which lies on the North and East of China; so that the Power of that Monarch if such were still in being, would be known to the Chinese, who themselves possess a great deal of that Country; and if they knew any thing of him, we should have hear'd it in these latter Days, when the inquisitive Jesuits have brought us thence such particular Accounts of all notable things. 'Tis probable therefore that this Monarchy, which was so great in the Days of Tamerlain, is now broken into small Governments. The Origine of that Monarchy is plac'd by Historians in Cingis or Zingis, a bold adventurous Fellow of Tartaria-propria, who with the pretence of a Vision from Heaven commanding him, put himself at the head of his Clan; a People who having been oppress'd by their neighbour King of Tenduc, were ready for desperate Action: and was obeyed by so large a number, that he soon made himself Master of the neighbouring Countries, and being saluted King by his Followers, marched against the King of Tenduc and overcame him. Afterwards he invaded and conquer'd Cathay, and changed the name of Scythian to that of Tartarian. He Reign'd but six Years, that is, from A.C. 1162. to 1168. and was succeeded by Jocutham, otherwise called Hoccatc. In his time the Tartars invaded Europe, and his Successor Zain-cham or Bathu enter'd the Minor Asia and Syria, where they ruined the Turkish Kingdom of Damascus. Haalon the Brother of Mango the Great Cham, in the middle of the 13th. Century took Begdat, and conquered all Chaldea, Affyria and Persia. Tamerlan, Timur-lenk, or Tamar-cham, by all which names he is mentioned in History, began to appear in the Year 1335. and from a small obscure beginning, rais'd himself to a Throne, whether merely by his Valour as some set forth, or by the Marriage of the King's Daughter as others, I cannot pretend to determine. 'Tis certain he very largely encreased the Tartar Dominion, as the Histories of those times. (A. 1370 to 1400) do abundantly declare. His Regal-Seat was at Samar-cand the Capital of Usbeck, whence he made Excursions into Persia and India, the former he entirely conquered; and the latter in part was made Tributary to him. And Lastly, the proud Bajazet Emperor of the Turks became by Conquest his Prisoner. His great Empire was too large for one Governour, and and therefore it seems to have been divided among his Sons. The names of the Successors in Tartary recorded in History, are Lutrochin, Allan, Mengo-Chem, Cubley-Cham, Temor-Cham, Demy-Cham, who reigned about the Year 1540. None of these performed any Actions that were considerable enough for History, and so we hear nothing of them nor their Successors.

As to the Conquests of India and China, altho' performed by Tartars, the Great Chem does not appear to have had any hand in it. For Mirzab-Babor who invaded India, altho' a Descendant of Tamerlain, was in his best Estate but Prince of Zagathay; and Xunchi who invaded and conquer'd China in the last Age, was King of Niuche the Eastern part only of Cathay.

The best that I can discover of the present State of Tartary, is, that the Muscovite is Supream Lord (but with very little Jurisdiction) of the Western Part, and the Chinese of the South and East Part. These Monarchs maintain Garrisons at convenient distances, and so command a Road, for an Army to March far into the Country, in case of any formed Design of the Tartars to annoy them; which has been found to be the most effectual way of curbing this wild Nation.

The Division of Tartary according to Geographers is thus,

TARTARIA-DESERTA, which was the Ancient Sarmatia Asiatica, comprehends Samoieda, Lucanaria, Siberia, Casan, Bulgaria, and Astracan, spoken of in our Account of Muscovy together with Circassia, which we have also mentioned in the Chapter, wherein we treated of Georgia and its neighbouring Countries.

ZAGATHAY, bounded by the Caspian-Sea on the West; by Turkestan on the East; the River Jaxartes divides it from Tartaria-Deserta on the North; and on the South is bounded by the Northern Provinces of Persia. It is in Modern Stile called also Usbeck or Mawarahnabar; this is reputed the best cultivated Part of Tartary, and the Inhabitants maintain a good Traffick with Persia. The Places of chief Note here, are Samarcand, which was the Regal Seat of the Great Tamerlain, a large City built of Stone, with a Castle for its Defence, seated in a most pleasant Valley, and having a Gymnasium or University for Mahometan Learning. Zabasse, seated at the mouth of the River Oxus or Jikun, and Birkent, in the Mid-land are mention'd by Cluverius as Places of Trade.

TURCHESTAN, lies next on the East extending to the Frontiers of Cathay, having Tartaria-propria, or Real Tartary on the North, and the Northern Provinces of Indostan, or the Mogul's Empire on the South. It is otherwise called Tibet, by which name 'tis known in India. A Country as Desert and ill Planted as the rest of Tartary, says Dr. Heylin; whose Inhabitants are Civil and Polite enough, says Cluverius. Tibet is named by Travellers as the Capital City, and Dr. Heylin mentions Crustins as a Town of Trade resorted to by Russians and Zagathayans.

TARTARIA-PROPRIA, or VETUS, the Real or Ancient Tartary, so called because it was the Country where the Tartars originally inhabited. Is the Northern Part, extending quite from the Desert in the West, to the utmost North-east limits of the Continent where the Sea of the Kaimakites, and the Straights of Anian terminate it: Having the great frozen Tartarian, or Scythian Ocean on the North, and Turkestan and Cathay on the South. It contained in its old Estate many Nations or Hords of People, whose names are lost, and their respective Countries now not known. Dr. Heylin names these Six, Tsibet, Tabor, Tenduc, Barbu, Anian, and Tartar. And the Regions of Ung and Mongul, Gog and Magog, are spoken of by Learned Men as seated in this Country. Chief Places here, are Mongul seated on the Lake Coras, thro' which the River Tartar runs, not far from the Fortifications of the ancient Kings of Tartary. Tartar or Tattar, near the Spring-Head of the River of that name, whence the Nation take there denomination. Chakan or Chamak, on the Southern Bank of the River Ghamas. Carantia, on the Banks of the Lake Carantia or Kitay, whence the River Oby has its Source. Coras, the Place of Burial of the Kings of Tenduc, and Caracoras, where Cingis was made King. The Ancient Kings of Tenduc bore the Title of Prefter or Presbyter John, because says Dr. Heylin he was both King and Priest; a Name by corruption given afterwards to the King of Abyssinia in Africa.

Lastly CATHAY, which was by the Ancients named CERICA, is bounded on the North by real Tartary, on the South by China, on the West by Turkestan, and on the East by the Sea and the Strait of Jesso. This Country bears a better Character than the rest of Tartary, having cultivated Lands, and neat well built Towns; and so well replenished with all sorts of Wealth, as not to give place to Greece or Italy, says Cluverius: But his Author I am apt to believe spoke of China. Dr. Heylin tells us, it is a Country of very large extent, 1500 Miles he says, whose Western part is Mountainous and Barren, but the Eastern Part abounds with Wheat, Rice, Wool, Hemp, Silk, Musk, and great quantity of Rhubarb. There are also Camels and Horses in vast numbers, and the Country is well provided with all things necessary for Life; the Air is extream hot in Summer, and miserably Cold in Winter; the People of much better Wit and Address, than the other Tartars, live in Houses and adorn themselves with sumptuous Apparel. Places of chiefest Note here, are Cambalu, a most populous and Wealthy City, the Capital of the Empire of the Grand Chem, and very much frequented by the Merchants of India and China, 'tis five German Miles (that is 20 English Miles) in Circumference, and surrounded with twelve Suburbs according to the number of its Gates, thus far Cluverius, and judge if he must not mean Pekim. Others make it nine Miles in Circumference, and say 'tis otherwise named Muouchu: But the most Judicious are of Opinion, these things are spoken of Pekim, which Europeans had never seen when they were written: And that City being but a little within the Wall, and frequently infested with Tartars for many Ages, when the Chinese Court was kept at Namkim, 'tis not at all improbable that the imperfect Rumors of that City, might be applied to this. Where the real Cambalu was seated does not appear, but the old Maps Place it too far Northward, (as the new Editor of Dr. Heylin wisely enough observes,) to be so opulent a place as these Accounts render it.

Having thus given you a view of Tartary according to the Geographers, we shall now look into Travellers and give you their Accounts of it.

Tartary (says Seignior Gimelli) is all the North Part of Asia, it is divided by the Chinese into the Western and Eastern, the former possessing all the Country lying beyond Pekin, along the Frontiers of Indie and Persia to the Frontiers of Muscovy. And the Eastern Tartary reaches from the Province of Leatung (which lies just without the Wall of China) Eastward beyond Japan, and contains the Countries of NIUCHE west of Corea, NIULHAN North of Nuche, TUPY East of Niucke, the Country of TESO North-east of Japan and East of Tupy.

These Countries are poor and ill Peopled; there being in them only two or three Cities, and all the rest wild, either Woods or Mountains.

The Jesuit Father Verbieft who travelled with the Emperor of China, into the Eastern Tartary in the Year 1582. gives us this Account. From Pekin to the Province of Leatung, the way is about 300 Miles North-East; and cross the Province of Leatung 400 Miles more, North-east, this Country is somewhat Mountainous: from the Frontier of Leatung, to the City La or Ula, the way still North-east, is 400 Miles. All the Country beyond Leatung is exceeding Desert, where nothing is to be seen, but Mountains and Valleys, with the Dens of Bears, Tigers and other wild Beasts. You can scarce find a House, except poor Reed Huts upon the sides of some Brooks and Streams. All the Cities and Towns we saw in Leatung, which are numerous, are entirely ruined; one can see nothing thro' the whole Country, but old ruined Walls with rubbel Bricks and Stones. In the outskirts of those Cities, there have been of late some few Houses built without any Order, of Earth or the Rubbish of the old Buildings covered with Thatch. Abundance of Towns which were here before the War are so entirely destroyed, as not the least Footsteps of them to be seen; for the Armies forced the Inhabitants into the Wars, and destroyed their Houses to take from them all thoughts of returning. The Capital of Leatung which is called Xin-yam, is a fair City and pretty entire, and has still the Remains of an ancient Palace. It lies by observation, in the Latitude of 41 Deg. 56 Min. (Oh! that he had made an observation of Longitude too) and there the Magnetick Needle is subject to no Declination. The City Ula which was the extremity of their Journey, lies in 44 Deg. 20 Min. Lat. the Needle declining from South to West one Deg. 40 Min. On the North side of Xin-yam in the Hills, at small distance from the Town, lies the Sepulchres of the Ancestors of the present Race of Chinese Emperors. Kirin 400 Miles North-east from Xin-yam, seated on the Banks of the River Songoro is another City, into which the Emperor entred in State. From thence travelling 32 Miles on the River, they arrived at Ula, which is the fairest in all this Country, and has been formerly the Seat of the Empire of the Tartars. The River Songoro is full of Fish a little below Ula: it rises in the Mountain Champe, at a great distance to the South, which Mountain being the ancient Seat of the Tartars, the Emperor he says, knelt down on the Banks of the River, and bowed to it three times in Reverence. Our Author went no farther than Ula, but he tells us by information, that Ninceritia a Place renowned in those Parts, is 700 Chinese Stadia of 360 Geom. Paces each, distant from Ula to the North-east, seated on the great River Heleum, into which the Songoro falls. And that sailing down the River whose Course is North-east, they arrived in 40 Days at the Eastern Sea, as I was told says he, by the General of the Militia at Kirin, who had himself performed this Voyage.

I omit his Table of Distances, because he has committed to give us account what those Places were, whether Villages, Towns, Castles or Cities. But I must not omit to observe, that in his Relation he mentions the Distances in Miles, and in the Table sets them down in Chinese Stadia as he calls them, which makes a vast difference. And yet if those Stadia are reduced to what he speaks, viz. 360 Geometrical Paces, the way will appear too short (being not quite 400 English Miles) for so long a Journey as he pretends to make it; and therefore with submission to better Judgment, I think a medium ought to be allowed.

The next Year the same Author travelled with the Emperor 600 Miles into West Tartary, of which Country he gives us the same Account, namely, that it is Rude and Mountainous; but speaks not here of any Cities or Towns at all. Thus far Father Verbieft.

The Embassador sent from the Czar of Muscovy, to the Emperor of China in the Year 1693. gives us this Account of Tartary; namely,

That he set out from Muscovy on the 13 March, and travelling North-east and South-east, thro' divers Provinces which we have already describ'd in our Account of Muscovy, he came to the great River Oby on the 1st of August, and passing by Surgut a City lying on the Oby, in the Lat. 61 D. and Narum another City in 57. 30. he embark'd on the River Ketto which falls into the Oby a little below Narum, and after a Month's rowing against Stream, he arriv'd at the small City of Mokuisko, and in two Days more at Jenezeskoï, a City seated on the River Jenska, in the 57 D. Lat. and according to the Map that goes along with these Travels, in the 100 D. of Longitude. the whole Country thro' which he passed was wild and uncultivated, inhabited by a Rude Pagan People whom he names the Ostiacks, among whom no Provisions or Necessaries were to be had. Jenezeskoï is well supplied with Fish out of the River which is large, the third part of a Mile over, and convenient for Navigation, as flowing in a direct Line Northward into the Ocean. The City is considerably large and Populous and the Fortrefs pretty strong, govern'd by a Magistrate appointed by the Czar. Several Villages lie round about the City, and the Land is proper for Agriculture, producing Corn, Cattle and Fowl very plentifully. The Tungusians who live along the Banks of the River are subject to the Czar, and pay Tribute of Furs at this City. From thence passing forward near the River Tanguska which falls into the Jenska, and the Ilney which falls into the Tanguska, he arrived at Ilenskoï. The Inhabitants hereabouts are barbarous Pagans, and exercise diabolical Conjurations, which they confide much in. From thence he passed on to the Fort Burantz among the Burattians a Pagan People, and afterwards to the Fort of Bulaganski, in the same Country; the People have small Houses, and do not change there Habitations, are richly stocked with Cows, but utterly ignorant of Agriculture. In Summer time they go abroad in great numbers to hunt down the wild Beasts, which serves them for a Winter Store. They have no Money, but sell Oxen and Camels to Travelers for such Necessaries as are offer'd, whereby they buy them very cheap. The People here are Robust and larger Statur'd than usually the Tartars are: the Musk-Cat is found here.

The next City he came to was Jekutskoi, seated on the River Angara, which rises in the Baikal-Meer, (eight miles from this place) in the Lat. 55. D. and Longit. 110 D. This City was not long since Re-built, and provided with good Fortifications, and has also large Suburbs, round which lyes good Fertile Land, where Corn grows plentifully, and the City is well furnished with all sort of Grain, Salt, Flesh and Fish. It is inhabited by Russians, under a Governour appointed by the Czar, and takes its name from the River Jekur, which falls into the Angara over against it. Passing over the Lake of Baikal, which is 16 German Leagues wide, he arrived at Kabanja, another Russian Castle, in 10 Days time, and in another Day at Ilinka, another very large Town inhabited by Russians, whose chief employment is Sable Hunting. Thence in another Day at Tanzienksky, which is a Castle provided with a strong Garrison of Cossacks to cover the Country from the incursions of the Mongolians which border on it. From thence crossing the River Silinga, in four or five Days he came to Udinskoi, seated on the small River Uda, which falls into the Silinga. This is a City and strong Fortress seated on a Hill, with a good Garrison of Russian Cossacks to secure against the Mongolians, who often come upon them and steal their Cattle. The Country hereabouts is Mountainous, and therefore improper for Tillage, but produces Garden-herbs and Roots in plenty. Here begins the Province of DAURIA, a Desert Country, thro' which Travelling in barbarous Roads, over high and dismal Rocks for three weeks time, they arrived at the Castle of Jarauna, Garrisoned with Cossacks, and inhabited by Russians. Here the Tartar Inhabitants are called Konni Tunguzi, who live on Sable-Hunting, and sell the Skins for Money to the Russians. From hence thro' difficult ways to the City of Felimba, which is a Fortification wherein live many Russians who exercise Sable-Hunting, here being found as rich black Sables as are in Siberia. Hence passing by the Village Platbischea, over some Mountains, and along the River Schilka, they arrived in two Days more at Nerzinskoi lying on the River Nerza, which rising more Northward, falls here into the Schilka. This City is strong, being provided with several brass Cannon, and a great Garrison of Daurian Cossacks both Horse and Foot. It stands among Mountains, but has Champion ground in the Valleys, which they Till, and produce enough for their necessities. Nerzinskoi lyes in Lat. 52 D. Long. 123. D. and is a good wealthy place by means of a Traffick which the Inhabitants maintain to China. Here are two sorts of Heathens the Konni-Tunguzians and the Oleni Tunguzians, who have for a long time lived in Subjection to the Czar, being obliged to appear in Arms at the command of the Governour of Nerzinskoi, the former on Horseback, and the latter on Foot to oppose the Incursions of the Roving Tartars. They are good Soldiers, and attack the Mongolians at great disparity of Numbers. They are in Religion and Manners like the other Tartars except that they are of the civiler sort, and live in Hurts, which however they build so as to remove at pleasure. They ride much on Horseback, the Women as well as the Men, and go a Hunting like the Burarians in the Summer for Winter Provisions, they use Bows and Arrows as indeed all the Tartars do, and are excellent Marks-men.

From Nerzinskoi, passing the River Schilka, and thence Travelling 10 Days Southward, by the Banks of the River Argun, they arrived at Argunskoi, which is the last Fortress the Czar has in Tartary. Hitherto we have Travelled almost directly East, since we left the Ob, and have already made a Journey of at least 40 Degrees, which in this Latitude, wherein Degrees of Longitude are 35 Miles and half, amounts to 1420 Miles. We now pass South East 750 Miles more, before we arrive at the Wall of China. Argunskoi, as we have said, stands on the Banks of the River Argun, which flows from North to South, and falls into the River Amur, which flows Eastward, till it fall into the Ocean. Upon this River pretty far Eastward, the Czar had Castles and Dominion, before the year 1685, when by Treaty between the two Monarchs he'd Nipcheu, it was agreed that this River Argun should be the mutual boundary of the two Empires. Beyond this River, lyes a great uninhabited Wilderness, and beyond that the whole Country from the the River Amur Southward, and even Northward as is pretended, was the Kingdom of Nieuchieu, [that is the Country of the Ancestor of the present Monarch of China] thus my Author; but that does not well agree with the general opinion, which places this Kingdom much more Eastward. After many Days Travel thro' the Wilderness, they arrived at the Jalischian Mountains, which are exceeding high, and lye in the Latitude of 48 D. the Country abounds with Harts, Roebuck and wild Sheep, and large Flocks of Wild-Geese, Ducks, Turkeys and Partridges, the Rivers (whereof they passed divers) are well stocked with Fish. And the Air is Temperate. The Valleys afford pleasant Pasture; and in effect being past the Mountains, they entered a very agreeable Country, adorned with Trees of various kinds, Oak, Lime, &c. and bushes of Hazel-nut, well filled with Fruit (it was in September) which led to another high Mountain, upon the Top of which, was the first Chinese Guard or Watch, who stop Strangers, and send them to the main Guard at Mergeen, a Town at some Distance on the left. Next they passed by the Hurts of Targazians, another Clan of Tartars, who are Subject to their own Chief, but pay Tribute to the Emperor of China. They Till the Earth and breed Cattle, whereof they have Horses, Camels, Kine and Sheep, they affect to ride upon Oxen; and are good Artists at making Bows which are esteemed the best in Tartary.

Hence passing along the Banks of the River Jalischian through beautiful Pasture Grounds, watered with delightful Streams, and pleasant Woods, which ravishes the sight; they afterwards Travelled for three Days in as much the contrary, between Mountains and Rocks without Water or refreshment which terminated in a plain, but very barren Field, which with a Days Travel brought them to the City Xixigar, the Capital of a very pleasant Province, where live a Clan of handsome Tartars. Then journeying three Days, they entered the Country of the Mongolians, another Clan of Tartars, Subject to the King of China, and at four Days end came to the old City, or the Ruins of a City pretended to have been built by Alexander the Great; and in four Days more they arrived at a City called Bugan Koton, or Idol City, which is also in Ruins. And then they passed the River Selara Murin, and through some Villages to the Country where the King of China comes every year a Hunting, which is a Rocky Mountainous Country, and leads to the famous Wall of China, which shall shall put an end to our Description of Tartary, supposing that by this time, we have given our Reader a pretty good Idea of the present State of it, for we have carryed him one way Eastward, about 3 or 400 Miles beyond the Wall of China; and now brought him above 2000 Miles from the West, to the same place, and done this from the Relations of two Persons of indubitable integrity, who actually Travelled the Land, they describe, which is certainly the best manner of declaring the true State and Extent of any Country.

And thus having viewed all the North and West Part of Asia shall proceed to the East, and pass through India, the Islands in the Indian Sea, China and Japan.

THE EAST-INDIES.

Of the EAST-INDIES in General.

SOME Geographers have extended the East-Indies as far as the Eastern Ocean, comprehending China and Japan under that general Name: But according to the Opinion of the best Writers, and according to the common Acceptation, by the word East-Indies, is understood only, I. The Empire of the Great Mogul. II. The Peninsula of India within the River Ganges. III. The Peninsula of India beyond the River Ganges. And IV. The Islands in the Indian Ocean.

The vast Tract of Land generally known by Name of INDIA, is situate between China on the East; Persia on the West; Tartary on the North, and the Indian Sea on the South. The most Southern Part (being the Peninsula of Malacca) shoots out to the first Degree of North Latitude, but the Bay of Bengal which flows between the two Peninsulæ of India; ascends to the height of 22 Degrees, so that only that Peninsula lyes within the Torrid Zone. The Mogul's Empire lying mostly within the Tropick of Cancer, and extends Northward to the 41 Degree of Latitude. As for the Longitude, there have been great Mistakes, the Dutch Maps make Surat lye in the 106 Degree, and Sanfon places it in the 109. Whereas our Mariners by their Observations make it about 78 Degrees from the Lizard, that is, 87 from Teneriff, and about 90 from the Island Fero, which does not much disagree from the Observations of the best Astronomers in the World, viz. M. Hévelius, Mr. Halley and M. Galler; as we find by the Account (published in the Philos. Transact. Feb. 1682.) of the Meridional Distance between London and Ballasore, a place in the Bay of Bengal, in the Latit. of 22, which was found to be 86 Deg. 24 min. to which adding 17 D. 10 Min. the distance from Teneriff to London. it amounts to 103 D. 54 Min. but Ballasore stands 12 Degrees Eastward from Surat, so that that being deducted, there rests 91 Degrees or thereabouts for the Longitude of Surat from Il Pico in Teneriff. Having fixed this, we may venture to say with our Map, that India extends in Longitude from the 82 to the 130th Degree.

Whether the Name India was derived from the River Indus, or from the Hindows who were the ancient Inhabitants, and from whom came the word Indostan, that signifies the Country of the Hindows, is not easy to determine: But it is called East, to distinguish it from America, which bears the Name of the West-Indies.

The Air is exceeding hot, especially in the Southern parts, which would be utterly uninhabitable, if it were not for the set Seasons of Rain and Wind, wherewith the Countries lying in the Torrid Zone are cool'd and refresh'd. These Regular Winds, which are call'd Monsoons, are observed to blow constantly from one Corner, for four or five Months every Year, namely, from the North or rather North-East (according to Dampier) from October to March; and the contrary from April to September: both which refresh the Land, one with Coolness and the other with Rain.

The Soil of these Countries is generally good, producing not only plenty of Corn, Fruits, Fish, Fowl, Pasture and Cattle, but yields also the most valuable Spices and Druggs; Indico and Cotton; Mines of Diamonds, Tin and in some places Gold, Iron, Copper and other Metals: The Seas yield Pearl and Coral; and the Forests are full of Lyons, Tygers, Elephants, Rhinoceros, and many other wild Beasts; But the Country is much infested with hideous Serpents, and most noxious Vermin.

The chief Rivers of India in general; are, 1. The Indus, which washes its Western Bounds. 2. The Ganges, which rises in the Mountains that divide Tartary and India, runs through the middle of the Country, and falls into the Bay of Bengal. 3. The Caor. 4. Cosmin and 5. Pegu, issue from the Lake Chiamay, on the Frontier of Tartary and China, and fall into the Gulph of Bengal. 6. The Menan, issuing from the same Lake, falls into the Gulph of Siam. The Padder and Gemeni in Guzarat and Cambai; the Guenga in Golconda; the Nagundi in Bisnagar, and other smaller Rivers will be spoken of in their proper places. Suffice it at present to say that India is in general very plentifully watered with large and commodious Rivers.

The Mountains of India are many. A great Ridge called by the Ancients Caucasus, Taurus and Imeus, runs along on the West side between Persia and Indistan; as doth another Ridge, on the North between the same Country and Tartary: In the Peninsula of India within Ganges, the Mountains de Gate or Ballagate, continue all the length of the Country from Narsinga to Cape Comarin.

The Religion of India, except where Christianity has prevailed, is either Paganism or Mahometism; the latter having been brought hither out of Tartary or Persia, and the former was the Religion of the Hindows or Aborigine Inhabitants of this Country, and taught by the ancient Brachmans: They acknowledge one Supreme Eternal Omnipotent Being, Creator of all things; from whom they say proceeded three Cares, viz. Burma or Brama, the Care of making all things: Vishnu or Bisna, the Care of preserving all things: And Maubadeeb or Ixora, the Care of destroying all things: Of these three Gods they tell a World of ridiculous Fables, too long for us to insert. They have other smaller Deities and Saints to whom they pay Religious Worship, in their Pagods or Temples, whereof they had one in every Town and Village; and those in Cities or large Towns were built of Stone with great Magnificence and rich Decorations: but Mahometism has prevailed so much, as to destroy a great many of them. The Bramines or Priests pretend to be the Offspring of the Brains of their God Brama, and are exceedingly revered: They wear no Garments except a Cloath about their middles, and now and then a loose Gown over their Shoulders; they feed on Herbs, Fruit, and the like, religiously abstaining from all things that have Life, and will on no Account kill, though it be a Vermin: They have some Learning, and are generally esteemed the wisest Men of the Nation: They use a peculiar Character and Language, which like our Latin, is the learned Language; and must first be studied by the Pupils that come to them for Instruction. There are many ridiculous Ceremonies in the Gentile Religion; but the most barbarous is that of burying the Wife with her Husband, which is practised in the Indies; begun either on a Religious Account (great Rewards of Blessing being promised to the Wife that does it) or on a political Account as some imagine, to prevent the Women's poisoning their Husbands, as they say they us'd to do; however it began, it is religiously observed by the Hindows; but in regard that the Government in Indostan is Mahometan, the Magistrates restrain, and wont permit the Woman to be burnt without leave, which is not very easy to obtain; and indeed not at all, if she have Children. But then she must put her self into a State of Penance, or endure the utmost Flouts and Contempt from her Neighbours and Friends.

The Christian Religion was undoubtedly planted very early in India. St. Thomas is generally believ'd to have preached the Gospel and suffered Martyrdom there, in the City Maliapur, now St. Thomas, on the Coast of Coromandel. That Apostle had Converted many, and Baptized the King and most of his Nobles, before the Bramines murdered him: And Christianity flourished considerably, till some Pagan Princes making Incursions, sacked Meliapur, and forced the Christians to fly to the Mountains, whence they descended into Malebar, and in process of time had Bishops and Priests sent to them by the Patriarch of Muzel in Syria; a Succession whereof continued to the time that the Portuguese came into these parts. But these Teachers brought with them the Heresy of Nestorius, with which the Portuguese found them much infected; but otherwise very good Christians, having the Bible or at least the New Testament among them in the Syriack Language, receiving the Sacrament, using Prayers to, and professing Faith in God and the Blessed Trinity; and observing the same Calendar, Feasts and Fasts with us: And though Christianity was in as low estate as ever it had been, when the Portuguese arrived, they found fifteen or sixteen thousand Families in and about Cranganor, who sent to Vasco de Gama in the Year 1502, desiring to be receiv'd under the Protection of the King of Portugal. Emanuel that then reign'd, having receiv'd Encouragement from the Pope, sent over several Priests and Fryars, who preached the Gospel (but with the Corruptions of the Romish Church) with great Zeal, and good Success: John III. who succeeded him, spared no Cost or Pains to propagate Christianity in India, and to that purpose sent over Father Francis Xavier, who by his Pains and Piety instructed the People, and by Strictness of Life and Virtuous Disposition, so wrought upon them, that as the Portuguese brag, vast Numbers were converted. The English and Dutch Nations also have contributed their Parts to the propagating Christianity in India, so that though the Inland Country be still Heathens and Mahometans, the more civiliz'd People on the Coasts are pretty well reconciled to our Faith.

All the Princes in India, from the Great Mogul, to the least King of an Island, are Absolute in their Authority, and execute an uncontrouled power over the Lives, Liberties and Estates of their Subjects. Are never approached but with the utmost Submission, nor admit any Client who comes empty handed, a Present being always made at every application for Justice, as well as other business. As this Creates a great dependance on the King, so it causes a Laziness and Despondency in the common People, for to what purpose should Men be industrious, when they cannot reap the benefit of their Labour, and when Wealth cannot be transferred to their Children, but on the contrary makes them the more obnoxious to ill treatment from their Governours. Those of the Pagan Faith (tis supposed) Bury their Money upon a belief it will be useful to them in the other World: And the Mahometans care little for laying up: The richest Governour spends all he gets, and thereby alone can secure himself from the ruin which the Envy of his Wealth would create. And the Land is so far from being a property, that the same Man seldom possesses two Crops; nay, Gimelli tells us, the Great Mogul sometimes takes away the Land that is Tilled, and gives the poor Peasant other that is Fallow. But the People bear it with great Patience, and know not what Liberty is: contenting themselves with sorry Houses, ill furnished, and Food as ordinary. The common Food is Rice, and Drink, Water. There being no Wine in India, they debauch in Rack, which is a Spirit distilled from Rice, and the lower sort in Neri or Tary, which are the juice of the Toddy and Palm Trees, a pleasant beauvrage, and not unlike Wine. The better sort much affect to Chaw Areck, which is a sort of Nut; this wrapt up very neatly in the Leaf of the Betele-Tree prepared with Lime, is a Regale in Visits; and is generally used all over the Indies. It provokes spitting, makes the Lips red, red, and is reckoned to be good for the Stomach.

The remote Distance of India from Europe, may make it worth our Enquiry by what steps we obtain'd to intimate a Knowledge of it; for considering how vast a Tract of Land lies between it and the Mediterranean Sea on one side, and how large an Ocean floweth between it and us on the other side; it would be extremely wonderful that we should ever have procur'd the Commodities of those Countries in so plentiful a manner, if we were not acquainted with the Wit and Industry of these latter Ages, wherein Men adventure to pry into every Corner of the habitable World. The first Knowledge of India seems to be owing to Alexander's Expedition; for after he had conquered Persia, we are told by Curtius and others, his Ambition led him into India, where many Nations submitted without bloodshed; and Porus who is thought to have possessed the best part of what is now the Mogul's Empire, resisting him, was vanquished and made Captive. Some Authors are apt to believe he penetrated as far as the River Ganges, but 'tis more probable he went but a little way beyond the Indus, and returning, followed the Course of that River down to the Ocean; and that it was near where Diu now stands that he erected the mighty Altars in imitation of Hercules's Pillars, and left those vast Beds, Armour, Birts, &c. to amuse future Ages. Ptolemy and the ancient Geographers speak of 5000 considerable Cities, and as many Nations in India. Where the Brachmans or Indian Philosophers were celebrated, and honoured with the Title of Gymnosophists by the Greeks. But the Knowledge of India proceeding chiefly from the Trade thither, we were to be sure very little acquainted with it, before the Europeans found the way by Sea: For before that time all the Traffick into India was carried on by the Persians, Arabians and Moors, who brought the Jewels, Spices, Silks, and other valuable commodities of these Countries, partly over Land, and partly by the Red Sea, to Alexandria and other Ports in the Mediterranean; whence the Venetians, Genoese and Florentines brought them to Europe: by which Trade the Princes of Syria, Arabia and Egypt, as well as the Merchants of those Countries and Italy were exceedingly enriched: Till by the Assistance of the Mariner's Compass, the Astrolabe, and other useful Instruments then newly invented, the Portuguese were enabled to launch out into the Atlantick Ocean, coast the whole Continent of Africa, double the Cape of Good Hope, and find the way by Sea to the East-Indies. Of which Navigation and the Settlements of Europeans in India, we shall set down as particular an Account as the brevity of our Work will admit; imagining it may be an agreeable Entertainment to our Reader.

Of the first Voyages from EUROPE to the EAST-INDIES.

THE Discovery of the Coasts of Africa in order to a Voyage to the East-Indies, was first attempted in the Year 1410. by Don Henry Son to John I. King of Portugal; who gave all possible Encouragement to it. But in 53 Years time that he lived, they had got no farther than the Coasts of Guinea; and after his Death there was little Progress made in it, till the time of K. John II. who resuming this Matter with great Zeal and Courage, first sent out Bartholomew Diaz, who doubled the Cape of Africa, to which K. John gave the Name of Good Hope: and afterwards sent Medo Covillan by Land, who travelled as far as Canon, Calecut, and the neighbouring Places; whence crossing the Indian Sea, he passed over to the Coasts of Zanguebar in Africa, and by the information he received there, concluded that the same Coast continued from the Cape of Good Hope; so returning through Ethiopia, came back safe to Lisbon, and gave the King so much Encouragement, that he made all necessary preparations to set out a large Fleet for that Expedition, but dyed in the Year 1495. before it set out.

Emanuel his Successor, prosecuted the design, and in the Year 1497. Vasco de Gama with four Ships and 160 Men set Sail from Lisbon, and Sailing along the Coast of Africa, he doubled the Cape, and came to Mozambique on the East Coast of Africa, in the 15th Deg. of South Latitude, where being kindly entertained, he staid for some time, receiving instructions for the prosecuting his Voyage, and as some relate, he found there that most useful Instrument the Mariner's Compass. But with more probability it may be said, that it was not then unknown, for 'twas five Years before this, that Columbus set out on his discovery of America, wherein we may reasonably conclude, he had the use of the Compass; and if the Spaniards had it, undoubtedly the Portuguese, who were the chief Navigators at that time, would not be without it. But to proceed, de Gama parting from hence, prosecuted his Voyage, and in two Months more discovered the Coast of Malabar, where Anchoring near Calecut on the 20th of May, 1498. He sent some Men ashore for discovery; who by good Fortune met with a Moor that understood Portuguese, and acquainted them with the State of the Country; and by his means the Zamorin or Emperor of Calecut was informed of their Arrival. This Prince received them very kindly, and was ready to have entered into a League with the King of Portugal, when the Arabians and Moors, who were the Men that carried on the Indian Trade to Europe hitherto, being alarm'd at the arrival of the Portuguese, and foreseeing the loss of their Trade, if these Men were admitted; apply'd themselves to the King, and laying before him the Advantages that he and his Country had received by their Traffick, and declaring, that in case the Portuguese were admitted, they would leave him; so wrought upon the Zamorin, that the Portuguese were no more favoured but insulted; Wherefore de Gama finding himself not safe, and having in a great measure performed what he came for, viz. discovered the East-Indies; he returned home, and arrived safe at Lisbon in September, 1499.

And now the discovery being made, the next business was to establish a Trade there; to which purpose the next Year, Pedro Alvarez de Cabrale was sent out with a Fleet of 13 Ships and 1500 Men, to oblige by fair or foul means the King of Calecut to permit them to settle there. Of these Ships, but six perform'd the Voyage, for the rest were either sent back, as unable to perform the Voyage, or cast away. Arriving at Calecut, he was entertained with unexpected kindness by the Zamorin, a House given the King of Portugal, and liberty granted to lade their Ships before any others. But their old Enemies the Moors soon made a difference, for the goods were so bought up by them, that notwithstanding the Zamorin's order, the Portuguese could have none, which made them set upon the Moor Ships and take the Goods thence ; to revenge which, the Serazens assaulted the Portuguese House, and killed many of the Men ; for which Affront, Alvarez, not able to get redress by fair means, set upon 10 Arabian Ships in the Port, killed the Men, unladed the Ships, and battered the Town with his Cannon ; and then leaving Calecut, he sailed to Cochin, where he was very kindly received, furnished with the Commodities he wanted, courted by that King and those of Coulam and Canonor, and thence returned home with a very rich Cargo, and arrived at Lisbon, in August 1502. In the mean time, John de Nova was sent out with another Fleet to recruit de Gama, but missing him, he laded his Ships at Cochin and Canonor, and came safe to Lisbon.

And now the King of Portugal assumed to himself the pompous Titles of Lord of the Navigation, Conquest and Commerce of Ethiopia, Arabia, Persia and India ; and to maintain that Title, sent out Vasco de Gama a second time, with the Title of Admiral, and a larger Fleet than ever ; with which he sailed directly to Cochin, whose King Trimumpara was a sincere Friend and generous Assistant to the Portuguese against their Enemy the Zamorin of Calecut : Having laden his Ships, and dispatcht his Affairs at Cochin, he sailed towards Canonor, but was met by 20 stout Ships from Calecut, which he quickly defeated, took two of them, and returned to Portugal, leaving Vincent de Seabra with six Ships to cruise on the Coast, and hinder the Commerce of the Arabs and Moors. As soon as de Gama was gone, the Zamorin fell upon Trimumpara and drove him out of his Kingdom, because he would not quit the Interest of the Portuguese. But Francis and Alphonso d' Albuquerque arriving the next Year, at Cochin, they soon drove out the Zamorin, and reinstated Trimumpara, and by his permission built a Castle for the Security of the Portuguese, which after was encreased to a Town, and may be called New-Cochin : having done this, laded their Ships, and settled a Factory at Coulam, they returned to Portugal, leaving Pedro a valiant Commander with 300 Men, and three Ships to oppose the Zamorin : With this small force the Portuguese did Wonders, repulsing the Calecutians in all the Attacks upon Cochin, and supported Trimumpara in his Kingdom. The next Year they were reinforced by a considerable Armada from Portugal under Lopez Suarez, and acquired a mighty Reputation in India.

The Portuguese having thus in some measure established themselves in India, King Emanuel sent Dom Francisco d' Almeida in the Year 1505. to reside there with the Title of Vice-Roy : This Prince maintained the War with great Courage and Hazard, during the five Years that he governed. And Alphonso d' Albuquerque that succeeded him, took the Island and City of Goa, which was then made, and has ever since continued the Seat of the Government of the Portuguese Asia : from hence they sent out Armies and Fleets, and extended their Conquests far and near, establishing Factories, not only all along that Coast of Malabar, and the other of Coromandel, but also all along the Bay, and the Coasts of Pegu, Siam, Malacca, and on most of the Islands, and possessed for a long time the whole Trade of the Indies ; till the English and Dutch Nations put in for a share with them. Since that time the Portuguese Trade daily declined ; and in the War with the Dutch, in 1662. &c. they were almost expelled these Parts, having at present besides Goa, few Places of any Importance there. So much for the Portuguese.

The Discovery of the East-Indies happened in the Reign of our King Henry VII. who was a Prince that loved his Money too much to send it abroad in such hazardous Adventures ; and as he refused Columbus Assistance in the Discovery of America, so he neglected the Trade of the East-Indies. His Son Henry VIII. was otherwise employed all his Reign, as were his two Successors. But Queen Elizabeth having happily settled Affairs at home, and having the Temptation of annoying her Enemy the Spaniard, applied her thoughts to Foreign Expeditions, and on that account set out Sir Francis Drake, in 1557. with Commission to infest the Spaniards in all their distant Plantations. That great Man passed the Magellanic Streights, and in the South Sea on the Coast of those rich Provinces of Chili and Peru, took many and great Prizes from the Spaniards, and then stood over to the East-Indies, where touching at the Molucca Islands and at Java, was kindly received, and having sufficiently informed the Natives of the Power and Grandure of the Queen of England, came home by the Cape of Good Hope, and arrived safe with great Wealth, after an absence of three years, and having quite gone round the Globe. This seems to be the first time that English Men had seen the East-Indies.

In 1586. Tho. Candish, Esq; with like Commission as Sir Francis Drake, set out on a second Circumnavigation of the Globe, which he also happily performed in two years and a quarter. He, after he had sufficiently annoyed the Spaniards in the South Sea, stood over to the Ladrone Islands, thence to the Philippines and to Java, and so home by the Cape of Good Hope.

In 1591. James Lancaster, made a successful Voyage for Trade to the East-Indies.

Being thus well informed of the Benefit of the Indian Trade, and instructed in the way thither, our Nation resolved to put in for a share of it, and therefore having formed a Company, who advanced 72000 l. they obtained a Charter of Incorporation from the Queen, bearing Date, Dec. 31. 1600. whereby George Earl of Cumberland, Sir John Hart, William Candish, James Lancaster, and others to the number of 216. were constituted a Body Politick, with Power to them and their Successors to Trade to Africa and the East-Indies, forbidding all others so to do. This Company immediately set out a Fleet of five Ships, who carried a Letter from the Queen to the King of Achin on the Island Sumatra, where they safely arrived, and delivered the Letter, and were very kindly received. But the Portuguese who were settled there, and at that time being Subject to Spain included in our Wars with that Nation, interested themselves exceedingly, in opposing us at Achin, and accordingly with all their Arts, endeavoured to set the King against us. But as he was a Man of too much Virtue to be led by them, and withal, the Fame of our glorious Victory over the Spanish Armada in 88. having reached his Ears, he was so far from being made our Enemy, that he became a very hearty Friend, inasmuch, that he not only entered into a Capitulation of very favourable Terms for our Trade there, but also was so kind to lend us his Assistance, in disappointing the Portuguese in all their Plots and Designs against us. Here they took in some Pepper, and passed on to Bentam in Java, where they settled a good Correspondence correspondence and Factory: Took a rich Portuguese Ship in the Straights of Molucca, and having settled a Factory at Achen, returned Home with a very good Cargo. From this time Ships were sent every Year, and endeavours used to settle Trade in all Parts of the Indies: But the Portuguese and the Dutch, by Arts with the Natives, and their own Villanies, rendered the Trade very uncertain, and the Ships did not always return well laden. The first Voyages were directed to the Islands, and the chief Commodities they brought back were Spice. But at the same time Agents were employed to obtain a Trade on the Continent: To which purpose Treaties with the Great-Mogul were set on foot, wherein were employ'd Mr. John Mildenhal first in 1604. and Captain Harkins afterwards in 1609. Both these Gentlemen push'd the thing with great Zeal, and frequently brought the King to a good Temper, but by the Insinuations and Tricks of the Portuguese, he was always perverted, and for several Years the Trade thither was very precarious. The Dutch were always in like manner our Enemies at Golconda, and on all that Coast, as well as at the Spice-Islands. All which to be sure must have rendred the Trade unprofitable, but that did not discourage the Company, for they continued their Trade with Diligence. And at last (October 1612.) a Treaty was concluded with the Great-Mogul, whereby we were allowed free Trade, and to settle Factories in his Dominions. And finally in the Year 1614. Sir Tho. Rowe went Ambassador from King James I. to the Great-Mogul, and got an Establishment of such Privileges, as were necessary for our security in Trade. Our Nation has accordingly ever since, kept Factories in divers Places of that King's Dominions. And in the same Year 1614. our Ships were got as far as Japan, where they made a Treaty with the King, and settled a Factory which lasted some time. Soon after Madraspatan on the Coast of Coromandel, was obtained of the King of Golconda, with liberty to build a Noble Fort call'd St. George, which is the Seat of our English Sovereignty on that side, and general Factory for all the Company's Affairs beyond Cape Comorin, as Surat is the chief resort for all Affairs on this side that Cape. Our Nation hath also the Sovereignty of the Island Bombay on the Coast of Cambaja. The Island Angediva, near Goa. Fort St. David's near Negapatam, on the Coast of Coromandel, purchased by the Company about 20 Years ago. And Factories at Ouzley, Cassumbezar, Patana, Deca and Ballasore in Bengall; at Agra, Amadabat, Cambaya, Brodra, Baroche, Dabul, Pettapoli and Matfulipatan, with several others in the Dominions of the Great-Mogul; as also in Syam, Cambodia, Tonquin, &c. At Achin, Prinim, Ticon, Fort Bencouli and Jambe on the Island Sumatra. Likewise in the Island Borneo, at Succedmo and Bandermaffin; and in Celebes at Macasser.

The English might easily have made themselves Masters of many other Places, as the Portuguese and Dutch have done, but that they always chose rather to carry on a peaceable and quiet Commerce with the Inhabitants, than by violating the Laws of Nations, to Enslave and Rob them at the same time both of their Wealth and Liberty; on which account they have been every where kindly entertain'd, and preserv'd an unspotted Reputation.

The States of Holland, as soon as that Republick was in a condition to spare her Men and Ships, from the defence of the little Country they had got possession of, had their Eye on the East-India Trade, which they wisely foresaw would exceedingly enrich themselves, and weaken their Enemy the Spaniard; to which purpose they at first endeavour'd to find out a new and nearer Passage thither by the North, along the Coasts of Norway, Lapland, Nova Zembla and Tartary; but their Attempts at several times proving unsuccessful; in the Year 1525. they fitted out Four Ships, under the Command of Cornelius Heurman, who having been before employ'd in the Service of the Portuguese, not only learnt the Method of Sailing to those Coasts, but was also well versed in the manner of Trafficking. Thus he set Sail the common way to the Cape of Good-Hope, continuing his Course to Madagascar, Sancta-Maria, and Antongil, and came to Sumatra on the 12th. of June 1596. Afterward he pass'd to Bantam and Tuba in Java-Major; and also to the Islands of Madura and Bally; whence returning homeward after a tedious and difficult Voyage, arriv'd in Holland in the Month of August 1597. without making a Return of Profit answerable to the Expectation of the Merchants. However they were not all discourag'd from the like Adventures, but rather animated by a Prospect of Gain; insomuch that the next Year, 1598. no less than 80 Ships sail'd out of the Ports of Holland and Zealand, either for the East or West-Indies, of which Five were sent out by the Authority of the States General, under the Conduct of Balthazar Mussier. Divers considerable Voyages were likewise made by Oliver Noor, George Spitberg, and James Van Nee, besides other of lesser note, undertaken at the Expences of private Persons, or petty Companies of Merchants of Amsterdam, Rotterdam, Zealand, Brabant, &c. until the States thought fit to unite all the Adventurers into one Society, to Trade upon a common Stock; freely permitting any Persons to come in at first, but prohibiting all others to Traffick, or repair to any Harbour from the Cape of Good-Hope to the Coast of China for 21 Years, to commence from the 20th. of March, 1602. Whereupon, within a little while was rais'd a Fund of 600000 Pounds Sterling, which in Six Years time was augmented to near five times as much, besides a yearly Dividend of 30 or 40, and seldom so low as 20 per Cent. Thus the Hollanders, having in process of time settled themselves in the most remarkable Places of the East-Indies, and ingrossed almost the whole Spice Trade, began to found a Commonwealth in those Parts, govern'd by a Stadt-Holder, as potent as the other in the Netherlands; although his Office, which was formerly for Life, now continues only during three Years; nevertheless in State and Grandeur he exceeds not only the Stadt-Holder of the United Provinces, but even most Princes in Europe. Indeed, the Strength and Greatness of the Hollanders are at present come to so high a pitch, as to dare to contend with the most powerful Monarchs of the Levant, being able to put to Sea a Fleet of 40 or 50 Men of War, and at the same time to maintain an Army of 30000 Men on Land. For on the Coast of Malabar they possess Onor, Barcelor, Mangalor, Cananor, Cranganor, Cochin, Coulam: On the Coast of Coromandel; Tuticorin, Negapatam, Karkalle and Palleacate, which they commonly call Guedria. In the Peninsula, Malacca. In the Island of Ceylon, Negumbo, Columbo, Galla, Baticala, Tinquimala, and Jeffnapatam. A Fortrefs in the Isle of Manar. In Java, Batavia, anciently known by the Name of Jaccatra. Factories in Borneo, Celebes, and divers other Places, besides besides the entire Possession of the Islands of Bima, Ambonia and Banda, and several Forts on the Molucca's, &c. They likewise keep Factories in almost all the Trading Towns throughout the whole Continent of Indie, endeavouring, if it were possible to get in to their Hands the Monopoly of all manner of Commodities, as they have of Spice.

The Danes and French, in emulation to other European Kingdoms, have likewise sought for a Share in the Traffick in the East-Indies. The former indeed have establish'd a considerable Trade in the Bay of Bengal, and on the Coast of Pegu; as also in some little Islands toward the South, but are Masters only of two Places, whereto they repair, both lying on the Coast of Coromandel, viz. Krankbar and Dansburg. The French in the Year 1664. erected a Company for the Commerce of the East-Indies, which having fixt their chief Residence and Factory in the Isle of Madagascar, on the Coast of Africa, should from thence Traffick into Persia, India, China, Japan, &c. But they have not been able to carry on their Design with the expected Success, although they still continue earnestly to prosecute it, and have lately got some Interest in the Court of the King of Siam.

Thus much in general of the East-Indies.

Ptolemy, Strabo, and the other ancient Geographers, divided India into Two Parts only, that is, with respect to the River Ganges; the Western being stiled Intra, and the Eastern Extra Gangem. But in regard that Indostan or the Empire of the Great-Mogul, lies on both sides that River, and is all subject to one Prince, 'twill be more proper to reckon that as one Part. And the Two Peninsule or large Promontories, that launch out into the Indian Ocean, on each side of the Bay of Bengall, we may reckon Two other Parts: So that the Continent of India is divided into Three Parts, viz.

- I. INDOSTAN or the Empire of the Great-Mogul.
- II. The PENINSULA of INDIA within, or on the West side the River GANGES.
- III. The PENINSULA of INDIA beyond, or on the East side the GANGES.

Each of these contains many Kingdoms, as will be seen in the following Survey of the whole.

MOGU-

MOGULISTAN or INDOSTAN,

The EMPIRE of the GREAT-MOGUL.

THAT Main Land of INDIA, which now composes the Empire of the Great Mogul, had formerly the name of INDOSTAN or HINDOSTAN, i. e. The Country of the Hindows, which was the general Appellation of the Gentile Inhabitants, who were the Original Possessors of it. But the present Race of Monarchs who have for 300 Years last past, had Dominion here, being of the Tartar Extract, the Indians have given them the name of Moguls, whether from the whiteness of their Skin, in comparison of the Tawney Indians, or from the Nation of Mongul Tartars, I cannot Determine, for each Opinion has its followers. From this Name, the whole Country bears the name of Mogulistan.

The Bounds of it are, Tartary on the North; the Peninsula of India within Ganges, and the Sea called the Bay of Bengal on the South; India extra

N Gangem,

Gangem, or the Kingdoms of Pegu and Ava, and Thibet on the East; and Persia on the West; extending from the 20th. to the 40th. Deg. of North Latitude, and from the 82d. to the 115th. Deg. of Longitude. The Form of the Country is almost Square, and contains 1500 Miles from East to West, and 1200 from North to South.

In respect to the Heavens, it is seated under the Third, Fourth, Fifth and part of the Sixth Climates, whereby the longest Day in the North part is 14 H. 43 m. and in the South part 13 H. 16 m. thus the South Part lies within the Torrid-Zone, and the other Parts are generally excessive Hot. But in the hottest Part of the Year, the rainy Monsoons refresh the Earth and cool the Air, to the very great relief of the Inhabitants. For as at Sea in the Parts lying between the Tropicks, the Winds are periodical, and blow constantly from the same Quarter at the same times of the Year, so here at Land, the Rains return constantly at July, the reason of those periodical Winds, called Monsoons or Trade Winds, has been accounted for in our Introduction, by that very Judicious Philosopher Mr. Edmund Halley. The reason of the Periodical Rains, was attempted by Mr. Bernier from his own observation on the spot; who gives us this Judgment on it; namely, The excessive Heat of the Sun at that Season of the Year when these Rains happen, has these two effects, First, It exhales vast quantity of Vapour from the neighbouring Seas, which hangs condensed in thick Clouds in the middle Region of cooler Air. And Secondly, The same Heat exhales all moisture out of the Earth, and exceedingly Rarifies the Air over it: Whence it most naturally comes to pass, that the Clouds from the Sea, being driven by the Wind over the Earth, are easily received into this finer less resisting Air; and withal the Heat of the Earth at that time attracting, the Clouds do necessarily discharge themselves and fall in Rain. Which is confirmed by the Observation, that the sooner the Heat begins, the sooner do the Rains come, and also that the Rains begin not till some Days of Cloudy Weather be passed, whence we may infer, that the Spaces more forward that are equally rarified, must be first filled with Clouds, which most probably submit to the force of the Wind, and fly on till they are stopped by more dense Air, or perhaps opposite Winds. But to proceed,

These Rains put the Earth into so due a temper, that the Plants spring up with incredible speed, and that in most various sorts, and delicious kinds. Rice being the Corn of most general use, is chiefly cultivated, but they want not Wheat, which grows plumper and finer here (says Sir Tbo. Row) than in Europe. Grass is cut and used green, not made into Hay. Their Gardens are planted with delicious Fruits, such as Dates, Figs, Prunello's, Pomegranates, Plantains, Tamarinds, Anana's, Brindoins, Jambo's, Cayans, Myrobolans, and others, unknown in Europe, as well as Mango's, Almonds, Coco's, Oranges and Lemons (but of these last not very good) the Areck and Berele-Trees; and the eatible Roots, as Carrots, Potato's, Onions, Garlick and Ginger. In short, the Mould is fat and rich, and produces all the necessary and beautiful Plants and Flowers that can be expected in the Climate. But it must be noted, that the Land is in many Parts incumbered with Mountains, which being of sandy Soil are Steril; yet these have their Excellencies in yielding Stones of Value, as Jasper, Agar, Granates, Chrysolites, Amethysts, Rubies, and some Diamonds.

The Roads are frequently shaded with large tall Trees, whereof many grow here, whose Wood is of much more solid Contexture than any in Europe; and one Tree especially remarkable, I mean that commonly called the Bannean-Tree, which spreads it self so, as to make in a manner the whole Forest it self; for the young Boughs bend downward till they touch the Earth, and there take fresh Root, and become a new Tree joined to its Mother, which goes on in new Plantations to innumerable Trees, all conjunct and proceeding from one Mother Root. From the Palm and from the Toddy-tree, the People by wounding the Trunk extract a Juice, which issues plentifully, and is a delicious Drink called Tary and Nery, which the Women and common People drink instead of Wine, whereof none grows in India. They have the Art of Distillation, and extract a rich Spirit from Rice called Arack, which is drank by the better sort.

Cattel and wild Beasts are plentiful, as Sheep who have great fat Tails; Oxen with a great Bunch on the Back; Buffalo's whose skin is smooth without Hair, their Flesh is not very good, but their Milk is pleasant; Goats and Deer very common, being not enclosed in Parks as here; Elks and Antelopes very strong and fierce; Apes and Baboons very numerous. For Service here are Asses, Mules, Dromedaries, which are very swift of Foot, Camels and Oxen, which are generally used for drawing Coaches, Wagons, Plow, &c. they are mettlesome and active, and will Trot at a good round rate. Horses are not Natives of this Land, but are brought from Persia and Arabia, and therefore highly prized, and very kindly used, they are of curious make and Colour, high Mettled, and used only in War and Pleasure; for want of Oats and Barley, they feed them with a Corn called Dona somewhat like Tares, which they boil and mix with Butter and Sugar, [the Translator of Gimelli makes a merry Remark on this, but many other Travellers speaking the same thing, I believe that Remark was needless.] They have plenty of Elephants, which grow 30 Years and live to 100, in full Stature are 15 Foot high, yet as easily govern'd as a Horse, except at Rutting time, at which time they break out into violent roving. The Rhinoceros is another Creature Native of this Land, he grows to the Stature of the largest sized Ox, and is covered with a Hide as tough as Horn, which lies in Folds like Armour upon his Back, and has in his Nose a sharp strong Horn growing upright. The Forests are fill'd with Lions, Tygers, Wolves, Jackalls, and other wild Beasts; as also Serpents of wonderful Magnitude; and the Houses are infested with Lizards, Scorpions, Moschires, &c.

They have Fowl both tame and wild of very many kinds, and their Rivers yield excellent Fish.

For Sale, the Land yields Cotton which is the prime and Staple Commodity, Indigo, Sugar, Opium, Asa-Fetida, Aloes, Borax, Salt-petre, Lacque, and other Gums; Cassia, Camphor, Sandal-wood, Precious-stones; Bezoar-stone found in the Stomach of a Goat; the Serpentine-stone found in the Head of a Serpent; Civet, Ginger, and other Drugs. All which together with the Manufactures, as Calico's and Muslings of all the finest Sorts and Stains, wrought Silks of many kinds; Cabinets, Escritoirs, and other curious Wood Works very finely lacquer'd, and many other pretty Toys, are Commodities that please please the World so well, Europe especially of late Years, that not only all sorts of useful Commodities are brought to exchange for 'em, but even so much Silver is paid to ballance the Trade; that some compute, that the greatest Part of the Wealth of the whole World centers in India.

The PEOPLE of Indoſtan are generally handsome and well made, none being crooked or deform'd. The Indians are of an Olive, or dark Tawney Complexion, the Moguls more fair. They are of strong and quick Apprehension, ready Wit and good Fancy, and Ingenious in all manner of fine Manufactory. They are Civil to Strangers, profoundly Submissive to their Governors; Timorous and Cowardly to their Enemies, and mean Spirited in their common Actions; the Rajapores, Potans and Rashootes excepted, who are Courageous, and esteemed good Soldiers. In RELIGION, the Mogul's are Mahometans, and the Natural Indians are Pagans. These last generally believe a Metempsychosis or Transmigration of Souls, whence they are extremely scrupulous of killing any living Creature, lest they disturb the Soul of their Ancestor. They are divided into many TRIBES, who constantly Herd together and Marry in their own Clans; there are 84 Tribes of them: The chief whereof are, the Brachmans or Bramines, which are the Priests; the Rajapores, who are of Princely extract, and profess Arms; the Banians who are Merchants; the Rasbotes or Curterys, who profess Arms, but live upon Rapine, and submit not to the Government, these pretend to be the Descendants of Raja's; the rest being generally Mechanics, are comprehended under the compellation of Soods or Wjses. All these constantly pursue the Profession and Trade of their Family, and marry Daughters of such; so that a Carpenter's Son must be a Carpenter, and marry a Carpenter's Daughter, and a Smith's Son a Smith, and so on. The Mahometans are less stiff here than in Turkey, and are more civil to Christians; they marry four Wives, but the Indians take but one at a time; however, those too make it up in Concubines, which they generally keep. The Wife of the Indians as we have elsewhere said, must be burnt with her Husband, unless the Governor forbids it. These two People are known by Europeans, under these two general Denominations. MOORS and GENTILES, the former being the Mahometans, and the latter the Pagans.

The BUILDINGS of the Common-People are generally low and poor, but the Publick ones in some of the chief Cities are very Pompous. The Materials are Brick, Timber and Stone, and sometimes Marble. In Towns of Trade they have Sheds or Bulks before the Houses, which serve for Shops to set out Goods for Sale; and they every where plant Trees about their Houses, which makes the Towns seem at a distance like Forests. The Houses are not above two Story, and have flat Roofterraces'd for convenience of receiving the Evening Air upon them. The inside Furniture is but ordinary, a Mat or Carpet on the Floor, and the Walls painted, with Cushions or Pillows round about to sit cross'd legg'd upon is all. The better sort have them in richer manner, and have Court-yards wherein they have Tanks or Ponds of Water, which are fed from some distant Well or Stream, and shaded with Trees: this with their Sarrajs or Entertaining-room, and their Gardens they Pride themselves in, and therefore make as fine as they can. In their Visits they are always presented with Betele, which we have elsewhere told you, is chaw'd with Pleasure by all Indians.

The Diversions are Hunting and Fowling, of both which here are much Game. They TRAVEL in ill built Coaches drawn by Oxen; and the better sort in Palanquins, which are kind of Couches carried: upon Men's Shoulders. The Wagons or Carts for carrying Goods, are drawn by eight or ten Oxen, which being ill built, are commonly attended by Pions a sort of Soldiers, who at a small Pay go along with Caravans to hold up the Wagon from overturning in bad Way. In Travelling you must carry Provisions, for there are no Inns upon the Road.

Their Weapons in War are Bow and Arrow, Sword, Buckler, Lance, and sometimes Fire-Arms, but these last they care not for, as too violent for their Cowardly Natures. A Train of Artillery attend the Army, whereof some are very large Pieces.

The Indian LANGUAGE has an Affinity with the Persian and Arabick, but is reckon'd smoother and easier pronounced, and is also very comprehensive. They have a peculiar Alphabet, and write from Left to Right. The Persian Language is used at Court; and the Ecclesiasticks use the Arabick. They have Aristotle and Avicen in Arabick, but study them little; being in general but indifferent Scholars. Astrology is in great Repute with them; and at Legerdemain and strange Feats of Activity, they are most wonderful Artists. The Tricks play'd by these People, seem to be beyond Humane Power. They take very little Physick, and rather choose to cure Diseases by a strict Regimen. They have no Clocks or Sundials, but measure the Time by Water dropt out of one Vessel into another, which a Man attends, and strikes upon a Brass Pan when 'tis empty. The Day is divided into four Parts, and the Night into four Parts.

The common MONEY of Mogulistan, is the Mamood value 1s. the Roupie which is of the value of about 2s. 4d. Sterl. gross Sums are reckoned by a Lecke, which is 100000 Roupies and a Cron, which is 100 Leckes, and Arch which is 10 Crons. There are Gold Roupie's, which are of the value of 13 Silver ones. And Pagoda's of Gold, which are the Coins of Raja's or petty Kings, and valu'd at 9 or 10s. Sterl.

The GOVERNMENT is Absolute, and the King Arbitrary, he gives Lands and takes them away at Pleasure, and declares the Laws as he thinks fit, there being no Statutes but his Commands. The KING appears publickly in his Palace twice a Day, the first time for Administring Justice, and giving Publick Audience to his Subjects; and the second time which is in the Evening, to give particular Audience to his Omrahs and Officers, and treat on the important Affairs of State; at both which Appearances, the Omrahs are bound to attend. At the first, which is before Noon, the Elephants, fine Horses, the Soldiery, and any Curiosities which the Omrahs have to shew, are made to pass before the King.

This Monarch is very great both in Power and Wealth, maintaining an Army of 300000 Horse, and 400000 Foot, besides 3000 Elephants.

His Menial-Servants are 36000, which are paid every Month at three to ten Roupie's a Piece. Several Thousands of Beasts and Birds wild and tame, and 300 Elephants for his own Service, which are high fed and richly harnessed, are kept at Court; whereby he is supposed to expend 50000 Roupies per diem. And his Annual Revenue is computed by Sir Tho. Rowe, at 500 Millions of Roupies. But Thevenot reckons it at, but 330 Millions of French Money; which Gimelli corrects, and says he was inform'd, the Revenue of the Hereditary Countries, besides the Conquests, amounts to 800 Millions of Roupies. His Treasury is excessive Rich in Money, Jewels, Vessels of Gold, Amber, Agar, and other Stones, Cloath of Gold, costly Rarities, &c. valued says Mandelslo, at 1500 Millions of Crowns. The same Author gives an Inventory of Eckbar's Treasury, which 'tis true does not amount so much, but he remarks that he was inform'd 'tis now much richer.

The Provinces are govern'd by the Omrabs, who hold the same Government but a short time; Sir The Res says but one Year, and then return to Court to give an Account of their Conduct, where they are sure to be Punished if they have not acquitted themselves fairly. And under the Governors are two sorts of Judges, Civil and Criminal to Administer Justice to the People.

The King has four Principal Secretaries of State, to superintend under him in the four Branches of Government; viz. 1. The Bazsi, who has the care of the Army, and sees that the Omrabs keep their Regiments full, and pay the Soldiers duly. 2. Adelet, who takes care that Justice be duly Administred by the Judges, and informs the King of the Actions of his Ministers; which by the way the King is very strict in, and keeps Spies upon every Body. 3. The Divan, who divides the Land to the Omrabs and other Commanders, and sees that they do not oppress the Inhabitants. And 4. Conselman, who is the High Treasurer, and lays before the King every Week, an Account of the Income of each Province, the Week's Payments, and the rest in Cash. And in regard that the extent of the Empire is too large to take all in at own view, particular Provinces are appointed for particular Days, as Agra, Dehli and Labar on Monday, Bengal with Patna on Wednesday, Guzerat on Thursday, and so every Day except Friday, which being the Sabbath no Business is done. To all which particular Audits, besides the two Publick daily Audiences Aareng-Zebe never fail'd to attend.

The NOBILITY enjoy Titles, as Chan or Duke, Nabob or Lord, Mirzab or General, and Omrab, which may be english'd Colonel, but seems to have a higher Dignity. But the significant Distinction, is the number of Horse which they have under their Command; the highest (of which there are but four) Command 12000. others 8, 6, 5, 4000 and less, in proportion to the King's Favour, down to 20, the lowest of which Commanders are called Manseddars. The Troops are paid by the Omrabs, who have Lands assigned them to that purpose, which Lands or Fiefs called Gieghers are very profitable, some yields a Million and half of Roupies per Annum. and the very largest of all yield as much per Month; they are more or less, proportionate to the Troops they Command.

Of these Omrabs, there are about 40 in number, who live in great State and Luxury, but can leave nothing to their Family; for at their Death all their Estate goes to the King, whence it often happens, that the Son of such a Man is little better than a Beggar.

The Rajs are either 1. The conquer'd Princes, who submitting to the King, have honourable Posts in the Government and attend the Court: Or 2. the petty Kings who pay him Tribute.

The Rajas and Omrabs keep Guard at the King's Palace in their turns, the former within the Fortrefs, and the latter in the outer Courts. The King's constant Guard are called Haddies, and are about 5 or 6000 in number, but he has an out-guard of 40000

Horse. When he Travels 100000 Soldiers attend him, together with a Train of as many more of other sort of Attendants.

His Seraglio contains a very great number of Women, 1000 or 1200 as reported, who are richly maintained and Guarded by Eunuchs.

At the Publick Festivals; of the New-Years-Day, and the King's Birth-Day, all the Nobility and Ministers of State make rich Presents to the King. On the Birth-Day the King weigh's himself with great Solemnity, in Scales of Gold adorn'd with Diamonds; Bales of Silk; Gold; or other rich Commodities being put in the opposite Scale: and when 'tis over, He distributes Presents of Artificial Fruit, Flowers, &c. made in Gold, among the Courtiers, and an Alms among the People.

But this mighty Monarchy is not of very ancient Date, for besides the Hindows already mention'd, we read in all Accounts of the ancient State of this Country, of the Potans a numerous People that possessed Bengall, and all the Provinces of the Empire, Eastward of the Ganges: and most of the other Provinces had particular Kings till the time of Eckbar, who was the Son of Homayon, whose Father Mirzab Babor descended from one of the Sons of the Great Tamerlane, was the first of the Tartar Race which at present sits on this Throne.

The HISTORY whereof in short is thus.

At the Death of Tamerlane, which happened soon after the Year 1400, Tartary was divided among his Sons, in which Division Mirza alnabara; otherwise called Zagathay, fell to the Lot of Pir Mahomed, Son to the eldest Son of Tamerlane, from whom descended Mirzab Babor; who being expell'd his own Country by the Usbegs his Neighbours, made himself Master of that part of Indestán which lay next him, and dying in the Year 1532, left it to his Son Homayen. He had Wars with his younger Brother that conspired against him, but was assisted by the Emperor of Persia, whose Daughter he married, and Reign'd till 1552, when dying he left his Kingdom to his Son.

Eckbar, a Prince of great Valour, Wisdom and Fortune, to whom may more properly be imputed the Foundation of the present Monarchy; for it was he that extended it to the Grandeur we now see it, by the Conquest of Tatta, Cambaya, Bengall, Chitor, Cassmeer, and many other considerable Kingdoms. He died of a Poison prepar'd for an Enemy, and by mistake taken by himself A. D. 1604, in the 53d. Year of his Reign: and left one Son named Sba Selim, who for rebelling against his Father had been imprison'd for some Years; and now at his Death some of the great ones endeavour'd to put him by, and advance his Son Cusseroo to the Throne; however, Sba Selim obtain'd the Crown, and took upon himself the Name of Jehan-Guire, or as it is corruptly written Jangbeer: But as he had been an unnatural and ungrateful Rebel to his Father, he was now paid in his kind, and his Reign was full of Disturbances: His eldest Son Cusseroo began his Conspiracies with his Father's Reign, and in a little time appear'd at the Head of an Army against him, but was defeated, and imprison'd the rest of his Life. After that his third Son Curroone, having had Success in the Conquest of Decán, and by that means obtain'd an Esteem in the Army, his Ambition prompted him to set up for himself; accordingly he declar'd War, and fought a long and hazardous Battle with the Emperor's Army, but was at last defeated and forced to to fly. Soon after a Civil Dissention happen'd on Account of Nourmahel, one of the Emperor's Wives, whom he was exceeding fond of, and permitted to govern him and the Empire just as she pleased; which gave great Disgust to the Ministers of State, and made them raise an Army to separate the King from this arbitrary Woman. And in effect they seized both him and her, but at the Emperor's Promise of Amendment released Her, and soon after He made escape; so that the Lords for their safety joined themselves with Curroone, by whom Cufferoo in Prison had been killed, and Pervis the second Brother being dead, Curroone was now the eldest of Jehan-Guire's Sons. These Misfortunes broke his Heart, and Jehan-Guire died in the Year 1627. naming Sultan Bullochi the Son of Cufferoo for his Successor. But he was opposed, first by the ambitious Nourmahel, who pretended to set up the fourth Brother Sultan Sherjar, to whom she had married her Daughter. But she was soon defeated by Bullochi, and Sherjar committed to close Imprisonment, and his Eyes put out: and next by Curroone, who during the absence of Bullochi in his Expedition against Sherjar, got possession of Agra, and caused himself to be proclaimed Emperor by the Name of Sha-Jehan; and soon after confirm'd himself on the Throne by the Deaths of Bullochi, Sherjar, the Sons of Pervis, and all the other Princes of the Blood, whom by the Assistance and Contrivance of Asaph-Chan, the Instrument of all the Male administration in the late Reign, he caused to be murdered by Villains in the Castle of Labor. But as he ascended the Throne by these bloody Steps, he was fain to be very cautious in his Government, and endeavour by mild and gentle treatment, to sweeten the Minds of his Subjects and keep them firm to him. He was kept the more in awe by a counterfeit Bullochi, who was cherished and entertain'd by the Emperor of Persia as the true one, and ready to be made use of if Occasion offer'd. So that upon the whole, the Reign of Sha-Jehan was very peaceable and happy to the People, till the latter end of it; when through the Ambition of his Sons, there were bloody Wars for four or five Years. Sha-Jehan had four Sons, Dara-Sha, Sultan Sujah, Aureng-Zebe, and Morad Backbe: Who when they grew up, manifested the same Ambition their Father had been guilty of; wherefore to prevent Mischief he separated them, by appointing them Governors of Provinces at distant Parts of the Empire, the eldest only being allow'd to tarry at Court. But in the Year 1655. the Emperor falling into a Sickness, that obliged him to deny access to his Person, occasioned a Suspicion that he was dead; which coming to the Princes Ears, they immediately each set forward to oppose their Elder Brother, and push for the Crown: Sultan Sujah arriv'd first and was first defeated, but escap'd with Life and Liberty. Aureng-Zebe pretend that he had no Ambition, and would content himself with a private Life, therefore joined with his younger Brother Morad-Backbe, and with him march'd against Dara the eldest, whose Army they defeated, and seized the Castle of Agra, and the Person of the Emperor.

But as soon as he had done his Business, Aureng-Zebe threw off the Mask and seiz'd Morad-Backbe, whom he had only made a property of, that he might the easier defeat Dara, who fled to Guzerat, and endeavour'd to make Head again, but by the Subtilty of Aureng-Zebe, he was defeated in all his Designs, and hunted about from Place to Place, till at last he fell into the Toil; and was delivered to him; And having expos'd him to view all over Agra, he sent him Prisoner to Gualcor, where Morad-Backbe was also confin'd: and soon after even Mahmud the eldest Son of Aureng-Zebe, was committed to the same Place. This Young Gentleman was a Person of great Bravery, and had been successful in seizing the Castle of Agra for his Father, and in an Action against his Uncle Sujah; and as some write, had shew'd his Fidelity, in refusing very advantageous offers his Grandfather made him when he seized the Castle. But whether he had really Ambitious Thoughts afterwards as his Father suggested, or whether the Services he had perform'd, were too great to be paid to a jealous Prince, and created in the Father a Suspicion only, that he might possibly make an ill use, of the Reputation and Interest he had in the Army, as is by others alledged; Aureng-Zebe in a Letter which fell into Mahmud's hands, express'd himself displeased with his Son's Conduct: Which so startled him, that he fled for Safety to his Uncle Sujah, who was retir'd to Bengal. To him he offer'd his Service, but upon his Father's Promise of Pardon, and assurance of Favour, he was soon drawn off: And when he return'd committed close Prisoner. Sultan Sujah the elder Brother, and only surviving Competitor with Aureng-Zebe, was so distressed, that he was forc'd to fly to Arracan, where he received not the Entertainment he expected, and endeavouring to revenge himself, lost his Life. And finally, the Son of Dara the eldest Brother, being also taken Prisoner; Aureng-Zebe demanded the Investiture of the Government, and required the Oaths and Homage of the Omrabs as usual. But was oppos'd in it by the Cadi or High-Priest, which being a difficulty necessary to be removed, he summon'd a sort of Council of the Doctors of the Law, to whom he propos'd the Legality of his ascending the Throne, and vindicated his own Conduct; alledging his Brothers were, one a Favourer of Infidels, another a Drunkard, and another a Heretick, and his Father by Age and Infirmities incapable of Governing: But that himself had been always a strict Observer of the Law, and had intended to have turn'd Hermit, if the Ambition of his Brothers had not rais'd such Fends in the Kingdom, as oblig'd him to quit his Retirement, and assist in restoring the Publick Peace. These serv'd for Reasons, as his Power was the motive, to the Casuits to agree that he deserved the Crown, and ought now to have it altho' his Father were yet alive. Which Judgment giving a plausible pretext to the removal of the obstinate Cadi, the other who was advanc'd to his Place, made no opposition, and he was accordingly inaugurated on the 20th of October 1660. at Delly, where on the Throne of Tamerlane, the richest in the World, he received the Homage of the Rajabs, Omrabs, and Ministers of State, according to the Custom of the Country. As he had always profess'd a great deal of Sanctity, he did not forgo it when he was on the Throne, but as a sort of expiation of his Crimes, impos'd upon himself a great Abstinence and strictness of Life, his Food being chiefly Rice, Herbs and Pulse. His Hours were constantly employ'd in the Offices of Government or Religion, and but a very few of them in Sleep.

This great Prince Aureng-Zebe, having reigned near 47 Years after his Inauguration, or in the 51st Year of his Reign, as the common Accounts run, who I suppose reckon from his first assuming the Government verment, departed this Life on the 2d. March 1707. New Style, or as other Accounts say in the middle of February, perhaps reckoning by Old Style, in the 91st. Year of his Age. He was a Prince of great Sagacity, Courage, and Industry. He was a perfect Master of the Art of Government, and with so great Skill exercised his Power, that without the cruel Punishments so usual in former Reigns, he was able to keep in awe the most powerful Rajas, Sevagy excepted. He was almost continually at Wars, in the Conquest of the Southern Kingdoms, adjoining to those he inherited, and by his Arms made the Wealthy King of Golconda, notwithstanding his great Armies and strong Fortifications, his Prisoner. Decan, Visapor and Canara, were less able to resist his Force, as being govern'd by Princes less powerful than he of Golconda; and therefore where Sevagy with his Rasbootes in inaccessible Mountains did not oppose, he subjected all before him. This continual War kept him almost continually in the Field, especially in his latter days; wherein he resided so much in the Camp, that he was seldom seen at Agra. His Application in the Offices of Government was exceeding great, which is testified by Gimelli, when he assures us that He not only daily appeared twice in Publick; that is, in the Morning to Administer Justice to all Clients, and in the Afternoon to give Audience and Orders to the Omrabs, but also at other Hours, attended the daily Audits of his Secretaries and Treasurers. He affected an Air of Sanctity, and by his frequent Devotion, was thought worthy of Saintship; he appeared indulgent to his Ministers of State, whence the usual Cruelties were wholly laid aside, but as he was Politick and kept his Spies every where, 'twas supposed that Indulgence was only for the sake of endearing to them his Government, for when he pleased he pull'd down the biggest Officer: Which yet he never chose to do in that Arbitrary manner his Ancestors used, but contriv'd to let it be seen to be the Punishment of the Crimes, which the Emperors Indulgence too much led the Statesmen into. In short, were it not for the Cruelties he committed in ascending the Throne, he might pass for a Wise and Virtuous Prince; and even the Villany of those will be much alleviated, if we consider the cruel Custom of that Court, where the Brother that is on the Throne, never fails to put to Death, Blind, or Imprison all his Father's other Children; and therefore the natural Principal of Self-defence, puts every Brother upon pushing for the Throne.

In his Person (as we are told by Gimelli, who saw him in the Year 1695.) he was low of Stature, slender and stooping with Age, his Complexion Olive Colour, his Nose large, his Beard round and white, he leaned on a Staff, but his Sight was so good, that he endorsed the answers to Petitions, with his own Hand without using Spectacles; and appear'd in his dispatch of Publick Business, with a cheerful and smiling Countenance.

He left Four Sons, namely, 1. Scia-Alam or Shaw-Alam, as others write it. 2. Azam-Scia or Azzum-Shaw. 3. Eckbar. 4. Cawne-Bux. Of the Three elder we have this Account from Gimelli, viz. Scia-Alam had entertain'd thoughts of destroying his Father, and proceeded so far, as to cause a Pit to be dug near the King's Tent, which slightly covered over, would have let him in as he pass'd on: but it was discover'd, and the impious Son, altho' then near 60 Years of Age, was committed to a dark Prison;

he lay there six Years, and perhaps had not been permitted to have lived so long, but that he was the Darling of the Soldiery, of whom many Thousand publicly declared themselves so much his Friend that they refused the Emperor's Pay during his Imprisonment, and contented themselves with the meagre Stipends, the Prince was able to afford them; he was in 1695. (then just released from his Imprisonment) 65 Years of Age, tall and full Bodied, with a thick long Beard which began to be grey, and appeared very respectful to his Father. Azam-Scia, who was at that time 55 Years old, had proceeded so far against his Father, that he joined with the King of Visapor in his Wars against him. Akbar of more ambitious Temper than the rest, being sent in the Year 1680. with an Army of 30000 Men to make War on Raja-Lisenc, who Borders on the Kingdom of Bando; instead of subduing him, suffered himself to be brought over to his Party, and prompted by his Ambition, joined his Army to the Raja's, and marched against his Father. The Army thus joined, amounted to 70000 Horse, and proportionable number of Foot, which being superior to the Army the Emperor had then with him, the old Man applied himself to this Stratagem for Relief. The Raja and all his Subjects were Gentiles, who mortally hate the Mahometans, as those do them: The King therefore wrote a Letter to his Son, thanking him and commending his Conduct, for drawing the Infidels according to agreement to that Place to be all cut off, and appointed him to advance to Morrow to put it in Execution; this Letter he sent by a trusty Eunuch, ordering the matter so that it should be intercepted, which fell out accordingly, and bred such a Jealousie in the Raja, that all Akbars Oaths would not convince him it was a Trick of his Father's. So that the King had time to receive his Reinforcements; and setting upon the Enemy, Defeated them. Akbar shifted about from Place to Place, but could not be safe from his Father's Revenge, and therefore retired to Persia, where he was entertained at Court, and lived there in 1695. being then about 45 Years of Age; and the Accounts that bring us advice of Aureng-Zebe's Death, tell us he is still there. The youngest Son is by Gimelli nam'd Sikander, of 30 Years of Age, infected like the rest with Ambition, but whether Sikander be Dead and another sprung up in his Place, or whether the late Accounts mistake his Name I cannot determine; for those Accounts tell us, that the youngest Son is named Cawne-Bux, and being his Father's Darling, Aureng-Zebe in his Life time, put him in Possession of all the Countries himself had conquer'd, namely Golconda, Visapor and Canara, which all lie contiguous on the South of Mogulistan.

Upon the Emperor's Death, the Second Brother Azam-Scia took upon himself the Title of King, but his elder Brother Scia-Alam sent an Army against him, and gave him Battle near Agra, wherein Azam-Scia and his two Sons were Slain, and his Army Defeated; there fell on both sides 80 Omrabs, and above 100 Thousand Men. But Cawne-Bux the youngest Son, being as we have said in Possession of Golconda, &c. Scia-Alam could not but look on him as a Competitor for the Empire, especially since he was joyned by one of the most powerful Omrabs, as also by Raja Ramrao the Successor of Sevagy, and therefore not thinking himself safe in the Throne, He was in September 1707. (when these Letters came away,) marching with a formidable Army against them. A AGRA, which some call Indoften by way of Excellence, as being the principal Kingdom of the Empire, is seated between the 27th and the 30th Deg. of Latitude, and between the 97th and 101 Deg. of Longitude; bounded on the North by Delly; on the South by Gualtor and Malwa; on the East by Sambal and Nertar; and on the West by Bando: It is watered by the large River Semena, which runs cross the Kingdom, receiving in its way the Tchembel, a River (though much smaller than that) reckoned as large as the Thames at London. These two Streams water the Land, and make the Soil Fertile in Oranges, Lemmons, and many other Fruits; great plenty of Rice, and especially Cotton and Indigo.

AGRA, the Metropolis of the Kingdom and of the whole Empire, seated on the River Semena, about 60 Miles above its Confluence with the Tchembel, in the 29th Deg. of Lat. is now reckoned the largest and most populous City in India, being nine Miles in Length, built in form of a Half-Moon, along the Banks of the River: Authors speak of its Antiquity, and make it founded by Bacchus, and called Dyonisia, afterwards Negara; or, as others, Cyrus built it, and gave it the Name of Agradarus; but according to Hackluyt, the Name of Agra was given it by the Tartars, and the Structure much more Modern: at least thus much is certain, that it was but a small inconsiderable place before the Year 1566. when the Emperor Eckbar chose it for his place of Residence, called it Eckbar-abar, and built a Palace of Stone, so very noble, that Father Tosi thinks it deserves to be ranked with the Wonders of the World; it is four Miles in Compass, and contains within it the Courts of Judicature, &c. it is surrounded with a Wall of Stone and a Ditch, over which are two Draw-bridges at the two Gates. We have not room to describe the Magnificence of this Palace, but must refer the Reader to Heibert, Tavernier and Bernier, for more particular Accounts of it; the Nobility have stately Houses, contiguous to the Palace, of Brick, or Stone whereof there are large Quarries of a very beautiful sort, not far from Agra: The Caravanseray's, which are 60 in number, are very large, and nobly Built, some of them have six large Courts, with their Portico's, that give entry to very commodious Apartments for Strangers, 800 publick Baths are in this City, and a great Number of Mosques, which are Sanctuaries. The City is not walled, and only moated round, it is a Place of great Traffick, being resorted to by Merchants from China, Persia, all parts of India, and by the English and Dutch: Our Nation were used to maintain a Factory there, but the long distance from Surat (being above 600 Miles) and the Hazards and Difficulties they underwent in passing through the Countries of many Rajas and Rasbootes has made them withdraw that, though they still maintain a Trade thither. Over against Agra on the other side the River stands Secandra, a stately Town, or rather Suburbs to the City, adorned with many fine Buildings, curious Gardens, and especially the Magnificent Tombs of Eckbar, and the Queen of a succeeding Emperor. Gehan-guire caused to be built a stately Tomb in Honour to his Father Eckbar, which surpasses in Magnificence all those of the Grand Seigniors. But even that is much surpassed by the Tomb that Shah-Gehan built for his Wife Taje-Mahal, whereof Berneir has given us a particular Description, but 'tis too large to insert here, and therefore I shall only Transcribe Thevenot's general account of it, viz. The King sent for all the able Architects of India, settled Salaries upon them, and ordered them to make the finest Mausoleum in the World, which they performed to his Satisfaction. The stately Garden into which all the parts of the Mausoleum are distributed, the great Pavilions with their Fronts, the beautiful Porches, the lofty Dome that covers the Tomb, the right disposition of it's Pillars, the Arches which support a great many Galleries, Piazza's and Terrasses, shew the Indians are not unskilful in Architecture. And though the Orders be different from the Ancient Grecian, it is not without Symetry, a Noble Beauty, and apparent Magnificence.

Not far from Agra stands Fettipore, which the same Eckbar founded, and built in it many stately Structures, intending to have made it outvie all others, but the Water proved unwholsom, and forced him to leave it. Samonger, a Village on the South of Agra, is famous for the Battle between Dara and Aureng-Zebe. Daulbore, on the Tchembel, is a Place of incredible Strength. Byma, formerly a large and fair City, is now ruined, but still gives Name to a Country of 50 Miles Circumference. Scanderbad, not far from it, is supposed to have been founded by Alexander. Itay, seated on the Semena, 100 Miles East from Agra, was formerly the Seat of the Potan Kings, but now in a ruined state, except the Castle which stands on a high precipitous Mountain, and is fortified with a double Wall.

On the North-West of Agra, lies the Province of DELLY, denominated from its chief City, which standing in a purer Air, tempted the Emperor Shah-Jehan, Father to Aureng-Zebe, to build a stately Palace and new City there, which from him is denominated Jehanabad, i. e. the City of Jehan, seated on the River Semena, about 120 Miles above Agra; the Road all that way being shaded with Trees, planted by Jehan Guire, and makes a Walk of 150 Leagues in length, (being continued as far as Laho) and is one of the Places where the Great Mogul resides. The Palace, which Bernier calls the Fortrefs, is about two Miles in Compass, being a Semicircle derived from the River, with a fair Plain before it. At the Entry stand two very large Statues of Elephants, with two famous Raja's upon them, and forward on, is a very large Street, with a noble Canal in the middle, and beyond that the large Courts, wherein the Elephants, fine Horses, Soldiery, and other curiosities pass before the King every Day, and where the Raja's keep guard. Next the many Offices of Ministers of State, and Courts of Judicature, many Portico's, Arches, stately Halls, but especially the Amkas or great Hall of Audience, wherein the King appears at Solemn times, seated on his excessive rich Throne, commonly called Tamerlans, but was indeed made by Shah-Jehan; it stands upon six pillars of Massy Gold, set with Rubies, Emeraulds and Diamonds, the Canopy is set with Diamonds, and surrounded with a Fringe of Pearl, and over it two large Peacocks of enamelled Gold, covered with Diamonds, Pearls or other Stones, whose Tails are set with precious Stones of the respective colours according to Nature, and make a most charming sight; but with what Authority Gordon says, a Pearl as big as a Pear hangs at the Breast, I know not; Bernier who saw it, mentioning no such thing. This Throne, 'tis said, cost four Gouroures of Roupies, which is near five Millions Sterling. From the two Gates of the Palace, lye two very large well built Streets, and four others lead to the Great Mosque, which is a stately Fabrick, and is resorted to by the King himself every Friday. These Streets are mostly furnished with Arched Walks before the Houses, which, as at Agra, serve for Shops. The Grand Caravanseray built by the Daughter of Shah-Jehan, is a Magnificent Structure, 'tis a very large Square, surrounded with Arches, which lead to convenient Lodgings, and have over them open Galleries, and other fairer Chambers, for the use of Strangers. The new City is about eight Miles in Compass, and surrounded with Brick-Walls; to which may be added a large Suburb, and the old Delly on the other side the River, but joynd by a Bridge; and then the Place will be found four Miles long. The Country about it is pleasant and fruitful, and the Air more cool and wholsome than that of Agra, which being seated in a sandy Soil is scorching hot. The old City was formerly a Magnificent one, where the old Potan Kings used to be inaugurated; it had 50 Gates and nine Castles, but is now ruined. There is another Delly, where lies interred in a most magnificent Monument the Father of Eckbar. The Government of this Province, is reckoned the first in the Empire.

From Delly, passing on Northward, you enter the Province of JENUPAR or JENAPAR, where are the Pits of Sal Ammoniac. The chief City Jenupar, stands in the 33 Deg. of Latitude, at the Confluence of two small Rivers which compose the Damiadee, that flows through this Country and that of the Hindowns, and falls into the Indus; 'tis a handiome Town, but not very eminent. Syrina, on the same River, more to the West, famous for the fine Garden, Summer-House, and Seraglio of the Moguls. Tanasseri, in the South-part, is noted for the Baths, esteemed Holy and much resorted to. In the Mountains which part this Province from Delly, the River Semena, otherwise called Gemene hath its Source, which after a Course of 400 Miles falls into the Ganges at Holobass.

The Kingdom of BENGAB, otherwise called LAHOR, is seated more North, between Jenupar on the South; Cassimier and Bankish, on the North; Jamba on the East; and Multan and Attock, on the West. It is a wealthy Province, by reason of the many Manufactures in it, and yields (according to the information Thevenot had) 37 Millions per Annum to the Mogul. The great Walk of Trees derived from Agra, reaches to the Capital of this Province, which is 150 Leagues distant, a most Noble Walk of tall large Trees, which cover the Road, and make a continued Arbour. (Thevenot.) This is the third Government of the Empire, being often honoured with the Emperor's Presence in his Palace at Labor, once the Metropolis of the Empire, and the Staple of Trade for Indigo, and in those Days a Magnificent and wealthy City; but since these Emperours have extended their Dominions so far Southward, Agra and Delly are honoured with their Residence, and this City is declined very much: The Streets are regular and well paved, the Houses all of Wood, but more high than is usual in these Parts; the severe Rains had overthrown many Houses when Bernier was there, which rendered the Streets irregular, but he tells us there were five or six principal Ones, whereof two or three were above a League long, which shew the former beauty and grandeur of this City, altho' it be now declined. It's Age was short, for from a small Bourg, King Homayon who began to Reign, A. D. 1532.) made it a City, built the Castle and kept his Court in it. The Castle or Palace is Magnificent and Stately, the Courts large, the Buildings high and uniform, mostly of Brick, adorned with fine carved Works, and the Gardens large, pleasant and filled with excellent Fruit. The River which formerly run by the Town, is now a quarter of a League distant from it, having changed its Bed, as Bernier informs us.

Ferryptre or Ferryabad, a pleasant Town, with a Castle, seated on the South of Labor. Temmerly, to the East of Labor, is the Seat of the Raja of Boffou, who pays Tribute to the Emperor. And Emenbade, on the North of Labor: These are the Cities most noted; many others are in this Province that were formerly famous, but they with the whole Province are now declined.

The Kingdom of CASSIMERE, lies between the Mountain Caucasus (which divides it from Tartary) on the North, the Kingdom of Pengab on the South and Attock on the West, between the 36 and the 40 Deg. of Lat. and enjoys a clear and healthy Air, as temperate as in Europe; and a fruitful well cultivated Soil, abounding with all the necessaries of Life; and so far exceeding all the neighbouring Provinces (where a scorching Heat parches the Ground) that Cassimere is stiled the Paradise of India. It is surrounded by Mountains, rising by Degrees one above another; the lower covered with Cattel. and all kinds of innocent Games, without Lyons, Tygers, Bears, Serpents or any sort of noxious Creatures; and the higher covered with Snow; which melting, makes those many Rivulets that water the Country, and make it so fruitful, that it looks like a large Garden of Rice, Corn, Saffron, Hemp, Apricocks, Peaches, Apples, Pears, Plums, Vines, &c. all which render the Country so pleasant, that Mr. Bernier tells us, he was astonished to see himself of a sudden, out of the stifling Heat of the Torrid Zone, into the temperate Freshness and Fertility of Europe; those pleasant Streams uniting their Waters, compose the River Tchernas, which runs cross this Province, and falls into the Sind at Attock. The People also are of fair Complexion and European Beauty, Ingenious, Witty and Industrious. The City, which gives name to the Country, is about two Miles long, and a Mile and half broad, seated on a Lake of fresh Water, and a little River issuing from it; over which are two Bridges: The Houses are built of Wood, two or three Stories high, and many of them adorned with pretty Gardens: The City is not walled; but is surrounded with Houses of Pleasure and Gardens; among which the King's is especially delightful, being furnished with curious Fountains, Canals, Bowers, &c. Syrenaker is the next considerable City, being three Miles in Circumference, and by some reckoned the Capital of the Kingdom: 'Tis seated in the Southern confines towards Pengab. Achiavel, notable for an admirable House of Pleasure of the Mogul's; and Sand-Brery for an Heathenish Temple, and wondrous Spring, which draws Votaries to it, are the other places of chiefest note in this Kingdom. Sansen places the Country of a certain Raja named Tibien in its Northern part.

On the South-West of Cassimere, lies the large Province of ATTOCK, between Cabul on the North, and Multan on the South, inhabited by a peculiar People called Puttans, of low Stature, but courageous Temper, not subjected to the Mogul before the Year 1590. The City whence the Province is denominated, stands at the Confluence of the two Rivers Tchernas and Sind, and is one of the best and strongest Garrisons in all the Empire, which no Foreigner is permitted to enter without a Pass from the King. The other chief Towns are Candahar, said to be a handsome City, and a place of great Trade.

Puckow, Daddos, Ducha, Langora, Vageston, and Hef-senabdel.

On the North of Attock, lies the Province of CABUL, the Boundary of the Mogul's Empire on the North-West, having Tartary for its Northern, and Persia for its Eastern Bounds. It is a Barren unpleasant Country, but has Mines of Iron, and by means of its convenient Situation, enjoys a good Trade: its chief City Cabul, is reported to be as large as Grand Cairo, and resorted to by Merchants from Persia, China and Tartary, for buying of Cattel, especially Horses, whereof vast Numbers are yearly sold here by the Usbeg Tartars: The City is fortified by two strong Castles, accomodated with many large Inns for the reception of Strangers, and adorned with many Palaces, the Kings having at some times held their Courts here, and it has often been the Appenage of a Prince of the Blood. The other chief Towns are Ghidai, Parna, Cherecculow, and Gorehand.

The Province of MULTAN is seated between Attock on the North, the River Ravee on the South, Pengab on the East, and Haican on the West, extending about 100 Miles either way. The River Indus runs through from North to South, and other smaller Streams contribute to water the Land, which is very fertil, in Sugar and Opium, and affords a mighty Traffick to the Inhabitants; who besides make great Quantities of Callico's, which they vend to Agra, Tatta and elsewhere: So that this Country, especially its chief City, is inhabited by wealthy Baneans. The chief City Multan, is seated on the River Indus, in the Latitude of 34 Deg. and is a considerable place, on account of the Manufactures of Calicoes and other Linnens, and the number of rich Trading Baneans that live in it: but was formerly more populous, being heretofore the Thorowfare between Persia and Labor; but the Road lies now through Cabul. The People of this Town are notable Dancers, if it be worth while to mention such a Qualification, but since that recommends them to the Courts of Indostan and Persia, we should do them wrong to omit it. A peculiar Sect of Gentiles called Catrys live here, and have a fine Pagod to which all their Sect resort in Pilgrimage. The City is well fortified, as being a Frontier, now Candahar is possessed by the Persian. Over against Multan, on the West side the Indus, stands Alican, and more Southward Seerpore.

CANDAHARA, is a Province of the Mogul's Empire except the chief City Candahar, supposed to be the Catura of Ptolomy, seated in the 23 Deg. Lat. which is subject to the Persian; a place of great Strength, and being on the Road out of India into Persia, is much resorted to. The Country is Mountainous, and so not over fruitful; but here are Rocks of Salt, which yield a Traffick to the Inhabitants, as also Mines found in the Bowels of the Earth. On the North West of Candahara, lyes a small Country named Baleb, whereof an Usbeg Prince is Sovereign. It lies among Mountains, and is not considerable.

HAIKAN, otherwise called HANGIKAN, a Province seated beyond the Indus, among the Mountains on the Frontiers of Persia, adjoining to Candahar on the South, is a sort of rude Country, inhabited by the the Bulliches, a stout and warlike People, who are Idolaters, and by some Authors represented as wild Robbers; but others say they are of a conversible Temper. Two Towns in this Country are mentioned in the Maps, viz. Chatzan on the East side the Mountains, and Uche on the Frontiers of Persia.

The Province of BUCKOR lies next to Haican on the South, between Persia on the West, and the Hindown Country on the East. The River Indus runs through, and dividing it into two Parts, waters the Land, and renders the Soil Rich and Fertile. The Inhabitants are a strong robust People, like their Neighbours the Bulliches, uneasy under the Mogul's Yoke, and not kept under, but by a strong Guard perpetually kept upon them in the chief City named Buckor, seated on an Island in the River Indus, Lat. 30. D. 20. M. Other Towns of Note here, are Suckor, somewhat higher on the East side the River, a place considerable for Trade, as also for the Agriculture much practised by its Inhabitants; and Ramree on the same River, more Southward, and near the Mouth of the Damiadee, a place also of good Trade, sending Barks down the River, which Trade even as far as Mozambique, and other parts of Africa.

The Country of the HINDOWNS, lies between Haican and Multan on the West, Pengab on the North, Jenupar on the East, Jesselmeeer and Bando on the South, and enjoys a fertile Soil in Corn, Cattel and Cotton; which last is made up into Cloaths, and exported to other Parts. The Inhabitants are a distinct People, and according to their Name, should be the Descendants of the Aborigine Inhabitants of all India. The chief City Hendown, stands upon the River Damiadee (which runs through the Province from East to West) in the 31 D. 20 M. Lat. a large and rich Town, enjoying a good Trade in Cotton and Calico. Mearta, seated more to the South, is a great City, and a considerable Mart for the same Commodities.

The Province of JESSELMEEER lies on the South of the Hindowns; having Guzaratte for its Southern Bounds, Bando on the East, and Buckor on the West. The North and East parts are Mountainous, but the South is watered by the River Padder; and the greatest part of the Country is very Fertile in Corn and Cattel, especially Sheep. Its extent is from the 25th to the 28th Deg. of Lat. Jesselmeeer, otherwise called Gisselmeeer, the chief Town is seated on the North part within Land, but is however a place of very good Trade for Indigo, Cotton and woollen Cloaths, and remarkable for its pleasant situation: 'Tis also Fortified with a very good Castle, and 30 pieces of Ordinance. Ammer, a Castle in this Country, is notable for being the Birth-place of the great Eckbar. Radimpore, seated on the River Padder, is the next considerable Town in this Province, near its Southern Limits, and all that I find mentioned by Authors.

The small Kingdom of SORETT, lies next to Jesselmeeer, having that for its Eastern Bounds, the Mouth of the River Padder for its Southern, the River Indus on the West, and Tatta on the North. 'Tis a rich Fertile Land, furnished with all things necessary for Life; and the chief City Fanagar is populous and rich, being commodiously seated near the River Padder, which a little below falls into the Gulph of Indus, and renders the Town a place of good Trade. Pacho, seated on an Island made by the Branches of the River Padder, in falling into the Sea, is reckoned in the Limits of this Kingdom.

Lastly, the Kingdom of TATTA, otherwise named SINDI, and by the Inhabitants ABIND, also sometimes by Europeans called the Kingdom of DIUL, from the Port Town of that name. This Province is the South-West Limits of the Mogul's Empire, having Persia on the West, Buckor on the North, Jesselmeeer and Sorett on the East, and the Gulph of Indus, which parts it from Guzarat, on the South. The Kingdom is about 200 Miles in length from North to South, and is divided by the River Indus; which waters the Land, and renders the Soil very prolifick in Wheat, Rice, Pasture, &c. The Country also being so conveniently seated, is much enriched by Trade, but not so much as it used to be, before Suratt had drawn it away. The chief Cities are, Tatta the Metropolis, seated on the East side the River Indus, in the 27th Deg. Latitude, a large City, and celebrated for Trade. Sindi, in the Heart of the Country, the place of the Governours Residence. Lourebander on the West side the Indus, 40 Leagues below Tatta, and near the Mouth of the River, a noted Port. This is a Town of great Trade, and the best Road for Ships in the Indies. (Thevenot.) but Diul or Diu (not Dio) is by others reckoned the most commodious and most celebrated Haven of this Kingdom, seated on the Mouth of the Bay of Indus, and a small River which takes its name from the Town: This place is usually touched at by the Ships sailing from India to Ormus.

The Kingdom of GUZARAT, or as the Portuguese term it CAMBAIA, lies next on the South-East, bounded by Chandis and Chitor on the East, the Indian Ocean on the West, and part of the South, the Kingdom of Decan bounding the other part on the South, and Sorett and Jesselmere on the North. It extends from the 19th to the 25th Deg. of North Latitude, that is, about 360 Miles from North to South, and from the 83d to the 92d Degree of Longitude, which makes about 450 Miles from East to West: The two Bays of Cambai on the East, and Indus on the West, make the greatest part of it a kind of Peninsula: and the whole Country lying either on the Sea, or on the Navigable Rivers the Tapta, the Gemini, and the Padder, (all which run through it, and fall into the two Bays above mentioned) render this a Land of great Traffick; the Soil also producing not only all Necessaries for Life, but likewise great plenty of Cotton, Indigo, Opium, Aloes and many other Drugs; Chrystal, Cornelians, Rubies, Sapphires, Agates, Topazes, Jasper, and other precious Stones. The Inhabitants also make fine Cotton-Linnens, Silks, Cabinets, &c. The exportation of these Commodities enrich the Inhabitants, and the Customs yield the Mogul a vast Revenue, insomuch, that Guzarat is looked upon as one of the best Jewels in his Crown. The Tropic of Cancer passes through the vertical Point of Amadabat, so that the greatest part of this Kingdom lies in the Torrid Zone, and renders the Air so scorching, that if the rainy Season should fail (as it did in the Year 1630.) a Famine would ensue. This Kingdom was formerly governed by its own Prince ; but since the year 1565. has been a Province of the Mogul's Empire, and governed by his Deputy, styled Sultan, who resides in Amadabat. But the Western Part is inhabited by Rasbootes, who are notorious Robbers and Outlaws.

Before we proceed to the Cities of this Kingdom, we will speak of the Jurisdiction of Basaim, which is the Coast on the South of it towards Decan, and comprehends the Island of Bombay, with two or three other small Islands, and the City of Basaim, formerly subject to the King of Guzarat, but conquered by the Portuguese. The City Basaim stands on the Continent, in the Latitude of 19. 30. of good Structure and Strength, being surrounded with high Walls, wherein are eight Bastions, and the Town is Inhabited by about 300 Families of Portuguese Gentry and Nobility ; governed by a Captain with twelve Assistants, whose Power extends over a great many neighbouring Villages and Islands.

BOMBAY, that was formerly one of them, was surrendered to the English in the Year 1663. according to the Articles of Marriage between King Charles II. and Diana Catherine. This Island is therefore possessed by the English Nation, and though a small one, being but 20 Miles round, is considerable, on Account of its commodious Haven and Situation, for suppressing the Malabar Pirates, who used to infest these Coasts : It is situate over against Chaul in Decan, in the Latitude of 18 Deg. The chief Town is about a Mile long, and pretty well Fortified, having been considerably improved since the English have had it. The Island was for a few Years governed by the Kings Deputy, but at the Request of the East-India Company, it was granted to them under Homage, and has been ever since under the Jurisdiction of the President of Surat, who appoints a Deputy Governour here. The Land has Woods of Coco-Trees, which with Salt is the chief Product of the Island.

On the North of Bombay, lies the Island CANOREIN, which Gimelli names Salfette, and describes a wonderful Pagoda in it, consisting of Galleries, Halls and Chambers, cut out of a vast Rock, which are stupendious Works. There are other of like sort in these Islands. That of Elephantino has its Name from an Elephant cut out of the Rock, where are also many strange Caverns. The chief Town is named Tenax. This Island is a Fertile Land of about 70 Miles Circumference, and possessed by the Portuguese.

The Islands CARANIA and ELEPHANTINO, possessed also by the Portuguese, lie near Bombay, and are comprehended among those called the Salfette Islands. From whence we shall now pass to the Continent.

The chief Cities of Guzerat are SURAT, seated at the Mouth of the River Tapti, in the Lat. 21. D. Longit. 91. D. a place formerly inconsiderable, but in these last Hundred Years, by means of the English and Dutch Trade, it is increased to a large, populous and rich City, surrounded with a good Wall, and guarded by an old Castle, said to be founded by Tamerasin ; the Houses in general are low and mean, but the English Company's House is a noble Building of squared Stone ; as are also those of the Dutch and French ; and some of the Baneans and Moorish Merchants have fine high Houses with Terrasses at top. The City is guarded by 1500 Soldiers, besides the Garrison and Governour in the Castle, and 30 or 40 pieces of Ordinance : The Haven has a Barr of Sand cross it, so that the Ships of greater Burthen are fain to lie without, at Swally-hole about four Leagues from the Town, near the Village Suballa. Raja Sevagy entered this City in the Year 1664. burnt and pillaged it, carrying away a mighty Booty ; at which time the English President Sir George Oxendine so well defended himself and the Merchants, that not only the Company gave him a Medal, but the Emperor presented him with a Robe of Honour, and gave our Nation an abatement of 2 and half per Cent. in the Customs ; but this has been since revoked. The old Walls being only of Earth and much ruined, they were begun to be Rebuilt of Brick, in the Year 1665. which confine the Town into a narrower compass than it was before. (Thevenot.) The Walls, altho' new built are weak, says Gimelli. The Castle is square, with round Bastions, seated at the South end of the Town so near the Sea, that the Ditch is filled by its Water on three sides, and by the River on the fourth. The Country round about is fertile and pleasant, abounding with Gardens and Fruit Trees, and the City is a place of vast Traffick for all sorts of Indian, Chinese and European Commodities, as Stuffs and Cotton-cloths made in India, Porcelaine Cabinets, adorned with Turquoise, Agat, Cornelian, Ivory and other Embellishments ; Diamonds, Rubies, Pearls and other precious Stones ; Musk, Amber, Myrrh, Manna, Sal Armoniac, Quick-silver, Lacca, Indigo, the Root Roeras for Dying, and all sorts of Indian Spices, Fruits and Drugs. The Trade being begun and carried on chiefly by the English, our Nation hath peculiar Privileges above others. The Company's Affairs are managed here by a President and Council, who direct and govern the Factories at Amadabat, Agria, and other inland Places ; also the Trade to Pessia : and in general, all the Factories Westward of Cape Comorin. The President lives in great State, being always honourably attended, and hath a Salary of 500 lib. per Annum.

Damaon, possessed by the Portuguese, stands about 50 Miles South from Surat, and is a Place of good Strength and Trade, a River to which it gives Name, makes a good Haven, on the North side of which, stands the old City of very ordinary Structure, inhabited by Gentiles ; but the new City which stands on the South side, is a neat Town of three broad Streets, and many cross ones. The Houses are of Indian build, low, but neat, and have Gardens. It is fortified with a Wall, wherein are four regular Bastions : and a Fort at the entrance of the Haven.

Baroche, about as far North from Surat, stands on the River Gemene, which 15 Miles below, falls into the Bay of Cambaya : It is pleasantly seated on a Hill, adorned with handfom Buildings, and enriched by a very good Trade in Cotton-Linens, which are made here, and better whitened than elsewhere, and for that reason the English have a House there ; it is surrounded with strong Stone Walls, flanked by large round Towers, and was one of the chief Strengths of the Kingdom, but is neglected, and the Wall out of repair. The Country round is level and very fertile, beyond which at seven or eight Leagues distance are Mountains, wherein plenty of Agat-Stones are found.

Breda,

Biodra, seated on a large sandy Plain upon a small River named Wasset, is about 15 Leagues distant from Baroche, it is well fortified after the Ancient manner, and inhabited by Calico Weavers; An English Factory is kept here. Lacque, which is the gum of a Tree, whereof sealing-Wax and Lacquer Varrish is made, is so plentiful in the neighbourhood of this City, that one Village named Sindickera, sells about 25000 l. every Year. (Mandeflo.) I find it mentioned by some Travellers, that Lacque is made by Ants, like as Wax by Bees, and whether there may not be such a sort of it, I cannot determine, but what I have said above of its being a Gum, is constantly averred.

Cambaya, whence as we have said, the Kingdom is sometime denominated, is seated on the inmost recess of the Bay to which it gives name, in the Lat. of 22 D. Longit. 90 D. It is described by Authors as a place of much better Structure than the Cities of Indostan commonly are, and was a place of very great Traffick, so as to be called the Cairo of India: But the Sea is fallen away, and leaves the Haven quite dry at low water; and that perhaps may be the reason that the Trade also has left it. The ebbing and flowing of the Tide here is very remarkable, for it rolls in with such impetuosity, that an Arrow out of a Bow cannot keep pace with it, and falls away as fast. This City is as large again as Suratt, but not near so populous, its Streets are large, and are each shut up with Gates, the Houses are high, built of Sun-burnt Bricks, and the Shops are full of Aromatick Perfumes, Spices, Silken and gold Stuffs; It is encompassed with fair stone Walls, and has a large Castle wherein the Governour resides. Near the Town are Mines of Agats, which afford a Manufactory to the Inhabitants; for great Numbers of Cups, Rings and other Utensils are here made of them. (Thevenot and Gimelli.) Goga, a City of good Trade with a safe Harbour, stands on the West-side of the same Bay, about 20 Leagues from Cambaya; it was burnt by the Portuguese at the time of the Siege of Dio. As was also Antora, once a considerable City on the same Bay.

In the middle of the South Coast of the Peninsula of Cambaya, lies the Island and City of DIO, in the 20 D. 40 M. of North Latitude, and the 87 D. of Longit. It is a small piece of Land, of about a League in length, and half so much in breadth, which is cut off from the main Land by a small Branch of the Sea that flows between. The Portuguese got footing there in the Year 1535. and built a Fort; which was soon after attacked by Badur King of Guzarat, but so well defended, that he was forced to raise his Siege; afterwards in the Year 1546, his Son Mamood besieged it again with an Army of 40000 Men, who for several Months attacked it with great Vigour, but were so valiantly opposed by the Portuguese, that in the end they were beaten off, and have never since returned. The City was formerly very considerable, on Account of the Trade maintained by its Inhabitants to Persia and India: But it is now declined, and neither the City nor Fort much noted at present. Pate, seated on the same Bay, a few Leagues West from Dio, is a large City, and was formerly considerable for its fair Buildings and great Trade; but the Rasbootes have often plundered it and spoiled both. It is a great Town, and has still a good Manufactory of Silk Stuffs, says Thevenot. Mangerol, still more Westward, is a place of good Trade for Cotton-Linnen, &c. and has an English Factory.

Jaquette, on the Western point of this Peninsula, is a fair Town with a famous Pagod or Indian Temple, which sometimes gives Name to the Country. Rageapore, seated between Baroche and Cambaya, is a large walled Town inhabited by Banians, and a great number of Artizans, who make the finest Stuffs. It has 200 Villages under its Jurisdiction, near one of which great store of Lacca is found. (Thevenot.) Bisantagan, situate in a very fertile Country, in the Center of the Kingdom, from a small Village is risen up to a large Town of 2000 Houses. (Mandeflo.)

Lastly, Amadabat, a very large City, seated within Land, about 18 Leagues North from Cambaya, being the Seat of the Vice-Roy, may properly be reckoned the Metropolis of the Kingdom: It is a place of very great Trade for Calicoes and other Cotton-Linnens, Indigo, Opium, precious Stones and other Goods, and therefore the English have a Factory in it. This City stands in a lovely Plain, watered by the small River Sabremetty, enclosed with Walls, partly Stone and partly Brick, flanked with round Towers all kept in good repair, and well Garrisoned. The City with Suburbs is a League and half in length (says Thevenot) near 7 Leagues round (says Mandeflo.) The Streets are wide; the Meidan-chab or King's square is 700 Paces long, and 400 broad, surrounded with noble Arches and adorned with Trees, in several little square Buildings in the Meidan, are held the Courts of Judicature: near it on one side stands the King's Palace, and on the other side the Castle. The English Factory is in the middle of the Town, it consists of fair Courts, handsome Lodgings, and large Ware-houses. The chief Mosque in this City is a Magnificent Building, as described by Thevenot and Mandeflo, to whom we must refer our Reader for the other remarkables. The Governour of Amadabat has the Title of Raja or Prince, he lives in very great Splendour, and maintains 12000 Horse and 50 Elephants for the Kings Service.

CHITOR, lies next to Guzarat, being bounded by that Kingdom on the West; Malvay on the East; Chandis on the South; and Raja Ranas on the North: Its Extent is about 120 Miles from North to South, and about half as much from East to West. The chief City Chitor for Magnificence and Antiquity, did formerly outvie all the Cities in India; its Name signifying Mirror of the World, and its ancient Name was Taxilla, supposed to be the Place whence Porus issued against Alexander: The Castle of this Place was so strong, that Eckbar esteemed the taking of it, one of his most important Conquests: but its Glory is passed away, and 'tis now but an ordinary Place. Chetipore, or Chiripur, being more noted at present on Account of its considerable Trade in Calicoes called Chites, whence they say the Town had its Name. Billman; Mudre; and Rudrepore; have been Places of Grandeur and Note anciently, but now obscure.

The Kingdom of MALVAT adjoins to Chitor, having that on the West; Bengall on the East; and Berar on the South. The chief Towns are Ugen, by some called Ougel, seated on the West-side of the River Gemini, by some reckoned the Capital of the Province; but by others, that Honour is given to Rantipore, a Town of very great Traffick, seated on the East-side of the same River more Northward, and famous for a strong Castle which serves for a Prison to Noblemen that fall under the Mogul's Displeasure. Calçada, the ancient Regal Seat of the King of Mandae, whose Dominions extended far. I suppose this to be the place Tövenet called Mando, and represents as a large Town of natural strength by Situation, and moreover surrounded by strong Walls, and guarded by a good Castle at the top of a Hill, the Houses in the Town well built of Stone, and the place very populous. Sarampora, Syranga or Serunga, a large Town where fine painted Calicoes are made. And Nader, another Town of large Extent, seated on the top of a steep Hill.

On the North of Chitr and West of Makva, lye the Territories of Raja RANAS, a Prince of ancient Extract, even descended from Porus, they say; and was the last of the Rasboote Race that became Tributary to the Great Mogul. The Castle of Gur-chitto, seated on a Rocky Mountain, and famous for its impregnable Strength, is his Place of Residence; as also sometimes Candera, the other chief Town in this Jurisdiction.

Northward from Raja Renas, lies the Kingdom of BANDO, a pretty large Country, but Mountainous and Barren. The City which gives Name to the Kingdom, stands in the 29 Degree of Latitude, about 150 Miles West from Agra; it is an ancient Place, but not very considerable. Adsmere, Asmere, or Aque, the Capital of a Government of the same Name, stands more Southward near the River Padde; the Tomb of Cogee-Mendy a Mahometan Saint buried here, is richly adorned, and visited from all Parts with great Devotion. The great King Eckbar made a Pilgrimage on Foot to this Tomb, to obtain by the Saints Intercession Male-Issue. The City is large, but of ordinary Structure; walled and moated round, and defended by a strong Castle, at the top of a very high and almost inaccessible Mountain. This City is reckoned by Tövenet to be the Capital of all the three Provinces of Bando, Jesselmeeer and Soret. Goday, formerly a considerable City, seated in the most fertile part of the Kingdom. And Jeloure, a Castle of good Strength, are the other chief Towns.

On the East of Bando lies the Province of GUALEOR, a narrow Tract of Land between Agra on the North, and Malora on the South; whose chief Town Gualeor or Gualera, is seated on a craggy Mountain, in the Lat. 27 D. and well fortified, having a most advantageous Situation among inaccessible Rocks, and improved by many artificial Fortifications: In-somuch that the Castle is made the repository of great part of the Mogul's Treasure; and a Prison for many Princes whose Birth gives Jealousy, or Misdemeanors Offence to the Emperor: and 'tis here the Emperor Aureng-Zebe confined his Brothers, Nephews, and his two eldest Sons.

More Eastward is the Province of NARVAR, bounded on the North by the River Semena, which parts it from Sambal; on the South, by Mountains that divide it from Bengall; on the East, with the Province of Elabass; and on the West with the Kingdom of Agra. The chief Cities of this Country are Gebud and Ouden; the former seated on the River Eugenes, which flowing through Narvar and part of Elabass, falls into the Ganges; whereof nothing considerable is mentioned by Authors. The latter stands more Northward, and is a very ancient and formerly a notable Place, as the ruins of its Castle declare; 'tis a Place of some Trade, especially for Rhinocerot's Horns, which are much valued in India. Not far from this Town is seen the Vestigia of an old Castle named Radichband, a place of Devotion mentioned by Purchas.

The Kingdom of SAMBAL lies on the North of the Semena, and the West of the Ganges; having Agra for its Western Bounds, and Bacar for the Northern. The chief City from which the Country is denominated, stands on the River Ganges, in the 31 Degree of Latitude, and has the advantage of a pretty good Trade. A day or two's Journey from thence to the West, stands Sanfaran, a populous and trading City; where is seen a most magnificent Sepulchre of an ancient Heathen King.

Northward from hence lies the Kingdom or Province of BACAR, between the River Ganges and the Province of Delly; whose chief City Bicanor stands on a small River that falls into the Ganges.

And farther Northward is the Province of JAMBA, a mountainous Country possessed by certain Rajas, who are Tributary to the Mogul; of these Raja-Decampergas hath a large Tract of Land in the North-West part, whereof the chief Town is Calsery; and Raja-Manja, who is reported a Prince of vast Wealth, possesses the North-east part towards the Ganges, whereof Serenager is the chief Town. But Jamba which is reckon'd the Capital is subject to the Mogul, and seated more Southward on a small River that falls into the Ganges.

Having surveyed all the Western and Mid-land Provinces, we will now take a view of the Northern; beginning from the West, and passing Eastward thro' Naugricut, Bankish, Siba, Kakares, Gor, Pitan, and Candwana. All which Thevenot comprises in two Provinces, which he names Ayaoud or Haoud, wherein are contain'd the four first: And Varad or Varal, wherein the three last are included. Of these two Provinces he confesses he could get no very exact Account, but in general, that being watered with many Rivers, the Land altho' Mountainous is very Fertile and rich. The Province of Ayaoud yields the King Ten Millions, and that of Varad Twenty Seven Millions per Annum; which Revenue proceeds from the great number of Strangers from Tartary and China resorting hither for Traffick. It must be noted, that the Land we speak of, is near 1000 Miles long and 300 broad.

NAUGRACUT, is a very large Country, extending from the Borders of Labor in 32 Degr. to the 40 Degree of North Latitude, where it is bounded by Kakares, having Jamba and Siba on the East; and Labor and Bankish on the West. The Land is very Mountainous, and a great part of it subject to the Raja Talluck-chan. The chief City Naugracut stands near the head of the River Ravee, in the Lat. of 34. and Long. 99. and is a place of good Trade for Druggs and other Commodities brought from Tartary, and notable for a rich Temple and Idol, which is visited from far. Callamacha or Jallamaka, more Eastward, is seated among craggy Rocks, out of which issue Fountains that seem to cast out Flames, and on that account worshiped by the Idolatrous People.

BENKISH, is seated between Siba on the East, Cassimere on the West; Kakares on the North, and Labor on the South. 'Tis a Country not large nor remarkable: The chief City is nam'd Beishur, but not considerable or known to us.

The Province of SIBA, lies on the North-east of Naugracut, divided into two parts by the River Ganges, and surrounded by Mountains: Its chief City Hardware stands in the 40th. Deg. of Latitude, on a Lake through which the River Ganges passes, and near a Rock which the People fancy to be like a Cow's Head; and that Animal being sacred among them, the Rock and the River Ganges that falls upon it in a kind of Cataract, is worshiped as Holy. The City enjoys a pretty good Trade, and the Country is reasonably fertile.

Next to Siba lies the Kingdom of KAKARES, the most Northern of all the Mogul's Dominions, as bordering upon Tartary, whereof it was part till the Year 1609. 'Tis a Country of very large extent, being 600 Miles in length, but not proportionably broad. It is a very Mountainous and Barren Land, but enjoys the Benefit of a good Trade from Tartary and China. The chief Cities are Dankulen in the Western part; Purboia more East, and near the Ganges; which River hath its Source in the Mountains Caucasus, which part this Country from Tartary.

On the South of Kakares lies the Province of GOR, extending Eastward to the Frontiers of India. The chief City which gives name to the Kingdom, is seated near the head of the River Perfely, in the 39 D. Latit. Of this Country we have no Account, as lying too much out of the way to be visited by Travellers.

KANDUANA, adjoins to Gor on the South, and lies extended between the 33d. and the 36. Degr. of Latitude, on the North-west of the Lake Chiamay, and near the Head of the River Perfely. It is a Country seated so far out of the way of Trade that we know little of it, only that the chief City is Karakantaka, seated on a small River that falls into the Perfely.

PITAN, adjoins to it on the South-west; a large Country govern'd by two Rajas Tributary to the Mogul; the Northern part subject to Raj-Rodrow, whose chief Seat is Camow: And the South part is commanded by Raja-Muggo. The Capital City of the whole is Pitan, seated on the East side of the River Canda, which rising in the neighbouring Mountains, falls into the Ganges in the Latitude of 36.

On the South of these on the East side the River Ganges, between that and the River Perfely, lies the large Province PATNA, having the River Ganges dividing it from Jamba and Bacar for its Western Bounds, Pitan on the North, Udessa, &c. beyond Perfely on the East, and the Confluence of the two Rivers dividing it from Bengal on the South. The chief City is of the same name, and is seated on the River Perfely in the 35 Degree of Latitude. The Country is well seated, and seems to be good Soil; but lies so far within Land, that 'tis never resorted to by Strangers, so we have no account of it. The Name is supposed to be derived from that Warlike People the Potans, who are famous in the ancient History of India.

We shall now speak of the Three Eastern Provinces which lie beyond the River Perfely; namely, Udessa, Jessual, and Mevat, and then proceed to Bengal.

The Kingdom of UDESSA, lies on the South of Candiana, and on the East of Patna; it is a large Province whose chief City Jekanat stands in its Southern Limits. Besides which, Necbal is represented by Travellers, as a very considerable City, consisting of stately Buildings of Brick and Stone like ours. The Country enjoys a temperate Air and good Soil; inhabited by Hindows of civil Nature; and governed by a Raja or Prince, who owns no Subjection to the Mogul.

JESSUAL, a Province of smaller extent but more frequented, lies Southward from Udessa, on both sides the River Gundruk, which falls into the Perfely: The chief City is Rajapore, seated on the River Gundruk, in the Lat. 31. 10. Longit. 110. Suigee or Johnabad, seated also on the same River, is sometimes visited by our English Merchants; and more Northward stand Brinkalastre and Massea, other Cities of this Kingdom.

MEVAT, lies on the South of Jessual, and the North of Bengal: A small Province, whose Capital City is Narval, seated in the Latitude of 39 D. Several other Towns of note are in this Province, whereof Hogipore and Navagur have the advantage of English Factories established in them.

BENGALL, the largest and most famous Kingdom of the Mogul's Empire, lies on the South of the Countries we last mention'd, along the Coast of the inner recess of the Sinus Gangeticus, otherwise call'd the Bay of Bengal, and the Banks of the River Ganges; which here falls into the same Bay: extending from the Frontiers of the Kingdom of Aracani, and the River Caor on the East; to the boundaries of Orissa, and the mouth of the River Guenga on the West; which is reckon'd 220 Leagues; and from the Sea Coast in the South, it extends Northward, to the borders of Sambal a little beyond the River Gemini; in the Latitude of 30. Deg. which makes about 120 Leagues. The Air of this Country is temperate and healthy as any in Indostan, except Cassimere: and the Soil is rich and fruitful, being water'd with the River Ganges, that runs through the middle of it from North to South, and divides it self into two large Branches, which are again subdivided into many smaller, before they fall into the Bay; the same River receives also divers smaller ones. And Rice, other Grains and Fruits are so plentifully produc'd here, that Bengal is sometimes stil'd the Store-house of Asia; it exceeds Egypt in Fertility (says Gimelli) not only in Rice, Corn, Sugar, and all other necessaries for Life, but abounds also in the richest Commodities as Silk, Cotton, Indigo, &c. together with Oxen, Sheep, Hogs, Venison, Fowl and Fish: abundance of Elephants are found in the Woods, and made tame and very useful to the Inhabitants; here are also Rhinoceroses, Tygers and many other wild Beasts. For Exportation they have these useful Commodities, viz. Ginger, Long-Pepper, Cotton, Silk, Sugar, Aloes, Civit, Walking-Canes, &c. but especially Manufactur'd Cotton-Linnen, as Muzlings, and Calicoes of the finest sorts, Silks and Herba-Stuffs, as Bengals, Elache's, and
